Men to erect chainlink fence. Experienced only. Part time. Fitzgerald Fences, 300 Bridge Rd., Florence, Mass.
tf10-1

RIDE WANTED

Ride needed in Rochester N.Y. Fri., Oct. 1. Call Ellen 546-7500.
9-30

One girl needs a ride to Watkins Glen preferably Saturday, Oct. 2. Please Call Liz 6-6870.
tf10-1

Husband and wife need ride to and from around Columbus, Ohio on Oct. 21 will share driving and expenses. Call Bob 549-6761.
tf10-1

FOR RENT

2 bedroom apt., all utilities, no lease. Pets & children welcome. Wall to wall carpet, $175 month. Call Kamins Village Apts., Belchertown.
tf9-30

Rms. with shed rms. 14 miles from U of M. Furniture, 2 baths, all utilities paid $350 per month. Call 323-7803.
tf10-1

Townhouse Apt. at Cliffside. 2 bdr. $180 per month incl. util., married only. Call 665-1709.
tf10-1

1 bedroom apt., Puffton Village available immediately. 549-1681 after 5 p.m.
tf9-30

HELP WANTED

Babysitter for 2 week period, start 4 Oct. 20-30 hrs. wk. Also for future evening work call 253-7157.
tf10-1

Girl with insurance agy. exp. auto & homeowners, rating & typing essential. Call 584-5555, AW Borawski, Inc., 88 King St., Northampton.
tf10-6

Art or advertising major needed to help launch sales promotion. Call David, 586-1128, keep trying.
tf10-1

Need money? Earn $25 or more a week! Work your own hours at your convenience. Call Barry or Dave 100-539.
tf10-5

Help wanted! Need reliable students male or female for delivers and sales work. If you are really interested call 549-3916.

SKIERS WANTED

Skiers wanted to share spacious chalet, 5 min. from Mt. Snow. Luxury living, only $250 for season, Dec.-Mar. Call Marty 549-6786.
tf10-1

PERS PERSONAL

Mike it has been a beautiful year. With much love Cin.
9-30

Melville Basement invites James Basement and 4th floor to a party Friday night at 8.
tf10-31

Horoscopes done professionally. Call 549-6768. Write David Elliott-Manninge A-11 North Village. Minimum $5
tf10-6

Palms read. Call Chris 6-8201 50c. No bullshit.
tf10-4

Commuters if rent is a big issue with you let me make it a big issue with the Student Senate vote. Neil Kerstein for Senator.
tf9-30

LECTURE NOTES

Lecture notes are now available in room 308 in the Student Union Lobby for all sections of Anthro 101, Botany 101, Econ. 125 and 126, Geology 101, Gov. 100 and 150, Hist. 151, Human Dev. 270, Mierm. 180, Phil. 105, Psych 101, 262, 263, 270, 290, 301, and 302, Soc. 101 Zoo. 101 and 135. (one section of Hist. 150 and Psych. 325 also in.

S.F.S. Lecture notes going co-op! Come and promote your own interests next Wednesday, Oct. 6 at 8:00 p.m. in the S.U. Ballroom.
9-30

ENTERTAINMENT

IT'S REVOLUTION TIME! "WILD IN THE STREETS" IN COLOR PLUS ANNIE OAKLEY TV EPISODE TONIGHT 7:00 & 9:30 IN THOMPSON 104 (THURS.)
9-30

TYPING

Typing-thesis, dissertations, etc. Fast, accurate; have Greek alphabet, math. & chem. symbols. Call 253-5601.
tf10-13

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY

Want a part-time or full time job? Running your own business, on door to door, no telephone surveying. Call 253-5847 after 5.
tf10-5

FOOTWEAR

Bargains better than you get back home at the Shoe-Bin! In the alley-behind Auburbons!!
9-30

Notices

BETA KAPPA PHI:
Open smoker tonight at 9:30 pm at 401 N. Pleasant St. All University men invited.

BRIDGE CLUB:
Organizational meeting tonight, Rm. 168 CC at 7:30. All bridge players welcome.

CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP MEETING:
All interested in Christian Fellowship please meet at 7:15 am (morning) on Wednesday, Oct. 6 in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union. All are welcome.

COMMITTEE ON POVERTY:
Organizational meeting Thurs. at 7 pm in 902 CC. Open to all interested.

COUNTRY COMFORT COFFEE HOUSE:
The Country Comfort Coffee House opens on Sat. Oct. 2 at 8 pm in Crabtree Basement. If you'd like to perform, call Craig (407) or Sogo (409) at 545 2303. All are invited to come and listen. It's free.

FREE U:
Spanish T.V. is here in the old S.U. Bookstore (soon to be video-store). A gathering will be called soon.

GRADES:
Corrected Summer School grades are now available in the Registrar's Office, 213 Whitmore.

HILLEL:
Anyone interested in working for Soviet Jewry, please contact the Hillel Office, Rm. 420 Student Union, 52426.

MELVILLE COFFEEHOUSE:
Saturday night in the Melville Date Lounge. All are invited, performers and audience alike.

MUSICALS:
Mandatory meeting Sunday 3 pm in Lewis.

PAN—AFRICAN STUDENT ASSOCIATION:
The Pan-African Student Association at UMass will have its meeting on Sunday, Oct. 3, at 2 pm Mills House Rm. 114. Members and would-be members are expected to attend the meeting.

SAILING CLUB:
Sailing club-There will be an organizational meeting for all interested in a sailing club at the University. Today at 6:30 in CC 174-6.

SEVENTH DAY ADVENTIST:
Any SDA's, Davidian SDA's, Branch SDA's, Sabbath keepers of the Ceremonial Law(s), or those with the knowledge of "Present Truth", contact Sammy Davis, 507 Grayson, 546 6984.

SIGMA ALPHA MU FILM SERIES:
"Wild In the Streets" (1969 in color) plus "Annie Oakley" TV episode Thurs. evening at 7 & 9:30 in Thompson 104.

SKI PATROL:
There will be an open meeting for anyone interested in joining the Ski Patrol and for all old members tonight at 6:30 in Rm. 165 CC.

STUDENT HOMOPHILE LEAGUE:
Thursday at 7 pm in CC 917. Election of Coordinating Council for fall semester-express your opinion Come and vote!

TELEVISION PROD:
Need honest, qualified people to act in a Show on sensuality. Ask for Rob in 110 at 256-6825. TV needs you.

LOST:
Lost in Bartlett Hall Rm. 61, U.S. & China by John Fairbanks. Please call # on inside cover or return it to Bartlett 61, Fri. around noon. Be kind, I need the Book.

Umbrella, black with initials J.H. in handle. Call Jeff at 6 8788.

FOUND:
Silver ring in Ladies room of Student Union, Oct. 29. Come to 220 Patterson.

Spot!! She still needs a loving home. She's a dynamite mostly Beagle puppy, about 3 mos. old, and really smart. Needs place to run in... maybe off campus? Please call 546 5075, ask for Sue.

Ticketing Starts Friday

All motor vehicles owned, operated or parked on the UMass campus by University staff, faculty or students must be registered with the Office of the Parking Coordinator.

All members of the campus community who plan to use a motor vehicle on campus must register those vehicles prior to October 1, 1971; any cars registered after that date will be subject to a $5.00 late registration fee.

Beginning Friday, October 1, 1971, tagging of all illegally parked vehicles will commence.

Warrant Meeting Tonight

The League of Women Voters is sponsoring a warrant meeting tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the Regional High School cafeteria.

The warrant meeting is designed primarily as a service to town meeting members, but it is open to the public and provides an excellent opportunity for citizens to become informed of the issues to come up at the special town meeting the following week.

The warrant meeting allots a brief period of time to individual sponsors of warrant articles, and to town officials, to explain the articles which will be debated and voted on October 4 by town meeting members. It is not a forum of debate, but rather an opportunity to ask questions and become informed on the various articles.

Med. Tech Majors To Meet

A meeting of all junior Med. Tech. majors will be held next Thursday at 7 P.M. in Room N232, Public Health Building to discuss internship application procedures. If you cannot attend, contact Miss Crowley, before Oct. 7.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ by SYDNEY OMARR ☆

There is no real conflict between astrologers and astronomers. However, some astronomers insist on posing as authorities on astrology. This does lead to ill feeling and confuses the public. An astrologer must at least be familiar with the rudiments of astronomy. An astronomer does not necessarily know a thing about astrology.

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Friends are aggressive. Take it easy. Refuse to be caught up in emotional arguments. Count 10 before replying to accusations. Control tendency to respond in foolish manner. Pace yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You get constructive push; one in authority takes special interest. Be willing to make necessary changes. Open broader lines of communication. Behind scenes maneuver boomerangs in your favor. Be available.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Where there has been delay, there now is apt to be a flurry of messages. You hear from those at a distance. Friend who had procrastinated comes through with definite program. You will benefit.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't overlook situation which has recently been pushed aside. Review plans. Stress security. Not wise to take anyone for granted. Reinforce contacts. Investment question should be resolved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Hold off on any contact, special agreement, partnership project. Key is to add to knowledge. You need additional information. Refuse to be stampeded. Stay away from get rich quick scheme.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Finish project. Let others show their hands. Be analytical. You have more coming to you than might be suspected. Patience is your ally. Maintain steady pace. Money news will be good, be contident.

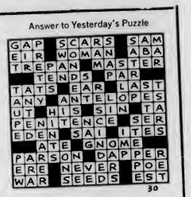
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Reach agreement with young person. Assert yourself in reasonable manner. Many now express appreciation for your efforts. Continue to apply original touch. Leo in dividual could play prominent role. State case.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Home situation needs looking into; means put a halt to extravagance, shouting, abuse. Cancer born individual could be involved. Accent is on security, relations with older person. Trust hunch.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take special care in traffic. Not wise to experiment with electrical products. Steer clear of argumentative relative. Some wishes are fulfilled but not if you insist, cajole or chide. Go slow.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Money, added income could become reality through property settlement, real estate deal. Stick with project to completion. Thorough approach swing odds for success in your favor. Be alert.

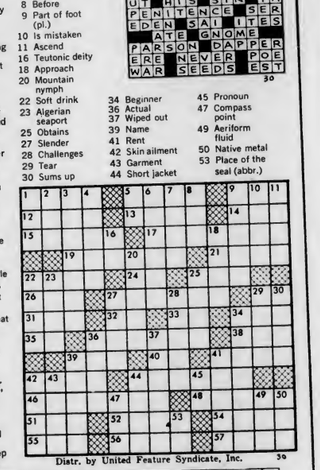
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You get things done; action is keynoted. Some may be envious; others may claim you are headstrong. Key is to be creative, to act with determination, verve. Nothing half-way. Ring sound of enthusiasm.



PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Money transaction requires clarification. All are not showing their hands. Be cautious in connection with valuables. You have tendency now to be forgetful about names, places. Double check assignment notes.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have sense of humor which some persons claim is bizarre. You are artistic, creative, but tend to lack patience. You are a great, fast starter, but finishing punch, at times, is lacking. You recently made some wonderful contacts. They bear fruit in meaningful manner, especially if you are single.

Copyright 1971, Gen. Fea. Corp.

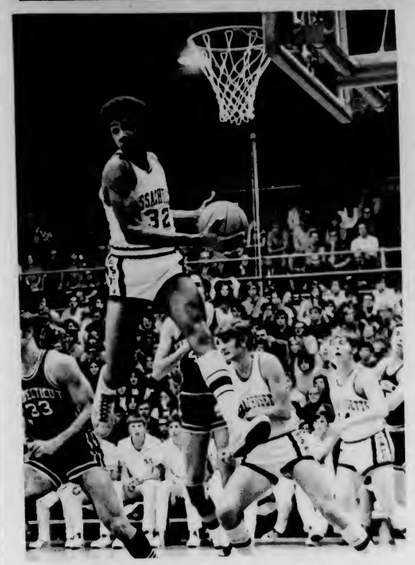


Crossword Puzzle

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Sanskrit dialect
5 Small island
9 Pronoun
12 Wolfhound
13 Heavenly body
14 Silkworm
15 Levantine vessel
17 Cards entitling one to open poker jackpot
19 Mistakes
21 Otherwise
22 Classify
24 Note of scale
25 Aeriform fluid
26 Anglo-Saxon money
27 Hay spreader
29 Sun god
31 Pigeon pea
32 Exclamation
33 Near
34 Conducted
35 Indefinite article
36 Those borne
38 Goal
39 Number
40 Note of scale
41 Young boys
42 A continent
44 Simpler
46 Cuts of meat
48 Dance
51 Nothing
52 Christmas carol
54 Scorch
55 French for "summer"
56 Finishes
57 Gaelic

DOWN
1 Dance step
2 Beverage
3 To the side
4 Lifeless
5 Exists
6 Packed away
7 Turns around the track
8 Before
9 Part of foot (pl.)
10 Is mistaken
11 Ascend
16 Teutonic deity
18 Approach
20 Mountain nymph
22 Soft drink
23 Algerian seaport
25 Obtains
27 Slender
28 Challenges
29 Tear
30 Sums up
34 Beginner
36 Actual
37 Wiped out
39 Name
41 Rent
42 Skin ailment
43 Garment
44 Short jacket
45 Pronoun
47 Compass point
49 Aeriform fluid
50 Native metal
53 Place of the seal (abbr.)



Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc. 30

COMMUTERS
Take a Student Senate nomination paper to lunch. Collect signatures in the Hatch.
Papers available in front of RSO, 1st. level, CC., Due by 5 p.m., Fri., Oct.1.

Erving Continues To Shine

ROYAL SQUIRE-Former UMass basketball great Julius Erving continues to impress all those who have seen him perform in the ABA. The Squire's publicity office has said of the big guy, "And Erving...well, he's something else." (MDC photo by Rich McIntyre)

(Reprinted from the Virginia Squire Newsletter)

Al Bianchi had been saying all along he'd really like to have more depth at guard to start the season. And that made the two items of bad news that came within a week particularly hard to take.

First Fred Brown, a promising guard from Iowa, turned his back on the Squires, which had acquired the negotiating rights to him from Kentucky, and signed with Seattle in the NBA.

Then an X-ray revealed that the pain in veteran Mike Barrett's left wrist was due to a break in the navicular bone. Because the bone receives a limited supply of blood, healing will be slow; the cast Barrett now wears will stay on for an indefinite period, perhaps as long as four months.

And so now Dana Pagett, the 6-3 guard from Southern California and one of three players to pass with flying colors the tests of the June rookie camp, figures all the more prominently in Bianchi's plans.

Which is the way Pagett had hoped it would be.

"That's why I'm here," Pagett said in rookie camp. "I wouldn't be content as a substitute and I wasn't happy with it at Southern California."

The two other rookies, 6-8 center Willie Sojourner and 6-6 forward Julius Erving, showed they, too, have the credentials to challenge for starting jobs.

Sojourner, who has his sights set on the position held last season by Jim Eakins and Ray Scott, received some mild criticism for his playing the first day of camp and he submitted he was then out of shape and had played badly.

But by the third day Bianchi had seen what he had hoped to see.

"He (Sojourner) proved he can play in our league," Bianchi said. "He did the kind of things under the basket we expect of him. He'll mean a lot to this team."

And Erving...well, he was something else.

"I want to play, preferably to start," said Erving, who passed up his senior year eligibility at Massachusetts to sign with the Squires. "I'm ready to be thrown into deep water, and I think I'm ready to swim."

There were a number who watched his play who were ready to agree.

Bill Cate of the Roanoke Times wrote:

"You expect it will take two or three years for Erving to fit in. You must believe he isn't ready, that he needs more maturity, and that he will be good but never great.

"And if you believe that, if you we ready to believe that Erving is just another player, you will soon realize you have made a dreadful mistake.

"If you have seen him...you know of his potential. You sit and watch him leap effortlessly into the air and block a shot two feet above the rim. You watch him go to his right, spin back to the left and dunk the red, white and blue basketball with the grace of a swan swimming on a smooth pond.

"You watch him go to the corner, fake once, fake again, then heave a 20-foot shot which touches only bottom. Then you think maybe Julius Erving is worth $500,000. You begin to know he can play in the ABA, the NBA or anywhere else one cares to inflate a basketball."

Seagrams Top Intramural Action

By JOHN BOCK

On a chilly and damp Monday evening the UMass Intramural football season moved solidly along in the Residence Hall division.

In what was undoubtedly the standout game of the slate, the Adams Seagrams blanked the Cance Cool Cans 27-0. Seagrams quarterback "Strap" Kaye led the attack with a 24 yard bomb to Richie Freedman for a 6-0 lead in the first six minutes of the game. It was downhill all the way for the Cool Cans as they saw Kaye complete two more, one to Cal Guglietti, the Seagrams leading scorer, and another to Freedman in the last few seconds of contest. A spirited offense was the secret to the win and was provided in the form of John Pyenson, Joe Legrassa, and Bob Reynolds.

In a different Southwest scramble it was the Adams Ironmen matching the Adams Spartans. In a razzle-dazzle play Ironmen QB Dave Burnham placed a 50 yard pass into the talented hands of Luigi Jacques to forge ahead 6-0. With both teams playing very solid ball, the Ironmen moved on a series of short passes to score again and lead 12-0. When the mud had settled it was Ironmen 26 Spartans 7.

The top Central Residence battle saw the Butterfield Lemons defeat the Gorman Oaks 9-2. The Lemons led 3-2 at the half and then assembled an extremely agressive offense to jump forward 9-2 in the third quarter. The score came on a combination 30 yard run on the keeper by Joe Christopher and then a 20 yard TD shot to Chris Brown.

Remaining Residence Hall competition saw the Cashin Crushers downing the Wheeler Trojans 13-6 in a game ripe with penalties.

And it was the Adams Academics over the Adams Smashers 6-3.

RECREATIONAL RUN-On Sunday the second in a series of fall recreational cross country races will be held at 4 p.m. The race will be run over a three mile course starting at the new UMass outdoor track, proceeding around the athletic field on to the cinder roads behind the dump and then home to the finish line at the track. Pictured above is the start of last weeks race which attracted a large field including the winner Peter Stasz (wearing the Mr. Park A.A. uniform). All entrants are expected to be at the starting line prior to the race to sign in and receive final instructions. (MDC Photo by Tom Derderian)

Commentary...

N.H.L. Owners Should Revaluate League

By STEVE GERSHMAN

With the Boston Bruins already playing pre-season games, and the National Hockey League season fast approaching, it's time to talk about the quality of play in the N.H.L.

Last season, the Boston Bruins racked the expansion riddled league with scoring records left and right. Considering the quality of many of their opponents, how could they miss.

The N.H.L. now has 12 teams and President Clarence Campbell in all his wisdom is contemplating further additions. When the N.H.L. doubled four years ago, the talent was spread far too thin and the quality of play dropped to its lowest level ever.

By doubling the number of teams, the league carried players who should have been playing in the minor league or on double runners.

It's unfair to the fans who wait in long lines and have to see such "powerhouses" as the Vancouver Canucks and the Oakland Seals almost as much as the old established teams.

It is unfair to the stars such as Phil and Tony Esposito and Bobby Orr to have to play against second rate talent. This provokes remarks to the effect that they are only great because of the poor competition in this age of expansion.

Yet, it is fact that Phil Esopsito, the main target of the abuse, scored almost equally against the old established teams.

Meanwhile, other fair players are becoming so called "stars" because their competition is many times very poor.

It is the owners who are out to satisfy their thirst for money who are cheating the players and most importantly the fans. They should now take a hard look at the quality of their league before the N.H.L. becomes a travesty to sports and a haven for second rate players far below professional ability.

FRIDAY'S FOLLIES
THE FREAKS (6:30 & 9:30)
&
NOTORIOUS (7:30 & 10:30)
Hitchcock's Best
Campus Center Aud. 75¢
Last Complete Show at 9:30

Speaking of Brotherhood . . . . .
Why Join a Fraternity?

To those within her ranks, this question requires no answer. Yet to the layman, expression is difficult. You've heard so much talk about a changing Greek system. It's not just talk .... it's fact. But let's face it, there's only one way to "see" it. Not in an ad, or a leaflet, but in a visit.
Please accept our invitation . . . . . .

Pi Lambda Phi

THURSDAY, Sept. 30
8:30 - 10:30
14 Elm St.
Call For Rides
256-6825

Tough Schedule Awaits Inexperienced Harriers

By JAY NESTOR

A tough schedule opens this Saturday for the relatively untried UMass cross-country team. The only members of the team who experienced varsity action last year are junior Co-captain Tom Swain junior Rick Barry, and Sophomore Doug O'Connell who filled in a varsity spot at the Yankee Conference Championship meet last fall.

Coach Ken O'Brien has expressed the opinion that any grouping out of eleven men could constitute the top five and nobody can rest assured of holding a place. "There is no gun on this team like Ron Wayne was last year. Every single man will have to be close to the front runner," commented O'Brien.

The season opens with a tri-meet against Northeastern and St. Johns. This will be followed by another tri-meet next Tuesday pitting UMass against Providence and Harvard. "These four teams should be the toughest on our schedule. The experience we obtain from these strong teams should make the rest of the schedule somewhat easier," stated O'Brien.

Other independent teams of note that UMass will meet are Boston College and Springfield. These teams boast some top-fight runners, but O'Brien feels that the squad is fit to meet the challenge. A turning point in the teams progress should occur at these meets. The Coach predicts a successful won-loss percentage, the extent of which will be according to the experience gained from the early meets.

Among Yankee Conference teams, New Hampshire and Connecticut seem to be the major opponents. Should UMass remain relatively healthy and free of injury, the Conference title will be a toss-up between these three.

This year's team bears slight resemblance to last year Yankee Conference Champions. A major factor was Ron Wayne, who swept aside all New England competition. He was followed by veterans Larry Paulson and Leo Duart. These three strong competitors are lost to graduation. The tragic loss of Co-captain Tom Jasmine is also deeply felt.

This year is characterized by inexperience, although some top class performers are present. Chris Chambers, Paul Segersten, and Bob Sullivan are tough roadrunners, while Doug O'Connell, Roger Nasatka, Mike McCusker, and Arnie Morse are dependable track performers. The squad has been concentrating on distance training, but will sharpen up with some hard interval work as the season progresses. Newcomer Bob Pagoda, Rich Tashjian and Wayne Lucas have thus far been promising in workouts.

The UMass cross country course has been drastically changed this year due to construction on Eastman Lane. The start is at the WOPE fields, after which the runners head past the putting green toward East Pleasant Street. This first mile is all upgrade. Cutting close to Butterfield, the harriers will head for the Orchard through which they will run two gruelling miles up and down hills. Passing close to Orchard Hill, the troupe will proceed to Thatcher Way, where it is all downhill to the WOPE fields and the finish. "There is one good point about the course; running on our tough course will make away meets easier," commented Coach O'Brien.

TOM SWAIN

The defending Yankee Conference Champions will need a good deal of guts and determination to repeat as such this year, but indications are that they have these requirements and will carry on a winning tradition.

"Mac" Sights B.U. As Critical Game

By FRED ROSENTHAL

With a bad performance against Dartmouth behind them, the UMass Varsity football team will be looking to right themselves against Boston University one week from this coming Saturday. This was the theme presented by Head Coach Dick MacPherson to those in attendance at yesterday's Varsity M Club luncheon.

"BU is critical," remarked Coach MacPherson. "They are 0-2 but are playing a fine schedule."

The Redmen will have two weeks to prepare for BU. And with all the injuries they have incurred recently, they will need all the time they can get. Aside from Bob Donlin and Tom McMahon who have been lost for the rest of the season, Steve Shubert, Paul Metallo, and Angie DiNardo have all been injured.

Bill DeFlavio was hurt in the game against Dartmouth and John Julecki has been playing with injuries. Mike Sawyer has been out leaving most of the running chores to sophomore Tim Berra. But with the extra week many of these players should be ready for the next game.

Looking back to the Dartmouth game MacPherson commented, "Dartmouth is as good as they looked, but we are not as bad as we looked." And in speaking about the offense he said, "At Maine we were stopping ourselves but against Dartmouth, they stopped us."

He felt that the counterplays Dartmouth used hurt UMass the most and he also recognized that their specialty teams were excellent.

But that game is in the past and the Redmen will be looking forward to playing the Terriers. Coach MacPherson did say that some change would be made. "We've got to go a little more conservative with the offense."

Dodgers, Giants Reverse '62 Roles

LOS ANGELES (AP)—National League baseball history repeats itself with a reverse twist when you compare the hectic closing days of 1962 with those of 1971.

in 1962, the San Francisco Giants were charging, caught the Los Angeles Dodgers on the final day of the regular season and then beat them in playoff.

With two games to go in 1971, the Dodgers have been the charging team, training the pace setting Giants by one game in the NL West.

Veteran catcher Tom Haller played with the Giants in 1962 and he's with the Dodgers this year. Haller sees marked similarities between the Giants of 62 and the Dodgers of 71.

"The teams are very comparable in every facet, said Haller. "Remember, the Giants had Billy Pierce in his first season with the club and he won 16 games. Al Downing has won 20 for the Dodgers this year.

The similarity-both Pierce and Downing were in their first National League seasons and both had been traded by American League teams.

Downing went after victory No. 21 as the Dodgers faced the Houston Astros last night while the Giants played the Padres at San Diego.

"In power, the Giants had a slight edge, recalled Haller. "But remember there are different ball parks. Speedwise, the Dodgers this year have an edge on the Giants of 1962. Over-all, the pitching is very comparable.

Ironically, in 1962, the Giants beat the Houston club on the final day of the season and then had to wait in the clubhouse to listen to the broadcast of the Dodge-St. Louis game. When Gene Oliver homered for a 1-0 Cardinal victory, he earned a key to the city of San Francisco.

The Dodgers beat Houston 2-1 on Tuesday night while the Giants were defeating San Diego, 7-2.

The Race

	W	L	PCT.	GB
San Fran	89	71	556	-
Los Angls	88	72	550	1

Tonight's Intramurals

FOOTBALL

FIELD	TIME	TEAMS
2	6:00	(Women)
3		Zeroes vs. Congios
4		Burners vs. Orbitals
5		Education vs. Government
1	7:00	(Women)
2		(Women)
3		SAE vs. PSD
4		PSK vs. BKP
5		NS vs. PLP
6		TEP vs. SPE
1	8:00	PMD vs. ZN
2		TC vs. SAM
3		Mouse vs. Acme
4		Orcs vs. Fellas
5		Cult vs. Bulldogs
6		JM's vs. Bunch
1	9:00	Heads vs. Spunk
2		Terrors vs. Monuments
3		Mags vs. Bulldozers
4		Heads vs. Senators
5		Bruins vs. Broncos
6		Buffaloes vs. Barracudas
1	10:00	Tubes vs. Gypsies
2		Kumquats vs. VVV
3		Machine vs. Brother
4		Comanchees vs. Jaguars
5		Maurauders vs. Cougers
6		Lions vs. Leopards

TUG-O-WAR

4	7:30	JM's vs. BX
5		Browns vs. Div. Eng.
1	7:45	Slouts vs. Mouse
2		Munchkins vs. Dutchmen

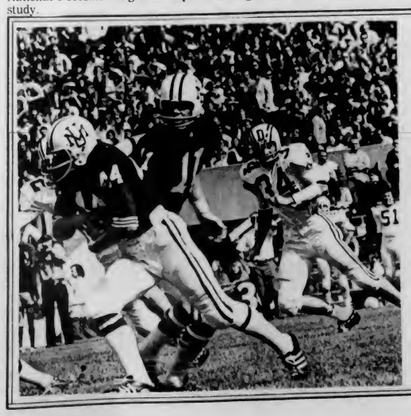
JV Booters Open Season Friday

By JIM PINSKY

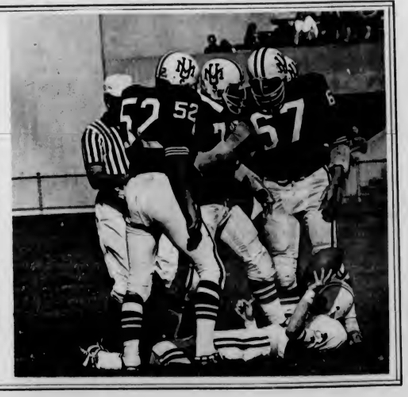
The Junior Varsity soccer team opens its season at home versus Holyoke CC this friday. The team will need help from the weatherman to equal last years fine 5-1 mark as, for the first time this year, the team has a seven game schedule. UConn and Amherst should provide the stiffest competition.

Although the team has no one outstanding player there are several that have looked good in practice. Goalie Barry Lutchen, halfback Steve Parsons, and fullbacks John O'Hara and Mark Gaviglio have been the strongest on defense while wings Greg Trudryn and Jim Vollinger, halfback Steve Dec, and center Tony King are their offensive counterparts.

Coach David Jekanowski,a 1968 UMass graduate, is pleased by the progress made by the team. Like previous J.V. soccer teams the emphasis is on defense with a conservative style of offense. As for how well he thought the team would do this season Coach Jekanowski replied, "These guys have worked hard and have really shaped up in the last few days. It has the potential to be another fine University J.V. team."



Study To Be Made On 'Turf'



WASHINGTON (AP)-The National Football League Players Association called on club owners yesterday to halt further installation of artificial turf until a study is made to determine if it is causing an "alarming number of football injuries."

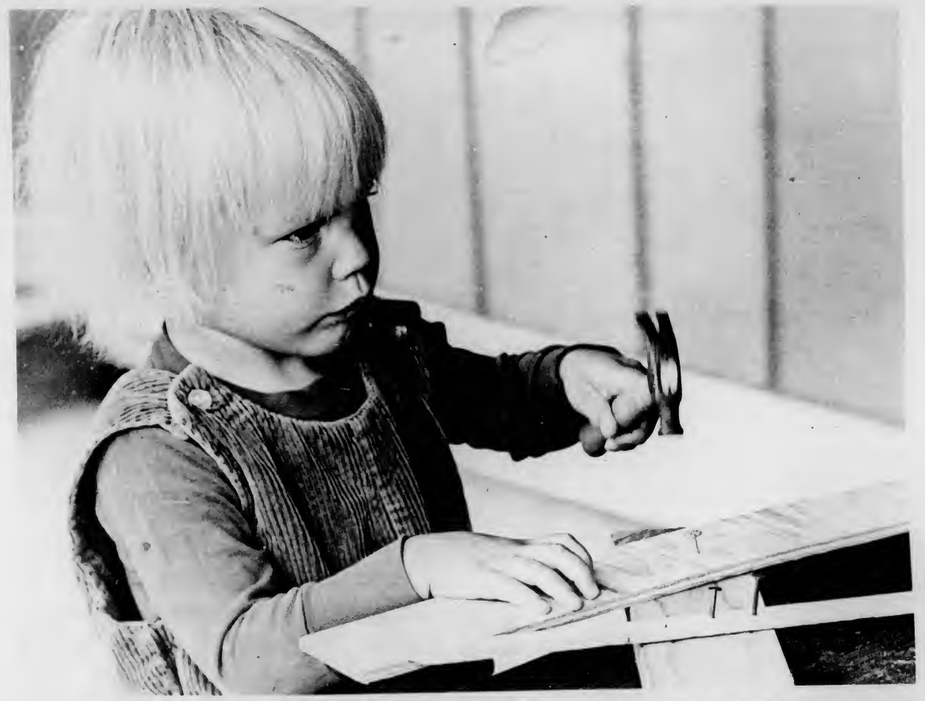
Ed Garvey, executive director of the association, said the club owners have prevented trainers from cooperating with such a study undertaken for the player's union by Dr. James Garrick of Seattle.

"We have reason to believe that artificial turf may well be a contributing factor to the substantial increase in injuries over the past two years," Garvey told a news conference.

He said he had written all general managers and trainers in the National Football League on Sept. 15 asking them to cooperate in the study.

HOME OPENING ACTION-The offensive and defensive units of UMass did get their share of the action in Saturday's home opener against Dartmouth which the Redmen dropped, 31-7.

On the left sophomore Peil Pennington hands off to halfback Paul Metallo who saw his first regular season action after sitting out the Maine game with an injury. Pennington had a rough afternoon in his debut before the home fans against the rugged Dartmouth defense. (MDC Photo by Barbara Brecher.)



On the right Joe Sabulis (52), Johnny Jones (79) and Skip Parmenter see to it that Pennington was not the only quarterback who took his lumps on Saturday by dropping Dartmouth's Bill Pollock for a loss. (MDC Photo by Carl Nash.)

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather
People running wild in the streets.

VOLUME XCIX, ISSUE 18 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS FRIDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1971

BANG, BANG, MAXWELL'S SILVER HAMMER-No! Not my head! The nail, the nail! That's better, hit the nail. Here, take the wood and try to put the nail into the wood. That's right. Just bang gently, that's right. Ok, now take this other piece of wood and bang another nail into it. Great, ok, now stand it up on end. See what you've made? Two sticks nailed together! (Special from the Day-Care Center by Gib Fullerton) Center by Gib Fullerton)

The Raid May Be On

By STEPHEN FINE

Dr. Joseph Highland from Ralph Nader's Washington office spoke last night in the Campus Center Auditorium on Public Interest Research Groups and the possibility of setting one up in Western Massachusetts.

"Public Interest Research Groups," Highland explained, "Are students who form and fund their own coalition to investigate consumer practices of the government and companies. They research issues of public concern and then publish their findings."

Ralph Nader suggested the formation of these groups after receiving thousands of applications from students to work for him during the summer in Washington.

Highland discussed the investigations the student research groups work on. "The problems we try to investigate are full time. Last year two students from Minnesota investigated a 1969 FDA report conducted in Minneapolis on lead based paints. The report had concluded there was no danger in homes from the paints, but the students found out all but one of the samples had been taken from rich middle class homes. The one home with the dangerous level was in a poor black community."

"After finding this out," he continued, "They went to every home they could get into in Minneapolis and took samples of paint. Their findings were that 40% of the paint had dangerous levels of lead in them. That summer even there were two reported deaths from lead poisoning in children."

Highland also mentioned a student group at the University of Oregon that did studies on river pollution and found malpractice in a Governmental environment agency. "The environmental agency only inspected the plant, by placing a call prior to coming. This company was dumping effluence from large storage tanks at 2 or 3 in the morning. This company was sued by the students for illegal dumping under the 1899 refuse act which states you can't dump unless you have the consent of The Army Corps of Engineers."

Highland talked about businesses who hire their own experts to support products. "Companies hire scientists and engineers to back their products. GM had their own experts to defend the Corvair. When a lighting company wants to build a nuclear power plant they have their own scientists testify. No public interests groups are involved." He says people should hire their own scientists to investigate. "Technology is there if you want it. I know of 2 consumer groups which hired their own scientists to build a better type of cooking burner."

Dr. Highland feels if student maintain a constant direction they can accomplish a lot. "During the Kent State strikes students were organized but the when the summer came it died down. When classes started in the fall nothing happened."

He went on to say that relevency in groups is important too. "I became very disillusioned with the NSA convention in Colorado. I saw students at a womens liberation workshop argue for hours about the appropriate word for a womens breast.

Anyone wishing more information should go to the Coalition for Environmental Quality office in the Campus Center.

On The Inside:

- Treaties Signed — See page four
- Weekend Pullout — See page eight
- D.A. Gets Drug Money — See page three

S. Viets Fly In Support For Surrounded Fire Bases

SAIGON (AP)-The South Vietnamese command flew reinforcements Thursday to the aid of two surrounded artillery bases along the Cambodian border, but senior U.S. officers said the North Vietnamese offensive has slowed, at least temporarily.

About 2,000 government troops were ferried by American and South Vietnamese helicopters to both sides of the frontier in efforts to relieve units at Fire Base Alpha in eastern Cambodia and Fire Base Tran Hung Dao on the Vietnamese side of the border.

At last report by nightfall, the defenders still held the bases and the airlifted relief forces were moving toward them.

Officers at Tay Ninh, forward headquarters 55 miles northwest of Saigon, said enemy rocket and mortar attacks dropped off drastically Thursday from the heavy shellings of the four previous days.

Despite a South Vietnamese counterdrive launched Wednesday, no significant ground action has been reported.

The North Vietnamese have concentrated on rocket and mortar assaults on South Vietnamese and U.S. artillery support bases on both sides of the border.

Their ground movements have been devoted mostly to cutting the 30-mile stretch of Highway 22 running northward from Tay Ninh to Krek, seven miles inside Cambodia.

Lt. Gen. Nguyen Xuan Thinh, the South Vietnamese field commander, said it was known that portions of two of the three enemy divisions in Cambodia, the 5th and 7th, were involved. He added that they had been heavily reinforced by antiaircraft guns and artillery.

"They say they must push our troops back into South Vietnam. If they are successful, they will infiltrate into South Vietnam," Thinh told Associated Press correspondent George Esper at Tay Ninh.

The U.S. Command's weekly casualty report showed 29 Americans died in action in Vietnam last week, 16 more than in the previous week.

It was the first time in 11 weeks that the combat death toll exceeded 20. The increase was attributed partly to changes in casualty listings, spokesmen said.

The command also reported 47 Americans wounded in action last week, compared with 64 reported wounded in the previous week.

The South Vietnamese command said 263 government troops were killed and 615 were wounded last week, compared to 397 reported killed and 755 wounded of a week earlier.

The U.S. and South Vietnamese commands jointly claimed 1,331 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong soldiers killed last week, compared with 1,572 reported killed two weeks ago.

On the political front, President Nguyen Van Thieu, making the third and last television speech of his campaign, Thursday night assailed his critics and urged the people to "vote in great numbers" in Sunday's election.

Ex-Boy Scout Busted In Mexico

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP)-Authorities in Mexico City are holding Richard E. Hyland on charges of complicity and conspiracy to commit illicit acts against the Mexican government, U.S. officials disclosed Wednesday.

Hyland, 22, was arrested Sept. 17 in the company of eight members of the so-called Comando Armado Pueblo, Mexican federal police said.

The group was involved in a series of bank robberies in Mexico and linked to the Armed Revolutionary Movement, a group allegedly sought in the kidnapping Monday of Mexican aviation chief Julio Hirschfield Almada.

A ransom of $240,000 has been paid for the kidnapped industrialist.

Hyland, a scholar and one-time standout Boy Scout, is the son of a veterinarian in the San Diego suburb of La Mesa.

A spokesman for the U.S. embassy in Mexico City said Hyland pleaded innocent in federal court Tuesday and told the judge he met the men arrested with him through his instructors and "did not realize the gravity of his association with these people."

Hyland said he arrived in Mexico City in the summer of 1970 with the sole purpose of studying to become a novelist.

BE SURE TO SAVE THE ROACHES-If this is what we think it is, the University Library will be getting a lot of visitors when it opens. It looks as though a balcony is under construction on the top two floors which will provide a clear, unobstructed view of Sunderland, Pelham, Hadley, Northampton, and surrounding states. (Photo by Steve Schmidt)

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN are on the second floor of the Student Union on the University campus, zip code 01002. Phones are 545-2550 (news), 545-0344 (sports), and 549-1311 (editor).

Second class postage paid at Amherst, the DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes five times weekly Monday through Friday during the academic year except during vacation and exam periods, three or four times a week following a vacation or exam period or when a holiday falls within a week. Accepted for mailing under the authority of the act of March 8, 1879 as amended by the act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester, $10.00 per year.

Harambe Open House Held For New Members

By DEBORAH JOHNSON

Harambe, the Third World student organization, held an open reception in the Colonial Room of the S.U. The purpose of this meeting was to introduce prospective members to the organization.

Among the things discussed were the goals and issues of the so-called Third World. Out of this came an argument, between a German student and a Harambe member concerning the definition of the Third world. The student regarded it as the proletariat and the colonized against the ruling classes and quoted Lenin, stating that he specifically used the term Third World in that way. It was argued that the term was not used as such and that Lenin's conception of the oppressed concerned the working class in general.

Enlightment came in the form of Ha Jackie Bergman, treasurer, who defined the third world as an alignment of Asian, African and Latin peoples against such imperialist countries as the U.S., Russia, etc.

Other officers attending were: Shirley Alexander, coordinator; Cassandra Duarte, coordinator; Rudolph Jones, co chairman; Doris Williams recording secretary and Janice Peters corresponding secretary. After the discussion refreshments were served.

There will be a meeting of Harambe next Thursday, October 7 in Rm 114 at the Black Cultural Center new officers will be elected. All those interested are invited to attend.

All Collegian reporters and news desk people should come to a meeting Monday night at 7:00 PM in the Collegian office for beat assignments.

1971-72 ID Card Validation Labels Are Now Available In ID OFFICE 109 Hampshire

FACES OF EARTH
159 NORTH PLEASANT STREET, AMHERST
Next to the Post Office
OPEN TILL 10 P.M.
COATS NOW

Better UM Education Aim Of TA Program

By KAREN BRASIER

The Teacher Improvement Program, initiated in the fall of 1970 by Deans Appley and Gentile, is dedicated to the prospect of improving the undergraduate education at UMass by helping teaching assistants to become more interesting to their students and more efficient in classroom situations.

"The idea that we try to stress most," said Bill DeLamarter, a graduate student and director of the program, "is that we are willing, on a strictly volunteer basis, to help any T.A. who feels he would like to better evaluate his teaching ability."

DeLamarter, along with Terry Krumm and Blair Stone, the two other grad students involved in the program, hope to reach as many of the 750 T.A.s at UMass as possible and provide them with exposure to their strengths and weaknesses as teachers.

This exposure is accomplished in great part by the use of videotape which allows the teaching assistant to see and hear how effective he is to his students. The equipment used in taping is both small and silent, thus making it ideally suited to the classroom. At his own request, any T.A. may be videotaped while teaching.

One of the T.I.P. staff will view the tape first to become better acquainted with the problems and the merits of the T.A. who is being evaluated. The subject of the film will then be able to judge his good and bad points as he watches himself on tape. He will probably want to discuss his reactions with the staff, who will be glad to talk with him, and will give him a written evaluation if requested. All films and evaluations are strictly confidential.

The Teacher Improvement Program will lend its equipment to any T.A. who would like to use it for his students' instruction. They will also allow the faculty and anyone preparing to give a professional speech to view themselves on tape. The quality of the tapes, which may be erased and used many times, is excellent.

A few problems have arisen in the program, not the least of which is the lack of funds. Plans for a library concerned with the problems of college teaching were severely restricted because there was not enough money. (A list of books available at Goodell Library which are pertinent to this subject is contained in the appendix of the Teaching Assistant Handbook.) Because the government was not willing to fund exactly this type of program, the T.I.P. is looking to private institutions for backing.

Another problem faced by the staff is the lack of people involved with the physical sciences using their services. Even though there are no people in this field on the staff of the program, they feel that an evaluation of teaching methods should be helpful to all.

So far, about 100 teaching assistants have taken advantage of the evaluation program. The results have been promising. Many of those who have used the T.I.P.'s services felt that their classroom performance improved greatly after they were able to view themselves as their students do.

"But unfortunately," DeLamarter said, "because we are strictly a volunteer organization, many times only the best and most confident teaching assistants come to us while those who could benefit most are reluctant to come." He said that any T.A. who is not sure whether he would like to be videotaped or not, is welcome to come to the Teacher Improvement Program office located in room A215 in the Graduate Research Center where he can look over the equipment, talk to the staff, and view himself on one of the monitors in the office.

In addition to the evaluations, other services of the Teacher Improvement Program include a one-week orientation period in the fall for T.A.'s, the printing of a Teaching Assistant Handbook, and the taping of demonstration films on various teaching methods, situations and skills which are available to T.A.'s who wish to view them.

Tippo Speaks to Fac.Sen. In Special Closed Session

Chancellor Oswald Tippo addressed members of the Faculty Senate in a closed session held last night. Representatives of the press were allowed to remain only if they agreed not to print any of the Chancellor's speech. It is anticipated that more detailed information will be available concerning the content of Tippo's speech in forthcoming editions of the Collegian.

After Tippo's speech the meeting was reopened, Larry Ladd, Vice-President of the Student Senate, addressed the group. Ladd said that it took things like Chancellor Tippo's speech to unite students and faculty for a common cause. He added that the Student Senate would go along with the Faculty Senate in supporting Chancellor Tippo's position stated in the closed address.

Ladd said that students are concerned about the problems of the University. He also voiced hope that faculty and students would be able to meet on even ground for "rational discourse" to resolve their problems.

Under new business, a motion was entertained to appoint a "Committee of Concern" to work with anyone who was interested and to convey their concern to the Board of Trustees prior to any decision the board might make pertaining to the fiscal budget of the University. The motion was approved unanimously.

Due to Chancellor Tippo's address it was decided to dispense with the usual ratifying procedure which would have taken too long.

The "Committee of Concern" is to be appointed by the Committee on Committees of the Faculty Senate.

Callahan Gets $3000 More For Drug Busts

District Attorney John Callahan has received an additional $3,000 to carry on "investigative work" which is primarily aimed at the drug traffic around Hampshire- and Franklin Counties.

The Holyoke Transcript reported that "the money...according to an informed source, was appropriated after the commissioners received permission from the Director of State Accounts, Arthur McKenna, to take the money" from Hampshire County's Reserve Fund.

Chairman of the Reserve fund John Breuget made the announcement yesterday morning.

Although officials would say only that the money was to be used for "investigative work" other reliable sources confirmed that the money was to be used for drug investigations, like the sweep of UMass last May which netted more than 50 students for various drug charges.

Last year's investigation was carried on by an undercover agent working part-time on the UMass campus buying drugs and identifying drug salesmen.

Callahan requested the money recently when he appeared before Reserve Fund Commission and asked for an "executive session" that excluded the press.

In an interview with the Collegian earlier in the month, Callahan said that there would be "on-going investigations" of the drug traffic in places under his jurisdiction. In that interview, the D.A., who was elected to his position last November stated that there had been much local concern about the availability of drugs on the UMass campus Callahan has had to fight for monies for investigative matters. In April, the legislative Committee on Counties deleted $2,500 for drug purchases Callahan had requested. He publicly declared UMass a "drug marketplace" and did considerable work to get the monies reinserted, which they were.

At that time, Callahan said the monies were needed for activities such as the May drug raid which netted more than 50 students on a variety of possession and selling charges. It is thought Callahan used a substantial portion, if not all, of his allocated monies on this drug raid.

New Members for Health Board

By ERNIE ROTMAN

The University's Health Service is welcoming a panel of sixteen students, including grads, undergrads, and commuters, to its pre-existing Advisory Board.

This panel will meet with faculty and Health Service staff, to voice student opinion concerning policy-making and staff employment.

A Collegian survey is currently being planned by the Health Service, to sample student thoughts on such matters as the infirmary's pharmaceutical aid and bus system.

Prison Protest

Final plans for the Danbury Prison demonstration were presented last night at a meeting in the Campus Center sponsored by the United Christian Foundation.

Sam Johnson, a spokesman for the Foundation, stated that cars would be leaving for Danbury from the Congregational Church in Amherst at 9:30 A.M. on Saturday. From a rally at Lake Kenosha in Danbury, demonstrators will march to the prison where Daniel and Philip Berrigan are being held.

The demonstration is an attempt to make the public aware of the injustices of the prison and parole system in America and in American prisons in South Vietnam.

WATER BEDS SALE
Your Choice
KING, QUEEN, or DOUBLE SIZE MATTRESS -
5 yr. guarantee $24.99
with 1" Foam Insulating Pad
$29.99
A Head of Time
360 College St. Amherst
Rt. 9 Tel. 253-5394
Open Noon til 9

THE BROTHERS OF Sigma Alpha Epsilon wish to introduce ourselves and our Fraternity to you. To help us, we are presenting CLEAR SKY - in Concert on Friday,
October 1,
2:30 - 5:30 p.m.
We are at 118 Sunset Ave.-
down the street from Kara Mia
Please come.

Car Dirty? Problem Solved!
Wet
CAR WASH
Sat. Oct. 2
9 a.m. - 4 p.m.
Zayre's Parking Lot
Sponsored By Newman Club

Saturday Night
BLACK MAGIC
featuring
Natalie Cole
9:30 - 12:30 DANCING 50¢ COVER
at
The English Pub

In The Nation And The World

United States and Russia

Two Disarmament Agreements Signed

WASHINGTON (AP)-Secretary of State William P. Rogers and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko signed two disarmament side agreements Thursday and promised anew that the big powers will strive for a major accord to curb their missile systems.

At a State Department signing ceremony, Rogers hailed the agreements on modernizing the Washington-Moscow hot line and guarding against accidental nuclear war as "this new imperative of the nuclear age."

But both he and Gromyko noted the agreements fall far short of the avowed goal of the U.S.-Soviet Strategic Arms Limitation Talks SALT - to limit the nuclear arms race.

At the SALT negotiations resuming in Vienna in November, Rogers said: "We must intensify our efforts to reach agreements to limit the means as well as the risk of waging nuclear war. We shall strive toward this objective."

Rogers and Gromyko then went into a luncheon discussion at the Soviet embassy of other outstanding issues ranging from European security to the India-Pakistan difficulties.

Their meeting wound up a series of three high-level U.S.-Soviet parleys during Gromyko's visit to attend the U.N General Assembly.

Both sides have been close-mouthed about what actually took place in the talks.

The hot line, originally set up in 1963 using transatlantic cable and European land lines, is to be updated by using communications satellites.

A high administration official said the U.S. cost would be about $5 to $6 million. Because it will take up to two years to build the needed earth stations in each country, the satellite hot line is not slated to go into operation before 1973.

The agreement on reducing the risk of accidental nuclear war provides that:

—Each will maintain and improve its safeguards against accidental or unauthorized use of its nuclear weapons.

—Each will notify the other at once if there is an accidental, unauthorized or other unexplained nuclear incident which could create a risk of war. In event of such an incident the party whose nuclear weapon is involved will seek to render it harmless immediately.

—Each will notify the other immediately if its missile warning system spots unidentified objects in circumstances that could risk a nuclear war outbreak.

—Each will tell the other in advance of any planned missile launches headed beyond its territory in the direction of the other.

—Each will act, in other situations involving unexplained nuclear incidents, in such a manner as to reduce the possibility of its actions being misinterpreted by the other.

Washington. President Nixon meets with Soviet Foreign Affairs Minister Andrei Gromyko and Secretary of State William Rodgers prior to signing of treaties.

U. S. To Receive Foreign Subsidy

WASHINGTON (AP)-For the first time since France helped it win the American revolution of 1776, the United States is to get a direct subsidy from a foreign government. Negotiations are moving toward cash payment by West Germany to help support U.S. troops there.

U.S. and West German officials say they have agreed that West Germany is to make a contribution to the U.S. budget. It is designed to cover part of the $1.2 billion which the United States calculates as the annual cost in foreign currency of keeping 200,000 American troops in West Germany. Additional costs in dollars are much higher.

Over the two years that began July 1, the West Germans say they expect to spend more than three billion marks $900 million on U.S. military equipment. This offsets some of the U.S. spending in foreign currency.

Much of the rest of this U.S. spending-just how much is still uncertain-will be covered by loans Germany and by the new contribution.

The last time the U.S. Treasury can recall anybody handing the united States any free money was back in 1781, when Louis XVI came through with a gift of six million lires to the Revolutionary forces. That amounted to some $1,089,000 at the time, but a dollar went a good deal further in those days.

The king handed out a good deal more in the form of loans, which he got back later. The money helped inflict a defeat on Britain, with whom Louis was at war in any case.

The West Germans are also offering loans of various kinds now. These will help the United States scrape together scarce foreign currency but the money will have to be paid back some day. The West Germans have given this type of help in recent years and a part of the debt is already coming due.

This is the first time the West Germans have said they are ready to make a contribution that would ease the burden on the U.S. budget as well-a non-reimbursable contribution like the Marshall Plan aid to Europe that followed World War II. In ordinary language: a free gift.

Draft Quota Set At 10,000

WASHINGTON (AP)-The Pentagon Thursday set a 10,000-man draft quota for the next three months and indicated next year's inductions will level off at about 1971's nine-year record low of 98,000.

Meanwhile, spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim disclosed that Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird has ordered the Army to reverse the policy under which Army recruiters rejected veterans seeking to re-enlist.

The policy conflicted with Laird's recent public warnings of a dangerous military manpower shortage. Friedheim also denied that the low draft call for the remainder of this year suggested that Laird was crying wolf when he predicted during Senate debate that Army readiness would be damaged significantly unless the Selective Service law was revived quickly.

The Pentagon spokesman argued that, low as it is, the new draft call for October, November and December will generate voluntary enlistments in the armed forces.

Officials said that actual inductions in the final quarter this year will total close to 15,000 because the Selective Service System is expected to deliver nearly another 5,000 men under a previous quota which had not been filled when the draft law lapsed temporaily on June 30.

The first men to be inducted under the renewed draft likely will wear the Army uniform in mid-October, the Defense Department said. These inductees probably will be taken from among college and junior college graduates whose deferments have expired.

Thieu Still In There

SAIGON (AP)-Despite widely publicized demonstrations against President Nguyen Van Thieu and his uncontested campaign for re-election, few doubt that he will get the "vote of confidence" he seeks in Sunday's polling.

The opposition is the most cohesive and widespread of Thieu's political career but it lacks significant popular support. He has succeeded in either suppressing or ignoring his foes.

Thieu has said he will resign if he receives fewer than half the votes, and has implied he might step down if he does not win a larger majority. He predicted to aides and newsmen, however, that he might receive as much as 80 per cent of the vote, and this seems possible.

What would happen then is uncertain.

He has told newsmen he would resign rather than see U.S. aid to Vietnam cut off, and although the Nixon administration is committed to Thieu, Congress is likely to take a hard look at continuing aid.

SATURDAY Is The LAST Day!
BASEMENT SALE
Everything Must Go!!
Prices Reduced Now - Everything
(Blue Jeans Cords)
Only $3.95
WEAR-HOUSE
Wear-Else ??

Paraphernalia welcomes you back with fine fashions in . . .
. . . cowhide pocketbooks from Spain
. . . argyle kneesocks
. . . fashionable shawls in all colors
. . . new designs in hats and scarfs. . .
Paraphernalia
63 No. Pleasant St.
Amherst
Come on in and visit us
We're open until 9:00 p.m. Friday nights

300 - STUDENTS - 300
Advance Seating Available For Round TRIP
To Pioneer Valley Craft Fair
October 9
Middlefield Fair Ground
Middlefield, Mass.
Round Trip and Admission - $4.00
Contact:
Box 106 Shutebury, Mass. or White Light Bookstore in the Alley 256-8070 or
A Head of Time 360 College Street 253-5394

Senate Renews Call For Total Withdrawal

WASHINGTON (AP)-The Senate renewed today its call for total U.S. withdrawal from Indochina, setting a six-month deadline after Democratic leader Mike Mansfield appealed for action to "bring this horrible war to an end."

"Why not try?" Mansfield appealed. "What have we got to lose? You've got a lot to gain."

The vote was 57 to 38 in favor of Mansfield's amendment to set a six-month deadline-which would not be binding on President Nixon-contingent on release of American prisoners.

"You can't stop the war by an act of Congress of this kind," Republican leader Hugh Scott said, expressing the Nixon administration's contention the Mansfield amendment is a waste of time-and potentially harmful.

Scott's plea was echoed by Chairman John C. Stennis, D-Miss., of the Armed Services Committee.

"Every time we pass this amendment in this way we put obstacles in our path, and lend encouragement to the enemy," Stennis said.

Noting that Mansfield's amendment to the $21 billion military procurement authorization bill, like one with a nine-month deadline passed last June, faces House opposition and a possible conference stalemate, Stennis said it would be better to pass it as separate legislation.

Thursday's vote was closer than the 61-38 margin last June when nine-month withdrawal amendment was attached to the draft extension bill.

The touchy issue of the American prisoners swirled through the debate. When Scott said the amendment would give up a valuable U.S. bargaining card, Mansfield shot back: "What is that card-the POWs?"

Dole, Mansfield and Sen. J.W. Fulbright, D-Ark., argued over whether the amendment sought to place blame for the war.

"I'm not shifting the blame to anyone," Fulbright insisted. "All I want to do is stop the war."

But Dole said, "what we do effectively undercuts the President."

Red Chinese Imports Arriving

NEW YORK (AP)-Lotus paste, porcelain, tea sets, and bamboo cigarette holders from mainland China are beginning to fill nooks of some Chinatown shops here and in San Francisco.

Foodstuffs, delicate porcelains and trinkets made in the People's Republic of China first became available to Chinatown residents this past summer.

The U.S. Commerce Department says approximately $1 million worth of goods have been imported from mainland China since the Nixon administration made sale of such merchandise legal. Nearly 85 per cent of the imports so far has been specialty foods, the Commerce Department reports.

Merchants here and in San Francisco said their customers buy the imports chiefly because they are curious about the quality or workmanship of goods made in "Red China."

One reason the demand for imports from mainland China has remained relatively small, shopkeepers said, is their high cost.

"The products are expensive because most now come through Canada," explained Bruce Jang, manager of Wo Kee, a San Francisco import house. "Canada must pay a duty and we have to pay additional freight, import costs and handling. It's quite high to what is offered in Hong Kong and Taiwan."

A merchant in New York's Chinatown concurred. He said he must price the pair of blue ceramic dogs he imported from mainland China at $9.95. The same merchandise from Japan could be sold for $6, he noted.

Chinese delicacies also cost more when imported from mainland China.

On the West Coast, for instance, a tin of moon cakes from mainland China would sell for about $5.50. Domestically prepared moon cakes might cost $4.50 a tin.

A sampling of prices for other mainland foods available in San Francisco's Chinatown showed preserved duck eggs at 20 cents each, lotus paste at 75 cents per tin, cans of pickled vegetables at 65 cents, and fried dace-a small fresh water fish-at $1 to $1.25 a tin. All these items were more expensive than similar goods imported from other countries or produced locally.

Talks To Start In Springfield

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP)—Police turned back 100 white youths marching on city hall Thursday in this city beset by a week of clashes involving blacks and whites and youths of French and Spanish extraction.

Three of the demonstrators were permitted into the office of Mayor Frank Freedman, where it was announced they had agreed to a proposal to set up talks between black and white high school pupils.

Thirty-one persons have been injured since disturbances began Sept. 22, including three French-speaking youths who were wounded by a blast from a shotgun following clashes Wednesday night between youngsters of French-Canadian background and Puerto Rican youths. Two of the wounded youths were hospitalized, one in poor condition.

The violence began last week with school officials blaming nonstudent white "outside agitators" for entering Technical High School and attacking black pupils. Twenty-eight persons have been arrested, including two demonstrators who failed to obey a police order to move on Thursday.

No explanation was given for the outbreaks between gangs of French and Spanish-speaking youths in the city's north end.

At one time, Springfield had a large French-speaking community. The north end now is mostly occupied by Puerto Ricans.

Out of a total population of 163,095, the city has 20,600 blacks, some 6,000 Puerto Ricans and an estimated 2,000 of French-Canadian descent.

While Police Sgt. Mitchell Arabik said the situation was "quieting down very nicely" Thursday, officials continued to schedule extra tours of duty for officers.

School officials said attendance was up Thursday despite a walkout at Technical High School by 17 pupils just prior to the march on city hall.

Violence flared spasmodically last week with the largest clash coming Friday when black and white pupils battled in the streets near Tech at dismissal time. They fought with sticks and rocks.

Disturbances broke out every day this week despite extra squads of police. Class attendance dropped each day with about a third of the city's 6,400 high school pupils reported absent Wednesday.

Hard Line Taken On Devaluation Of Dollar

WASHINGTON (AP)-The United States took a hard line Thursday against devaluing the dollar and called on other governments for progress in dismantling trade barriers as a condition for removal of the 10 percent U.S. tariff surcharge.

Secretary of the Treasury John B. Connally delivered to the 118 nations of the International Monetary Fund an address that was conciliatory in tone but basically unyielding on the U.S. terms for ending the monetary stalemate.

But he offered a new suggestion: That there be a transitional period of freely floating currencies, during which day-to-day dealings on world money markets would determine appropriate levels at which realistic exchange rates could be pegged.

Without naming any governments, Connally aimed shafts at Japan and some other countries which have "floated" their currencies but still have intervened in financial markets to prevent them from rising freely in relation to the dollar.

"As a result, some adjustments clearly needed are being delayed or thwarted, the process of multilateral decision-making impeded, and political questions multiplied," the American spokesman said.

Alan Alda Marlo Thomas in
"Jenny"
Saturday, Oct. 2 - S. U. Ballroom
7, 9, and 10:30 p.m.
Sponsored by Newman Club
50¢

TONITE
7:30 and 9:30
See
DUSTIN and MIA
as
JOHN and MARY
S. U. Ballroom Only 50¢

fridays fling
Not just this Friday, but every Friday from now on, most downtown stores will be open until 9:00 p.m. for your shopping convenience. This is just one of the ways your Amherst Chamber of Commerce is helping you.
Remember--Fridays until 9:00

Campus Demos Down

By KERRY MELO

If a Gallup pole were to be taken on the popularity of demonstrations on campuses these days one might find that it has greatly decreased. At least at UMass anyway. Ask Ken Mosakowski. The UMass grad student yesterday conducted a one man demonstration in front of Whitmore against the increased parking rates proposed by the Administration.

When asked why he demonstrated, Mosakowski stated that he had two basic reasons. First to oppose the parking increase itself and second to oppose the manner in which the University went about making it.

Mosakowski stated that since this is supposedly a democratic University, all changes in policy should first be brought before all those affected, and a general consensus of opinion should be taken. The Administration, merely stated that a parking increase would be put into effect without even stating reasons for their move, according to the student.

About the increase in parking itself, Mosakowski said that the State Legislature should appropriate more funds for parking here at the University. A raise in parking, he said, is the same as a raise in taxes for the people who use the facilities, since the University is subsidized by taxpayers money.

Reactions to the one man stand were varied. In fact, most of the people didn't realize that anything was going on at all, Mosakowski said.

DAYTONA BEACH, FLA., Shirley Ann Wheeler, 23, a Daytona Beach housewife, may become the first person ever to go to prison in Florida for having an abortion. She has been convicted of having an abortion and is awaiting sentencing. She could receive up to 20 years.

Attica Prisoners Beaten

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—Two prisoners from the Attica Correctional Facility testified Thursday they were beaten by police after a riot at the prison was quelled Sept. 13.

Frank Lott and Roger Champion testified at a hearing before Judge John T. Curtin in U.S. District Court.

Both said they had run a gantlet of police and guards after they surrendered and were stripped naked.

The two inmates, both black, said they have been harassed and threatened with death by guards since the Sept. 9-13 uprising that claimed 42 lives.

Lott and Champion said they have been confined in a special security section of the prison.

Champion said a prison supervisor came to the cellblock one night with about a dozen guards. The guards told the inmates they were going to kill them, Champion said, and "make an example of you guys. You don't deserve to live."

The inmates testified in support of an injunction sought by lawyers of the Attica Defense Committee.

INTERCOLLEGIATE BOWLING:

All undergraduates interested in competing for a position on the UMass Bowling Team, please contact Ernie Malagrida

2004 Kennedy
phone: 546-7882
deadline is Friday, October 1.

Amherst Apartment Project Appears To Be Doomed

A controversial 2,200 unit 645 acre apartment development in East Amherst appears to be doomed.

Citing the long-range as well as immediate effects the project would have on Amherst, the Zoning Board of Appeals unanimously denied the application of Otto Paparazzo Associates for the project Wednesday.

Richard Beamish, a member of the Amherst Growth Study Committee, which has opposed the development, called the decision "a sensible one. Before this development is allowed to continue, we should study the larger implications."

The reasons given by the board for the ruling were:

(1) The burden the project would place on Amherst's almost full schools. According to the board, an estimated 792 grade school children and 607 secondary school students would be added to Amherst schools.

(2) The project, which would house 6,500 adults, would overtax Amherst's sewerage system, which is already inadequate and cannot be expanded until 1974.

(3) The project would overburden the town's already crowded street system.

(4) The project would remove more agricultural land from Amherst town limits. According to the board, the amount of agricultural land is already severely depleted.

(5) The project would overburden the Amherst sanitary landfill operation.

Challenging the idea that massive growth in Amherst is inevitable, the board said that the growth of UMass has been slowed, and that the school's explosive growth during the past decade is not expected to continue in the future.

The Amherst Development and Industrial Commission had come out in favor of the development. According to Franklin Decker, vice-chairman of the DIC, the decision was completely consistent with the D.I.C.'s function of promoting the orderly development of Amherst.

Spokesman for Otto Paparazzo Associates had no comment Thursday on the ruling.

Street Fair In Greenfield

The Creative Merchants Association of Greenfield has announced a street fair to be held in that city on Saturday, October 2 with October 9 as a rain date. The fair would feature sidewalk displays by area craftsman and artists and will take place on Miles and Chapman Streets in Greenfield. Free entertainment is scheduled to run from the 10 o'clock opening to the 5 P.M. closing.

Michael J. Gramlich, coordinator for the Creative Merchants, has stated that many spaces are still available both for performers of all varieties and for artisans to show their handicrafts. "We are concerned with people having a good time and learning about the creativity that abounds in the Tri-State Area. There is no charge for a craftsman to exhibit his work. "All he needs to do," stated Mr. Gramlich, "would be to call to make sure a space is available." Because the focus of the event would be for everyone to have a good time and there is no admission or financial fee involved, the performers which now include, Bloodstone, Warm Colors, folk performers, and poets, will not be paid; although, a hat might be passed to provide expenses for the performers.

Anyone wishing to perform at either or both of two locations that day are asked to contact Mr. Gramlich at the Creative Endeavor Music Store, 22 Miles Street, Greenfield.

The Creative Merchants Association was formed by a group of creative merchants with the purpose of joining forces to provide mutual ad, and to help foster creative expressions. The original founders are:

The Adventure; handcrafted pottery, jewelry, needlework and knitting classes. 17 Chapman Street.

Creative Endeavor; instruments from around the world. 20-22 Miles Street.

The Granary; organic foods and recipes. 15 Miles Street.

Grizzly Furs; domestic and imported handcrafts. Chapman Street.

Heartfelt Leather; handcrafted garments and footwear. 23 Miles Street.

The World Eye Book Store; 15 Miles Street

POSTERS
Wide variety, many new things. 10% U. Mass. discount with this ad closed Tues. & Wed.
MERCURY GALLERIES
11 Bridge St., Northampton
(facing Jack August's Seafood Restaurant)

Good Music and a Good Time
Amherst Folklore Center
SPRING STREET
(behind Grace Church)
Fri. - Glen Jenks
Sat. - Bob Coltman
Sun. - Steve Josephs
Mon. - Movie "Rebel Without A Cause"
OPENS AT 8 P.M.

AUTO INSURANCE
ALL CARS — ALL DRIVERS
BUDGET PAYMENTS
CYCLES — SCOOTERS
Tekoa Insurance Agency
160 Pleasant St. Northampton 586-2742
10 Broad St. Westfield 562-3604

EXPERT REPAIRS
JEWELRY FOWLER Jewelers OF AMHERST WATCHES
65 N. Pleasant St.
253-7615
U.M. MUGS
(Leather and Pewter)

COMMUTERS NEED ATTENTION, TOO
Get it in the
COMMUTER ASSEMBLY
Nomination Sheets for Openings available - outside RSO, 1st level, C.C.
Due - by 5 p.m., Fri., Oct. 8

Gargling In Pursuit Of Health

By D. BISSONNETTE

Colds and sore throats may decrease in number this year on campus, at least for the 150 University students taking part in an experiment being conducted here in conjunction with the Institute on Agricultural and Industrial Microbiology.

In the study subjects gargle three times a day with an antibacterial mouthwash, Cepacol, and report three times a week to investigators, telling them whether or not they have a cold or sore throat.

A throat culture is taken once a month and tested for bacteria content. It is hypothesized that the results of the experiment will show a decrease in the number of colds and sore throats for those taking part throughout the nine months of the study and adhering to the gargling schedule.

Each person in the randomized, crossover study serves as a control, with each one using for two month intervals either the Cepacol, a saline mouthwash, or nothing at all. Investigators do not know who is taking what at what time since a computer has predetermined this.

The financing for the experiment is coming from the William S. Merrill Company, the makers of the product being tested. A stipend of $200 is being paid after all data has been collected in order to encourage students to complete their requirements in the study.

Sponsors of the investigation here on Campus are Dr. W. Litsky Mrs. Bertha Litsky, Paul Garant, Mrs. Gloria Howard and Gary Kolonovich. Tests are being done in Marshall Hall and the Newman Center.

"These people taking part in the study could be making medical history", said Mrs. Litsky in stressing the significance of the study and the seriousness of it for those taking part. - "Everyday is important."

Next time you see one of those "tested by college students across the country" ads on television, perhaps you can believe it. Here at UMass the Health Department is co-operating with the makers of Cepacol (a mouth wash) in a six month experiment to test it's effectiveness. Above are some of the intrepid volunteers at work.

Mayor Stokes Discloses '72 Election Blueprint

CHICAGO (AP)—Mayor Carl B. Stokes of Cleveland disclosed a national black blueprint for the 1972 election year Thursday, keynoted by "developing and understanding the power which will come through coalition politics."

Stokes, who earlier said he will not seek a third term as Cleveland mayor, declared he does not want to be a presidential candidate and added, "and I'm certainly not available for vice president."

His address highlighted the political side of the Black Expo exhibition dedicated mainly to business unity.

He was introduced at a news conference by the Rev. Jesse Jackson, director of Operation Breadbasket, as "our great national political spokesman." Operation Breadbasket is the economic arm of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

Asserting that a political revolution is needed to make cities livable again, Stokes said the reason for the call to a black political strategy for 1972 was "to change those now in power to those who will take the drastic action necessary" to throw off oppression.

"This may mean the actual running of a black person for president of the United States," he said. "Or the running of a number of different black persons for favorite sons and other varieties of committing presidential delegates, or a combination of them all."

Stokes outlined five points "as our only commitment".

"1. Black elected officials and black voters, Republican and Democrat, make no commitment to any of the announced or easily draftable candidates for president.

"2. Black voters concern themselves with issues, not personalities.

"3. Black voters in their respective states start now in the process of deciding upon delegates to the 1972 political party conventions.

"4. Develop communication now with other political minority groups as the issues are framed and common interests identified for coalition purposes.

"5. Send your delegates to the conventions with a full understanding of why they are there to represent us, not to snatch at some crumb offered them by the old line organization and that they be unequivocably committed on the issues and on the full compliance with the selection processes."

Stokes spoke five days after a number of leading blacks met in a secret weekend session to draft strategy for the 1972 elections.

Room To Move--
5-0401, 5-0400
Come in or call up

SPEAK FOR YOURSELF
on the SUG/Campus Center Board
Athletic Council
Fine Arts Council
CASIAC Curriculum Committee
Applications available in the Student Senate Office due by 5 p.m., Friday, Oct. 1.
Athletic Council applicants see Lee Sandstrom
All other applicants see John Hancock

YOU MIGHT WIN
if you get your Student Senate nomination papers in on time
Papers are due by 5 p.m., Fri., Oct. 1
(in front of RSO, 1st level, CC)
Student Senate elections will be held Oct. 7

Campus Center Program Council
presents

October 3, 1971 3:30 & 8:30
Bowker Auditorium
Tickets $2.00
at S. U. Box Office & Door at Performance

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF — Richard C. Hanson
MANAGING EDITOR — David D. Williams
BUSINESS MANAGER — James Gold
EXECUTIVE EDITOR — Barry J. Rubenstein
NEWS EDITOR — Anne C. Stadnicki
SPORTS EDITOR — Earle T. Barroll

PHOTO EDITOR — Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR — Robert Nesti

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR — Nathan Gorenstein
NEWS STAFF — Bill Manburg, Bob Nesti, Steve Fine
EDITORIAL — Ann Gurnett
SPORTS — Bob Medeiros, Dan Kamal, Earle Barroll
DARKROOM — Gib Fullerton, Alan Chapman
AD LAYOUT — Bill Manburg

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administration read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the views of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, and letters represent the personal views of the writers

A Plea From Prison

This morning at 9 a.m., a press conference will be held in Boston concerning a new piece of legislation. This bill, however, in light of many recent events, differs in some important respects from those which are swept through the halls of the State legislature every year.

The bill in question concerns prison reform and though, like ecology and the Vietnam War, this seems to be the bandwagon issue of the day, this piece of proposed legislation was not developed in the usual fashion. After the events of Attica, the inmates at Concord State Reformatory formed a Committee composed of prisoners, members of correctional institution staffs, and outsiders, like Representative Atkins of Action, in order to see if they couldn't come up with some workable proposal for prison reform. It is important to note that all members of the committee have full voting rights, prisoners and outsiders alike.

Through this body a four point program for prison reform has emerged and will be presented to Governor Sargent today. The committee lists three reasons for their actions and why the proposed legislative package should be passed.

First, all the reforms that have been proposed have been formulated with the aid of correctional personnel and they are well known to all with knowledge of the subject. Secondly, the committee feels that the persons inside prisons need an act of faith that people outside want to do something for them. The effect of Attica here has been to hasten this desire. The prisoners emotionally and physically, need immediate action. Finally, by means of the committee, the prisoners wish to create a vehicle that has some credibility so that they feel they can have someone to deal with.

It is worth realizing that this proposed legislation is not in the form of a demand of any kind. It might more exactly be defined as a plea. The prisoners are offering a reasonable approach to a difficult problem. However, there are a few major roadblocks in the committees' path.

As was stated before, the passage of this legislation immediately is of utmost importance to those concerned. However, the legislative session is rapidly coming to a close and therefore, the only way for this bill to reach the legislature this session is by way of the Governor's office. Thus the Governor must accept the program before it can go any further. Even if Sargent does push the proposal, a legislature anticipating a recess will not necessarily look favorably on an addition to their agenda, even such an issue as prison reform.

We suggest that the method employed at Concord could have far reaching effects for the penal system of Massachusetts and the nation and that the Governor and legislature should act favorably on the measure immediately. However, we are not presumptuous enough to think that our suggestion will carry all the way to Boston. What we do hope, though, is that all those who were even mildly outraged about Attica write to their representatives immediately to urge them strongly to support the Concord Committee bill and to pressure the Governor into forwarding it to the legislature, if he does not immediately do so. The role of prisons should be to rehabilitate, not debilitate.

Art Buchwald

Voting Against Thieu

WASHINGTON--President Thieu, who is running hard against no opposition in the October presidential elections, has maintained that the South Vietnamese elections are not rigged. He said the people have a fair choice. They can either vote for him or mutilate their ballots. He has said that if more than 50% of the population mess up their ballots, he would accept this as a defeat and graciously resign.

He also said he is going to tell the people how to mutilate their ballots in protest. They can tear it, mark it up, fold it or crush it to show their displeasure with him.

I asked my man in Saigon to give me the latest word on the elections there and here is his report.

"The excitement is building here in South Vietnam for the Oct. 3 presidential election. President Thieu is still leading in the polls, with 52% of the vote. This is down six points from August.

"Picking up support are those who are going to tear their ballots in half, who now number 23% of the electorate, followed by those who are going to stomp on their ballots with their feet, who account for 15% of those polled.

"Ten per cent of the people said they still hadn't made up their minds whether they were going to burn their ballots or throw themselves into the river.

"But opposition forces to Thieu are hopeful that a coalition between the ballot tearers, the stompers and the burners can be formed before the election, so Thieu can be defeated.

"Hok Sam-thung, who is chairman of the ballot tearers committee, has maintained that the only way to defeat Thieu is by tearing the ballot. He feels the people who want to step on their ballots are unrealistic. Thieu can easily have stomped ballots cleaned and pressed and then count them for himself." Hok told me at his headquarters, where they were holding a "tear your ballot for peace" rally:

"The ballot tearers are the only ones who can beat Thieu, but we'll never do it unless the foot stompers and burners join us."

Over at the foot stompers headquarters Suk Randuk said, "The ballot tearers are more interested in their own methods of mutilating a ballot than they are in the election. We know for a fact that the United States has given Thieu $30 million in Scotch Tape so he can have his henchmen repair the ballots that are torn. When you stomp on one with your foot, you crush it. It's impossible to repair, and we're telling our people to stick with their heels."

The ballot burners, the most militant of the anti-Thieu forces, say that the ballot tearers and the ballot stompers are playing into Thieu's hands.

"The only way to show oppostion to Thieu is to burn the ballots in hopes that the polling places will burn down at the same time," they say.

A small group who are for defacing ballots with crayons have been trying to get support, but they started late and don't seem to have the charisma with the electorate that the ballot tearers and stompers have.

So at the moment it looks like Thieu will probably be the winner unless someone comes up with a method of destroying the ballots that all the opposition parties can agree upon. A reform group in Saigon is trying to get everyone to eat their ballots, but so far most South Vietnamese have shown no appetite for this suggestion.

Point Blank

Voting Rights Incomplete

"Youth Power at the Polls"--"Young Voters May Change Make-up of Congress in '72"--"Nixon Re-election Threatened by Youth Vote."

These are familiar newspaper headlines. Since the adoption of the 26th Amendment, reporters have been predicting that the future of American politics could be largely determined by the 25 million young people who will be eligible to cast their first ballot in 1972. But the young voters' road to the polling booth is not unencumbered, and their political powr cannot be taken for granted.

One serious threat to the youth vote is posed by the election laws of Michigan and North Dakota. In these two states, young people will be able to vote for one of the candidates for President in the 1972 election. However, they will not be able to participate in the nomination of those candidates.

For young people, voting for President in 1972 could prove virtually meaningless unless they have a choice in the nominating process as well. The struggle for the Democratic nomination at the July convention will be the likely focus of youth interest--and it is here that their influence could be vital.

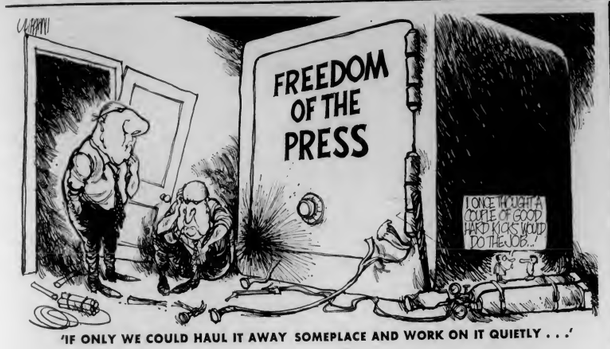
In 1968 young people were credited with making an important difference in the nominating process of the Democratic Party. One presidential campaign even became known as the "Children's Crusade." Nevertheless, the influence of youth was limited. They could ring doorbells, stuff envelopes, write speeches and make posters. But real power--the vote--was generally beyond their reach.

With few exceptions, young people were not given the opportunity of serving as voting delegates to the Democratic National Convention or of helping to select the delegates. Sixteen state delegations at the convention had no voting members under 30 years of age, and another 13 had only one delegate from this age group. (The Republicans have an even more dismal record. Only 1% of the delegates at the 1968 GOP Convention were under 30, while 83% were 10 years of age or older. In 42 states, there were no voting delegates under 30.)

The National Democratic Party has tried to rectify this past discrimination by requiring all state parties to actively encourage the participation of young people in all party affairs and to include 18-30 year olds in the National Convention delegation in "reasonable relationship" to their presence in the state population.

However, despite party reforms and despite the 26th Amendment, young people in Michigan and North Dakota will face severe restrictions on their right to participate in the nomination of a presidential candidate in 1972. Under the election laws of both states, National Convention delegates are chosen at state party conventions. State convention delegates are chosen at country conventions. And county delegates are chosen at a party primary. This primary election represents the only opportunity available to all voters for participation in the presidential nominating process -- and it has already been held. In both states, the election occurred in late summer of 1970.

As a result, large numbers of Michigan and North Dakota voters will be prevented from taking part in the selection of their party's presidential nominee. These voters include (1) 18-20 year olds who are newly enfranchised by the 26th Amendment, (2) 21-23 year olds who were ineligible to vote in the 1970 primary, and (3) new residents who have moved into the state since 1970. In Michigan alone, the young people who are thus disenfranchised number over 1,000,000.



Bills have been introduced in the Michigan and North Dakota legislatures that call for a new primary in 1972. The North Dakota legislature adjourned without taking action, and Michigan politicians predict that the reform bill has little chance of passing their state's legislature. Consequently, court action is the only remaining alternative.

The Center for Political Reform has prepared lawsuits to be brought in each state by young voters and new residents who are deprived of their voting rights by state law. The suits are based on the 26th Amendment, the right to travel, the right of political association, the Equal Protection Clause, and the 1970 Voting Rights Act. The courts will be asked to enjoin present delegation selection procedures and to require each election.

If these court actions are successful, another barricade in the path of young people's voting rights will have been knocked down. If they fail, the youth of Michigan and North Dakota will have good reason to question the legitimacy of the electoral process. It's a shrewd trick to tell someone that he can now vote for President -- but that he can have no say in who the candidates are. As "Boss" Tweed used to put it, "I don't care who does the electing, just so long as I do the nominating."

MDC Photo By Barbara Brecher

'IF ONLY WE COULD HAUL IT AWAY SOMEPLACE AND WORK ON IT QUIETLY . . .'

And Now, Beyond Attica

By HERBERT STURZ

Imagine Attica rebuilt—black and Spanish-speaking guards, better food, censorship eased, the screens between visitors and inmates removed, full freedom of religion, daily showers available. There are classrooms, counseling sessions and access to a good library. Officials are making an effort to remember that inmates are human beings.

In spite of such good deeds, good intentions, and money spent, it is clear that those sentenced to the new Attica will arrive with the stamp of the ghetto and the scars of detention pens upon them. They will arrive at Attica hurt and angry and brutalized. The new and improved Attica will, of course, still take away their freedom, and produce resentful, bitter, even vengeful men.

Rebuild Attica? Yes. Make it more humane, of course, but let's not deceive ourselves, Attica reformed will not correct, nor will it rehabilitate. What it will do is provide society with temporary protection from those who have been identified as threatening.

But we can do more than contain people. We can in fact rehabilitate—and thus provide not only genuine protection for society, but some chance for productive lives. But to rehabilitate we must intervene at every way station on the road to Attica.

The road to Attica begins with families uprooted, with bad housing, racial prejudices, drug profiteering; with schools and social agencies unresponsive; with kids growing up feeling left out. Improving the quality of life for these persons would result in fewer setting foot in jail or prison.

Meanwhile, we must bring about changes where we can. Arrest is the earliest time for society to intervene. Every effort should be made to keep an accused person out of jail, where he can only become angrier and more bitter. Whenever possible a summons should be issued by the police in lieu of a formal arrest.

Pretrial service agencies staffed by community liaison specialists should divert the accused into the custody of a community agency. That agency would see that the person comes to court when required and try to help him find a job, deal with his drug habit, or obtain more education.

Intervention after arrest can often circumvent the need for prosecution. The Court Employment Project, begun as a small pilot experiment in Manhattan four years ago, gets jobs and provides counseling, group therapy, and a structured program to persons awaiting trial. If participants get and hold a job and remain crime-free for three months, charges are dismissed by the court.

The Court Employment Project has spread to Brooklyn and the Bronx and to other cities. It's a beginning. However, 4,000 persons are arrested in New York City each week; the project can help only 40.

Judges can be provided with still another course: the offender can be released to participate under supervision in a community program. One such, recently created in the southeast Bronx, is assuming responsibility for cases diverted by criminal court judges who are adjourning sentencing for varying periods.

Less than half a cent of every criminal justice dollar goes to rehabilitation. That half doesn't go far.

Many men now in Attica should be prereleased to a structured work environment in the community like that provided by Pioneer Services in New York City, a corporation which hires a man only if he has a criminal record, a history of drug abuse or alcoholism, and has been unable to hold a job anywhere else.

Pioneer's first undertaking has been a messenger service employing 25 ex-heroin addicts now on methadone. This is a nonprofit, low-stress work program with supportive services. When the program started in April no one knew whether the men would stick. They have. Out of 10,000 messages delivered to date, not one has been lost. Morale is high; and the men are helping to sign up new clients.

The concept of providing supported work for so-called incorrigibles holds great promise. Successful messengers move on to other supported work projects. This week five Pioneer employes with lengthy criminal records and many years of heroin addiction are "water blasting" the rotunda of the New York City Municipal Building, using a new process which instantly cleans at low cost.

Those who have taken the road to Attica can come back if we give them the resources and the opportunity.

Herbert Sturz is director, Vera Institute of Justice, a (Reprinted from the NY Times 9/29/71.)

Editorial Points

One of our astute MDC reporters discovered today that the stereo tapes being sold on the concourse level of the Campus Center are illegal. But then, almost everything else is too.

* * *

I wonder if in forty years somebody will reminisce about the time our esteemed Senate Treasurer, Rick Verrochi, spent as a student here. They might even call him 'Rocky.'

* * *

District Attorney Callahan seems to have another $3000 to purchase drugs with. Remember what happened last year on that fateful May day all you who purvey illegal drugs.

* * *

There is an awful lot of controversy building around the "closed session" remarks made by Chancellor Tippo at yesterday's faculty Senate meeting. What may be in the wind is a hard fight between UMass-Amherst and the "big burgeoning bureaucracy" the President Bob Wood is welding together in his systems office.

Test Your Morals

(Ed. note: We felt the following information would be of interest to the UMass community)

By ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Four years ago when your sex test came out, I was an innocent 12-year-old so I did not keep the newspaper copy. Since then I have come a long way and I would appreciate it very much if you could once again share with the world your famous sex test. Thank you loads, Ann—SIXTEEN AND NOT SO SWEET

Dear Sixteen: Here's the test and I am printing it by popular request. (At least 5,000 kids have asked for a re-run since it appeared.) I'd like to make it plain, however, that this is not MY test. It was sent to me by a Memphis teenager who asked me to evaluate it.

My evaluation was: Interesting, but pretty gamy.

Know Thyself Questionnaire (Score the number of points indicated for each "Yes" answer.)

1. Ever gone out with a member of the opposite sex? 4
2. Ever been kissed? 4
3. Ever been French-kissed? 4
4. Ever been kissed while in a reclining position? 5
5. Ever gotten or given a hickey? 3
6. Ever been kissed in your pajamas? 2
7. Ever been kissed against your will? 2
8. Ever parked for more than an hour? 5
9. Ever said, "I love you?" 3
10. Ever said, "I love you," to more than one person? 3
11. Ever gone steady? 4
12. Ever been picked up by a person you never saw before? 7
13. Ever played strip poker with a member of the opposite sex? 5
14. Have you gone all the way? 10
15. Have you had the desire to go all the way but managed to keep from it? 2
16. Have you ever made a member of the opposite sex cry? 4
17. Has a member of the opposite sex ever made you cry? 4
18. Do you smoke plain cigarets? 2
19. Do you drink alcohol or beer? 2
20. Ever passed out from drinking? 6
21. Ever lied to your folks about where you went or with whom? 8
22. Ever smoke pot? 7
23. Ever tripped on LSD or the big H? 10
24. Ever considered the pregnancy route so your folks would have to let you get married? 10

SCORE CHART

9 or under — Queer or something
10 to 15 — Pure as the driven snow
15 to 25 — Passionate but prudish
25 to 35 — Normal and decent
35 to 45 — Indecent
45 to 55 — Headed for serious trouble
55 to 60 — In terrible shape
60 or over — Condemned
(Ed. note: 80 or over — Welcome to UMASS)

(Reprinted from the Boston Herald Traveler, 10/1/71)

The Terrible Price Of Conformity

WASHINGTON—This nightmare began developing about two weeks ago with the onset of the fall advertising season when the newspaper ads began to fill up with men wearing $200 suits.

It opened with a heart-warming announcement by Biff, who is 18 now and fancies himself the soul of fashion when decked out, as he always is, in shattered overalls and rope sandals.

"Well, Dad," Biff said, "Now that I am a man the time has come to put aside this childish clothing and begin dressing in regular gentleman's ready-to-wear."

WHEN BIFF SAID this there was a woman - probably his mother, but things are often vague in dreams - who broke into tears of gratitude. Someone barbecued a calf on the small backyard grill. Relatives came from many states to celebrate Biff's return to traditional garments.

"Yes," Biff was telling Uncle Harold, "The next time you see Me, I shall be wearing a haircut and one of the new $200 suits."

"Two hundred dollars! Do you know how much that is before taxes?" This was shouted by Biff's father, very loudly in the night, as he came awake with a spasm of terror and sat bolt upright in bed.

"Go back to sleep," said Biff's mother. "You were just having another one of your nightmares about taxes."

TWO NIGHTS later the dream resumed. As it began Biff's father was saying, "All right, anything to save you from becoming a hippie. Even a $200 suit."

And they were transported magically to the $200 suit store, where a man who looked exactly like Adolphe Menjou - white tie, tails, spats, carnation in lapel - was forbidding them entry. He was the salesman.

"You can't just walk in here wearing worn - out overalls and buy a $200 suit," he said. "Look!" He showed them a parking lot filled with Rolls-Royces and Dusenbergs. "Our customers," he said, "Acquire monogrammed underwear, hand-hewn socks, shoes made of leather from the finest spanish bulls, and neckties inlaid with mother-of-pearl before they come in for a $200 suit."

BIFF SAID he could see the logic of that. It would be silly, he said, to put a $200 suit on over bare skin with nothing but rope sandals to keep the cuffs from rubbing against dirty feet.

"For those items," the salesman said, "You go to the $10 underwear shop, the $55 footwear boutique, and the damn-the-freeze harberdashery."

With a great effort, Biff's father forced himself to wake up before he could drain the last of his bank account for Biff's wardrobe.

Three nights later it started again. In an act of financial insanity, which must have occurred in an intervening installment which Biff's father had missed, he had bought Biff sufficient wardrobe to gain him admission to the $200 suit store. The two of them were en route to a rendezvous with Adolphe Menjou as the dream opened.

"I've been thinking," Biff was saying, "that a single $200 suit will hardly fill the bill if I am to look respectable seven days a week. I think that while you're at it you had better buy me a couple of those $150 sports jackets and five or six pairs of the new $45 slacks ..."

BIFF'S FATHER refused to dream any more that night, but next night the thing was waiting for him.

"If I'm going to be respectable," Biff's opening lines went, "I can't go on living in a crummy pad, with nothing but my old Boy Scout sleeping bag and some movie posters on the wall. I shall be wanting you to buy me some decent furniture. Some Chippendale ..."

"Wake up!" Biff's mother cried to Biff's groaning father.

"With pleasure," said Biff's father.

But the very next night, around 3 a.m., Biff told his father that they couldn't really pull up at the $200 suit store in his father's drab 1968 sedan. "[illegible] 1927 Dusenberg can be had quite reasonably from ..."

The dream has not resumed for the last three nights. Whenever Biff's mother starts to tell Biff he should do something about his shabby appearance, Biff's father kicks her shins and snarls

(Reprinted from Boston Herald 9/30/71)

Pope Paul Clashes With Priests, Laymen

VATICAN CITY (AP)-The Third World Synod of Bishops opened Thursday with a clash between Pope Paul VI and a well-organized lobby of priests and laymen seeking radical change in the Roman Catholic Church.

Speaking at a Mass in the Sistine Chapel, the Pope warned the 209 synod delegates to beware of the "danger" of outside pressures. He told them to make up their own minds on the synod topics, "The Priesthood" and "Social Justice."

Operation Synod, a lobby that claims representation in 60 countries, quickly charged that the papal address was marked "by a tone of admonition and of fear" and consisted "largely of empty rhetoric."

It urged the bishops "not to let themselves be put under pressure by anyone, not even by the Pope."

The pontiff inaugurated the third synod of his eight-year reign by concelebrating a Latin-language Mass with, among others, Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, the primate of Hungary. The prelate came to Rome Tuesday after 15 years of asylum in the U.S. Embassy in Budapest.

Synod delegates cheered the 79-year-old cardinal.

In his talk, Pope Paul gave no guidelines for debate on either synod topic. But he sharply underscored his warning about pressure.

"Its guises," he said, "are many and its power is penetrating and dangerous."

He seemed to argue for the kind of gradual evolution of the decrees of the Second Vatican Ecumencial Council he has fostered as Pope. But he warned against tampering with basic Church doctrines.

Operation Synod, a worldwide amalgamation of liberal priests and lay groups, was born at Louvain University in Belgium early this year.

Its published material calls for a "pluralistic" ministry in which there would be many kinds of priests: celibate and married, fulltime and part-time male and female.

The lobby wants a breakdown of the sharp distinction between clergy and laity, so that priests would perform more so-called lay activities and laymen would engage in forms of ministry.

On the social justice topic, Operation Synod wants the Catholic Church to permit its members to engage in "active non-violent" resistance and, in some cases, in violent resistance to civil powers if such actions are deemed necessary for social progress.

VATICAN CITY, PAPAL HAND FOR MINDSZENTY—Pope Paul VI, 74, holds the hand of Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty, 79, as they step out of the Sistine Chapel in Vatican City at end of opening ceremony of World Synod of Bishops Thursday. Cardinal Mindszenty, primate of Hungary, came to Rome Tuesday after spending 15 years in asylum in the U.S. mission in Budapest. At right is a Vatican Swiss Guard.

CHICAGO--SO WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH THE HAIRDO?--Office gals react in downtown Chicago Wednesday to man-made gorilla which wanders around Civic Center Area. In Chicago, where many bizarre things occur, this was a stunt todrawattention to appearance of Ralph Nader and Chicago Daily News columnist Mike Royko as speakers at meeting sponsored by "Citizens for a Better Environment."

Coal Strike Expected

WASHINGTON (AP)-Industry and union officials braced for widespread strikes in the bituminous coal fields Friday and negotiations moved toward the midnight contract expiration deadline with no sign of a settlement.

Some 7,000 of the 80,000 soft coal miners covered by the negotiations were reported walking off the job before the dealine in West Virginia, Ohio and Virginia, and a coal company official said., "we'll be lucky to finish tonight with anybody working."

At least 28 mines were closed in the three states.

The United Mine Workers has issued no official strike call, but most miners traditionally refuse to work without a contract.

"They're talking," was the only official word from the negotiations between the union and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association involving companies in more than 20 states.

The union, headed by W. A. "Tony" Boyle, is seeking to boost the current top wage of $37 a day to $50 and to double the present 40-cent per ton royalty the industry pays into the union's welfare and retirement fund.

Vacations, holidays and working conditions are also involved, and the industry reportedly is insisting on stronger guarantees against wildcat strikes.

Union sources said many strikes during the three-year term of the expiring contract were over safety issues, and were not unauthorized wildcat walkouts. The union is resisting industry demands for penalties against wildcat strikes, sources said.

Boyle is heading the union negotiating team. R. Heath Lary, vice chairman of U. S.Steel Corp., leads the industry team. Many coal mines are owned by steel companies.

Under the current federal wage-price freeze, they cannot put any wage hikes into effect until after the freeze expires Nov. 13 but the Nixon administration has urged companies and unions to seek settlements to go into effect later.

However, the Labor Department has said terms of such contracts may have to be adjusted in line with whatever economic restraints may follow the freeze.

Assassination Try In Iraq

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)-Attackers riding in two cars tried to kill Iraq's Kurdish leader, Mullah Mustafah Barazani, Baghdad radio reported Thursday night.

The attackers hurled more than 50 hand grenades and wounded 10 persons, but Barazani escaped unhurt, the radio said.

A broadcast statement from the ruling Baath party command denounced the attack as an attempt to undermine a recent declaration which reconciled the national government with the rebel Kurds in Northern Iraq.

Soviets Fire On U.S. Plane

WASHINGTON (AP)-The Pentagon reported Thursday that a Soviet warship fired on a U.S. Navy patrol plane Tuesday in the Sea of Japan.

The commander of the 7th Fleet patrol force, the Pentagon said, reported that "the firings were not considered by him to be hostile and that the plane was not endangered."

The Pentagon said the plane, a P3 reconnaissance aircraft, was on a routine patrol over international waters when the incident occurred.

"Some of the aircraft crew members observed a flare and several tracer rounds all fired well ahead of the aircraft from a Soviet cruiser," the Pentagon said in a terse statement.

Navy sources said eight to ten tracer rounds were fired at the plane but that crew members were unable to tell whether it was a firing exercise or a warning to stay away.

Learn to Drive
AMHERST
AUTO SCHOOL
34 Main Street
256-6066

Room To Move
Drop-In Center
5-0400, 5-0401

The largest selection of Antique Clothing
and Antique Jewelry
in Western Mass.
also featuring a large selection of Fur Coats and Jackets.
The Family Jewels
56 Green St.
NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

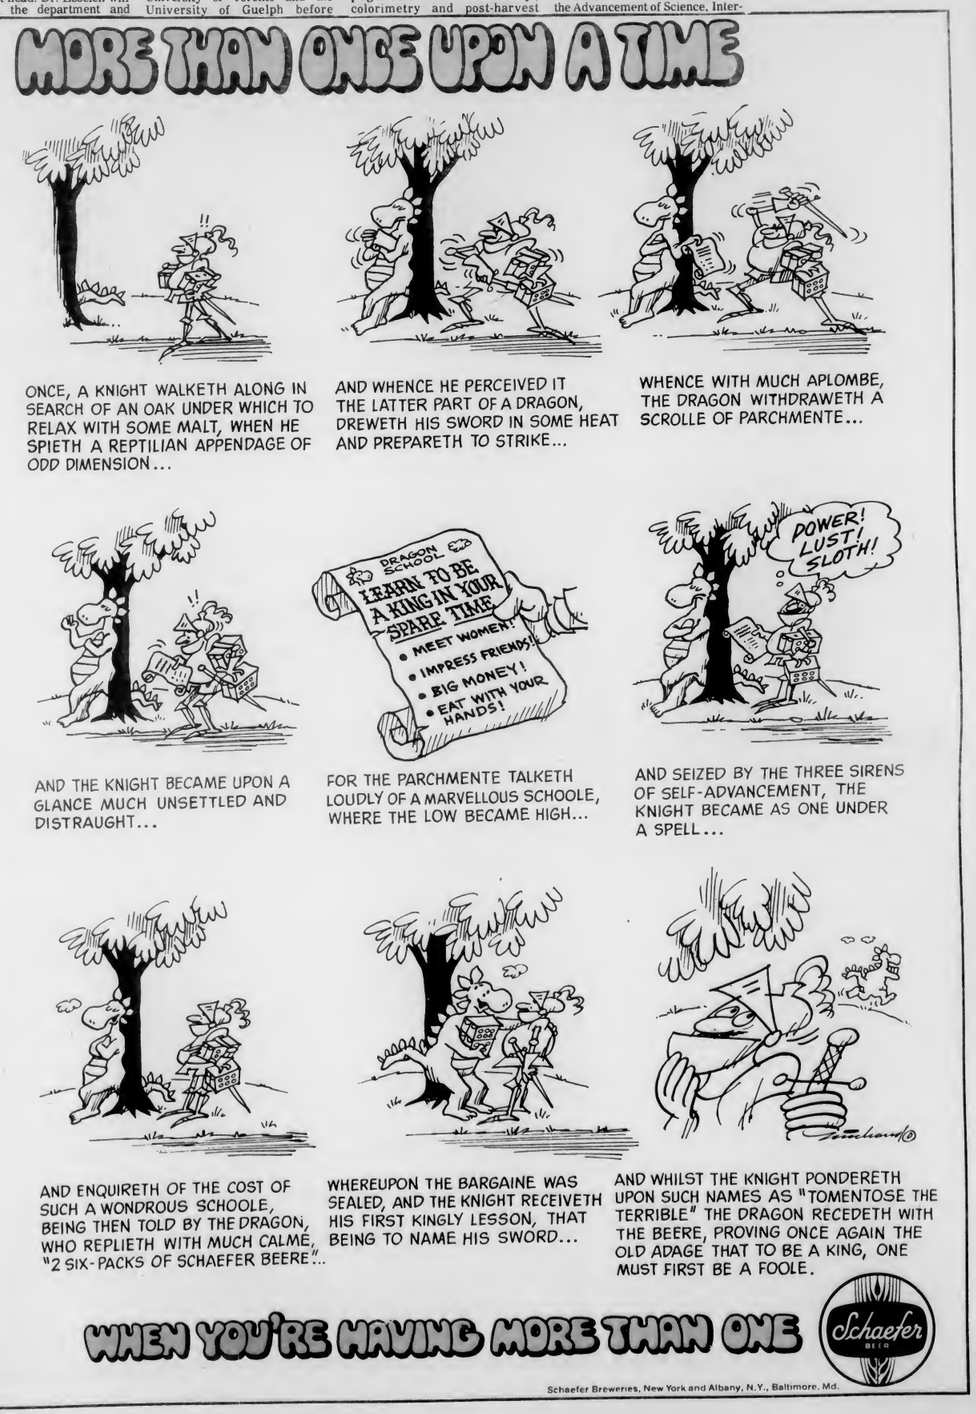
Old Weird Harold's
NEW & USED CLOTHING

Flannel Shirts	$1.50
Overalls	$4.50
Furs	$10 - 30
Flannel Shirts	$1.50
Furs	$10-30

OPENING SAT. OCT. 2, 1971
AND MORE AMAZING SALES!!
Rt. 9 on Rd. to N. Hmptn.
(next to Walter's of Hadley)

ONCE AGAIN !!
THE CHEQUERS
PRESENTS
THE DYNAMIC
COLORADO ODYSEY
TONIGHT
(9:30 - 12:30) Thursday

Francis Named Head Of Food Sci. & Tech.



Amherst, Mass.--Dr. F. J. Francis has been named head of the department of food science and technology at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst.

A faculty member at UMass for the past 17 years, Dr. Francis succeeds Dr. William B. Esselen as department head. Dr. Esselen will remain in the department and devote full time to research and teaching.

Dr. Francis is a native of Ottawa, Canada. He holds B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Toronto and a Ph. D. from the University of Massachusetts. He held faculty positions at the University of Toronto and the University of Guelph before coming to UMass.

The past six years at UMass were spent as the Nicolas Appert Professor, the first endowed chair at the University. He has been active in graduate research work, having published over 150 technical papers in the area of pigment biochemistry, colorimetry and post-harvest physiology. A book co-authored with F. M. Clydesdale, "Food Colorimetry" is ready for publication.

Dr. Francis is a member of the Institute of Food Technologists, American Chemical Society, American Society for Horticultural Science, American Association for the Advancement of Science, International Society Color Council, U.S. Army Research and Development Associates, Phytochemical Group of North America, Canadian Institute of Food Technology and the Colour Group of Great Britain.

Room To Move

Running 'Round My Brain

Cocaine is a derivative of the Coca plant found mostly in South American countries. Bolivian and Peruvian natives usually chew the leaves for its euphoric effect. Since many of the natives are working in mines doing dangerous and grueling jobs for little money, the Coca leaves enable them to endure hunger, exposure, and labor at high altitudes.

In the United States cocaine is found in its crystalline form which is bitter in taste and numbs the tongue when tasted. Its purity ranges according to how many people have handled it (cocaine, like most other chemical drugs, is diluted with milk sugar, quinine, and similar substances for economic gain). Cocaine is one of the most expensive drugs. An ounce ranges from $600-900, a gram $40-50, and a spoon (about 1/2 gram) $15-25. The effects vary with how the drug is taken, physical and emotional make-up of the person, and how much taken.

Cocaine, when mainlined, produces the most intense rush, however the high lasts about 10 minutes. When snorted, the rush is not as intense and the high lasts a little longer. Repeated sniffing gradually causes perforation and erosion of nasal membranes. Like most other chemicals, cocaine reacts differently for different types of people. Size, metabolic rate, how many and what types of drugs the person is using or has used all affect the way the drug works. Emotional states (i.e., anxiety, nervousness and confusion, etc.) will also color how the drug works.

Because cocaine is so expensive, people tend to be frugal with their coke. This would tend to make people to use too little for the desired effects. Again, how much it takes to get off varies, but a half to a full spoon of decent coke would get one high.

Cocaine is not addictive in the opiate and/or barbiturate sense. That is, tolerance doesn't develop to the effects of cocaine nor does an abstinance syndrome develop when dosages stop. However, there is a strong craving for the euphoric effects which is not to be underestimated since cocaine makes you seem to be something better than you are and it is easier to take a drug than to work towards bettering yourself.

Cocaine in small doses causes a mood elevation which often reaches the level of euphoric excitement. It produces a marked decrease in hunger, indifference to pain and is said to be the most powerful antifatigue agent known. Users feel a great muscular strength and an increase in mental capacity so that overestimation of capabilities is common (superman syndrome).

When large dosages are used, euphoria is mixed with anxiety and suspicion. If large enough doses are taken, a toxic syndrome similar to speed (paranoid state with delusions of persecution with visual, auditory, and tactile-bugs-hallucinations) occur.

Cocaine is commonly taken with heroin (speedball). Heroin takes the stimulating edge off coke and prolongs its effects. Also, when people are using a lot of heroin, they seldom get high, so they do speedballs using the heroin to prevent getting sick and the coke to get high. This gets mighty expensive! Take a guess who's making all the bread?!

Ever wonder who your friends are? Rev. Jesse Jackson explains the black power handshake to Mayor Daley at the opening breakfast of Black Expo which Rev. Jackson is promoting.

The mayor and Rev. Jackson have often been at odds over various aspects of life in Chicago.

1971-72 ID Card
Validation Labels Are
Now Available In
ID OFFICE
109 Hampshire

We're Growing For You!

"THE PLACE"
HAMPDEN COMMONS
NEW HOURS: 4 PM TO 2AM MONDAY~FRIDAY
WEEKENDS: 10AM~2AM

"Bites + Pieces"
AT HAMPDEN
8 AM TO MIDNIGHT EVERY DAY!!

LATE BREAKFAST ON WEEKENDS TIL 1 PM

GROWING IN EVERY DIRECTION
NEW MENUS
NEW HOURS
NEW DECOR

"Finally" DIRECT SERVICE
BETWEEN THE UNIVERSITY AND NATICK AND BOSTON
Less than 2 hr. nonstop service

FRIDAYS - LV. U of M 2:00 P.M.
AR. Boston 3:55 P.M.
LV. U of M 4:00 P.M.
AR. Boston 5:55 P.M.

SUNDAYS - LV. Boston 6:30 P.M.
AR. U of M 8:25 P.M.
LV. Boston 8:30 P.M.
AR. U of M 10:25 P.M.

There will be one (1) direct nonstop express bus on each of the schedules shown above in addition to our regular service

FOR ADDITIONAL INFORMATION CALL:
PETER PAN OFFICE
AT THE LOBBY SHOP
Tel. 545-2006 or 545-2528

Ship Firms Propose New Income Plan

NEW YORK (AP)-Shipping firms in the nation's largest port proposed a new guaranteed annual income plan Thursday, seeking to avert a midnight strike of 45,000 East and Gulf Coast longshoremen that would tie up nearly all the nation's deepwater ports. West Coast ports already are shut down.

Meanwhile, the government prepared to halt any walkout with a Taft-Hartley injuction.

The revised income plan would end a system of casual employment of dockers from a labor pool-with work-dodging abuses the New York Shipping Association claimed cost its

The revised income plan would end a system of casual employment of dockers from a labor pool-with work-dodging abuses the New York Shipping Association claimed cost its members $30 million a year.

Instead, members of the AFL—CIO International Longshoremen's Association would be guaranteed a full annual income, but only as employes of specific firms and under their direct supervision.

Sitting in on last-ditch talks between shippers and union were Asst. Secretary of Labor W.J. Usery, Jr., and federal maritime administrator, Andrew F. Gibson.

In event of a strike, they were prepared for a quick return to Washington to set in motion Taft-Hartley procedures automatically interrupting the walkout for at least 80 days.

Earlier in the week, President Nixon announced he was not going to permit a strike of East and Gulf Coast longshoremen to further paralyze the nation's shipping. A West Coast lieup enters its fourth month Friday.

The independent International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union called out 15,000 dockers from Seattle to San Diego on July 1, in a deadlock over off-dock container jurisdiction, a guaranteed work week, and wages and fringe benefits.

In past ILA strikes-and they have occurred regularly with each contract expiration since World War II-losses to the East and Gulf Coast economy have been estimated at $17 million a day.

The last ILA walkout in 1969 was interrupted by a Taft-Hartley injunction, then resumed after the cooling-off period and continued for two more months. At its height, 600 ships were idled.

The ILA offered to postpone current strike action at least until the expiration of Phase 1.

ANAHEIM, Calif., ADVOCATES FEDERAL REGISTRATION OF HANDGUNS--Bernard A. Garmire, Miami Chief of Police, displays a variety of handguns at the convention of the International Association of police Chiefs in Anaheim, Calif., today. Garmire says he sees no other way to control the problem of who can carry handguns than mandatory federal registration of the guns.

Wheeler Gets Piano

Six students of Wheeler House drove to Williamstown, Mass. Wednesday night to purchase a seventy-five year old piano for the dorm.

The price of the piano was set at twenty-five dollars, and was purchased from Mr. and Mrs. Couture, parents of John Couture, Head of Residence at Brett House. The Coutures gave the students a brief history of the piano, and were then quite surprised to find that the students had forgotten the check when they left Wheeler. The students then loaded the piano on Chris Brielman' truck and headed back to Wheeler.

When asked if the piano would provide cultural enrichment for the dorm, Mrs. Perkins, Head of Residence at Wheeler, replied "Sure."

High Schoolers Coming to UMass

Amherst, Mass.--Three High School Guest Days this fall at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst will introduce high school seniors to the campus.

Scheduled for the Saturdays of Oct. 2 and 23 and Nov. 13, the High School Guest Days will provide college-bound students with a brief, comprehensive exposure to the facilities of the University.

The schedule of events, all of which are open to students and their parents and friends, includes registration in the lobby of Mahar Auditorium from 9 to 10:30 a.m.; guided tours of the campus leaving the auditorium during that time; and an introduction to the University in Mahar Auditorium at 10:45, followed by an explanation of admission requirements and an informal question period. Guided tours will again be given from 11:45 to 1 p.m., expecially for guests who cannot arrive in time for the earlier tours.

Participants may choose any of the listed dates. Registration in advance is not necessary.

LOVELY WATER BEDS
AT LOVELY PRICES IN CAMPUS CENTER
call Don or Bob or Doug 586-3215 253-2433

Ladies Wear for Every Occasion at Mizaur's Mercantile next to Amherst Tower

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

68 Ford Galaxie. 40,000 miles, excellent conditions, stereo, yellow with black interior, asking 1,500. Call 256-6297.

65 Mustang conv., red, stereo tape deck with deluxe interior. Best offer over $550. Contact Steve, 253-3350.
tf10-1

1966 Pontiac Tempest, standard trans. Call after 8 and ask for Janet, 253-7526.
tf10-1

56 MGA Roadster, exc. cond., w/65MGB engine running perf., conv. top, side windows, BTR, Michelin Tires. $850. Eves. 584-0976.
tf10-1

1911 Chevy in good running condition. New paint job, lots of extra parts. Asking $500. Need money desperately. Call Jeff. 546-5131.
tf10-1

61 AW Bus rebuilt engine, new brakes, muffler ex. mechanical some body rot. Good deal at $450 or best offer. Call Ron, 549-0156.
tf10-6

1967 BMW - 1800 TI 4-door sedan, am-fm, ss blaupunkt, Pirellis, excellent condition-best offer over $1600. 253-2412.
tf10-5

1959 Chev. conv. Full inspected $175.00. Call 665-4766.
tf10-1

1967 Mustang 6 cyl., standard, good tires, snow tires, new battery, 50,000 miles. Ed Tremblay 546-7529.
tf10-1

Bread truck-walk in body, great condition. Call Gary at 526-6863 after 8:00 p.m.
tf10-4

67 Mustang conv. V8 3 spd., 4 new tires, excellent condition. $1050. Call 253-7940 after five.
tf10-5

1966 Ford Mustang, 6 cyl., good running cond. See John 120 Amity St., across from Drake. $400.
tf10-5

1967 MGB-GT, special, overdrive, wirewheels, new clutch, snow tires. Good condition. 584-2700 ext. 257 after 7 p.m.
tf10-7

68 Mustang 289, 3 speed, cheap blue and 10 meal plan also bound for Europe 546-2809, Jerry.
10-1

62 Austin Cooper with cooper s engine, $650. Call 549-1567.
tf10-7

MOTORCYCLES FOR SALE

1971 GOLD Honda CL350 exc. cond. Need money desperately must sell. Best offer, call Jack 6-7636
tf10-1

1971 Honda CR450, 2 helmets, chain lock cover, 3000 mi., crash bars $875, 323-4430.
tf10-1

1968 Montessa 250 c.c., completely rebit., new paint, excellent shape, street and dirt combination $300 or best offer. 584-1066 anytime.
tf10-4

1971 Harley Davidson sprint 350, excellent condition, 1200 miles. Call between 4-6 p.m. Bill 584-7349.
10-1

1971 Alala Record, 10 speed. Best offer. Call Ed 586-3542.
tf10-4

1967 BSA 441cc, Shooting Star, excellent condition. Must sell $475.00 Call 586-6917.
tf10-1

FOR SALE

For sale, Guild Polara elec. Guitar. Good action & sound. Can be seen at Faces of Earth in Amherst must sell! Will bargain!
tf10-1

Guitars, amps, acc., & records, at reasonable prices. The Guitar Workshop 98 Main St. Northampton 586-1786.
tf10-6

Waterbeds-now all sizes $19.95! Factory warranty. Also, frames, liners & pads in stock. Call Mark at 546-5450.
tf10-12

Benjamin stereo compacta, miracord and lenco turntables, elac cartridges and FMII speakers. At discount prices. Call 546-6017.
tf10-5

Realistic Stereo, tape recorder, model, 900, 2 mikes (icludes 2 speakers, tapes. Call Sean 8125 or 305 Johnson. Best.
tf10-5

1971 Honda CB 450 red-ex. condition, new tire & chain. Must sell before snow. $950 or haggle. Call Joel after 6 p.m. 1-567-5704.
tf10-4

Guitar-12 string Rickenbacker, good condition. $200 or best offer. Steve 6-6585.
tf10-1

KLH model 24 (FM & changer) with 2 big KLH 17 speakers. Exc. cond. $210. Call Steve 256-8084.
tf10-6

Two single beds $25 each or best offer. Olympia portable typewriter $20 or best offer. Call 256-6032 evenings.
tf10-1

Gibson '63 J50-Snowflake inlays-fixed bridge-a fine guitar-$200. Gretz eb. 1960 Chet Atkins elec. W/hard case-$250. Al 549-0547.
tf10-4

Brown suede pants, skirts, skins, top quality, wholesale. Pants $27, skirts $9-69, skins $5. Stop by to look Jon-474 Cladborne 5-2640 leave number if not in.
tf10-4

We undersell all. Any and all top name appliances, stereos, radios, refrigerators, anything. Call Larry 6-5090 or come to 350 Cance.
tf10-13

Just like people: bruised on the outside, but beautiful inside. 1965 Chevy convert. Call 586-2780.
tf10-6

Typewriter-portable underwood exc. cond. $20. 1*1. 586-2967.
tf10-1

10 speed Schwinn Sports Tourer. New $175, call Mike 549-6142, 301 Puffton.
tf10-1

Schwinn 10 spd. $90 firm; rectilinear mini, III speakers 50-1000 (Z13DB $120. Fischer Alphahrts 223cm Wild Man's Ski. 586-2868. K.E.

Hanging Planters-other ceramic ware made to order. Fred Englander 549-1051, 15 Fearing St.
tf10-1

Henke ski boots, size 11, bought at the end of last season, used once. Regular $110.00 sell to best offer. Call Ray. 532-8121.
tf10-1

LOST

A maroon and white jacket with name W. Hallow on inside. Call Bill 546-7625.
tf10-1

Gold wire rim glasses. Lost Sat. night Quad area. Call 546-7625, reward.
tf10-1

COURSE

I EARN ANY MAIN EUROPEAN LANGUAGE. Understand & read in 10 mos. Course taught by UN Interpreter indiv. courses by mailed cassettes. 584-9749 or 6823.
tf10-1

ROOMMATES WANTED

Male share 2 bdrm. apt. in sund. with 2 others. $60 Mike 665-2012, 545-1318.
tf10-6

Roommate female to share rent with 2 girls, own room in Hadley. Call 586-2815.
tf10-5

WANTED

Flute teacher for intermediate student. If interested call Mary at 546-5278.
tf10-1

Men to erect chainlink fence. Experienced only. Part time. Fitzgerald Fences, 340 Bridge Rd., Florence, Mass.
tf10-4

Male subjects for psychological experiment. Earn $2.00 see Jeanne, Bartlett 229B.
tf10-4

RIDE WANTED

One girl needs a ride to Watkins Glen preferably Saturday, Oct. 2. Please Call Liz 6-4070.
tf10-1

Husband and wife need ride to and from around Columbus, Ohio on Oct. 21 will share driving and expenses. Call Bob 549-6761.
tf10-4

FOR RENT

Xrms. with 6 bed rms. 14 miles from U of M. Furniture, 2 baths, all utilities paid $350 per month. Call 323-7003.
tf10-4

Townhouse Apt. at Cliffside, 2 bdr., $180 per month incl. util., married only. Call 665-1709.
tf10-1

PERSONAL

Bisexual male - Hermes willing to alight for tea. When can we?
10-1

A late happy birthday Sharon W. from the sophomores on 4 North.
10-1

Happy birthday Nonie, love Barry.
10-1

The girls from Etapieca Pi thank Mark Eden and the guys from I Fetta Thi for an enchanting evening. Come see us soon!
10-1

Happy birthday Hot Lips - with love from the originators of the 8 8's.
10-1

Feel like being kidnapped by two charming females? Call 546-7494.
10-1

Frank-if I didn't think you were worth something as a person, I wouldn't have said what I said, when and where I said it.
10-1

We'll take anyone! if you are a lonely girl call Dave or Mike. Rms. 407 and 406, Butterfield.
10-1

Melville Basement invites James Basement and 4th floor to a party Friday night at 8.
tf10-31

Horoscopes done professionally. Call 549-6768. Write David Elliott-Mannique A-11 North Village. Minimum $5
tf10-6

Palms read. Call Chris 6-8201 10¢. No bullshit.
tf10-4

HELP WANTED

Babysitter for 2 week period, start 4 Oct. 20-30 hrs. wk. Also for future evening work call 253-7157.
tf10-1

Girl with insurance agy. exp. auto & homeowners, rating & typing essential. Call 584-5555, AW Borawski, Inc., 88 King St., Northampton.

Art or advertising major needed to help launch sales promotion. Call David, 586-1138. Keep trying.
tf10-1

Need money? Earn $25 or more a week! Work your own hours at your convenience. Call Barry or Dave 800-539.
tf10-5

Help wanted! Need reliable students male or female for delivery and sales work. If you are really interested call 549-3916.
tf10-1

SKIERS WANTED

Skiers wanted to share spacious chalet, 5 min. from Mt. Snow. Luxury living, only $250 for season. Dec.-Mar. Call Marty-549-6766.
tf10-1

LECTURE NOTES

Lecture notes are now available in room 308 in the Student Union Lobby for all sections of Anthro 104, Botany 101, Econ. 125 and 126, Geology 101, Gov. 100 and 150, Hist. 151, Human Dev. 270, Micro. 140, Phil. 105, Psych 101, 262, 263, 270, 290, 301, and 302, Soc. 101 Zoo. 101 and 155. One section of Hist. 150 and Psych. 325 also in.

ENTERTAINMENT WANTED

Every Wednesday night at the English Pub-Do your own thing! Share vocal master PA system available! Call Jerry, 549-1200 or Mark, 256-8370.
tf10-8

TYPING

Typing - thesis, dissertations, etc. Fast, accurate; have Greek alphabet, math. & chem. symbols. Call 253-3601.
tf10-13

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY

Want a part-time or full time job? Running your own business, no door to door, no telephone surveying. Call 253-5847 after 5.
tf10-5

FOOTWEAR

Men's famous maker boots - you'll know them when you see them - $25 & $22. Shoe-Bin, "In the alley".
10-1

SERVICES

Amherst Audio services. Stereo components, tape decks for home or car. 197 No. Pleasant St. 256-8155.
tf5-12

OPENING

Grand reopening! Free cookies at the People's Craft Coop. Fri. & Sat., Oct. 1 & 2. 48 N. Pleasant St. above Hastings. Membership still open.
10-1

Call Barry or Dave 546-6063.
Call Barry or Dave 546-6063.
tf 10-7

Notices

AHEA
Do you still want to make a difference? Come to our first organizational meeting Weds. Oct. 6, 7:30 in Skinner Lounge. Be active!

BELCHERTOWN VOLUNTEERS
There will be a bus leaving Whitmore on Sat. at 12:45 for the Belchertown State School. All interested people are welcome to attend.

BICYCLE CLUB
Magical Mystery Tour-After the great success of last week's trip, this weekend has been delegated to a likewise enjoyable journey. All welcomed. Meet 11 a.m. Sat. at the Newman Center.

CAR WASH
Have your car washed while you wait or shop this Sat. at Zayre's Parking lot from 9 am to 4 p.m. Professional work and satisfaction guaranteed. Sponsored by the Newman Club.

CHESS CLUB
UMass Chess Open Tourney this Sat. and Sunday in CC911 & 917. Registration at 9:30 am Sat. For details call 6653415 Friday evening.

COUNCELING NIGHT—CVSP
Psych majors If you would like some information concerning your courses or your career and would like the chance to talk to knowledgeable students or faculty, come to Colonial Lounge Monday at 8pm.

FINE ARTS EVENTS
In consideration of the artist, all Fine Arts events will start promptly at 8pm unless otherwise advertised.

FINNISH CLUB
Meeting Monday at 7:30pm in Bartlett 302. All students interested in learning Finnish language are urged to attend. For information call 5468053.

GORMAN
Babysitting service. Do you need a babysitter? Available names and telephone numbers registered in Gorman House Lobby or call 5464546 or 5469537.
University Whist Tournament Playoffs 11am 4pm, Sunday. Final games 7:30pm in Gorman House. Prizes and trophies. All teams register 10:30am. Coffee and donuts.

HILLEL
Computer dance postponed, call Jackee or Elaine 66888 or Bruce 69213 for information.
Friday evening services this week only at 6:30 in the Hillel office.

LINGUISTICS LECTURE
James P. Thorne of the University of Edinburgh will give a talk entitled On the Grammar of Existential Sentences' at 4pm Friday in Rm. 805-9 CC.

NEWMAN CLUB
"Jenny" starring Alan Alda and Marlo Thomas will be shown in the Student Union Ballroom on Sat. Showings are at 7, 9, and 10:30pm and everyone is invited.

SOCIAL WELFARE—SOC 292
Due to textbook delay, the hourly exam scheduled for Oct. 8 will be pushed to Oct. 15. Same material to be covered.

SOUTHWEST PATRIOTS
S.W. Patriots are sponsoring a Flea Market in fields next to F lot parking area-Sunday Oct. 3 from 2 5pm. Live band entertainment. Interested in participating? Call Jane 5468446.

LOST
Male kitten, 6mos. old, long orange and white hair, wearing a blue collar. Lost Friday in Puffton Village. Call Bill 5496864.
One dorm president.
1907 edition of "Emma" by Jane Austen. $15 to replace. Please return to Goodell.

FOUND
One blue and red bathrobe in vicinity of Kennedy, 18th floor...and a note to those of you who are writing these crazy lost president notices: enough is enough! with a smile, your newspaper typist"

ENGAGEMENTS
Judy Johnson, 1975, Moore House to Yann Mitcendear, 1972, Moore House
Mel Hale, 1972, 313 JQA to Bunga Duffield, 1972. SAM.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

Leo wants attention; this is especially true of students born under this zodiacal sign. A perceptive teacher will give Leo just a little extra time. If you flatter a Leo, you may be paving the way for a long friendship. Leo harmonizes with Libra, Gemini, Sagittarius and Aries. Leo does very few things that are not completed from cooking to romance, it is all or nothing. Some famous persons born under this zodiacal sign include Leo Durocher, Rudy Vallee and Mae West.

...

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may want to socialize, associate may want to be quiet, secretive. You face somewhat of a dilemma. Key is to maintain sense of humor. Refuse to be frightened by what appears mysterious. Laughter can be vital tonic.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You get chance to prove abilities and cement friendship. Lunar position coincides with helping hand from one in authority. You don't know all answers. But some puzzle pieces now are falling into place.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Join forces with Taurus individual. Your ambitions can be fulfilled. Know this, be confident. Show professional superior you have stuff of success. Outline plan, proposal. You will get attention.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good lunar aspect now coincides with journey, added knowledge, gain through intellectual pursuits. Be gentle in dealing with family member. Domestic quandary will boomerang in your favor.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Perceive hidden meanings. Realize some persons cannot say what they think, read between lines. Detect subtle nuances. Avoid self deception where finances enter picture. Patience now is a requisite.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Obtain hint from Leo message. Avoid tendency to base actions on wishful thinking. Accent now is on marriage, partnerships, legal activities. Be wary in granting interviews. Some want to misquote you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Spotlight on work, health, basic issues. Key is to graphically illustrate best selling points. Get rid of burden not rightly your own. Some are only too willing to take advantage of you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Accent on change, travel, greater self expression. Relations with young persons are in tens'fied. Success shown through creative endeavors. Break out of emotional shell. Tell feelings to member of opposite sex.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't neglect duties at home base. Going too far afield would be error. Grass is not greener elsewhere. Older family member plays prominent role. Use time constructively. Careful approach wins major point.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Obstruction to progress can be removed. Key is to be versatile. Be familiar with alternatives. there is more than one method. Act as if you know it. Neighbor, relative acts in confused manner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Money is spotlighted. What you felt was out of reach becomes available. Steady approach is necessary. Maintain balance. Avoid extremes. Protect your interests. No false modesty. Be specific, confident.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Lunar cycle high, you are apt to get what you request. Be sure desires are based on actual needs. Follow through, take initiative. New contacts prove fruitful. Don't hide light. Be a self starter.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are considered dynamic, an original thinker. You do best when working for yourself. You are not so good at following organized patterns. If single, contact made earlier in year could lead to marriage.

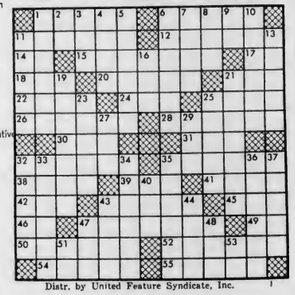
Copyright 1971, Gen. Fea. Corp.

WMUA

TONIGHT ON 91.1 FM:
7:00 pm EVENING NEWS - A full half hour of comprehensive news from Amherst's largest broadcast news organization, WMUA NEWS. From the wires of United Press International, Associated Press, and UPI World Audio Network. Includes a five minute update at 7:25.
7:30 p.m. - 8:00 COMMONWEALTH REVIEW - this is the second in this new series of interviews with state congressmen and covering what's happening in the legislature. WMUA'S Ben Muse is the reporter.
8:00 p.m. - 11:00 THE DRUM - black programming for the Connecticut Valley featuring black news, poetry, jazz, soul, commentary and feeds from a national black audio network.
11:00 pm - 3:00 am JOHN LORING brings you progressive music.

Cindy Nelson, 1973, 2005 Coolidge to Mike McMahon, 1973, Phi Sigma Kappa.
Chris Shannon, Westfield to Brian Delaney, 1974, Colonial Village.
Norma Jean Bailey, 1973, Field to Lewis Jay Cohen, 1972, Grayson.
Sandra Katz, 1973, 303 Brown to Armond Carello, Grad., Amherst.

FACULTY, STAFF
Where will you be next fall? You must plan now to enhance career in crowded job market. Confidential service offers professional resume, guidance in position search for single low fee. For credentials, career starter, send 25¢ to: Academic Associates, 50 Meadow Street/Suite 16, Amherst, Mass. 01002



Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Pamphlet
6 Wide
11 Trader
12 Lasso
14 Conjunction
15 Inflexible
17 Pronoun
18 Meadow
20 Dropsy
21 Resort
22 Girl's name
24 French for "summer"
25 The sweetsop
26 Hunting dog
28 Austere
30 Exclamation
31 Confederate general
32 Cloister
35 Loose woman
38 Part of camera
39 Period of time
41 Tissue
42 Paid notices
43 Aches
45 Edge
46 Cyprinoid fish
47 Commemorative marches
49 Brother of Odin
50 Hold back
52 Rents
54 Baker's products
55 Go in

DOWN
1 Cylindrical
2 Sun god
3 A state (abbr.)
4 Give up
5 Dealer
6 Reproaches
7 Genus of frogs
8 Worthless leaving
9 Three-toed sloth
10 Part of furnace
11 Apportions
13 Plague
16 Encountered
19 Achieves
21 Pittsburgh football player
23 One of Three Musketeers
25 Turn aside
27 Organ of hearing
29 Guido's high note
32 Checkered pattern
33 Blushing to a greater degree
34 Longs for 35 Manage
36 Man's name
37 Domesticates
40 Inlet
43 Bucket
44 Observed
47 Crony (colloq.)
48 Posed for portrait
51 Preposition
53 Compass point

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

PALI ISLE HER
ALAN STAR ERI
SETEE OPENERS
ERRORS ELSE
SORT RE GAS
ORA TEDDER RA PAL HAT LED AN RIDERS END
TEN RE LADS
ASIA EASTER
CUTLETS TANGO
NIL NOEL SEAR
ETE ENDS ERSE

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

COMMUTERS
Take a Student Senate nomination paper to lunch. Collect signatures in the Hatch.
Papers available in front of RSO, 1st. level, CC., Due by 5 p.m., Fri., Oct.1.

Playoff Begins...

Orioles Ride Win Skein Into Playoffs

BALTIMORE (AP)-The Baltimore Orioles, who have never lost an Ameican League playoff game, open a best-of-5 series against Oakland tomorrow in the midst of another torrid winning streak.

The Orioles won their final 11 games of the season, equaling the club record set at the end of the 1970 season-when they continued on to sweep Minnesota in the playoffs and take Cincinnati, four games to one, in the World Series.

After being upset by the New York Mets in the 1969 World Series, the Orioles figured they may have relaxed a little too much after wrapping up the first of their three straight American League division titles, although they again swept Minnesota in the playoffs.

"That was a great experience for us in 1969," outfielder Frank Robinson said yesterday after the Orioles conducted an intrasquad game. "We all benefitted from that. When you get in a rut and relax, it's hard to turn it back on again."

In winning their last 11 this season, the Orioles scored 74 runs and rapped out 123 hits. By contrast, Oakland scored 43 runs while winning seven of its last 11.

Before scoring 25 runs while winning their last four games, the A's had been held to eight runs in five games and had been shut out twice.

Vida Blue, Oakland's 24-game winner who beat the Orioles 1-0 and 2-1 during the season, will oppose Dave McNally, a 21-game winner, in Saturday's opener.

Frank rated Oakland as "over-all, a better club than Minnesota's the past two years. It has the better pitching, the hitting is a little better and the defense is better."

A's Find Home On The Road

BALTIMORE (AP)-Opening the American League playoffs away from home might be a disadvantage for most baseball clubs, but apparently not for the Oakland Athletics.

They set a league record this season with 55 road victories, one more than the 1939 Yankees record. The A's were 55-25, the old Yanks 54-20.

Also, as Oakland Manager Dick Williams lamented while the A's were turning the AL's Western Division race into a runway in August, "We're more appreciated on the road than at home."

There were about a thousand rooters on hand though for a rally at the Oakland International Airport yesterday when the A's departed for Baltimore. A Dixieland band blared sendoff music, shouts of "Beat the Birds" and placards with the same message were numerous. Each Oakland player was introduced before boarding the plane and given a cheer of encouragement.

Even with their great road record the A's can't be too happy that the out-of-town park where they begin the playoffs is Baltimore's Memorial Stadium.

They've lost three of five there this year, one by 1-0 and the other two when the Birds came from behind in the ninth inning.

Reggie Jackson, with 32 home runs, and Sal Bando, with 24, give Oakland's attack some power, but speed featuring shortstop Bert Campaneris' 34 stolen bases, has been a keystone of their success.

Pirates Await Coastal Outcome

PHILADELPHIA (AP)-"It's just a question of who gets hot," says Manager Danny Murtaugh of the Pittsburgh Pirates in analyzing the National League playoffs which start tomorrow on the West Coast.

Murtaugh's Pirates wound up their regular season last night against the Philadelphia Phillies. Pittsburgh clinched the Eastern Division championship a week ago and has been playing out the string while the San Francisco Giants and Los Angeles Dodgers engaged in their dogfight for the Western title.

Murtaugh said he had no druthers in the Giants-Dodgers shootout, although the Pirates beat Los Angeles eight to four in their 12-game regular season set, while losing 9 of 12 to the Giants. He repeated his who-gets-hot theory.

"In a short series whoever gets hot is going to win; it's as simple as that," insisted the Pittsburgh manager.

Does Murtaugh feel more confident against the Dodgers or Giants than he did last year before the Pirates fell in three straight games to the Cincinnati Reds? "We felt pretty good last year," he replied. "We felt we had a good team then and we have a good team now. Both the Dodgers and the Giants are pretty good teams or they wouldn't be here down to the last game."

Would the Pirates have an edge being able to relax with the division in hand early as against the Giants and Dodgers being wrapped up in a tense struggle almost to the final inning of the season?

"That's quite a debate," said Murtaugh thoughtfully. "I remember those old Yankee teams used to clinch the pennant two and three weeks early, get plenty of rest and then win. Last year we went to the final week, while Cincinnati won early and rested and we lost. Then there have been teams go down to the wire and go right on and win. There is no way of telling."

RUSSELLS PACKAGE STORE
HAPPY HOUR
Headquarters
18 Main St.
Amherst
253-5441

Commentary...

Soccer Triumph Adds Fuel To UMass-B.C. Rivalry

By MARTY KELLEY

When Jack Berryman's booters nonchalantly sauntered off the field with a 3-0 whitewash of Boston College this Tuesday, an underlying theme within the chemistry of the two schools was almost totally disguised by how poorly the Eagles performed.

In the last decade of sport conflict between these respective powers, head to head confrontation and emotional interest as well as the media have fabricated one of the most bitter rivalries in all of New England and the Eastern locale.

Old standbys such as Harvard-Yale, Rutgers-Princeton, Army-Navy, and even Amherst-Williams have all evolved by the turn of the century. But as both state athletic powers began pushing their prowess around New England, each school wanted to say they were the best in each respective sport.

Whenever B.C. comes to town or when the Aggies (as the B.C. press would infer) sojourn to Chestnut Hill, it's all on the line. In recent years UMass, in a revampent of its athletic strength, has been able to bridge the gap between B.C.'s early dominance and today's pedestal.

For Berryman, Tuesday was an auspicious beginning. But in the previous years of play, the 3-0 victory was par for the course. To say that the Eagles can be equated with competition for UMass in soccer is but an understatement clearly substantiated over the past four years.

In this span the Redman booters have outscored the Eagles, 17-0. Still looking for their first goal, Boston College has had their problems offensively as they duplicated last year's shot total of three in a similar 3-0 loss this year. Three years ago it was 3-0 and in the first game ever, Duane Brown tallied five goals in an 8-0 triumph.

Soccer wins lack what football surrenders in the fall. Overall, the Eagles hold a 6-3 edge on the gridiron including last season's 21-10 triumph at Alumni Stadium before 18,000 season ending fans.

Not only did the intense rivalry cause friction on the battlefield, but B.C. came to Amherst looking for perhaps a Liberty Bowl bid. The Eagles didn't get it. And if it wasn't for a perfect faked field goal touchdown engineered by Frank Harris to Fred Willis, the Eagles would have had a tough time leaving the Stadium with a win.

After an opening game thrashing at West Virginia, the Eagles have bounced back against Temple and Navy. When you figure that the Midshipmen were down 3-0 at the half at Chestnut Hill, and as most teams improve as the season ages, it might be apropos to add that the Redmen finish their season in Boston, November 20.

Perhaps never before was this fierce rivalry brought to such a head as it was at the Cage last Feb. 9. Over 5,000 cathartic fans broke every fire law ever affixed to Curry Hicks Cage to see if Julius Erving and Co. could wing the Eagles for the first time in over five years.

To the tune of Erving's 32 points and a final confirmation of 85-77, a reign of disparity on the hardcourt had ended for the Redmen against the Eagles. Granted, Erving is making his money now in Norfolk, Virginia, but the reception committee at Roberts Center this winter will be minus such names as Jimmy O'Brien, Frank Fitzgerald and Vin Costello.

The win at the Cage ushered quick cries of anguish and far too many paragraphs of "bad ink" from the media at Chestnut Hill. UMass was constantly referred to as the "Aggies", as well as being slandered for our number one New England rating, shunned for our overflow, aisle-bulging crowd and even Paul Gorant, our own fearless leader at the mike, was chastized.

Hopefully this year's politics won't be as harsh as last.

In baseball coach Bergquist's playoff contenders were stopped at Chestnut Hill. In track coach Ken O'Brien's herde finished second to Boston College in the New England's. So throughout the year the struggle intensified.

What has been lost on the field of battle between UMass and B.C. has buttressed many a heated argument. At any rate victory or defeat is accompanied by its own sweat.

If the beginning will tell the end, coach Berryman has started the Redmen on the conquest of the Eagle on the right foot. You can bet Chestnut Hill nestled into its own complacency last Tuesday night.

THE RIVALRY GOES ON-UMass soccer ace, Augie Calheno (11), adds a little more fuel to the fire in the continuing rivalry between UMass and Boston College in Tuesday's game which the Redmen won, 3-0. (MDC Photo by Ed Mangiaratti)

Freshman Harriers Host Tri-Meet Opener

By JAY NESTOR

The UMass freshman cross country team opens its season tomorrow hosting the Northeastern and St. John freshman harriers in a race beginning at 11 a.m.

This year's crop of Redman frosh bear a good resemblance to the teams of the previous two years which is quite a rating in that their two predecessors were the best in New England.

This year team balance should be the big strength for the freshmen. In tomorrow's race Bill Gillin will be the number one man for UMass, but he should be followed closely by Paul Albini, Bruce MacLean and Devon Croft. Steve Brown, Tom Wilson, Randy Thomas and Rick Vose all have the potential to break into the top five positions.

Many of these freshman have also shown in practice the ability to run for the varsity if needed during the course of the season.

It is hopeful that these freshman will carry on the excellence that has characterized UMass freshman cross country in the past.

Responsible People
Are Being Sought As
Advocates for the General Court
The right to defend and prosecute fully is just part of the job.
For more information contact Henry Bouffard, Student Senate Office.

Booters Under Lights At B.U.

Daily Collegian
SPORTS

By STEVE FERBER

Under the lights go the UMass soccermen, as they prepare for their third game inside of a week, travelling to B.U. to face an 0-2 soccer team. The 7:30 contest, to take place at Nickerson Field in Boston, will place a Terriers team that has yet to score this season, against a Redmen squad that is unscored upon. Undoubtedly things don't look good for the hosts.

At 0-2, B.U. is not quite as bad off as they might seem, for in both games they have had tough competition. First it was Babson, in B.U.'s home opener, to whom they fell 1-0. Then Brown invited them down to Rhode Island where the Bruins took them apart, 5-0. Babson has been known for good soccer teams, and Brown is currently the top ranked team in New England, thus their two losses might not be taken as seriously having viewed their opposition.

But factors point against B.U. when scores are compared with last year. Against these same two opponents, Babson and Brown, last year's scores read 1-1, and 1-0 respectively, and if comparison scores are to present any picture at all, it is a good one for the Redmen.

As the teams prepare for their first night game of the year, B.U. will be playing their first Yankee Conference game. Last year both B.U. and Holy Cross entered the conference, and as UMass enters their second inter- conference game, the Terriers will get a taste of what the division's best is like.

About the only credit to B.U.'s side is a casual comment handed out by Maine's soccer coach. Last Saturday he remarked to Coach Berryman, "B.U.'s got a real good squad, and they like to run a The Maine coach saw the Terriers in action against Bowdoin, sometime before last Saturday's game, but other than this off the cuff statement, B.U. doesn't have a gret deal going for them.

UMass is currently sharing the Yankee Conference lead with Vermont, as both teams hold 1-0-0 records. Last week, Vermont knocked off UConn, 3-2, while bumping off St. Michael's 3-0 to keep pace with the Redmen, undefeated within the conference and undefeated outside of the conference.

While maintaining their standing as fourth in New England, the Redmen saw two positions go through a slight change this past week. Harvard, in the number one spot all last year, and up top for this year's first week, fell to the number two slot despite garnering eight of the 12 first place votes. Thus as Brown gained the top position by a narrow 112-107 margin, Sprinfield, UMass and Williams held onto their slots with solid triumphs.

Individually three Redmen booters were recognized by the Yankee Conference for their performances last weekend. Although no Redmen made the first weekly conference team, Goalie John Kiah, forward Lindo Alves, and halfback Mike Nugent all received votes.

Three games in a week is a great deal to ask of any soccer team, and the likelihood of sluggishness is there. But the strong impregnable defense of the Redmen should perform brilliantly again, as they sharpen up in their bid for three shutouts in a row. If the offense, which has been working well as of late, can perform steadily, UMass will show B.U. that this conference is no Yankee Doodle division.

AN EAGLE USING HIS HEAD-UMass booter Herman Rodrigo readies himself for rebound off the head of a Boston College defender. Related story on the inside. (MDC Photo by Ed Mangiaratti)

Frosh Grid Preview

By BILL BALLOU

Hoping to improve on last year's 0-5 record, the UMass freshman football team journeys to Boston today to take on the Boston University freshman squad. Coach Bill Maxwell plans to show the Terriers a balanced attack, mixing the passing of Fred Kelliher with the running of backs Rich Herman and Tom Szematowicz.

Kelliher, from Abington, has a good arm and can throw the long ball, as evidenced by the 15 TD passes he fired last year. And when Kelliher does go to the air, he has several capable receivers including the versatile John Healy who also doubles as a kick returner.

On the ground, the powerful Herman, who weighs in at 190 and stands 5' 11" and fullback Szematowicz, a Buffalo, N.Y. native, will look for holes opened up by a line averaging over 200 pounds. If they happen to get lost in the backfield they can always look for Brad Calnan, who plays tackle and stands at 6' 6", tipping the scale at 218 pounds.

On the defensive side, coach Maxwell plans to go with a "50" defense that features a front five anchored by big Ed McAleney from South Portland, Maine. The 6' 3" McAleney won High School All-American honors last year and could prove a tough man to move at the line of scrimmage. Another man to watch for up front is Bill Fitzpatrick, who also stands at 6' 3" and will be tough to throw over.

The defensive secondary plays the pass on a man-to-man basis. The responsibility back here lies with Rich Brown, Mike Facchini, and Gary Murphy.

In the crucial area of linebacking, the Redmen seem fairly well set with Paul St. Onge, Ken Foisy, Tom Bradshaw and Dennis Kearnan handling the chores.

After opening on the road in Boston, the Frosh play their next two games at home, Oct. 10 against Boston College and Oct. 23 vs URI. Then they travel to Storrs to play UConn in a night contest on Nov. 5. A week later they close out their season at home against the University of New Hampshire.

Like any other freshman team, this one will fall down and make mistakes. But they all want to play football and will hustle and give 100%. They are the Varsity of the future, so come down some time when they're home and see some interesting football.

Harriers Open At Home Against Northeastern And St. Johns

By JAY NESTOR

The UMass cross country team makes its season debut tomorrow hosting Northeastern University and St. Johns in what should prove to be one of the toughest opening meets for a Redmen cross country unit in some years. Starting time is 11 a.m. in the athletic field behind the Women's Physical Education Building.

Northeastern is in good early season condition coming off a field team performance at the Northeastern Track Club five mile open race two weeks ago and a shutout last weekend over New Hampshire.

Sophomore Bruce Butterworth leads the strong Huskie contingent that features perhaps the most depth of any team in the region. In their big win over the Wildcats the first five Northeastern runners had only 30 seconds between the first and fifth men which is some running.

Like UMass, St. Johns is a young team. To date the Redmen (they have the same nickname as UMass) have split two meets and turned in a fine team split of 47 seconds in defeating Rutgers last week.

It's the opinion of UMass cross country coach that tomorrow's race should be a closely contested event with Northeastern rating the nod on the strength of its early season performance.

O'Brien also sees the possibility of an upset if his top five harriers can all have good days over the new UMass course which features two miles of hill running through the Orchards.

St. Johns does not appear to be as strong as both Northeastern and UMass, but with the two races behind them, the Redmen (St. Johns) should prove to be competitively tough.

This should be an interesting and competitive opener for UMass. The Redmen are young, somewhat inexperienced and if there was ever a way that O'Brien would like to see his team get their first baptismal under fire, he sure picked a good way in tomorrow's race.

Hoopsters Draw Villanova

The UMass basketball team has drawn NCAA tourney runner-up Villanova in the first round of the Quaker City Invitational to be held from December 27-30 at Philadelphia's Palestra.

Other first round pairings send Manhattan against Tennessee, Fairfield against Defending champion South Carolina and LaSalle against Boston College.

U.S. Grand Prix Sunday

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. AP—Ronnie Peterson, son of a Swedish confectioner, will win the world driving championship some day.

That's the word from Jackie Stewart, who has won the title twice and wants it another time or two, and Rob Walker, a wealthy British sportsman who helped Stirling Moss to greatness as sponsor and car owner.

"He is just as fast as I am" Stewart said Thursday. "But, in this business, experience counts. And I have a bit more of it."

Walker, whose family made its money in whisky, is considered to be probably the most efficient observer of the international realm of auto racing.

"Ronnie has the potential, the attitude and the talent to become one of the greats," Walker said. "I think he will be a champion."

Peterson, a tall, blond bachelor who neither smokes nor drinks, already has wrapped up second place in the 1971 formula 1 series behind Stewart.

Driving for March, the 27 year-old from Orebro, Sweden, had a sensational second place at Monaco, then outdrove most of the old masters for a runnerup finish in the British Grand Prix. He also counted points with a fourth in a very wet Dutch Grand Prix and a fifth in Germany.

Although he is relatively unknown outside Europe, Peterson will be a favorite of the fans in Sunday's U.S. Grand Prix, to be run over the new 3.37 mile circuit at Watkins Glen.

Both Stewart and Walker also are high on the future prospects for two other young Grand Prix drivers, Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil and Francois Cevert of France.

Fittipaldi, who drives for the Gold Leaf Lotus team, won U.S. Grand Prix last year in his fourth start as replacement for the late Jochen Rindt of Austria.

Cevert, 26, is Stewart's regular teammate in Tyrell-Fords. He picked up a pair of second place finishes to Stewart in France and Germany and is rapidly picking up some of the Scotsman's celebrated driving tactics.

Formal practice and qualifying for the $267,000 U.S. Grand Prix opens Friday. Stewart, Fittipaldi and Belgian Jacky Ickx are among pole favorites.

Two Standing Ovations

SAN DIEGO (AP)-"Someone said it was the first time a player has received a standing ovation in two parks at the same time."

Nate Colbert was talking. His 27th home run of the season brought the agonizing National League West race down to the wire in San Diego and Los Angeles.

The three-run clout gave San Diego's Padres a 4-1 victory Wednesday night over San Francisco and, coupled with the 11-0 trouncing handed Los Angeles by Houston, left the Giants a game ahead of the Dodgers.

At 23, Clay Kirby became the first San Diego pitcher ever to win 15 games. He held the Giants to seven hits.

Southpaw Dave Roberts faced the Giants Juan Marichal in the series and season finale last night.

After blasting 38 homers last year, Colbert was happy to show fans disappointed in this season's effort that he's still a slugger.

"This was the biggest home run I've ever hit," said the 6-foot-2, 209 pound first baseman about the 10th-inning blast.

Pirates Win

PHILADELPHIA (AP)-The Pittsburgh Pirates used a two-run double by Jackie Hernandez to defeat the Philadelphia Phillies 4-3 Thursday night in the final game of the regular season.

Manager Danny Murtaugh used five pitchers in a tune-up for the National League playoffs with Bob Moose, the second hurler, picking up his 11th victory against seven defeats.

Manny Sanguillen's sixth home run of the season tied the score 1-1 in the third, then the Pirates struck for three runs in the fourth to tag Billy Champion with his fifth loss in eight decisions.

Roberto Clemente opened the inning with a single, took third on a single by Willie Stargell and scored on a sacrifice fly by Al Oliver. Vic Davalillo singled and Hernandez followed with his two-run double to knock out Champion.

Weekend

By BOB NESTI

Theater

Here Are Ladies – Irish actress Siobhan McKenna will portray several women characters from Irish literature, Thursday, Oct. 7, in Bowker Auditorium. Her program, "Here Are Ladies," will include selections from O'Casey's "Juno and the Paycock,"/"Saint Joan," and Yeats' "Crazy Jane" poems. The second half of the evening will be devoted to James Joyce's "Anna Livia Plurabelle," the lullaby from "Finnegan's Wake," and Molly Bloom's soliloquy from "Ulysses." Tickets are available at the Fine Arts Council Box Office, 125 Herter Hall, 545-0202. Prices: UMass undergrads, $1.50; other full-time students, $2.50; UMass faculty and staff, $3; general public $3.50.

Measure For Measure - Shakespeare's bitter comedy will be performed for its final times this weekend tonight at 8 and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 at the Theater 14, Smith College. ($)

Things; and The Nature Of The Universe - Two new plays of divergent forms and themes by the two new playwrights who won Smith Theater Department's playwrighting contest last semester. The plays will be done this Saturday and Sunday evenings at 8. ($)

You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown - The National Company of one of Off-Broadway's biggest hit musicals will give two performances this Sunday at 3:30 and 8:30 in Bowker Auditorium. The play opened in 1967 and ran over three years in New York racking up a run of 1597 performances and had successful runs in over thirty cities world-wide. The musical is an adaptation of Charles M. Schultz's immensely successful "Peanuts"comic strip and is an explosively winning show. ($)

Films

A Day At The Races - (Saturday, Sunday, Merrill Science Center, Amherst College, 8 and 10).

The Marx Brothers in their best known famous farces. It's also one of their finest.

Billy Jack - (Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield)

B film and bikie film director T.C. Frank's first serious venture is a sincere yet heavy-handed morality play. The fate of a freak-run liberal school is pitted between a young Vietnam Vet and reactionary forces of a Southwest town with every contemporary cliche used as ammunition.

The Confession (Talkie, Northampton)

A Czech government official and a loyal Communist is arrested, pressured, tortured, and dehumanized into giving a false confession. Directed by Costas-Gravas, the film suffers from the political extravagances of its director, yet it is a far more honest film than the director's earlier Z. Yves Montand gives a compelling performance as the victim and Simone Signoret is featured.

The Conformist (Amherst Cinema, Amherst)

A complex, baroque study of the fascist mind in which the nature of conformity is explored with a fine, sustained tone and nature of conformity

A complex, baroque study of the fascist mind in which the nature of conformity is explored with a fine, sustained tone and a mature, insightful script. The direction by Italian Bernardo Bertolucci mixes politics and sexuality to a brilliant effect in telling the story of a man driven to become a political assassin in Fascist Italy. The decor is hypnotically effective, as is the performance of Jeqn-Louis Trintignant.

The Devils (Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield)

Ken Russell's latest exercise in excesses is about as interesting as gluttony. For more, see review on page 7A.

Drive, He Said Palace Cinema, West Springfield)

Jack Nicholson first directorial endeaver deals with the aimlessness and waste of college basketball players. One revolts, another cracks up in this film notable for its candidness in language, nudity, sex, and attitude. Cast is made mostly of newcomers featuring William Tepper, Hector Bloom, and Karen Black (of Five Easy Pieces); Adapted from Jeremy Lardner's underground classic novel by the author and Nicholson with erratic results, still, though, an interesting look at our generation's feeling of aimlessness.

Freaks (Friday, Campus Center Auditorium, 6:30 and 9:30)

Tod Browning's infamous look at the behind-the-scenes of a freak show. It was made in 1932 and was banned from American screens for some thirty years for its unexpected yet honest fascination with various dwarfs, cripples, and mutants. It is a legendary horror film, not to be missed by anyone interested in the genre.

Jenny (Sunday, SU Ballroom, 6:30 and 9)

Marlo Thomas and Alan Alda star in this surprisingly engaging film about an unmarried pregnant girl and a draft dodger in New York. Romantic and comic without being overly sentimental, it succeeds in its own low-keyed way.

John and Mary (Friday, 7:30 and 9:30, SU Ballroom)

Dustin Hoffman and Mia Farrow try hard but really can't save this chic, cliched New Morality play. The two reverse the typical romantic plot as they meet in a dating bar, have sex, and then fall in love. Even the switch, though, cannot save this overly conscious sophisticated comedy.

Le Million (Sunday, Thompson 104, 7 and 9)

Rene Clair's 1931 satire with music. Clair was one of the first masters of the sound musical and this film is one of the best examples of early sound musical comedy.

Let's Scare Jessica To Death (Showcase Cinemas)

A low-budget horror film, made almost entirely in rural Connecticut, about a mentally disturbed woman encountering supernatural doings in an old house, or is she? It's hard to tell and doesn't matter much as this low-budget film really doesn't succeed very well. Featuring a cast made up mostly of television actors headlined by Zohra Lampert (of "Dark Shadows") Barton Heyman, and Kevin O'Conner.

My Night At Maud's (Campus Cinemas, South Hadley)

A movie of conversation, and more conversation pure and simple, which makes for a wonderfully complex and marvelous experience. A devout Catholic young man argues and philosophizes about the value of his being true to his convictions during a period of sexual temptation. Directed by Eric Rohmer (Claire's Knee), the film sustains interest despite its lengthy emphasis on dialogue. Jean-Louis Triginant, who is fast becoming one of film's finest actors, is again exceptions.

Notorious (Friday, Campus Center Auditorium, 7:45)

Alfred Hitchcock's 1946 suspense drama features Ingrid Bergman and Cary Grant with a script by Ben Hecht. As good an example of vintage Forties Hitchcock as you may hope to see.

The Omega Man (Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield)

Charleston Heston as one of the Last Men on Earth is pursued by horrible mutants. This science fiction tale has Heston and the talented Rosalind Cash (as, what else, the Last Woman) up against the wall which, considering the film, is probably where they deserve to be.

The Panic In Needle Park (Campus Cinemas, Hadley; Calvin Theater, Northampton)

A realistic account of junkies and their habits which is somewhat marred by its overly sentimental love story. Two young people, Bobby and Helen, slowly and steadily get completely immersed in heroin addiction as the film chronicles their descent in a searing, semi-documentary fashion. Director Jerry Schatzberg has captured some strong details of the junkie's life in New York, along with two excellent performances from newcomers Al Pacino and Kitty Winn.

Phaedra (Tuesday, Thompson 104, 8 and 10)

Jules Dassin's embarrassing modern retelling of the ancient Greek myth. Melina Mecouri is hopelessly bad and this one nearly drove Anthony Perkins out of films entirely. It does have an interesting music score.

The Rain People (Thursday, SU Ballroom, 7 and 9:30)

The extent of loneliness and encroaching middle age is the theme of this longish, somewhat dry film. A middle-class, housewife in her Thirties packs her things one morning and leaves her Conneticut surburban existance behind and the film chronicles her travels westward. Shirley Knight gives an uncomfortably real portrayal of this lost woman, thanks mainly to the fine direction of the gifted American director Francis Ford Coppola.

Rebel Without A Cause (Monday, Folklore Center, Amherst, 8 and 10)

A legendary piece of social commentary out of the fifties which is worth seeing today mainly because of the acting from a cast headed by James Dean, Natalie Wood, Sal Mineo, and Jim Backus. A young man of a strong individual nature comes to a wealthy Los Angeles suburb and finds himself at odds with the high school's social elite of juvenile delinquents. He forms a tender liason with a sensitive girl and a lonely boy against what seems to be an obtuse and hostile world. Dean is fine but Mineo gives probably the essential performance of the dejected, rich young man.

Summer Of '42 (Campus Cinemas, Hadley; Academy Of Music, Northampton, Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield)

The maturing of a young man is

One of the recent casts performing in "YOU'RE A GOOD MAN, CHARLIE BROWN" which has had seven companies performing coast to coast. This enchanting musical, based on the 'Peanuts' comic strip, has been playing in New York for over four years.

Siobhan McKenna

An Expression Of Black Spirit

TAKE TWO

The New Elite

By Nathaniel W. Hayden

The following is part of an experimental program to ascertain the public's interest in cassette video tapes which contain not only the program, but also an analysis of the attitudes espoused in the programs. The analysis can actually be considered footnotes. Some of the analyses deal with the truthfullness of the statements made by the panel members, and bits of information that were not mentioned during the program. Analysis Committees will discuss the merits of each portion of the program. Members of "The New Elite's" Analysis Committee are Donald Langley, the author of "Their Collars Are Still White", who says that there is no new elite, and Aaron Frankenberger, who wrote, "The Bluing Process", in which he says there has been a startling change in the composition of the middle and upper income groups.

All analyses are the result of discussion Mr. Langley and Mr. Frankenberger had after viewing each segment of the program several times. The analyses are not the views of WNBC.

"The New Elite", next on channel 4."

"Good evening. I'm Lance Hawkins..."

"...And I'm Mark Herkowitz. This evening we will be discussing what many people call "The Rise of a New Elite". Are many blue collar types assuming management and other white collar jobs? These are the major questions which will be explored during the next half hour. Lance, who are our guests for tonight?"

"With us tonight are: David Joubert, a graduate of Crestdale High School in Crestdale, N.Y. and Princeton University. Norman Lewis, a graduate of DeWitt Clinton H.S. in New York City. He is from Harlem. Johnathan Bergenfeld, a graduate of Scarsdale H.S. in Scarsdale, N.Y., and the University of California at Berkeley and Hugo Roselli, from Cicero, Ill. Hugo is a graduate of Cicero Central High School. We will begin our discussion in just a moment."

Analysis

David Joubert, age 24. Solid educational background. His M.A. in economics from Princeton is enough to get him firmly established in the middle-class.

Home Town: Crestdale, N.Y., a prosperous to wealthy black community.

Norman Lewis, age 22. Norman has an adequate educational background. He has a commercial diploma from DeWitt Clinton High School in New York City. Working class background.

Hometown: Harlem, N.Y., one of New York's black ghettoes.

Johnathan Bergenfeld, age 21. Solid educational background. His masters in business administration will be useful if he decides to become a partner in his father Howard's business: Bergenfeld Contractors, Inc.

Home Town: Scarsdale, N.Y., a wealthy community in Westchester County New York

Hugo Roselli, age 23. Hugo has an adequate educational background. He has a technical diploma from Cicero Central High School. Working class background.

Home Town: Cicero, Illinois, a blue collar predominantly Italian suburb of Chicago.

"We now return to "The New Elite".

Noticing that the show is on the air again, Mark says, "Johnathan, let's begin the discussion with a synopsis of your opinion of the idea that a new elite is developing".

Johnathan, after a moment of thought answers, smiling, "I don't intend to be fussy, but I must take issue with your request. What is meant by the term "elite"? Will you define it for me?"

With a trace of sarcasm, Lance Hawkins interjects. "I'll try to explain the term for the young man, Mark. When one speaks of an elite, it is usually associated with high society, the best class, the best group, et cetera. In this case Mark is refering to economic position."

Johnathan, feigning surprise, "Oh... I didn't know that. However, if he is refering to economic position, why doesn't he ask a question such as "Do you believe there has been a shift of membership in the top income brackets, or has a new group taken over the apex of the economic pyramid? I would be able to answer questions such as those much easier than the one he just asked. I cannot speak in terms of an elite as you have just defined one Mr. Hawkins, because to me, elite has many negative connotations."

Mark then said, angrily, "I don't want to engage in any semantological games."

David Joubert says at this point, "That is the major problem that we have today. Most people do not take the time to listen. They often refuse to accept new definitions. One need not have a home in a sprawling suburb with two cars in the garage to consider himself successful. I don't deny the need for obtaining money. If I did, I would not bother to have a job. To me, people who are happy about what they do are the real elite. When I speak of an elite, I include the truck driver who loves his wife, enjoys doing things with his family, and if he is white, is secure enough to have empathy for his black brother who is out there working hard to give his family the best he can too. One who is in the elite may be prosperous monetarily, but not necessarily.

Lance says slyly, "Davis, let me give you a hypothetical situation. There are 26,000 policemen in New York City. Let's say that fifty of them are corrupt."

Mark says quickly, "Gee, that's a naive figure".

Lance continues, "That isn't the point. Suppose these fifty men are happy about their jobs, since they are in such a good position to profit from illegal gambling operations, narcotics sales, prostitution rings, and the like, thereby earning a great deal more than they are entitled to. Besides being content with their jobs, let's say they also have great relationships with their families. Would you say that they are amoung the elite of policemen?"

David ponders the question for a few moments. Just when he was about to answer, Mark says, "Here's another hypothetical situation. Would you include happy muggers in the "elite" category?"

David replies, "There are exceptions to every rule of course. The two examples you gave are of course exceptions to this one."

Although it is true that there are exceptions to every rule, don't you agree in this instance that since there are so many exceptions to the rule, I can list hundreds of them, the rule is invalid? Since there are fewer exceptions to the usual definition of the term "elite" than there are of the definition you offer, don't you agree that we should use the definition everyone here is familiar with?", Lance asks.

"I object vehemently to the usual definition of the term elite in this program," said Johnathan. "I believe that that word, among others such as Puritan ethic, upward mobility and others of that nature are the root cause of many of our problems. The top isn't always the best. If those at the top were indeed "the elite" or the best, why isn't the nation ruled by the elite? In this case I mean the intellectual elite. In other words, since Harvard, Yale, Princeton and a dozen or so other colleges and universities are known as the places where the intellectual elite of the nation go, why aren't all elective offices restricted to graduates of these universities?"

Mark says, "The answer to that is quite simple. We don't do that because we are a free democratic republic."

"All right, for a moment let's accept that as the truth. If it is so, don't you believe that the term "elite" mitigates the aims of a democracy, since it emphasizes a special class?", Johnathan asks.

Lance then smiles and says, "Ah, but the thing is that anyone can belong to the elite if he works hard enough. Unlike in India, in the United States one's position in society is not determined by birth."

"Is that true? Do you really expect me to believe that, Mr. Hawkins? Wouldn't you agree that most of the people who have "made it" from the lower to the middle and upper-middle income brackets were able to do so inspite of our system rather than because of it?, Mark asks.

Lance then asks bitterly, "In how many countries is there free secondary education? In how many countries are there huge scholarship programs to aid disadvantaged students?"

David, assuming a pompous aura says, "That's where you're wrong. Our educational system exists as it is at present because of the efforts of unions at the turn of the nineteenth century. They don't exist merely because of our "democratic republic". I'm surprised you didn't mention the Bill of Rights. My response would have been just about the same, however. The so-called elite at that time agreed to accept it due to the pressure put on them by the masses who understood that they were not going to get much out of the Constitution. The masses knew that without the insistence on a bill of rights its struggle to free themselves from the English financial overseers would have been futile. It would have meant only that they would have traded the English financial moguls for American ones.

Therefore your last comment was completely irrelevant Mr. Hawkins.

Mark then says, "Gentlemen, we must stop now for a commercial. When we're back on the air, I hope we will be able to begin discussing tonight's topic, "The New Elite". That is, if a definition can be decided on by then".

Johnathan, seeing an opportunity to make a jab says, "The program will be more fruitful now that we know what our definitions of elite are.

Analysis

Bitter debates such as the preceding one have become prevalent in the past few years. Some think of it as intellectual football. Others say there are deep implications in the redefinition of words that have set the tone for our development over the last two centuries. They are afraid that since it is 1993, they are about to be inundated with a belated form of Newspeak which Orwell predicted would occur circa 1984. Perhaps the panel members should speak in terms of a change of membership in the inner circle instead of the elite. It was interesting that David pointed out that the elite has never done much voluntarily for the masses. What humanitarian achievements can the elite point to with pride? What about the Ford Foundation and the Rockefeller Foundation? No, Ford may have done more harm than good. Last year for example, Henry Ford's contraptions caused the death of more than 108,000 Americans. When one adds the problems caused by the air pollutants the contraptions spewed out until recently, the benefits gained due to the benevolence of the Foundation seem minuscule. The Rockefeller Foundation seems to have been set up to salve guilt feelings incurred by its founder when he exploited thousands of paupers while he was in the process of building his financial empire. All of this leads up to the following question: What is an elite group? Is the old claim that it is the best in terms of education, social standing and the like still viable? Does the Puritan ethic on which the concept was predicated need revision? Most of the nation's college students are examining it closely. Hopefully, when the program resumes, the panel members will say what the new manner of looking at the Protestant ethic has meant to them. The latest government statistics point out that there has been a great shift in the employment field. More than two-thirds of college educated youngsters from middle and upper-class homes are today taking blue-collar, and semi-skilled jobs. Employers are now lowering requirements for many jobs and others are accepting apprentices who would not have even been considered in the past without a college degree.

"We now return to "The New Elite".

"Johnathan, I just realized that you still haven't given us a synopsis of your opinion about the validity of the statement that a new elite is rising", says Mark.

"When two people are not speaking the same language, it is futile to have a discussion. Now that we have all been made aware of our differing viewpoints, the task will be much easier. I would agree that there have been fundamental changes in the membership of the middle and upper middle classes.

From the articles I have read in newspapers, magazines and in Aaron Frankenberger's book "The Blueing Process," I am one of the well processed suburban kids who now rejects zealously our capitalistic structure. To some extent that is true. Although my father had planned for me to become a partner in his construction company and eventually assume control of it, I chose instead to become a NEW employee and work in the ghettoes of New York City. I was not aware that my feelings about our corporate structure were as widespread as they are. I just didn't want to live in isolated and sterile Scarsdale. I by no means reject capitalism entirely. I just think it it will be better for me to earn just enough to live comfortably. Besides, isn't that what my father and his father worked so hard for, to give me the opportunity to chose what kind of life I would like to lead? That's what I think. Now, getting back to your question, I must agree that what I have done was not an isolated situation. Historically, those who have held the power liked it and did all they could to prevent the loss of any of it. Today that just isn't true. Many people my age from upper-income and middle income families are voluntarily giving up their protective suburban coating in order to let somebody else have the ulcers, et cetera. Many of us just don't believe that it is worth holding onto any longer."

Lance then asks, "You may feel that way now, since you are not married yet and don't have any children. What would you say to your wife when she asks why you don't or rather won't move to a nice suburb so the kids can live better and so she won't have to continually worry about being raped or mugged when she walks down the street?"

"I have an answer to that question, Mr. Hawkins," says David. I would say that I would prefer the problems of a city rather than the sterility of suburbia. After living in Crestdale for over six years, I know that there has to be something better. There is nothing wrong with wanting to have a large comfortable home with four cars in the garage and ten chickens in the pot. It's the part in the contract about putting obstacles in the path of others in order to prevent them from getting it too that bothers me. If I were to move into Crestdale, or some community like it, I know that I would be exposing my children to that type of attitude."

Mark says, extremely seriously, "Oh, I see. Your aim is to shelter your children too".

David replied tersely, "All right. When you look at the situation closely, that is what I would be doing. However, I believe that it is much better to shelter them from one bad aspect of life than it would be to shelter them from hundreds of others that could be more beneficial to their development. For example, it would be more important for my daughter to learn about the causes of widespread discontent in the ghettoes by living close to one than it would be for her to read about it in her first sociology course in college, or crammed down her throat by teachers in a school like the one I went to, Crestdale High School. There we discussed poverty as if it was an infection people get when they become poor. Laziness was put forth as the reason for poverty."

Johnathan adds, "Although Scarsdale is in every sense of the word isolated, the people there should stop deluding themselves. There are no more refuges. The drug problem in Scarsdale for example, is now just as bad as many ghettoes. That is another reason why many of the nation's rich and nearly rich kids no longer yearn to maintain or strive for high economic status; it doesn't insure happiness."

Lance at this point asks Norman

Continued on next page

Lewis or Hugo Roselli if they would like to say anything since they have not had an opportunity to speak thus far.

Hugo replies, "Yes, I have several comments to make on David and Johnathan's last statements. First of all, I believe the real reason many of the upper class people our age are rejecting their positions is because it involves a great deal of work. Also,..."

Johnathan intercedes. "I must take exception to that comment because ..."

Hugo, cutting him off, "Do you mind if I finish my statement before you comment? I've been sitting here quietly listening to all of your garbage, do you mind if I say what's on my mind?"

Why can't you people understand that we're doing is for your benefit? It was the same way in the late 60's when the Vietnam War was going on. We fought to do away with the draft and end the war because it was obvious that this country was wasting thousands of our brothers because they were not smart enough to evade the draft by going to college and doing things of that sort. We tried every way that we could to prove to them that it was an illegal war."

Norman asks, "So what's it mean? We're not talking about the same things, man."

Johnathan replies, "By voluntarily dropping out of the "elite" economic brackets, we're telling you that the top isn't worth climbing to."

Norman's response is the one that has now become the classic black response to the statement. It is, "You may be 100% correct, but I want to find out for myself. But you know, something tells me that it is a lot better to have an ulcer because of nervousness than it is to be on welfare because I don't want to fight the racist institutions necessary in order to get what this country owes me because of my skills. Something tells me that it is far better to risk becoming overweight than it is to suffer from malnutrition."

"Wait a minute", David cries out. "We're not telling anybody to go on welfare or starve themselves. What we are actually doing is voluntarily giving up middle and upper class status so more people will have a chance to find out what it is like, and we're warning you that it isn't worth it. Many of us have taken jobs that we find more fulfilling such as social work, teaching in ghettoes, working on urban renewal projects, et cetera, so we can get closer to the people. I could have taken a job in which I would never come in contact with anyone not in the middle or upper income brackets. I just don't want it."

"Yeah, but you can always change your mind if the going gets rough or when you want to buy a few extras that I'm sure you can't afford on any government program to help the poor. What do you do by the way?", asks Hugo.

"I'm a Financial Consultant for HEW. I help low income people budget their income. Since I've been surrounded by those "few extras" all of my life I know they're not necessary. Unfortunately, many people think they are, so jobs such as the one I described earlier are being filled by people who honestly believe they are headed for a much better way of life."

"Do you believe that the people who are replacing the middle and upper class dropouts are qualified for the jobs they are moving into?, asks Mark.

Johnathan replies, apparently very pleased that the question was asked. "I would say yes, many of them are. When I told my father that I wouldn't become a partner in his contracting company, he said, "If that's the way you want it, that's the way it's going to be. I'll disown you and get somebody else. So he "adopted" this black guy who just got his M.B.A. from Harvard. Only someone with a bachelor's degree is really necessary. Therefore the guy is, in fact, over qualified. I know of only a few situations in which people have been given jobs that they were not qualified for. Many of these people were the son's of the person who hired them. Of course, there isn't anything new about that, ha, ha.

Lance says, "We pause now for this word".

Analysis

Johnathan and David overlooked a crucial aspect of the debate over living in suburbia versus standing and fighting in the city. They must have forgotten that many large companies have been moving en masse from business districts in our central cities to the suburbs, forcing thousands to follow or risk the loss of their jobs. They also overlooked the fact that the tax base has dwindled in many cities, causing sharp declines in service and quality of service. However, the infusion of many highly talented people such as David and Johnathan may help to relieve the situation. Alas, if they continue to take low paying jobs, their aid may be insignificant.

Many sociologists say that the most important aspect of the current socioeconomic turnover is that, unlike in the past when youngsters have lip service to aiding the indigent, young people today are actually giving up lucrative jobs, not time, sympathy, or tax deductible dollars, but jobs. One might ask, "Is it temporary, or are they serious?". There is no doubt about the seriousness or the permanency of what shall be called, "The Second American Revolution". No doubt in the history books it will be remembered as the "Bloodless Revolution".

The permanency of the situation is definite because the young people who have now moved into the Establishment jobs are building up one of the worker's most important assets; experience. In situations in which the new employee's educational background is below the employers needs, the employee is given incentives to attend high school or college at night. Therefore if the revolutionaries decide to move into their niche in Establishment businesses, more likely than not, they will have to start far below the people who are currently taking jobs the revolutionaries would get.

"We now return to "The New Elite".

Norman, Hugo, you both haven't had a chance to say much thus far. Would you, would one of you like to give us your opinion of the development of a new elite?", asks Lance.

"Sure I will", Norman says. "I'm really happy that this happened. I got job offers that I know I never could have if these middle and upper class kids didn't stop taking them. "For example", asks Mark. "Well, since I didn't go to college, I thought it would be practically impossible to get any managerial jobs. Right now I'm being trained for one. I know that ordinarily this kind of opportunity is open only to people who are graduates of some college. Since it involves more commercial know-how than I got in high school, I'm going to college at night, and the company I work for is paying the tuition. In a few years I will be doing better than a lot of college graduates."

"It's just about the same way with me", Hugo says. "The job I got is just fantastic."

Mark then asks, "Do you really believe the middle-class youngsters are snubbing jobs like the ones you have because they are lazy? Don't you think that it's possible that they are doing it due to benevolence?"

Norman replies, "We already covered that Mr. Herkowitz. Either they're lazy or they're crazy."

To this Johnathan replies, "That attitude is what will make our efforts futile. I regret the fact that a generation may be wasted, their children, in order to prove a point."

Lance asks, perturbed, "How can you say that a generation will be wasted? It's quite obvious that your generation hasn't been wasted, despite the fact that the aims of your parents were the same as the aims of the blue-collar youngsters are now.

"On the contrary, I think we were wasted", David says. To me, the stultifying life of Crestdale was a waste. In most cases, I would say it is far better to be exposed to life in the cities than to be confined to an antiseptic, sterile, suburban community. Wow, what a misnomer, that word "community". I feel that living in suburbia is not conducive to the development of a benevolent attitude toward our fellow Americans. In suburbia you're taught that the most important thing is to maintain distance between yourself and..."them", as they often say".

Hugo intercedes. "I think we are just wasting our time sitting around and talking like this. I don't see what the big deal is about. All of these years more than half of the kids in slum areas haven't graduated from high school even. Now that a lot of middle-class type people are dropping out of college and taking crappy jobs, there are dozens of books on the subject and there are programs like this. I know when my father dropped out of school, there wasn't no special program to get him back in or anything like that."

Norman says in rebuttal, "Wait a minute Hugo. That isn't exactly the way it actually was. For a long time now, I'd say from about the mid-sixties, there have been Upward Bound Prep in New York, and a lot of other programs like that to get kids back into school. I remember hearing that a lot of books were written on why kids drop out of school. I could give you a whole list of them right now. But you can see what I mean. If you were speaking of drugs that statement would be true. It is true that nobody cared much about drug addiction and abuse until it started hitting the middle-class types."

Mark then says, "I'm sorry gentlemen, but our time is just about up. For Lance Hawkins and myself, Mark Herkowitz, good evening."

"The Great American Dream Machine will be shown at it's regularly scheduled time next week."

Final Analysis

The suburbs were repeatedly refered to as sterile, isolated and at one point, antiseptic places, by David and Johnathan. Only extremely vague reasons were given for these epithets. This could be a situation in which the adage, "the grass always seems greener on the other side" might be applicable. It was quite obvious that David and Johnathan's primary problem was a lack of motivation which was due to a lack of a goal. It was clear that they are wandering aimlessly, because as far as they are concerned, they have been to the Peak, looked over, and decided that it wasn't worthwhile to stay there. The thing that bothered them was that after their parents got off the UP escalator when they reached the top of the Peak, they flicked the switch, so that others must work their way UP inspite of the fact that the escalator is now going DOWN.

In conclusion, the "New Elite" was about the turn of a switch. The youngsters of the Old Elite, who heretofore were at the top of the Peak have built a new escalator going UP. To do so, they had to go DOWN to provide more space at the top of the Peak because they knew it would be foolish to try to have everyone on the Peak; without the base, there would be no Peak. When they develop an alternative to the Peak, they will once again take the escalator UP, thereby putting so much weight on the Peak that it will crumble, allowing space for something else to be developed.

THE QUESTION IS, WILL THE NEW UP ESCALATOR STILL BE THERE?

Sunday Evening Recitals Continue At Smith

NORTHAMPTON-The second of this year's Sunday evening recitals in Sage Hall at Smith College will be presented by Gretchen D'Armand, soprano, and Robert Miller, pianist. Both are on the faculty of the Department of Music at Smith. The concert, on October 3 at 8 p.m., will be open to the public free of charge.

The program will consist of music from the French and German romantic periods, and will be divided into two parts. The first half will feature two works by Robert Schumann, "Sechs Gesange," Opus 89, and a group of five other songs. The second half will include "Trois Autres Melodies" by Eric Satie, "Quatres Chants" by Jaques Ibert, and "Manteau de Fleurs" by Maurice Ravel.

ENJOY YOUR Saturday Night
with the ENDLESS KNIGHTS
at
THE CHEQUERS
9:30 - 12:30

Campus Cinemas 256-6411
Amherst Hadley Line Route 9
In The Zayre's Shopping Center
Mon Night! Ladies Adm $1.00
CAMPUS I
7:00
9:00
the panic in needle park
my night at maud's
"By far the best picture in the entire competition (Academy Awards 1970). One of the biggest thrills of this or any other moviegoing year."
CAMPUS II
In everyone's life there's a
'SUMMER OF '42'
Screens: 7:15 9:15
—marvelously sophisticated judith crist, new york magazine
Campus III Screens: 7:00 & 9:00

THE 24 HOUR SALE

Around the Clock Bargains on L.P.'s, Tapes, and Components with unprecedented value. Amherst Audio will be closed between noon and 6 p.m. Friday so we may stock our store with records, then the sale will begin promptly at 6 p.m. and continue through the night with hourly specials to jar your nocturnal habits.

RECORDS - ALL LABELS

ALL
$4.98 list - $2.99 ea.
$5.98 list - $3.79 ea.
$6.98 list - $3.99 ea.
$7.98 list - $4.99 ea.
$9.98 list - $5.99 ea.

TAPES All 8 Track Tapes $4.85 Regardless of Original List

Plus This Super Special: "No Label Tapes 8 Track Only $3.25 ea.

SAMPLE SELECTION

Who's Next - $3.25
Tommy - $3.25
Woodstock I - $3.25
Woodstock II - $3.25
Chicago III - $3.25
Tea for the Tillerman - $3.25
Shaf - $3.25
James Brown - Hot Pants - $3.25

All These Tapes are High Quality and Guaranteed.

24 Hour Specials

MIIDA ELECTRONIC CALCULATORS.
199.95

TDK CASSETTES SPECIAL (1000)
Buy any ten TDK Cassettes (low noise or sd) FREE and get two extras.

MAGNETIC CARTRIDGES

Shure M91E (25) List 49.95 30.00 w/trade
Shure Super Track List 67.50 40.00 w/trade
Grado FCE Elliptical (15) List 35.00 15.00 w/trade
Grado FCR Round (14) List 25.00 10 a/trade hourly specials are alloted
SENNHEISER HD-414 HEADPHONES

SONY TC-60 PORTABLE CASSETTE RECORDER
49.95 no surcharge
50% OFF on all cassette and 8 track cleaning accessories (Dr. tape rach)
SAREX CASSETTE MAILER (c 6 - 6 minutes) 30 cents, no quantity limit.
RECTILINEAR 12 MID-RANGE DRIVERS 17.00 the pair (maybe for do it yourselfers?)

SONY TC-110A the ultimate in mono portable cassette recorders 119.95 get 10 c-60's for a buck (brand x)
SPEAKER WIRE (mini zip) a penny a foot - cut your own.
25% OFF on any repair brought in during the sale

HOURLY SPECIALS

First Come - First Serve
(No Special Orders)

FRIDAY NITE:

8:00 - p.m. - Midado headphones $5/pair
9:00 - p.m. - buy the "Dust Bug" at $6.50 & get the "Preener" for $2.00
10:00 - p.m. Sennheiser HD 414 headphones $24.95 (42 pair)
11:00 p.m. - c-6 (6 min) Cassette Mailers 30 cents ea. (300)
Midnite - all Neil Diamond lp's $1.99 ea. regardless of list
1:00 a.m. - Memorex Chromium Dioxide Cassetts (c-60) $2.25 ea.
2:00 a.m. - remaining M91E's $23.50 ea. (most likely sold out)
3:00 a.m. - 20 of merchandise for best impersonation of Hulk or Black Widow
4:00 a.m. - free coffee
5:00 a.m. last years worst of the eight tracks - 49 cents ea.
6:00 a.m. Craig 3501 carssette player. Most work - smoe don't - all garuanteed by Craig.
7:00 a.m. rest period
8:00 a.m. - 6:00 p.m. anything left unsold in the previous hourly specials.

What Makes Us Great

HARMAN-KARDON CITATION 12 120 watt RMS Amplifier
HARMAN-KARDON CITATION 12 Preamplifier
590.00 the pair
Represent the finest amp & preamp money can buy - are featured in six Amherst Audio systems.

EPI LOUDSPEAKERS FROM 55.00 EA. TO 1000.00 EA.
are the most accurte - natural sounding speakers available. We have seven different models in stock and all our best systems have a pair in them.

PIONEER AMPLIFIERS AND RECEIVERS
Pioneer - Sony - Kenwood Make some of the best sounding medium prices equipment going. Since Pioneer is the most impressive and biggest in the industry, it seems only natural that we sell it and the other guys sell the other two. But all three are excellent choices when you're shopping for a stereo.

PE (PERTUUM - EBNER) is one of those fine German turntable companies you hear about. We feel that PE builds into each model reliability that you just can't seem to find in mass produced machinery anymore.

AZTEC LOUDSPEAKERS
Here's a genuine paracox! Aztecs are not particularly perfect sound reproducers. However because of their high efficiency and accentuated bass they are more for giving to a low powered amplifier's deficiency in the available bass. Also Aztec makes only the cabinets and crossover's and uses woofers and tweeters made by C.T.S. who also make woofers and tweeters for Scott, Fisher, Rectilinear, Bose, Fairfax, Infinity and many others. But after all this put-down they're our biggest selling loudspeaker, priced from 42.95 ea. to 849 ea.

SONY TAPE DECKS
The name is a household word and with just deserves. Sony makes the best cassete decks in the world and the finest medium priced open reel decks going (all three guys in town at last count we're selling Sony.)

TEAC
Ask any guy whose been in the Far East what kind of tape deck he has. At Amherst Audio, TEAC starts at 299.50.

PHASE LINEAR POWER AMPLIFIERS
700 watts R.M.S. what else can we say?

CUSTOM DESIGNED COMPONENT SYSTEMS
If you've got between 219 - 4460.00 to spend we can design a system that's for you and somethig that has the ability to adapt to your needs.
If you're shopping for price only, or competitors (in Boston or in the dorm-room of a fledgling campus - rep with lots of pictures) are going to get your bread.
If you're after the best you can get - Amherst Audio has it in stock and usually at a price lower than you'd expect to pay and we service it too!
If we don't have what you want and we can't get it for you - we'll put you onto someone locally who can.

Special Non-Factory Authorized Purchases

Most of these models were purchased so that our customers could compare them with the products we normally sell. All these things are guaranteed to work and to be in excellent condition!

SPEAKERS

RECDILINEAR III'S $558.00 List
Julian Hirisch of Stereo Review said these are the best speakers regardless of the price. We disagree and so do the hundred or so people who compared them to EPI 201's. But at this price you can pretend you never heard the EPI'S.
400 the pair (1 pr.)

KLH MODEL SIX $269 the pair List
With a 12"woofer these nearly perfect speakers put out some very good bass.
177.00 (1 pair)

KLH MODEL 17 150.00 List
Smaller version of the model six 10" Woofer 3" Tweeter this speaker is quite likely the best all round system KLH has.
105.00 the pair (1)

RECTILINEAR ELVENS 159.90 List
We bought a pair of these low cost bookshelfs to A-B with our Aztec Dulane's. The very next day somebody traded a pair in (see used equipment) so there still in the box.
124.00 the pair (2pr.)

ADC 303'S LOUDSPEAKERS
Not a bad speaker uses CTS speakers. List 90 ea.
120 the pair

STEREO COMPONENTS

KLH MODEL TWENTY COMPACT (1)
FM stereo receiver with a Garrand turntable and speakers similar to the seventeens. Reg list 399.95.
9300.00

FISHER MODEL 201 RECEIVER (2)
Honestly, somewhere in the preparation of this ad I lost the list price. It should be in the 210.00 - 250.00 range.
165.00

DUAL 1218 TURNTABLE
Now this is an excellent turntable it appears equal in performance to our own PE 2038. So we better sell them quick before it becomes necessary to stock dual. Complete w/bass dust cover and shure M91E cart.
125.00

THE AMHERST AUDIO PHILOSOPHY ON STEREO SYSTEMS
There are over 200 manufacturers of stereo equipment, some good, some not so hot! We strive to stock only the best values in terms of both specified and tested performance, reliability, and the makers reputation for the repair or replacement of their products (should it ever become necessary). Only then do we consider price, style and whether the name will be sure to impress your friends. By the above scrutinization of the many brands offered us for resale, we are able to service ANY brand we sell and most important, build your system with components that cannot be duplicated at the same price.

Some Systems You Should Buy —

I
PIONEER sx 440 20 WATT RMS RECEIVER 913) — EPI model 50, acoustic suspension speakers, PE 2035 automatic turntable w/base & cover Shure M91E Cartridge. Individual list prices would be 447.00 complete. 380 complete.

II.
HARMAN-KARDON 230 30 Watt RMS RECEIVER (6) — Aztec Vega Bookshelf speakers, Garrard sl 55B w/base & cover, Grado FIR Cartridge, list would be 351.45. 285.00 complete

III.
PIONEER SA 600 50 watt R.M.S. Integrated Amplifier PE 2038 automatic turntable w/base/cover, EPI model 100 loudspeakers, Shure M91# Cartridge, list - 560.95. 480 complete Amherst Audio believes that these three systems cannot be equaled or surpassed anywhere. We have lower priced systems to be sure but most people usually trade up to these any way. The following systems are far more exotic and far more expensive and as you require more sophisticated equipment you'll find that the basic Amherst Audio pacages contain many of the components desired by the experts.

IV.
PIONEER SX 1500 TD 80 watt RMS Receiver EPI model, 150 speakers, PE 2038 turntable w/base/cover, Bang & Olufsen Cartridge, list - 860.95. 735.00

V.
PIONEER SA - 900 100 WATT RMS Amp — EPI model 100 speakers, PE 2038 automatic turntable w/base/cover, Shure M91E Cartridge, list - 640.95. 520.00

VI.
PIONEER SA-1000 120 watt R.M.S. AMPLIFIER — EPI model 201 loudspeaker, Pioneer TX600 Tuner (an incredible new turner), PE 2040 automatic turntable w/base/cover, Bang & Olufsen SP 12 Cartridge (EPI endorsed), Sunnheiser Headphones. 990.00

VII
Same system as above except we've substituted the amp and tuner with the Pioneer SX-9000 receiver.

VIII
The ultimate PRACTICAL approach to Stereo Harman-Kardon Citation 12 Amplifier 120 watts, EPI model 601, indirect/reflecting speakers, PE 2040 turntable w/super LZ2020 base, Pioneer TX 1000 Tuner, Sony TC 440 roto bilateral autoreverse, open reel tape deck, Bang & Olufsen spiz cartridge. 1900.00 complete

AMHERST AUDIO

197
No. Pleasant St.
Amherst

Weekend (continued)

Lorin Hollander, one of the finest young pianists now making concert tours, is seen here rehearsing a scene from an hour long public television special about him. Hollander will be featured in two concerts at Bowker on October 12 and 13. Contact the Fine Arts Council 545-0202 for further details.

evaluated on page 6A of this section.
(Saturday, Smith College, 7 and 9)

Costas-Gravas political homily is brilliantly photographed and makes a wonderfully effective piece of propaganda but really isn't as good a movie as our warm political feelings once led us to believe. When the action slows down, it is quite mediocre. Fortunately those moments are few. Yves Montand, Irene Pappas suffer nobly and Jean-Louis Triginant has the right mixture of firmness and humanity.

Films on Television

Tell Them Willie Boy Is Here (Saturday, 9 PM, Channels 22 and 30)

A Palute Indian who kills in self-defense is the quarry of a group of revengeful whites in the 1969 film directed by Abraham Polonsky (who was blacklisted from films for some 21 years). Robert Redford and Katherine Ross star with Robert Blake as Willie Boy. Beware of cuts and additions.

The Brothers Karamazov (Sunday, 11:15 PM, ch. 3)

A big, intelligent Hollywood adaptation of Dostoievski's massive novel isn't bad, considering. The film is filled with greed, violence, lust, love, and occasional compassion. The cast is good, the production is expensive and handsome, and is more a treat for the eye than the mind.

A Connecticut Yankee In King Arthur's Court (Saturday, ch. 22 11:30 pm)

Rogers and Hart's musical adaptation of Mark Twain's whimsical novel about a Twentieth Century Yankee sent back to the days of King Arthur. Some fine tunes and occasionally comic touches can be found in this Bing Crosby musical.

Dracula (Saturday, 11:30 PM, ch. 30)

The original 1930 adaptation of Bram Stoker's novel and play. Bela Lugosi repeated his stage role and stereo-typed himself into twenty years of ghoulish roles. Tod Browning directed.

To Sir With Love (Sunday, 7:30, ch. 3)

SidneyPoitier plays teacher to a group of British delinquents in this gritty, sentimental comedy-drama. A cast of fine young British performers keep this film from drowning in sugar, featured are Judy Geeson, Suzy Kendall, and Lulu (who sings the title tune),

Von Ryan's Express (Sunday, 8 pm, ch. 8 and 40)

How Frank Sinatra saved the day in this action film about the escape of some 600 POW's from a German camp. Some nice sequences.

The Bramble Bush (Sunday, 11:05 PM, ch. 3)

A "Peyton Place"-like melodrama which tells the tale of an illicit affair between a doctor and the wife of his dying best friend. Not bad, for what its worth.

Dance

UMass Concert Dance Group

The Concert Dance Group will present a lecture-demonstration Friday and Saturday Oct. 1 and 2, in Bowker Auditorium at 8:15 p.m.

The lecture-demonstration section of the concert will cover four areas of dance: jazz, ballet, modern, and song-dance. Each part will illustrate some of the techniques used and show how these movements are used in dance composition. "If you know nothing about dance, but are interested in dance, this program will give you an opportunity to come and see, learn and enjoy," dance director Daniel A. Peterson said.

The second half of the concert will be a series of dances, some of which have been choreographed by students, others by faculty members. Some of the dances and demonstrations will be accompanied by a drummer on stage. Other music will be selections from such contemporary composers as Dick Hyman, Cool and The Gang, and Burt Bacharach. ($)

Music

Chamber Music

Julian Olevsky, violinist, and his wife Estela Kersenbaum Olevsky, pianist, will give a recital at UMass Amherst Wednesday,, Oct. 6, at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium, Stockbridge Hall.

The program will be selections by Leclair, Franck, Saint-Saens, and Ravel. Open to the public without charge, it is the second performance in this year's Faculty Recital Series, presented by the UMass department of music.

The Olevskys are known internationally as both soloists and as a team and have performed with major orchestras and chamber ensembles. They are recording the complete known Mozart sonatas for violin and piano.

Local Composers

Grace Church announces a series of mid-week programs of music to be offered at Grace Church on Wednesdays, at 12:10 p.m., beginning on October 6, and continuing weekly through the Fall.

The programs will be short, approximately twenty-five minutes. The series will aim at a balance in repertoire and instrumentation, a special attempt being to present works by local composers. It is also intended to provide an opportunity for performance by competent young musicians and students. There will be no charge, although on occasion voluntary contributions will be accepted to benefit designated causes or projects deemed worthy and appropriate.

The artists performing in October include: William McCorkle, organist, on October 6; Jean Tucker, organist, on October 13; and Anne Weaver, flutist, on October 20.

Pianist Estela Kersenbaum will perform a chamber music recital this Wednesday evening at 8 PM in Bowker with her husband violinist Julian Olevskéy.

Summer Of '42

By ELLIOT EISENBERG

The Summer of '42's a great flick; at least it was the first time I saw it. I've now seen it twice and read the book and it's getting me down, especially the Wednesday night showing at the Academy.

By now you probably know as much about the plot as I do: a young guy named Hermie makes it with an "older woman" who's all of 22 or so and beautiful as only women like Jennifer O'Neill can be. He and his friends Oscy and Benjie learn about the ways of men and women, first from a picture book, from girls on the island where they stay, then for Hermie there is Dorothy (Jennifer.) It is a time of utter disconsolation for her; it is a time of uncertainty and deep feeling for him, and the few moments that they hold each other make a touching end to their relationship and the film.

The setting is World War II Maine, and as the grown up Hermie who narrates tells us, it was an easier, less complicated time than now. A time when adolescent weren't, or didn't pretend to be, as sophisticated as they today seem.

The Wednesday night Northampton audience was mostly older and their reactions made me sad. Hermie paints his saddle shoes and women giggle; his foray into the drug store brought embarrassed laughter from the men. It wasn't just a funny movie; to them it was a world and a youth they shared which is no longer.

I keep telling myself that it's not true that in everyone's life there's a Summer of '42, that it's a PR man's dream: that most men only wish the first woman they've made love with is a Jennifer O'Neill, and capitalizing on that is the way to sell movies. It would be easy enough to believe that some cigar-smoking Warner Bros. man read that the public wants to see more Love Story-type films and went out and bought himself one. But the movie was made from the book which was in turn a best-seller and a knock-out in its own right.

So whether they're doing a dance on us or not, it's still worth seeing.

Note: Several times during the Academy screening there was trouble with the projection. Afterwards the manager explained that the film had been shipped to him in poor condition and he and his men would have to do what they could to repair it before later shows.

Claire's Knee A Delight

By MARTIN CALABRESE

Claire's Knee is a whim, a passing fancy of sheer delight. The film just comes over you like a smile stealing out the sides of your face.

It is not a typical French comedy; an overworked piece of art that makes you aware of the media. This is not a farce with that exaggerated sense of the ridiculous, burlesque, heavy handed comedy. It is not a teat-flying, spread-eagle, bed-bouncing excursion into the wild world of the femme fatale. Claire's Knee is funny without being obvious and sensuous without the panting stimulation. The funniest parts of the film are the confrontation between a mother and daughter lightly back biting each other and the innocent flirtation of a man who is going to be married with two young sisters. The sexiest parts of the film are concerned with Claire's Knee. Rohmer, the director concentrates all sexual desire in the knee by constantly taking shots of it and by constantly having it talked about. The focus is so intense that the knee is all passion, climaxing in the image of the knee expanded to become the female sex organ that partakes in sexual activity when various men rub it.

The comedy rises naturally out of the situation rather than coming from that artificially interloped sense of anticipation. You don't have to work for the film: search for ideas, develop complicated relationships, discover realities. Eric Rohmer has put together a seemingly simple film with respect to camera work, lack of complicated plotting and visual imagery that puts you at ease, forces you to drop your critical defenses so you can just sit back and relax. But it is a seemingly simple film: Rohmer has perceived and presented incisively strong characters, and an imaginative story of a story through a subtle shifting camera with great restraint, power and concentration.

FRIDAY'S FOLLIES
THE FREAKS (6:30 & 9:30)
&
NOTORIOUS (7:30 & 10:30)
Hitchcock's Best
Campus Center Aud. 75¢
Last Complete Show at 9:30

Films

A Bizarre And Grotesque Spectacle

In The Devils, a group of horrified nuns witness the exorcism of their Mother Superior.

By BOB NESTI

The Devils

Screenplay by Ken Russell; based upon "The Devils Of Loudon" by Aldous Huxley and "The Devils" by John Whiting; directed by Ken Russell; starring Oliver Reed and Vannessa Redgrave.

The Devils is Ken Russell's achingly detailed portrait of corruption and depravity in Seventeenth century France. From the decadent court of King Louis XIII to the plague ridden streets of Loudon, the film assaults the viewer with scenes of perverse and grotesque behavior unequaled in commercial film history.

There are few works to compare The Devils with; Jerzy Kosinski's novel "The Painted Bird" and the Salvatore Dali–Luis Buneal's surrealistic short film "Un Chien Andalou" (the latter remembered infamously for its rather clinical eye slashing sequence) come to mind. At times the film has the pace and feel of a Road Runner cartoon with drawings by Hieronymus Bosch and a script by the Marquis De Sade. It is not a film, as its ads proclaim, for everyone's taste. In fact it is not a film you recommend, but rather one you dare others to see.

The story concerns religious and political intrigue in the France of King Louis XIII. Cardinal Richilieu, advisor to the king, longs to solidify France. To do so he must destroy the powerful independent cities of which Loudon is one of the more prominent. Loudon, despite a plague epidemic and the Catholic–Huegonot Wars, remains secure behind its enameled walls. This is due largely to its good diplomatic relationship with the king and the strength of its de facto governor Father Grandier (Oliver Reed). Richilieu must somehow persuade the king to lose favor with Loudon and usurp Grandier.

His opportunity arrives when the town's mad prioress Sister Jeanne Of The Angels seeks revenge upon Grandier's disinterest in her and confesses that he has raped her. The Cardinal sends to loyal baron, (Dudley Sutton) to organize and execute a campaign to eliminate Grandier.

The plan hinges on proving that Sister Jeanne and her order of nuns have been possessed by the Devil through the human form of the priest. Sister Jeanne perjures Grandier saying he has possessed her and a number of nuns; the nuns are released from their stifeling bondage and run madly through the streets; and the fickle king relents, allowing the Richilieu to gain full control of Loudon as Grandier is systematically eliminated.

His elimination and ultimate execution is explored with excruciating detail. Russel seems to take a child's delight in breaking all the rules of taste as he graphically presents extremes of sadistic and deviant behavior. Two rather unsavory types, who act as the doctor and the alchemist of Loudon, at one point use hornets to treat a victim of the plague; at another force Sister Jeanne to vomit to find evidence of Grandier's possession, and finally delight in breaking Grandier's leg with a hammer.

Russell's concern for the grotesque is only one of the film's flaws. The screenplay reduces whatever substance the Aldous Husley novel and John Whiting play may have had to prattling, polemnical pulp filled with high–minded sentiments and poor double–entendres. It takes a self-righteous, contemporary attitude towards what was considered morally correct action in the late Reformation. This only leads the film to be void of any historical context. It is very reminscent of the Hollywood pageants of the Fifties with Victor Mature and Deborah Paget, just as bore more of a relationship to Twentieth Century Fox studios than to the forum of Ancient Rome, The Devils is intrinsically linked to the liveralism and cynicism rampant in the arts today than rligious fanaticism and political intrigue.

Russell's direction is probably the film's best point and that can be a rather dubious distinction. The film occasionally shines with the brilliance that made Woman In Love such an impressive achievement, but more often than not Russell's excesses squash any subtleties he may be aiming towards and the results are quite disjointed.

Then its elements are blended as to make it not quite serious, not quite satirical, not quite perverse, but rather camp. From the brilliant white brick set, more Art Noveau than Romanesque, to the satirical music score, the film abounds in garish excess.

The actors do what they can with their parts. Oliver Reed has a chance to mouth some pretty speeches and dies rather nobly at the stake. Vanessa Redgrave seems to feel almost as contemptable towards Sister Jeanne as everyone else is led to and plays the hunchbacked madwoman with a right dash of lunacy. Baby-faced Dudley Sutton is appropriately evil as the Baron and Michael Gothard bears mentioning simply because of his phenomanal resemblance to the Airplane's Jack Cassidy which, considering his excessively hysterical performance, remains his only claim to cinematic immortality.

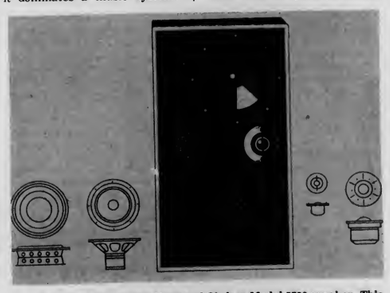
The Devils is a spectacle more concerned with histrionics than history and it is this emphasis which makes the film Russell's worst to date and a most dissappointing experience.

Basic Audio

An Introduction To High Fidelity

By FRANK JOHNSON

In this column I am inaugurating a series of small tracts on audio matters. Practically everyone who will read it either wants or else already has a stereo system. Starting with this first series, we will proceed on the assumption that those who are interested in hi-fi and stereo are interested in music; if not music, then certainly physics, which can explain much about music. High fidelity becomes important only when we want to reproduce music for our own enjoyment. It is meaningless if we are to assume that reality can never be correctly reproduced; this is of course true, but it does not lessen the importance of high fidelity to our appreciation of music.



First of all, high fidelity, properly defined, is a close approximation of the original. Much about high fidelity in its present state is imperfect. This is obvious; a grave shortcoming lies in the fact that to even approach realistic reproduction, one must spend large sums of money on a sound system. But, in the final analysis, much about music itself is also imperfect. In high fidelity we want to avoid distortion (any departure from the original, which can take many forms) as much as possible. However, we should at the same time realize that there is much natural distortion in music, and some of it is downright pleasing (harmonics).

It should also be pointed out that high fidelity per se is a very subjective definition. Some people assume that it takes several forms. This argument can be found with the hi-fi addicts that only play music at high volume, sometimes exceeding by quite a large margin the original volume at which it was played (such people are often at odds with their neighbors). Others feel that the most important aspect of a hi-fi system is bass, and will spend a good deal of time and money worrying about it. True, the measure of a good sound system can be partly defined by whether or not it will cleanly reproduce the bass, or very low musical frequencies. But we should not overlook the fact that bass is by and large worthless if it dominates a music system, and also we should realize that very clean bass is one of the most difficult aspects of music to reproduce.

For our purposes here, we will begin by evaluating high fidelity in terms of the human ear, for much about music and hi-fi must conform to its characteristics. The bass portions of the sonic spectrum usually falls below 200 cycles, a cycle being the rebereberant value of any medium. (Note: cycles are sometimes known as Hertz, or abbreviated Hz., after the work of the German physicist Hertz, who did considerable research in the relationship of sound and music to physics) Cycles are usually evaluated in terms of time, known as frequency. If, for instance, we simply specify: "100 cycles", this information is meaningless unless we specify it over a period of time. If we indicate further that something vibrates at 100 cycles per second (c.p.s.) we have established its relationship to music and hearing.

The midrange frequencies of music lie between the bass and the treble, the latter occupying the "high" frequencies. Musician's "A" vibrates at 440 c.p.s., the middle of the scale of a piano. This range of sonics usually, by the way, is the easiest to reproduce-the response capabilities of an ordinary table radio, for instance, lie almost entirely within the midrange. Above the midrange (exceeding 500 c.p.s.) lies the treble. Although much music in its pure form does not lie outside the midrange frequencies, its sonic overtones and harmonics very definitely do. The overtones of a piano, for instance, frequently exceed the limits of human hearing (which, by the way, varies with age. Older people lose their ability to hear extremely high frequencies - those above 10,000 cps).

(To be continued)

The interior design of a Vang and Olufsen Model 5700 speaker. This speaker reduces distortion to less than 1% (in most systems speaker distortion can run anywhere from 5 to 15%.)

DEERFIELD
Drive-In Theatre
Route 5 & 10
South Deerfield, Mass.
Tel. 665-8746
FRI. SAT. SUN.
HIDEOUS AND SHOCKING!
HORROR OF THE BLOOD MONSTERS
ALL NEW/ALL COLOR GP
FIVE BLOODY GRAVES
Technicolor & Techniscope
STARRING ROB'T DIX
JIM DAVIS SCOTT BRADY
Showtime 7:30
Feature First Sunday

At The Gates Of Smith. . .
EVES. 7:10 9:05
ACADEMY
NORTHAMPTON, MASS. 584-8435
In Everyone's Life There Is A...
"Summer Of "42"
with Jennifer O'Neill

Albums

By ED JANUSZ

SURF'S UP, the Beach Boys (Brother-Reprise)

The word has gotten around that the Beach Boys have progressed from being Archaic to being Venerable. But no matter what the history of the group, Surf's Up is a beautiful, joyful album that, like New Morning a year ago or Abbey Road a year before that, reminds you of just how good rock music can make you feel.

The Beach Boys have had the best group harmony around for the last several years. It's this harmony that makes Surf's Up so good, too, to a large degree. Especially on the first side, there are echoes of past hits (remember "When I Grow Up to Be a Man?") and many of the songs are in a light, not-quite-serious vein. "Take a Load off Your Feet" is a ditty concerning proper foot care, for instance, and it impresses me that the Beach Boys' songs are more meaningful when the lyrics are fluffy and frivolous than when they attempt things like "Surf's Up," an impenetrable Van Dyke Parks pun-ship.

The electronics surprised me. Never noted for their instrumental ability, the group uses some form of electronically synthesized sound on practically every track. Sometimes, as on "Don't Go Near the Water," they use a sparkling Moog which goes along perfectly with the lighter-than-air songs.

On the second side, a rushing wind-like sound picks the listener up and puts him outside--surf's up! Only on one track is this done to excess: "Looking at Tomorrow," which is still listenable even though the stereo gimmicks are reminiscent of some tired psychedelic discs of 1968.

Though people have been waiting for Brian Wilson to release "Surf's Up" for about four years, the standout of the album is probably "Feel Flows," which works a jazz flute around the lush harmony and studio effects. The song is as dream-like as David Crosby's "Deja Vu," but carries more subtle excitement and tension.

Surf's Up may make you want to dig up your old copies of Pet Sounds, 20-20, or whatever Beach Boy albums you can find, but this is the one to hear. Brian Wilson and company could, with work like this, find themselves once again called America's best rock music group.

The Beach Boys

Air Synthesizes Jazz And Rock

AIR Embryo SD 733

By FRANK JOHNSON

We are witnessing a synthesis right now, from progressive jazz and hard rock to jazz-rock. The causes of this amalgamation go back to the intrinsic nature of progressive jazz, which include the exploration of atonal chords and long, drawn-out improvisation. In many cases the esults can be boring, but this musical expressionism by and large is exceedingly complicated, and it all can be plotted graphically. Rock, as opposed to this sort of jazz, has caught on to the public far more easily, because essentially it is much more simple and has an easily assimilated beat.

A prime example of a jazz-rock synthesis is Air, a new group hailing from New York. Air is a lively foursome including the team of Tom and Googie Coppola, with two other backup artists, John Siegler on bass and Mark Rosengarden on drums. Googie and Tom are artists on the piano, electric piano, and organ; Googie supplies the vocals. Air wirtes its own music- most of these compositions are supplied by Googie. This interesting woman is the dynamic force of the group; I don't see how the others could possibly function without her.

Air is produced by Herbie Mann, which right away should tell you something about their sound. The kind of the jazz flute, Herbie is an old-timer who joins Air on one of their numbers, "Lipstick", by supplying some of the percussion. Mr. Mann (Mr. Man) has developed a style of improvisation on a continuous theme, and Air has elaborated on this method. Only in a relatively few numbers on this disc do they seem locked in. Most of their musical form can be plotted around a rondo style; the others are progressions.

Some of the forerunners of this style can be found in certain works by John Coltrane and McCoy Tyner. The piano in this way is only a secondary voice, although it forms much of the basis for the music. As a whole, this sort of jazz occurs as the sum of its part. Googie's gutsy vocals sweep across the chords like a steamroller on hot tar, though the ground always supports the steamroller.

The best music in this album occurs when the group gets progressive. First off, "Realize" as an opening cut sounds a bit static, and considerably dominated by Googie's vocals. She tames the belt in "Mr. Man"; the modulation is interesting, as are the sevenths and the chord progressions in the middle. Air profits from an occasional brass instrument- we are treated to a trumpet in this song. 5-4 time jumps into "Baby, I Don't Know Where Love"; when it is sung in 5-4 time, it's even more effective. In "Martin", we are treated to really fine chord changes and an unforgettable introduction. This, to me, was the representative piece on the album. I have never heard phase shift applied to cymbals before- this is quite unusual. In particular, Air picked a good key for this one: C#. Side I ends with "In Our Time", a continuously modulating piece with a fine harpsichord arrangement.

Googie jumps octaves in "Man Is Free", opening Side II, with a bass counterpoint reminiscent of Procul Harum: great trumpet work occurs here. "Sister Bessie", not an original Air composition, follows with a subdued, gentle piano dominance. "Lipstick", following, features Herbie Mann on percussion, and this is a completely instrumental work. I thought I was hearing Laura Nyro on "Man's Got Style," by virtue of the voice and piano. But the finest on Side II is "Jail Cell", another C# number, in which Googie is in absolute control of herself, both on vocals and piano. Her progressions are tight, and so is the backup.

My only possible criticisms of this album lie in the occasional dominance of Googie's vocals,

Joy Of Cooking

By KENNETH SULIN

Much of today's popular music seems to be straying away from hard, driving rock and shifting towards lighter more listenable tunes. Joy of Cooking is not a rock and roll band and by no means a top-forty band however they happen to be one of those few groups you can listen to at almost anytime. They combine jazz, blues and even country music to produce a fresh, unique sound which is lacking in a large percentage of albums found on the market today.

Probably the one member of the group most responsible for their originality is Toni Brown, a talented girl from Boston who plays guitar, piano, organ and pedal steel guitar. Joy of Cooking could be thought of by some as a female dominated group since along with Toni Brown, Terry Garthwaite plays electric and acoustic guitars and does almost all of the singing. The remaining members of the group are Fritz Kasten on drums, Ron Wilson on congas and new bass player Jeff Neighbor; however, the two girls do the songwriting and unquestionably the leading.

With this their second album on Capitol records, the Berkeley group has become fantastically popular on the West Coast and are now in the final stages of completing their first national tour. The album entitled "Closer to the Ground" provides nothing but pleasant listening. How a group can combine conga drums, a grand piano and an electric guitar yet still arrive at such an uncluttered sound is beyond many. However, they find little trouble in the process, coming across with careful blendings and forceful arrangements. As in many groups today the individual members try to outperform each other--this is not the case with these people. They simply work together and maintain an air of sophistication.

The album has been engineered well showing little evidence of overtracking. The lyrics range from the serene to the humorous depending on the son's nature. One cut, entitled "Humpty Dumpty" concerns a girl whose gotten herself in trouble--the chorus is as follows:

"And I feel like Humpty Dumpty, Trying to get myself together again."

All in all, Joy of Cooking is a relatively new group still experimenting and still toying with the music of today.

The New Band

By ED JANUSZ

CAHOOTS, The Band (Capitol)

It's this time of year again: the band called the Band has sneaked back onto the record shelves, and this time your reaction, on seeing Capitol's "The Band has gone through changes" promotion, and the Hieronymous Bosch-like cover, might be, "Uh oh, the Band has gone weird." But never fear, Cahoots is Band music through and through, with horns on two tracks and Van Morrison on another, and it's their best album since Big Pink.

Side One in particular is as good as any rock group is ever liable to get. The first track, "Life is a Carnival," gets into R & B, with some help from a horn section, like the Band has never done before.

"When I Paint my Masterpiece" is a nice Dylan song, and "Last of the Blacksmiths" captures the loose, rough, no-holds-barred spirit of the first album. "Where Do We Go from Here?" follows, and it comes as a surprise; it sounds like the country-styled tracks from their second album, The Band. The record is also an improvement over the godawful sound quality with which Capitol blessed the earlier album.

The side closes with "4% Pantomine," on which Van Morrison sings a verse and helped write it; like much of Morrison's recent material, it's loose and bouncy, but much better than Morrison on his own. Garth Hudson gets four stars.

The second side is disappointing. "Volcano" is as funky as they get, but the rest of the side sounds like a collection of turkeys from the Stage Fright sessions: weak and mechanical. "The Moon Struck One" is a pretty and nostalgic song, but it has nowhere near the impact of "Whispering Pines." Cahoots would be better with a really good sob-song or two, on the order of "Lonesome Suzie."

Because of their infrequent records, personalities that in the age of Grand Funk at Shea Stadium might be considered unspectacular, and the cool reception to Stage Fright, the Band has been sinking into the Land of the Forgotten. Cahoots should win back their popularity; it has more vitality than Stage Fright while maintaining that record's fine studio quality, and as usual they're hard to beat as a group. In this musically depressing year, it's good to have them back.

Tarkus

By ALAN CHAPMAN

Tarkus, Emerson, Lake and Palmer

A terribly gruesome monster is set upon the Earth. The thunderous ERUPTION from Tarkus and proceeds to electrify you along the path of total destruction and surrealistic sound.

Emerson, Lake and Palmer tell the story of this mechanical Rodan with the Moog Synthesiser and pictures and have always peppered it with lyrics here and there to hold your attention.

Keith Emerson displays a complete mastery of the Moog and organ which can be appreciated when the listener accustoms himself to the dissonances and learns to enjoy his unique improvisational technique.

Two fun reversals in style are added with "Jeremy Bender" an almost bubble--gummy superlight melody, and "Are You Ready Eddy", a 1950's rock spoof that still manages to retain that E, L, and P style.

The right mood and a set of headphones are necessities in making this psychedelia worthwhile.

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather

The furnace is on - check your pumpkin for rot. And put down that bread knife.

VOLUME XCIX, ISSUE 19 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS MONDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1971

TIPPO RESIGNS

CHANCELLOR OSWALD TIPPO-The battle for control ended Friday for the chancellor. He resigned in the wake of budget trouble with President Wood, taking with him Vice-chancellor Gluckstern. Special Assistant David Clay and possibly Vice-chancellor Bromery. For a look at the Tippo years and what they were like see page six.

Gluckstern, Clay Quit Also

Wood Refuses To Accept Budget

$850,000 In Jeopardy

By MDC Staff

Chancellor Oswald Tippo resigned last Friday, ending a year of sporadic friction with UMass President Robert C. Wood.

The 59-year old Chancellor made the "irrevocable" decision to step down from his post Thursday night after addressing the Faculty Senate on a proposed transfer of $850,000 from the Amherst Campus to President Wood's Systems office in Boston.

Since then, Tippo has received letters of resignation from Vice-Chancellor for Academic Affairs Robert L. Gluckstern, Special Assistant to the Chancellor David Clay, and an unwritten confirmation of Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs Randolph W. Bromery's intention to follow suit.

The three resignations were the result of close professional and personal ties with the Chancellor.

Chancellor Tippo made his decision to resign and return to his tenured position as a Professor of Botany at UMass after President Wood had refused to accept the UMass/Amherst operating budget for this present year and had announced his intention to transfer funds from the Amherst campus for use in the Systems Office.

The rejection of this years' budget came at last Tuesday's meeting of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees. At the meeting, Wood reportedly balked at accepting the Amherst budget "until some additional details were provided" according to System's Vice-Chancellor Frank Phillips.

Chancellor Tippo read the same letter he had used at last Tuesdays' Trustee Executive Committee meeting at the Faculty Senate late Thursday afternoon. In the letter Tippo acknowledges "the justice of having a reasonable amount of Trust Funds" assigned to President's office, but urged that all three campuses "share in this obligation". (See story page 3)

The $850,000 in question is a combination of State money, Trust fund interest, and land grant funds. The money would be used to bolster the System's office budget which had been cut substantially by Governor Sargent earlier in this year of protracted budget negotiations.

Contacted at his Boston office, President Wood said that he was "sad" when he heard of Tippo's resignation.

Wood stated that he had not received the letter of resignation as of Sunday afternoon and that he isn't able to "officially respond" until he does.

"The Chancellor has not communicated with me since the Trustee Executive meeting last Tuesday", said Wood. "I've indicated I'd like to talk to him."

Wood said that an official response to the Chancellor's resignation would come sometime today.

When asked about the budgetary matters that were in part responsible for the decision Tippo made Thursday night, Wood commented that "there are other points of view...this has been going on for two and half months."

"The President wants a chance to be heard," said Wood who will be on campus today to meet with the Faculty Senate Committee of Concern, the Student Senate Executive Committee and others.

Chancellor Tippo was besieged all week-end with press inquiries into his resignation, but was unwilling to delve too deeply into the reasons behind the move. It is known that he was, according to reliable sources, "tired of fighting everytime" a matter came up before the Board and its committees concerning the Amherst campus.

"I guess I've been in administration too long" said Tippo who listed his credentials in University administration as twice being a dean, twice a Provost and his present position.

"I've been in administration for 30 years and I think I've had enough," said Tippo.

Tippo asked in his resignation letter that he be granted a years' sabbatical after which he says he'd like to go back to teaching Botany at the introductory level.

Mrs. Tippo commented about the resignation: "I guess the old warhorse got tired of fighting alone."

The resignation would be effective as of September 1, 1972 "or earlier" at the discretion of the Board of Trustees.

The Vice-Chancellors received word of the resignation Friday morning. Dr. Bromery was in Washington D.C. and was unavailable for comment.

Vice-Chancellor Gluckstern emphasized to the Collegian that his resignation was offered to show "support for him (Tippo)" and that it was a "resignation to him."

Special Assistant David Clay resigned both his position with the Chancellor and as Director of the Libraries. In his letter to Tippo Clay said that he appreciated "having been part of your efforts to build a good University."

See "Feud," pg. 2.

On The Inside:

- Fac-Sen Preparing Funding Statement See page three
- Trustees Tight-Lipped On Tippo See page two
- McGovern To Push Registration See page five

Trustees' Reaction Is Tight-Lipped And Terse

By MDC STAFF

Trustee reaction to Chancellor Tippo's resignation was almost unvarying as those questioned admitted shock, surprise and regret. No one chose to speculate on the reasons behind the resignations.

Trustee Frederick S. Troy of Boston said he was "profoundly disturbed" by the news of Tippo's resignation.

"This is very bad news for everyone who's concerned...students, faculty, alumni. Dr. Tippo has been wonderful for the Amherst campus..."

He refused to speculate on Tippo's motives, saying that he was concerned only with the action itself.

John W. Haigis, Jr., of Greenfield said, "I have no comment at all...If I had to say anything I would say that I would regret his resignation. I'm surprised and not shocked...shocked is an over-used word."

Trustee George L. Pumphret of Dorchester was "stunned. I don't understand it..." He also said he didn't now anything about it.

Trustee Dennis S. Crowley of Boston refused to comment, saying that any statement must naturally come first from Chairman of the Board, Joseph P. Healey of Arlington. Healey was not available for comment.

Robert P. Gordon of Lincoln said he had no reaction at all and that he'd have to see the letter of resignation before he'd believe it. Tippo's letter was sent Friday to Wood and Healey. Apparently neither one has received it yet. Tippo announced his resignation to the vice-chancellors Friday. He promptly received letters of resignation from Vice-Chancellor Gluckstern, Special Assistant David Clay and an unwritten decision to resign from Vice-Chancellor Bromery.

TRUSTEE CROWLEY — "I have nothing to say."

THE CHANCELLOR AND THE PRESIDENT—Growing friction between Wood and Tippo over the last year ended Friday with Tippo's resignation. Speculation is that Wood's refusal to accept the budget for the next fiscal year and decision to transfer $850,000 to his systems office prompted Tippo's resignation.

Sandwen Reacts To Resignation

By DON BISHOP

In the wake of Chancellor Tippo's announced resignation on Friday, the following statement was issued by Student Senate President Lee Sandwen on Sunday night:

"Since May, when I was elected Student Body President, I've had the opportunity of getting to know the major administrators who inhabit Whitmore Hall. They are men of diverse backgrounds., commitments, and sensitivity to student's needs. I've had the opportunity to disagree with most, and in years past to demonstrate on their doorsteps and to sit-in in their lobbies.

"Chancellor Tippo and I have had disagreements. But of all those I've had to deal with, he has earned my respect the most. It is my perception that much of the positive change seen in my four years here came about because of his influence. Particularly this was true with respect to the quality of administrator he drew around him: Bromery, Gluckstern, and Clay (those who have also submitted resignations) as well as others. It will be a real tragedy if we lose all their services at this time--a time when the University at Amherst seems at the gate to a decade of progress and good feeling. If it had been in my power to prevent these events, I would not have hesitated to do so.

"It may be difficult for the average student to recognize the effects of these events upon his stay here. I assure you they will be great. The 1970 "Strike" and this are probably the closest to the fabled "revolution" UMass will ever get. It seems that the students will be clear losers in this case, at least in the short run.

"Where we go from here is a real and appropriate question. We the student body must watch so that the forces of centralization, or the "status quo", don't seize this occasion for their own benefit.. And we must, most importantly, make sure our next chancellor has Oswald Tippo's responsiveness, compassion, and feeling for the University community in the 1970's. It will be a most difficult job indeed."

Sandwen remarked in the Collegian office that Tippo's letter of resignation had come as a shock and a complete surprise to him. He learned of it while attending a National Student Conference in Washington.

When asked what he thought the University community's reaction to the resignations would be, Sandwen replied that he did not think there would be a terrific outcry from the student quarter. Where he expects the most response to come from, is the University faculty.

Senate President Sandwen feels that the student body should be concerned though, due to the fact that Tippo's departure will probably bring about a preserving of the "status quo". Until a replacement for Tippo is named, Sandwen feels there will be a certain amount of inactivity in Whitmore.

In addition, Sandwen feels it will be extremely difficult to find an individual who was as responsive to the student body, and University community in general, as Chancellor Tippo was.

In regard to student (and particularly Student Senate) involvement in the selection of successors to the Chancellor and the other departing administrators, Sandwen feels certain that the Student Senate will want to voice some opinion as to who they feel are best qualified to succeed to these posts.

Tippo Began At UM In 1928

Oswald Tippo's history at UMass began in 1928 when he entered Mass Aggie as a student. After graduating in 1932, he earned his Masters' and PhD in Botany at Harvard, also spending a period there as a teaching Fellow. Tippo thereafter went to the University of Illinois, where he progressed from the status of Botany Instructor to Chairman of the Botany Department. He ultimately became Dean of the Graduate School. After leaving Illinois, he took the post of head of the Botany Department at Yale.

After spending time at Yale, he accepted the post of Provost at the University of Colorado. In the early sixties he became Executive Dean of Arts and Sciences at New York University.

In 1964 he returned to his alma mater as Provost. He submitted his resignation from the post of Provost to the Board of Trustees in 1969. The resignation was never approved by the Board and Tippo remained, to be appointed to the post of Chancellor in February of 1970.

His resignation from the post of Chancellor, effective Sept. 1 or whenever the Board of Trustees can find a replacement, is 'irrevocable.'

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN are on the second floor of the Student Union on the University campus, zip code 01002. Phones are 545-2550 (news), 545-0344 (sports), and 549-1311 (editor).

Second-class postage paid at Amherst, the DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes five times weekly Monday through Friday during the academic year except during vacation and exam periods, three or four times a week following a vacation or exam period or when a holiday falls within a week. Accepted for mailing under the authority of the act of March 8, 1879 as amended by the act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.08 per semester, $10.00 per year.

Feud Growing Over $850,000

Continued from page 1

Gluckstern, Bromery, and Clay have played important roles in the Chancellor's administration. Clay was principle author of the UMass budget this year. Gluckstern came to Tippo's side as Associate Provost when John Lederle was still the president.

Clay characterized the recent relations between the Amherst campus and the Systems office of Wood as lacking "mutual confidence".

"President Wood is very much interested in issues of the total system" said Clay in a telephone interview Sunday afternoon. "What he sees the campus doing on its own and what the system will do" is still an open question, explained Clay.

The diversion of large sums of money, namely $850,000, "will be hard for Amherst to swallow" commented Clay when asked about Wood's budget request. Clay felt that the loss of money would affect UMass-Amherst's academic programs.

One administrator here at Amherst predicted that a new Chancellor will be sought "within a very few months" in order to maintain the tenuous communications that do exist between the Amherst and Boston offices.

"The real problem is that the final appointment of a new Chancellor is going to come out of Wood's office. We will know that he is Wood's man," the administrator commented.

"Tippo was Amherst's man in the system. Anyone else will be Wood's man on campus," the source added.

TRUSTEE HAIGIS — "I'm surprised and not shocked. Shocked is overused...."

Fac-Sen To Propose Budget Statement

By ANNE STADNICKI

The Faculty Senate Committee of Concern will prepare today the final draft of what is now an eleven point recommendation on the budgeting of funds for the UMass Amherst campus. Its statement will be presented to the Board of Trustees, hopefully with Student Senate support, at the monthly meeting of the Board to be held in Lenox this weekend.

As it stands now, the committee's statement encompasses the six basic points that Chancellor Oswald Tippo presented before the closed session of the Faculty Senate last Thursday. Tippo outlined at that meeting what has been happening between his office and UMass President Robert C. Wood's systems office.

According to reliable sources, Tippo's resignation, which was announced Friday and is effective in one year, is due partly to friction between the two offices.

Wood has cut the present budget for UMass Amherst and has refused to support the approval of next year's fiscal budget. He has also suggested that Amherst trust funds be transferred to another campus.

Tippo said of the trust fund transfer: "We on the Amherst campus have no objection to the proposal that all trust fund budgets and their detailed justification be presented to the President and to the Board of Trustees for review and approval...We also acknowledge the justice of having a reasonable amount of trust funds (preferably trust fund interest) assigned to the President for his use."

He emphasized, however, "I would add that these funds for the President's office should not come solely from one campus but rather all three campuses should share in this obligation."

The letter was addressed to President Wood on the subject of proposed transfer of Amherst overhead, trust fund interest, educational allowances, land grant and other non-state funds to another campus. It was dated July 26, 1971.

A goodly percentage of the listed funds are assigned for personnel who would have to be discharged if money is taken from us, Tippo said in the letter.

He noted that the situation is all the more critical because of the drastic reduction in federal appropriations for graduate student, library and computer support.

"If our trust funds are taken from us, we shall need a large increase in our state appropriation, or else many of our quality programs will be weakened or eliminated," Tippo said.

He said of reaction on the Amherst campus, should the funds be transferred "The blow to the campus morale will be devastating. The resentment towards the "receiving" campus will be deepseated."

Tippo urged that if it is contemplated to transfer any funds from this campus, other than reasonable amounts to the President's office, the President should appear before the several senates before any action is taken.

He pointed out that not one word was said about transferring resources from the parent campus to the new sites when the proposals to establish the new campuses were made.

Almost foreshadowing his resignation Friday, Tippo's letter read: "I must say I do not relish the very awkward position I am placed in if additional resources are removed from the Amherst campus, especially if these resources are then assigned to another campus."

Tippo made the following recommendations on the transfer of funds:

—Overhead, educational allowance, NSF institutional grant and similar funds be assigned for use to the campus which generates the research and other grants on which this income depends.

—Trust fund's interest be allocated to the campus which produces the trust fund, except that reasonable amounts be transferred to the President's office (with the further understanding that all campuses share in this responsibility).

—The land-grant, Bankhead Jones, Morrill Nelson funds continue to be budgeted by the Amherst campus in recognition of its historic land-grant functions and responsibilities.

—Amherst endowment funds, other than those clearly unrestricted, continue to be allocated to this campus.

—Administrative allowance funds be employed for the intended administrative purposes, be they on the Amherst campus or elsewhere.

—In no case are funds derived from student fees or taxes (or interest on such funds) to be expended on any other campus or elsewhere, except on the generating campus. (To do otherwise, would provoke vigorous student protest).

Larry Ladd, one of two students on the Committee of Concern reported that the Committee expanded Tippo's six points into eleven of their own when they met last Friday.

The Committee of Concern was formed last Thursday when the Faculty Senate voted unanimously to convey their concern to the Board of Trustees prior to any decision the Board might make pertaining to the fiscal budget of the University. The motion was passed after Tippo spoke in the closed session, but reliable sources said it was on their own initiative that the faculty decided to relay their feeling to the Trustees.

Although the Committee of Concern has been authorized to speak for the Faculty Senate, and will speak directly to the Board of Trustees, it will present the final statement before a special meeting of the Faculty Senate Thursday morning. Ladd says it is a move to gain political support for the statement.

The Student Senate will discuss Tippo's resignation and the fund transfer at an executive committee meeting at 6:00 tonight. Wednesday it will vote on support for the statement to be issued later today by the Committee of Concern.

The student body is represented on the Committee by Vice President Larry Ladd, and Senator Nick Apostola some of the other members include Professors Booth, Morris, Ludke, and Wellman, of the faculty senate.

Additional information will be published in tomorrow's Collegian along with the text of the final statement issued by the Committee of Concern.

Controversial S.E.S. Plans To Go Co-op

By NIKKI ROSS

The news that the S.E.S. (Student Educational System) plans to form a cooperative has drawn attention to the controversial nature of the organization and at the same time has exposed what many believe to be a grave problem in the educational system at UMass.

S.E.S. is the group which publishes study notes for large lecture classes at a fee of three to seven dollars per course per semester. S.E.S. had its origin two years ago when Mr. George Cheah, at that time a junior at the University, became disgusted with the large lecture system and set out to see what possible solutions could be initiated.

What Cheah saw was a large group of students from diverse backgrounds being put in a situation where they would all be meeting the same standards. In addition, he felt these lectures bred competition. In other words, some students are very capable of taking quick, accurate notes while others are inept to the degree that the information is impossible to assimilate.

Cheah's answer was to begin printing up the notes for these courses, so that students could, as he put it, listen to the professors instead of spending 90% of their time writing notes.

The subscriptions have become popular with students of lecture courses and S.E.S. now services forty courses. Cheah does not believe this system is the panacea to large lecture problems, but he does believe it is a partial solution that will improve the "rat race" environment of university education. Cheah complained that "Universities are growing, and large lectures are growing, but no one in the administration has looked into problems of this system".

He also believes that because it is the graduate school that gives a university its rating, the undergraduates (who support the university) suffer from lack of administrative concentration.

At the moment the organization is run as a private enterprise, but Cheah, who is leaving next year, would like to leave it in the hands of a student co-op. The co-op would be a student union catering to all of the students needs by the students. He envisions the co-op as eventually including the Collegian, a computerized book trade, and anything else the students would want. Cheah feels the success of the co-op would mean putting the power of many things in students' hands, lowering the prices of student services, creating many jobs for students, and virtually feeding money students put out, back into their own pockets.

The success of S.E.S.'S Co-op idea depends on whether the organization's foundation (study note program) will survive in the near future. There is a large possibility that it won't.

To begin with, many of the faculty members object to what they believe to be an encroachment on the sanctity of their classrooms. Professor Howard Gadlin of the psychology department is strongly opposed to the S.E.S. Note program.

"I don't see how any businessman has the right to intrude in on any class," he said. According to Gadlin, he is alienated by S.E.S. profit motive and objects to the fact that even though he did not give written permission for the notes to be published for his Psychology 101 lecture, S.E.S. advertised a subscription for the courses anyway.

In addition to his ethical objections, Gadlin has educational reasons for opposing the note program. He believes that these notes work against the teachers and students in that attendance is much lower in classes with published notes, and that these notes, which are only an outline, are all the students tend to learn. Gadlin also said that selling notes won't change the lecture system. As a matter of fact he believe that it would encourage larger lectures, because the notes would make lectures manageable.

Dr. David Bischoff, Associate Provost, has investigated this controversy both legally and morally. It is the responsibility of his position to protect the right of both students and faculty. In response to some of the faculty's complaints that it is illegal to publish notes without written permission of the lecturer, Dr. Bischoff sought the advise of the University lawyer. The lawyer informed the administration of the "Common Law Copyright Law" which was determined in a Californian court decision in 1969. The decision says that a lecturer has common law copyright to original idea when delivered to a limited classroom audience. As a civil and not a criminal case, it would be up to the individual professors to press charges should there be an infraction of their copyrights.

Apart from the legal aspects of this controversy, Dr. Bischoff sees how the problems of the large lecture and large university in general are becoming more and more out of hand every day.

"If the University can be reduced to taking notes and exams as a harbinger of education; then I don't want to be a part of it," he said.

His responsibility to protect the students in every respect leads him to personally believe that the note system is a disaster. According to Dr. Bischoff, it puts some students who can't afford notes at a definite disadvantage. It also removes student motivation and personal interpretation of knowledge. As far as the Associate Provost is concerned, published notes reduce what little personal attraction a large university offers, to a matter of regurgitating what is outlined in their note subscriptions.

Some feel selling these notes is advantageous and a beginning to solving the overcrowded conditions that are characteristic of a large state university, while others feel that it is perverting the function of higher education. No matter what their opinions on S.E.S., all levels of university society agree that our lecture system is a sterile and ineffective method of learning.

WATER BEDS SALE

Your Choice

KING, QUEEN, or DOUBLE SIZE MATTRESS-

5 yr. guarantee with 1" Foam Insulating Pad $24.99

$29.99

A Head of Time

360 College St. Amherst
Rt. 9 Tel. 253-5394
Open Noon til 9

CLIP & SAVE CLIP & SAVE

Research (Term) Papers

We cover virtually every topic-All writers are college grads specializing in your topic.
Original Papers $3.50 per page
Previously Used $2.50 per page
Send Topic Description & Money Order TO:

PAPERS AND INC.
BOX 337 MIDDLETOWN, CONN. 06457
TEL. 203-346-2018

Join the Brothers of

Phi Sigma Kappa

for the N.F.L. Game of the week.
(Oakland vs Cleveland)

TONIGHT 8:30 P.M.
510 North Pleasant St.
545-0174

COMMUTER ASSEMBLY

SPACES AVAILABLE

Nomination sheets may be picked up
in front of RSO, 1st level, CC.
Must be in by 5 p.m. Fri. Oct. 8

In The Nation And The World

Strike Continues

(AP)—The dock strike that closed ports from Canada to Mexico enters its 96th day today, making it the longest in West Coast history, and mediators said yesterday the negotiators were making some progress.

Negotiations in the East Coast dock strike-that started Friday and produced the first coast-to-coast longshoremen's walkout-were scheduled to resume today. Union negotiators in the mine workers' walkout were to report to their members today.

J. Curtis Counts, the chief federal mediator who has been meeting with both sides in the West Coast strike, said yesterday in San Francisco, "We are nearer a settlement than we were before and we're still trying."

Until now, the longest dock strike in Pacific coast history was a walkout 23 years ago that was settled on Christmas Eve after 95 days.

The work stoppage by 15,000 longshoremen has shut down 24 ports from Canada to Mexico since July 1, causing financial losses estimated at more than $1.5 billion in California alone.

After a meeting with both sides in Oregon Sept. 25, President Nixon announced that negotiators promised to try for a settlement by the weekend.

Counts said Nixon has made no further pleas with either side since then.

Negotiators met until 9:30 p.m. Saturday and planned to resume yesterday afternoon.

At issue is a dispute over loading certain container cargo, plus the longshoremen's demands for a 34.7 per cent wage hike, a guaranteed 40-hour work week and more fringe benefits.

Involved in the East Coast walkout are 45,000 members of the AFL—CIO International Longshoremen's Association.

The guaranteed wage issue is at the center of the dispute. The union seeks retention of a contract provision guaranteeing eligible longshoremen 2,080 hours of pay a year-the equivalent of 52 weeks at 40 hours a week. The New York Shipping Association said the plan cost shippers $15 million last year and wants it revised.

There were no developments yesterday in the strike by 80,000 members of the United Mine Workers in 20 states. The walkout began Friday following expiration of the union contract with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association. The union is seeking an increase in the current top pay of $37 to $50 a day and increased industry payments to its welfare and retirement fund.

Phase II Freezes Hospital Costs

WASHINGTON (AP)—The secretary of Health, Education and Welfare said Sunday the Nixon administration plans to include controls on hospital and doctors' costs in Phase II of the new economic program.

Secretary Elliot L. Richardson said since Nixon announced his program Aug. 15 to stem inflation and unemployment, the department has been working with the Cost of Living Council on sanctions for after the wage-price freeze ends.

"Because of the very rapid rate in which these costs have been rising year after year, we do intend to include specific measures to deal with them," Richardson said. He gave no specifics.

Richardson made his comments on the NBC radio-television program "Meet the Press."

Expedition Searches For Pan-Am Route

LONDON (AP) - A team of British explorers plans to conquer the last obstacle to a Pan-American highway stretching from Alaska to the southern tip of South America.

The 50-strong Trans-America Expedition will drive two vehicles through the jungle swamps of the Darien Gap on the Panama-Colombia border, a journey previously completed only by foot.

The treacherous terrain of the Darien Gap is a 250-mile missing link for a highway running down the western coasts of the Americas.

Findings on a possible route through the Darien Gap will be handed over to the Panamanian Highway Commission.

Passport Office Moves

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. Passport Office opens for business at a new headquarters Monday, a move not altogether pleasing to its director, Frances Knight.

"We were told this was to be our permanent residence," Miss Knight recalled as she surveyed the dismantling of her old office.

It is the fourth migration by the Passport Office since Miss Knight, a vivacious lady with a reputation for administrative efficiency and tiffing with her superiors, took over 16 years ago.

"You can't really be opposed to it," she said of the shift. She noted her group was the only non-White House agency in the building she is leaving.

But "I'm sure it's expensive any time you move," she commented.

The agency accepts applications from the public for U.S. passports and produces the documents. Since its fees run higher than its expenses, it turns in a profit each year.

Passport applications are currently running some 26 per cent above a year ago, officials said. They figure this is mainly because plummeting air fares are enticing more Americans into overseas travel.

Miss Knight promised no delay in passport processing from her move to the new quarters in a commercial location at 1425 K St. NW.

"That I can guarantee," she said.

Fraudulent Elections Protested

SAIGON (AP)—Four American pacifists set up their own "American Embassy" on Sunday "to represent the people" in one of the sideshows to South Vietnam's one-man presidential election.

"We feel there should be some kind of alternate presence which really represents the majority of the American people," said Father Harry Bury, who Saturday had chained himself to the U.S. embassy gate.

"...We went to see Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker yesterday and we tried to express this to him," he added. "We found that he is alive and well and living in 1950s."

Father Bury, along with two other Roman Catholic priests and a Jewish professor, outlined plans for their ad hoc embassy to newsmen outside the Election Information Center before a shouting police captain chased them off.

Scientist Appeals For Free Emigration

MOSCOW (AP)—Eminent Russian physicist Andrei D. Sakharov has proposed that the Soviet Union grant all citizens the right to leave the country.

He said such a right is "an essential condition for spiritual freedom for everyone."

Sakharov, developer of the Soviet hydrogen bomb and a champion of human rights, proposed the free emigration policy in an open letter to the Supreme Soviet.

He recommended that the legislative body revoke the current law that permits persons fleeing the country to be tried for high treason. The scientist also asked for a general amnesty for persons detained in labor camps or mental hospitals because they had tried to leave the Soviet Union.

AUTO INSURANCE

ALL CARS — ALL DRIVERS
BUDGET PAYMENTS

CYCLES — SCOOTERS

Tekoa Insurance Agency

160 Pleasant St. Northampton 586-2742

10 Broad St. Westfield 562-3604

Responsible People

Are Being Sought As

Advocates for the General Court

The right to defend and prosecute fully is just part of the job.

For more information contact Henry Bouffard, Student Senate Office.

For Posters Galore see A. J. Hastings

Newsdealer & Stationer

15 So. Pleasant St., Amherst

1971-72 ID Card Validation Labels Are Now Available In ID OFFICE 109 Hampshire

STUDENT SENATE ELECTIONS

will be held Thurs., Oct. 7

Dorm Residents: respective Dorms 6-9 p.m.

Sororities - Fraternities and Commuters: in front of the University Store 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.

ID'S REQUIRED

McGovern To Speak At UMass, Promote Student Registration

By JEANETTE MARTINEAU

"We have been negotiating with McGovern representatives in Washington and New Hampshire, and the Senator will be speaking in the Student Union Ballroom, on October 31, at 8 P.M.," John Stevens, co-ordinator of the Amherst Registration Drive Co-Alition, announced Friday.

The visit by the Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern of South Dakota comes as part of the effort by a coalition, comprised of the Young Republicans, the Young Democrats, the Anti-War fund, the Committee for McGovern for President and the People's Community Union, which is urging students to register to vote.

In order to accomodate UMass's 20,000 potential voters, the Amherst Board of Registrars has scheduled a Voter Registration Session at the Campus Center on October 14, 1971, from 1:00 to 9:00 p.m., on the concourse level.

According to "Voter Registration Information" prepared by the Amherst Registration Drive Coalition: "Every person over the age of 18 (i.e. by election day) may register to vote if you: - are a citizen of the U.S., - will have been a resident in your city or town for six months prior to an election."

About the residency requirement, Attorney Richard Howland, Student Senate Counsel, said: "The rule is that on election day, the voter must be a resident of the city or town, registered for 6 months, which means to those persons registering for the February 22 town election-commencing on or before August 22, 1971.

"Students who were residents in May, and returned after the vacation meet the residency requirements", according to Attorney General Quinn.

Applicants must present "reasonable proof" of residency in Amherst at registration. This, according to the Coalition, includes: "rent receipts, a letter from College Registrars, Deans, or Housing office."

"The Housing Office will move its books to the Campus Center near the registration table on October 14, so that students can readily obtain the proof of residency they need."

Unless physically disabled, an an applicant must apply IN PERSON to his city or town hall, "or at any other designated place in a city ward or town precinct. In Amherst, the Town Hall is across the street from the Common...at any time except during the closed registration periods of 19 days before city, town, or special state primaries or elections, and 30 days before presidential primaries and elections."

The clerk at registration will tell the applicant the name and location of their voting precinct.

For further information contact Larry Ladd or John Stevens at the Student Senate Office, Campus Center, or call 5-0341.

You can get information on voting and registering at this table, located on the concourse level of the Campus Center, from 11 A.M. until 1 P.M. daily. (MDC photo by Gib Fullerton.)

Nationwide Registration

Voter registration drives are getting under way on campuses all across the country this fall with nearly 5 million students among the 11.4 million newly enfranchised young people between the ages of 18 and 21.

An Associated Press survey showed the drives are meeting with mixed response. Spokesmen at some schools, reported turnouts larger than expected; others said there was little interest in registration; still others said it was too early to tell.

The registration drives took varying forms—voting booths on campus, editorials in student newspapers, appearances by local and national politicians and campaigns by specially formed student groups.

The National Association of Student Governments, the Council of Undergraduate Deans and the Washington University Student Union are sponsoring jointly a meeting Nov. 19-21 that's billed as a national convention "to initiate student voter registration."

MDC Classifieds Pay

OPEN SMOKER

at 7:00

Monday Oct. 4

Kappa Sigma

70 Butterfield Terrace

An Opportunity To Choose Your Friends.

Monday-Tuesday-Wednesday-Thursday

Eat In Specials

PIZZA

Tomato & Cheese - - - - - 79c
Green Pepper - - - - - - - 99c
Meatballs - - - - - - - - 99c

Tomato & Cheese - - - - - 79c
Green Pepper - - - - - - - 99c
Meatballs - - - - - - - - 99c

Spaqetti and Meat Balls - - 79c

10c extra to take out

Amherst Tower

11 East Pleasant St. Amherst

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF — Richard C. Hanson
MANAGING EDITOR — David D. Williams
BUSINESS MANAGER — James Gold
EXECUTIVE EDITOR — Barry J. Rubenstein
NEWS EDITOR — Anne C. Stadnicki
SPORTS EDITOR — Earle T. Barroll

PHOTO EDITOR — Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR — Robert Nesti

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR — Jerry Lazar
NEWS STAFF — Janet Hughes, Dan Kamal
SPORTS — Gib Fullerton, Alan Chapman, JoAnne Stiles
DARKROOM — Jim Gold
AD LAYOUT — Don Glickstein
EDITORIAL

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administration read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.
Unsigned editorials represent the views of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, and letters represent the personal views of the writers.

Help Wanted

When Chancellor Tippo and his close associates Provost Gluckstern, Dr. Bromery and David Clay resigned, UMass-Amherst lost the leadership which established the Amherst campus as a leading University in America.

What remains is the super-structure of a University system in dire need of people to guide it into a new era; people who can speak with voices that make sense and that can bring understanding to a university community that has been shocked and confused by the actions of its leaders.

On top, at least theoretically, of our University is a man who many have found to be too slick, too autocratic and most of all, too willing to make fast changes and exercise the power of executive discretion when consensus might be more appropriate.

Like it or not, President Wood is what the University was looking for while still stumbling around on its two large campus legs. He is, as one observer said, "a high powered administrator", who is whipping a sprawling complex into his budgetary control.

The future growth of this University is going to depend upon the balancing of the budgetary powers of the President with the only real strength of this University which still does and always will reside within the individual campuses.

President Wood must learn that exercising powers over the programs on each campus through the budget is only workable when the decisions are made with all possible attention to the people who are to be effected, not just the programs.

We feel that President Wood has gone too far from the principles of consensus and reasonable action in his handling of the UMass budget and the diversion of unreasonably large amounts of money from the Amherst campus, for systems' office use.

With more sensitivity to the goals and functions of a truly great institution of higher learning, President Wood, Chancellor Tippo and the Board of Trustees should give honest and understandable explanations of what is happening to this University now and what direction it will take in the future.

Dr. Tippo

We've Lots of Feelings, Now

By MARK SILVERMAN

(Editor's note--The author, a former Daily Collegian managing editor, is presently a reporter for the Worcester Telegram.)

The first time most UMass students heard of Oswald Tippo was May, 1969, when the then-Provost resigned in protest of legislative cuts in the University's budget request. The Board of Trustees never accepted the resignation.

About 50 students organized a publicity campaign to lobby against the budget cuts, and to convince Tippo to stay at UMass. Posters asking "Must Tippo Fight Alone" were pasted on the side of the State House in Boston. And, after about a month of debate, the legislature defied its democratic leadership and restored a substantial portion of the funds cut to to the budget.

After all of this, speculation grew that Tippo's resignation was nothing more than a grandstand play--a bluff-- designed to pressure the legislature into restoring funds to the budget.

Tippo emphatically denied this charge.

He said his resignation was prompted by a belief that the legislative budget cuts would prevent the school from continuing its academic development. Tippo said he did not want to continue as Provost, the University's chief academic officer, "if financial restraints are placed on academic growth."

"Restoration of the funds," he said, "removed the reason for resigning."

A few months later the University reorganized its administration, creating a systems office in Boston and separate chancellors to head the three campuses. Less than a year after his resignation as Provost, Tippo was chosen this campus' first Chancellor.

"He is the logical man for this new position," former President John W. Lederle said after Tippo's appointment. He knows this campus better than most administrators, and he has played a big role in our academic growth."

It was Tippo who spearheaded the school academic expansion during the mid-1960's, keeping pace with the rapid growth of student size during those years. It was Tippo who recruited faculty and encouraged the development of new courses. It was Tippo who fought conservative faculty members and encouraged revaluation of long- standing department and college requirements.

In the year and a half since his appointment, Chancellor Tippo's only real critics have been conservative faculty members and the University's system office in Boston.

Disgruntled faculty argue that he has given students too much voice in their academic lives. And, while many students say Tippo has granted them only a few concessions, some faculty maintain the chancellor has gone too far in listening to student classroom feedback.

The Boston office, headed by President Wood, has been increasingly angered by the chancellor's independence, by his refusal to allow the system office to manage local campus affairs.

But, as chancellor, Tippo dedicated himself to improving communications on campus.

There were the coffee hours in the Colonial Lounge every Tuesday, as Tippo and his inner circle of administrators--Bromery, Gluckstern, Shapior, Allen--made small talk with students.

Nothing much really came out of the coffee hours, and the sessions gradually became the butt of a standing student joke, running along the lines of "see the administrators, see them talk with students," etc.

But the coffee hours signaled the beginning of a new responsiveness on the part of University administrators toward students and their concerns. There was something symbolic about Tippo, engulfed by a cloud of cigar smoke, jotting down a student's gripe on a note pad and reaching for a nearby phone to call a department head for an immediate answer to a student's complaint.

There were the weekly meetings at the Top of the Campus with Collegian editors. There were the holiday meals at the Chancellor's house, at which he would stuff underweight student senators and joke, "Ha, now I've bribed you."

But, beneath the semi-serious, semi-put on image of the befuddled Mr. Chips, which Tippo presented to the students, there was an honest committment made to students. The Chancellor found it comfortable to create a character to hide behind, a character which could be accepted by students, in order to ease what he hoped would be an improvement in student-administration relations.

Students would have felt self-conscious admitting that they actually liked the Chancellor. This would have gone against the pious standoff which students had grown accustomed to with President Lederle.

To be ingratiated by, to have confidence in an administrator was a new sensation for UMass students. The quality of being human, of having depth, was in contrast with the grey, methodical behavior of top administrators before Tippo.

Tippo's Mr. Chips allowed students to drop their defensive antagonism toward administrators and to adopt a half-serious fondness for the chancellor. Students and administrators began to talk and to trust each other.

The change may not have been much, but at least it was a start. Students began to gradually slip into the University's decision-making machinery. They were given a chance to behave like adults for the first time.

But Tippo has resigned. Unlike 1969, nothing can bring him back. And after a year and a half, Whitmore once again assumes the role of the enemy fortress.

Art Buchwald

You Dolt, Harry

WASHINGTON--I received a call from a guy last week who claimed he was president of the Harry Anti-Defamation League. He said, "You wrote an article last week in which you used the name Harry to make fun of a TV football situation. For years now radio, television and newspaper writers have been holding up the name Harry to ridicule and derision, and we Harrys have banned together to do something about it."

"Now wait a minute, sir," I protested. "I do not always use Harry when I need a fall guy. Sometimes I use George, other times Arnie and quite often I use Henry."

"That's what I mean," Harry said. "Why don't you ever make fun of the Steves or Jims or Jacks or Bills."

There is nothing funny about a Steve, a Jim, a Jack or a Bill," I answered frankly. "The image just isn't right. If I call my guy Chuck or Jack, my reader is going to expect him to punch someone in the nose. But if I call him Harry or Fred or Louie, the reader is going to expect him to be punched in the nose. It's as simple as that."

"But why should this be? We Harrys and Mortons and Arnies and Chesters have a right to live too."

"I didn't make the rules," I protested. "A long time ago there must have been a Harry who slipped on a banana peel. From then on, any time a writer needed a name for someone who was going to get all fouled up, he used Harry."

"Well, we Harrys don't like it," Harry said. "It's bad enough that people are always making fun of Harry, but it's even worse when they make him the guy who commits the crime on a TV show."

"I don't know why you take offense at that," I said. "Everyone knows that if a Harry doesn't have two left feet, he probably has criminal instincts."

"Yeah, but why does a Harry always have to be one of Rocco's boys or Frank's henchmen? Why can't he be the leader of the mob?"

"People just don't think of Harry as a leader," I said. "Writers know this. If they have to come up with a name for a gang leader they would rather go with Red or Dustry or even Phil. You just can't see a Harry being the brains behind a bank job. As a matter of fact, it's more likely that he's the guy to make the fatal error so everyone gets caught."

"You see? All your prejudices about Harrys are coming through. Those of us who are not public jokes are stool pigeons."

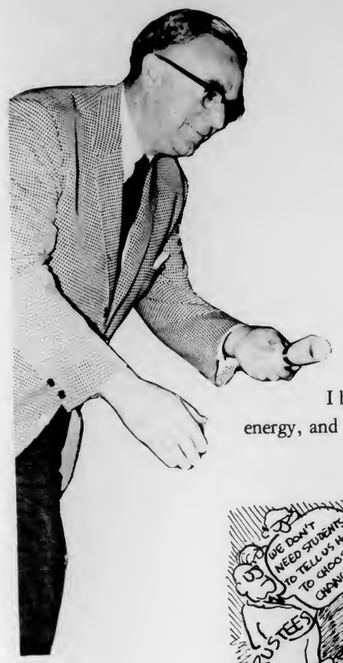
"Not necessarily," I said. "Max is more liable to rat on the gang than Harry."

"We aren't taking it any more," Harry said. "From now on every time we see a Harry presented in a bad light on television, we're going to call the sponsor and tell him that everyone in this country named Harry is going to boycott his product. And we also intend to cancel our subscriptions to any newspaper that holds up a Harry to derision."

"Frankly, sir..." I began.

"The name's Harry," he said angrily.

"Harry, then," I said. "I think you're being oversensitive. If your name was Hubert or Alfred or even Bert you might have a case. But I only use Harry when I'm looking for a minor schnook. If I'm looking for a real hopeless case I'll never use Harry."



"Who do you use then?"

"Marvin."

Copyright 1971, Los Angeles Times

Dr. Oswald Tippo

Provost 1964-1970
Chancellor 1970-1972

"This University cannot long survive unless we take immediate steps to put our house in order....
Wherever free expression is curtailed, there is no genuine intellectual community, no true university."

Convocation Address, 1970

I believe we have the determination energy, and goodwill equal to the work ahead.

Speech, 1970

February, 1970, Dr. Tippo is appointed Chancellor of the Amherst Campus without an adequate student input in the Search Committee.

September, 1971, Dr. Tippo greets incoming freshmen.

May, 1970, Student Leaders' Night.

STUDENT, FACULTY, STAFF AND ALUMNI SIGNATURE CAMPAIGN

MUST TIPPO FIGHT ALONE?

-LET'S LOOK AT THE FIRST ROUND-

TIPPO vs SARGENT

GOVERNOR CUTS UMASS BUDGET OVER $11,000,000 (20% CUT)

TIPPO RESIGNS OVER BUDGET CUTS

TIPPO vs SCIBELLI

"SHAME ON HIM (TIPPO) FOR SUCH A STUPID STATEMENT, WE'VE DONE MARVELOUSLY BY THEM," (GLOBE-WED MAY 7)

TIPPO vs BURKE

"WHO WANTS HIM (TIPPO) TO STAY? EVERYONE IS EXPENDABLE." (GLOBE-WED MAY 7)

MUST TIPPO FIGHT ALONE?

SIGN UP AND KICK IN FOR "CAMPAIGN COUNTER PUNCH!"

$13,000 FOR 3 FULL PAGE ADVERTISEMENTS FIGHTING BACK vs SARGENT, SCIBELLI AND BURKE

ROUND 2
WE NEED YOUR SIGNATURE PLUS ONE DOLLAR (SUGGESTED FACULTY, STAFF AND ALUMNI CONTRIBUTION $5).

ROUND 3
BUY SEVERAL COPIES OF EACH PAPER (ADVERTISEMENT) AND MAIL THEM TO YOUR STATE REPRESENTATIVE AND YOUR STATE SENATOR PLUS THE GOVERNOR, SCIBELLI & BURKE.

ROUND 4
A COPY OF EACH ADVERTISEMENT WILL BE MAILED TO EVERY HIGH SCHOOL, JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL, AND P.T.A. IN THE STATE.

May, 1969, Advertisement in Collegian.

The University was lucky this time to get a man of the caliber of Dr. Tippo...We may not be as lucky the next.---Collegian, 1970

School of Ed Announcements

Students in the Individualized Program at both levels of education, elementary and secondary, are urged to pick up and complete Form ST-1 by October 22, 1971. Form ST-1 contains vital information for all who desire to student teach in Western Massachusetts during the Spring Term of 1972. The form is available at, and should be returned to, the School of Education, Room 121, the TPPC Office.

Evan Dobelle, TPPC Administrator of Individualized Programs, also announces that a mandatory meeting of all such applicants for Western Massachusetts will be held on November 3, 1971, in the School of Education Auditorium at 7 p.m.

Dobelle emphasizes, "The forms must be returned by October 22 in order to practice teach this Spring; in Western Massachusetts."

Belchertown

The School of Ed is now offering up to fifteen modular credits to UMass students for teaching at Belchertown State School for the Retarded. Students are needed to teach Monday night classes, 7:15 to 9:15. Courses offered to adult residents of the school are: sewing, music, time telling, numbers, writing, money, communication skills, and other specialties. For more information, call the school and ask for Mrs. Grover, head of the volunteer dept.

WMUA

TONIGHT ON 91.1 FM:

7:00 pm EVENING NEWS - a full half hour of complete news from United Press International, Associated Press, UPI World Audio Network, and WMUA NEWS. Includes a sports report and five minute wrap-up at 7:25. Original reporting of area news is emphasized.

7:30 pm - 8:00 CAMPUS WEEK IN REVIEW - a half hour magazine of the past week's campus events.

8:00 p.m.-11:00 THE DRUM - Black programming featuring soul, jazz, poetry, and black news. Three hours of music and information for the black community.

11:00 p.m.-11:30 LATE NIGHT NEWS REPORT - 30 minutes of news and information compiled by the most extensive broadcast news department in the Amherst area. Includes sports and a five-minute update at 11:25.

11:30 p.m.-3:00a.m. R.J. Hanson drifts in with dynamite progressive music for the night people.

THE MEN BEHIND THE MACHINE. Tom Young (left) and Charlie Malone have been operating this crane atop the library since the beginning of the project. (MDC photo by Alan Chapman.)

S.E.S. Going Co-op ! !

All subcribers and all other students are invited to become members of the new Students' Educational System Cooperative.

For two years we have been serving you.

Now we welcome you to share in the ownership and decision-making of our student-centered organization. Become part of our co-op, and help promote your own interests.

HOW?

If you'd like to know how the co-op can work for you, and how you can become a part owner, come to our first meeting:

GENERAL MEETING

Place: Student Union Ballroom
Date: Wednesday, Oct. 6, 1971
Time: 8:00 p.m.

CAMPUS I — 7:00 9:00

the panic in needle park

Campus Cinemas 256-6411

Amherst - Hadley Line - Route 9
In The Zayre's Shopping Center

Mon Night! Ladies Adm $1.00

my night at maud's

"By far the best picture in the entire competition (Academy Awards 1970). One of the biggest thrills of this or any other moviegoing-year." judith crist, new york magazine

—marvelously sophisticated

Campus III — Screens: 7:00 & 9:00

CAMPUS II

In everyone's life there's a 'SUMMER OF '42'

Screens: 7:15 9:15

In conjunction with FraternityRush
the Interfraternity Council and Campus Pizza
presents

"GREEK" GRINDER WEEK

Any Grinder on the Menu worth 75¢ for only 50¢

"Go Greek" with Campus Pizza
RT. 9, HADLEY
586-3880
Orders To Go

Visit with the Greeks this week.

Oct. 4, 5, 6, 7 1971
worth 25¢ OFF on any 75¢ Grinder or 1 FREE PIZZA with every 4 ordered
with this coupon
at CAMPUS PIZZA

WHAT'S HAPPENING?

The Fine Arts Council is sponsoring more than fifty great events! Among artists visiting UMass. this year. . . . .

DANCE

Murray Louis Dance Co.
Rod Rodgers Dance Co.
Alvin Ailey Co.

THEATRE

Andre Gregory's Manhattan Project "Alice in Wonderland"

Charles Ludlam's Ridiculous Theatrical Company Presenting "The Grand Tarot" "Eunuchs of The Forbidden City" and "Bluebeard" Siobhan McKenna in "Here Are Ladies"

MUSIC

Swingle Singers
Preservation Hall Jazz Band of New Orleans
Lorin Hollander
John Williams
Kuentz Chamber Orch. of Paris
St. Louis Symphony
Boston Symphony Collage
Berlin Philharmonic Octet
Tokyo String Quartet
Juilliard Quartet
Amadeus Quartet
David Amram
etc. etc.

Have you received your fine arts council brochure yet?

If not, stop by the council office soon to be sure you know

WHAT'S HAPPENING!

Seats still available For Siobhan McKenna in "Here Are Ladies;; next Thursday, October 7- Bowker

Celebrity Series and/or Chamber Music Series Tickets just $3 (five events) to UM undergraduates! Orders yours today!

Call Fine Arts Council 545-0202 or stop by 125 Herter Hall

THIS IS WHAT'S HAPPENING

Faculty Committees Have Room For Students

The following Joint Faculty-Student Committees and Faculty Senate Committees (open to students) currently have spaces for undergraduates:

University Health Council---two (2) students needed. This committee has a widerange of interests within the area of health services, including health and sanitation conditions within the university, infirmary policy-making, proposed infirmary expansion, etc.

Five-College Coordinating Board---two (2) students needed. Complete coordination of all social, academic, and cultural activities between the Five Colleges comes under the auspices of this board. The regulation of Five-College day and evening buses, a lecture series, and the compilation of course listings within specialized areas (Asian Studies, Women's Studies, etc.) are some of their responsibilities.

Fine Arts Council---four (4) students needed. The Council is responsible for the financing and planning of the Fine Arts program at the University. It collects a Fine Arts fee from the students and budgets such groups as the Chorale, and Concert Association. Funds are also used for special projects such as art purchases, dance concerts, and folk music. The Council's program is administered by a manager hired by the Council and responsible to the Council.

Discipline Board---one (1) student needed. Judicial in nature, this board deals with major University infractions by students. It is largely an appellate body.

Environmental Living-Learning Committee---two (2) students needed. This committee studies the bio-physical and socio-cultural factors which influence the university community. Improving the environment by taking full advantage of the university's resources and creating a living-learning atmosphere on campus are among its major tasks.

Married Students Housing---one (1) student needed. The general policy review, improvement and possible expansion of married students' housing is undertaken by this committee.

CASIAC Curriculum Committee---three (3) students needed. One student is needed from each branch of the College of Arts and Sciences (Humanities and Fine Arts, Natural Sciences and Mathematics, and Social Sciences and Behavioral Sciences) at this time. Evaluation and improvement of the three branchs' curriculums comes under this committee's purview.

Human Subjects---two (2) students needed. All aspects of student life are examined by the membership of this committee. Study is aimed at how the individual may adjust to and take full advantage of campus life.

Academic Planning Advisory Council---one (1) student needed. This Council deals with academic renovation in all its phases: curriculum, faculty, grading, etc.

All undergraduates interested in participating on the above committees are urged to contact Student Senate Vice-President John Hogan in the Senate Office located within the Student Activities area on the first level of the Campus Center. Those interested in the Academic Planning Advisory Council should contact the Chairman of Student Senate Academic Affairs, Nick Apostola, also in the Senate Office.

Inspectors Attend Classes

New England Building Inspectors will go to school this week to keep up with changes in materials, systems, and the law.

An estimated 150 from all over the region will come to the UMass campus to attend a conference by the Division of Continuing Education, the Cooperative Extension Service, and the Massachusetts Building Commissioners and Inspectors Association, the Connecticut Building Officials Association, New Hampshire Building Officials Association, Rhode Island Building Officials Association, and the Building Officials Conference of America, Inc. Professor Robert G. Light of the food and agricultural engineering department is program coordinator.

Sessions will be at the Campus Center all week with instruction by UMass faculty, those from the building industry and public officials.

Some of the topics to be covered are fire protection, legislative programs, new lumber standards, preparing for court appearances, soil construction material and others.

Big Mac is Coming

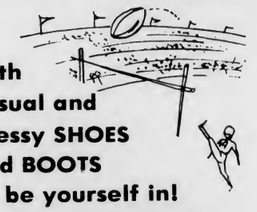
A new McDonald's family-style restaurant will open Tuesday, October 26th, on Route 9 in Hadley.

Only three miles from the University campus, the new restaurant will be open until midnight during the week and 2 A.M. on weekends. It will feature McDonald's usual quality food at modest prices, fast service, and a 52-seat indoor dining area.

Brian Zuckerman, owner and manager, expects McDonald's to be well received in the Amherst area.

Jaycees Host Foreign Students

The Amherst Jaycees are sponsoring a free all-day tour of Sturbridge Village, an authentic New England Village, for any Foreign Students and their families on Saturday, October 9th. The bus will leave from Prince House in Southwest at 9:00 A.M. The Amherst Jaycees will provide lunch. All interested may sign up at Prince House or at the Foreign Student Office by October 6th.



WHAT'S NEW AT THE TOP OF THE CAMPUS?

Tuesday nite 9:00-11:30

ENJOY SUE O'NEIL'S singing + playing for the GRAND OPENING of THE BACKROOM

11th floor C.C. lounge

BOLLES KICKS OFF THE '71 FALL SEASON with Casual and Dressy SHOES and BOOTS to be yourself in!

BOLLES

8 Main St., Amherst

We honor Bank Americard and Master Charge

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

Must sell immed. 68 Fairlane 500 conv. blue/black/top, V8 auto PS 4, new wh tires, 32000 mi. First reasonable offer. Call 586-3605. tf10-8

Rebuilt Volvo B18, and B16 engines, new valves, guides, rings, bearings, clutches and rblt. carbs 200 & 100 and B18 4 spd. trans. and clutch linkage to convert your automatic 1225 Volvo to std. Also P544 Volvo in good cond. without engine and A 1225. For parts call 581-1820 evenings-will bargain on everything. tf10-6

'55 Olds, runs, needs work, 1-217-5828, after 5:30 p.m. tf10-6

61 VW Bus rebuilt engine, new brakes, muffler ex. mechanical some body, red. Good deal at $150 or best offer. Call Ron, 549-0150. tf10-6

1967 BMW - 1800 TI 4 door sedan, auto-fm, sw blaupunkt, Pirellis, excellent condition-best offer over $1600. 253-2112. tf10-5

Bread truck-walk in body, great condition. Call Gary at 526-6863 after 8:00 p.m. tf10-4

67 Mustang conv., V8 3 spd., 4 new tires, excellent condition. $1050. Call 253-7940 after five. tf10-5

1966 Ford Mustang, 6 cyl., good running cond. See John 120 Ansily St., across from Drake. $300. tf10-5

1967 MG-B-GT, special, overdrive, wire-wheels, new clutch, snow tires. Good condition. 584-2700 ext. 257 after 7 p.m. tf10-7

62 Austin Cooper with cooper s engine, $450. Call 549-1567. tf10-7

MOTORCYCLES FOR SALE

1968 Montesa 250 c.c., completely rebil., new paint, excellent shape, street and dirt combination $300 or best offer. 584-1066 anytime. tf10-4

1971 Mala Record, 10 speed. Best offer. Call Ed 586-3512. tf10-4

FOR SALE

Large Bamboo Coal, excellent condition. Call 549-2968 $50. Tf 10-6

Snow tires, Firestone Town & Country, 7.75 x 14 white walls, mounted. Call Harold at 546-3230. tf10-6

8 track stereo tapes-Who, Stones, Tull, etc.-$2.95. Allman Bros., 4-Walstreet, etc.- $3.95 Call 546-8034.

Guitars, amps, acc., & records, at reasonable prices. The Guitar Workshop 98 Main St. Northampton 586-1706. tf10-6

Waterbeds-now all sizes $19.95! Factory warranty. Also, frames, liners & pads in stock. Call Mark at 546-5450. tf10-12

Benjamin stereo compacts, miracord and lenco turntables, elac cartridges and FAL speakers. At discount prices. Call 546-6817. tf10-5

Realistic Stereo, tape recorder, model, 900, 2 mikes includes 2 speakers, tapes. Call Sean $125 or 305 Johnson. Best. tf10-5

1971 Honda CB 450 red-ex. condition, new tire & chain. Must sell before snow. $950 or haggle. Call Joel after 6 p.m. 1-567-5701. tf10-4

KLH model 24 (FM & changer) with 2 big KLH 17 speakers. Exc. cond. $210. Call Steve 256-8084. tf10-6

Gibson '63 J50-Snowflake inlays-fixed bridge-a fine guitar-$200. Grets ch. 1960 Chet Atkins elec. W/hard case-$250. At 549-6517. tf10-4

Brown suede pants, skirts, skins, top quality, wholesale. Panis $27, skirts $9.49, skins $5. Stop by to look Jon-421 Chadborne 5-2610 leave number if not in. tf10-4

1 pair studded snow tires 650-13 new last season $30. Call Peter 253-7236 around 6. tf10-5

Portable stereo Phono Bell 25W Amp. Harris Tweed Jackets 38 studded snow tires 560 x 13. Womans unused Ducton Coat 11. 253-5115. tf10-5

$90 Buckle Ski Boots used 6 times $60 with stand 5'2 X 1/2, head ski poles good cond. $20. Dunre Ski Rack used twice $10 Concorde Compact Stereo, AM-FM receiver, loudness and filter controls, 40 watts peak 28 usable with Kemp 11 speakers 6 mo. old $190. Panasonic TV 1 mo. old $70. Will bargain on everything. Call 584-1820 evenings. tf10-6

We undersell all. Any and all top name appliances, stereos, radios, refrigerators, anything. Call Larry 6-5090 or come to 350 Canoe. tf10-13

Just like people: bruised on the outside, but beautiful inside. 1965 Chevy convert. Call 586-2780. tf10-6

Dancing Planters-other ceramic ware made to order. Fred Englander 549-1051, 15 Fearing St. tf10-4

LOST

Reward! A gold link bracelet positively lost Wed., Sept. 29 in Thompson 102 between 3:20-4:30 p.m. 549-4105 after 5 A 5-2711 ask Debi. tf10-6

Lightweight blue jacket. Had NSICC State Champs inscribed. Call 6-7537. tf10-6

ROOMMATES WANTED

Male share 2 bdrm. apt. in sund. with 2 others. $60 Mike 665-3012, 545-1318. tf10-6

Roommate female to share rent with 2 girls, own room in Hadley. Call 586-2915. tf10-5

Female roommate wanted-furnished studio apt. $65 mo.-15 min. from UMass. Call 323-1197 keep trying. tf10-6

Working girl desires roommate with apartment. Must move soon! Call Diana 549-1079. tf10-6

HELP WANTED

Girl with insurance agts. exp. auto & homeowners, rating & typing essential. Call 584-5555, Wm Borawski, Inc., 88 King St., Northampton. tf10-6

Male subjects for psychological experiment. Earn $2.00 see Jeanne, Bartlett 229F. tf10-1

Men to erect chainlink fence. Experienced only. Part time. Fitzgerald Fences, 316 Bridge Rd., Florence, Mass. tf10-1

Ambitious people wanted to sell jewelry on campus-no experience necessary-high commissions-send name, address and tel. no. to Richards, 1181 Main St., Springfield, Mass. tf10-8

Need money? Earn $25 or more a week! Work your own hours at your convenience. Call Barry or Dave 100-539. tf10-5

RIDE WANTED

Husband and wife need ride to and from around Columbus, Ohio on Oct. 21 will share driving and expenses. Call Bob 549-6761. tf10-1

FOR RENT

$55/month, utilities included, one block from campus. Call Bonnie 253-9985, 9-11 p.m. tf10-6

Available now-one bedroom apartment at Puffton Village. Call 549-3687 tf10-6

Studios, with 6 bed rms. 11 miles from U of M, furniture, 2 baths, all utilities paid $150 per month. Call 323-7982. tf10-1

PERSONAL

To the A.P.O. whoever you are. Thank you for taking care of me Friday night. I really appreciated it. Linda. 10-1

Nudge-happy 21st birthday! Sorry I can't be with you. We'll have to hit the bars this weekend. Love ya, Fats. 10-1

To young Bill Mias. Wrangler kid rusty zippers we're a ball in the summer of sixty nine. Signed the Denim Virgin 10-1

Nipper don't let the mono-meenies get you down, specially now that your birthday's rolled around. Happy 19th mAmAmAtAtAtAt 10-1

To sexy freak of Pi Lambda Phi-we know now. Soon the world will know-14th floor Hilton 10-1

JMI happy anniversary. 10-1

Electric Joe: If you want something hot and spicy for after your birthday come over to 111 and we'll make you a pizza. Okay Wildmon? Happy belated birthday! Debbie and Lynda. 10-1

Melville Basement invites James Basement and 4th floor to a party Friday night at 8. tf10-31

Horoscopes done professionally. Call 549-6768. Write David Elliott-Mannique A-11 North Village. Minimum $5 tf10-6

Palms read. Call Chris 6-8201 50¢. No bullshit. tf10-4

KITTENS

Black Angora 6 weeks old, housebroken, healthy happy, lovable pets. Call 584-8081 after 5 p.m. tf10-5

LECTURE NOTES

Lecture notes are now available in room 348 in the Student Union Lobby for all sections of Anthro 101, Botany 101, Econ., 125 and 126, Geology 101, Gov. 100 and 150, Hist. 151, Human Dev. 270, Micro. 140, Phil. 105, Psych. 101, 262, 263, 270, 280, 301, and 302, Soc. 101, 200, 101 and 135. One section of Hist. 150 and Psych. 325 also in. tf10-7

ENTERTAINMENT WANTED

Every Wednesday night at the English Pub-Do your own thing! Share vocal master PA system available! Call Jerry, 549-1260 or Mark, 256-8750. tf10-8

TYPING

Typing - thesis, dissertations, etc. Fast, accurate, have Greek alphabet, math. & chem. symbols. Call 253-5001. tf10-13

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY

Want a part-time or full time job? Running your own business, no door to door, no telephone surveying. Call 253-5847 after 5. tf10-5

SERVICES

Amherst Audio services. Stereo components, tape decks for home or car. 191 No. Pleasant St. 256-8133. tf5-12

Fire Dept. Raising Money

In conjuction with National Fire Prevention Week, Oct. 4th, 8th, the UMass Volunteer Fire Department will be holding an extinguisher sale.

These are small, easy to use dry chemical appliances for use in the home, car, or boat. A table will be set up just outside the Campus Center Bookstore from 9-5 all week. Other sizes and types of extinguishers will be on sale as well as small first aid kits suitable for the car.

The UMVFD which has been in existence for 15 years has received no support from the Student Senate for the last 2 years, and it is by functions such as this that a small amount of money can be obtained to replace worn out uniforms and equipment. At the same time the Department hopes to contribute to fire prevention and safety by placing these devices in the homes and cars of the general public.

Anyone who can not get down to the table because of classes or job committments can place phone orders by calling 546-9264 from 7-9 P.M. during the week of the sale.

Notices

ACTION LAB:
Bus for jail leaves at 6:15 p.m. at Whitmore and Haigis Mall.

BHAGAVAD GITA CLASS:
The true goal of Yoga is God Consciousness. The Bhagavad Gita class Monday, 6 p.m.; Cance House, main lounge; Wednesdays, 7 p.m. Grayson 334. All invited.

CHILDRENS' CENTER DAY CARE
Parents: Do you need day care for your children? A small new full day day care center is opening in Greenfield, 1 min. from Hwy. 91. Call 773-3894 or 774-2071.

CHINESE STUDENTS:
All chinese undergrads interested in joining the Chinese Student Association please give name, address & telephone,class & major to either RSO Mailbox No. 338 (RSO Office at CC basement) or contact Dunne Fong, 316 Gorman, 546-6489 or 546-6487 before Thurs. Oct. 7.

CHRISTIANS:
Josh is coming and he'll be here Wednesday and Thursday.

COLLEGIATE FLYING CLUB:
Ground School at 7:30 p.m., Rm. 162 CC. Bring Exam Guide. Topic AC systems.

COOLIDGE MIDDLE:
Southwest Assembly election to be held tonight from 6-9 p.m. on the 12th floor.

ENGLISH DEPT. UNDERGRAD COMMITTEE MEETING:
Recruitment campaign and newsletter to be discussed. All English majors invited. Monday, 7 p.m., Student faculty lounge in Bartlett Hall lobby.

GERMAN CLUB:
Important meeting this afternoon in CC Rm. 811 at 4 p.m. All interested students welcome. Refreshments served.

HEYMAKERS SQUARE DANCE CLUB:
New lessons for square dancing will be beginning Tuesday. Everyone is invited to attend. There are no obligations just come to see what square dancing is like.

ITALIAN CLUB:
Italian table, Monday 5:30 p.m. Meet at information desk, Concourse level, CC.

JQA UPPER:
Southwest Assembly election to be held tonight from 7-9 p.m. on 19th floor.

NAIADS:
Meeting of all members today at 4:45 and Tuesday at 5. Welcome to new Naiads!

OUTING CLUB:
Monday meeting in Rm. 165 CC. at 6:30. Trips to whites to be discussed. If you plan to go, be there.

UMASS VOLUNTEER FIRE DEPT.:
In conjunction with Fire Prevention week, the UMVFD will be holding a fire extinguisher sale Mon. Fri., 10/4-10/8, outside CC Bookstore, 9-5 daily. Telephone orders will also be accepted 10/4-10/8 from 7-9 p.m. by dialing 546-9264.

LOST:
Soft brown suede zipper key case with IMPORTANT keys. Reads: "Cedar Pt., Ohio", call at 546-5062 or leave in CC lost and found.

Black glasses in Bartlett Aud., Thursday morning after child psych. Call 6-6230.

STUDENT ACTIVITIES DAY:
Come to the Campus Center Concourse level between 9 A.M. and 4 P.M. Thursday, October 7 and find all you need to know about Student Activities. Any organization interested in reserving a table please register at the Program Council Office, Room 101, Campus Center.

Mobe Elects Officers; Confirms Plans Tonight

There will be a Student Mobilization Committee meeting tonight at 8:00 in Franklin Room, Student Union. Final plans will be confirmed, and officers will be elected. All persons wishing to build the fall antiwar offensive are urged to attend tonight.

The last meeting of the SMC was held Wednesday to solidify plans for the October 13 antiwar teach-in to be held at UMass, and to prepare for November 6, the National Day of Peace Action.

Current plans for the teach-in include several showings of the CBS film documentary, The Selling of the Pentagon and a series of speakers. One of the speakers, Dave Scondaras, has done extensive research on the history of Vietnam, and will provide a historical background for the film. Other speakers will concern themselves on different aspects of the war.

Part of the purpose of the teach-in will be to provide information concerning the Nov. 6 Peace Action in Boston. Tickets for the 5 SMC busses to Boston will be on sale at the SMC table starting today, $5.00 per round trip.

The November action will entail participation of groups from New England who will gather in Boston. Antiwar organizations, students, labor support, women's groups, third world, and gay organizations have all pledged their support.

A list of labor union Locals so far committed to the actions is available in the SMC office.

ALL COLLEGIAN REPORTERS AND NEWS DESK PEOPLE SHOULD COME TO A MEETING TONIGHT AT 7:00 IN THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE FOR BEAT ASSIGNMENTS.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

The keynote of Cancer is to preserve and protect special interests, including family and property. Natives of this zodiacal sign harmonize with Taurus, Virgo, Pisces and Scorpio. There is an attraction to Capricorn, but caution must be exercised by Cancer persons in their dealings with Libra and Aries. Where money is concerned, Cancer is likely to benefit from an association with Leo. Some famous persons born under Cancer include Dave Garroway, Jean Kerr and Orson Bean.

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What had been settled may appear to come apart at seams. Full moon position accents personality, marital tie, legal ventures. Whatever you do, consider feelings of family member. Remember birthdays, other anniversaries.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may be invited to closed-circuit demonstration, performance. Key is to keep confidences. Telling everything now would be an error. Much occurs in clandestine manner. There are whispers rather than shouts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Some friends in transit could make special requests. Check names, addresses. Don't take relatives for granted. Child who usually is obedient may display traces of rebelliousness. Be alert, versatile.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You finish. Project, assignment is put aside. Your efforts are judged. Remain dispassionate, objective. Avoid any tendency to whine. Opportunity exists to expand emotional, professional horizons. Grasp it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Too many changes, plans, trips could result in confusion. Bring order out of chaos. Refuse to panic. Those who cajole, threaten are merely testing. Stand tall. Independent attitude brings desired results.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Financial structure may shake: key is to go with tide. Success comes through unorthodox procedures. Avenues seldom explored may hold truitful answers for you. Don't fear the unknown or the unusual.

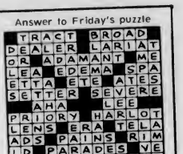
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Diversity. Try more than one method. Obtain hint from Virgo message. Experiment you are not wedded to past. Being progressive now could spell ultimate success. Realize this include Sagittarius in plans.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Movements may be slightly restricted. You are apt to be concerned with hospital, other institution. Check details; be thorough. Patience is your ally. Give logic an equal chance with impluse.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on change, travel opportunity. You are better able to communicate. Member of opposite sex pays meaningful compliment. Friend may act in eccentric manner. Adopt attitude of live and let live.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stress is on how to hurdle obstacles to ultimate goal. Some factors crop up which require special study. You may be asked to contribute money but purpose seems obscured. Be persistent in demand for information.

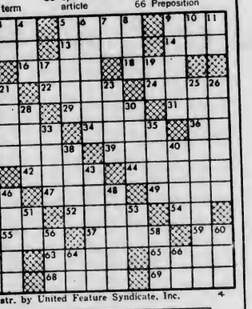
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Surprise calls, messages, visits these are featured. Romantic aura is evident. Don't put too much stock in whispered sweet nothings. Means be realistic about promises. Then you won't be hurt.



PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Heed your own counsel in money affairs. Others may be sincere but where your finances are concerned, seek more than sincerity. You will receive needed support. Stand up for principles.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you never are satisfied with status quo. This applies to personal as well as professional life. It is when events appear to be going smoothly that you seek improvements or get urge to wander. You would not leave proverbial sinking ship. But you would, and do, leave when boredom strikes.

Copyright 1971, Gen. Fea. Corp.



Crossword Puzzle

Answer to Friday's puzzle

ACROSS
1 Things done
5 British streetcar
9 Seed
12 Female student
13 European capital
14 Man's nickname
15 Printer's measure
16 Colorless
18 Hindu cymbals
20 Symbol for tantalum
22 Genus of maples
24 Bark cloth
27 Is mistaken
29 God of love
31 Weight of India
32 Rants
34 Frog
36 A state (abbr.)
37 Worships
39 Visions
41 Spanish for "yes"
42 Girl's name
44 Eagle's nest
45 Comb. form: outside
47 Tardy
49 Army meal
50 Pierce
52 Burrowing animal
54 Conjunction
55 Wager
57 River in Africa
59 Exists
61 Everyone
63 Dillseed
65 Portico
67 Insect
68 Flower
69 Man's nickname

DOWN
1 High card
2 Gainsay
3 Symbol for tellurium
4 Sum up
5 Delineate
6 Man's name
7 Part of "to be"
8 Encountered
9 Man's name
10 Stamp of approval
11 Pronoun
17 Sun god
19 Near
21 Jason's ship
23 Crucifix
25 Authorization
26 Gets up
27 Wipes out
28 Withered
30 Girl's name
33 Trade for money
35 Think
38 Bridge term
40 Region
43 Makes amends
46 Article of furniture
48 Choice part
51 Eskimo
53 Spanish article
56 Sailor (colloq.)
58 Superlative ending
60 Declare
61 Hebrew month
62 French article
64 Negative
66 Preposition

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Snuff in Five Flavors from Mizaur's Mercantile next to Amherst Tower

JV Booters Gain OT Win

By JIM PINSKY

The J.V. soccer team successfully opened its 1971 season with a 3-2 overtime victory against Holyoke C.C. They needed a goal in overtime to subdue their stubborn opponents. The ball spent 90% of the time in the area around the Holyoke goal but seemed to think that was close enough as UMass scored on only 3 of 39 shots.

Holyoke opened the scoring at 14:11 of the first quarter but UMass came back four minutes later when wing Greg Tudryn nailed home a pass by Don Flick to tie the game. UMass's only break of the game came when an infraction occured right in front of the Holyoke goal. Flick put the penalty shot in unassisted to give UMass the lead.

The second quarter was frustrating as Holyoke's goalie, Kevin Michaud, made three unbelievable diving saves and did a great job in general as Massachusetts kept the pressure on the total period not allowing Holyoke a single shot.

The third period was a carbon copy of the second except Holyoke did get a few shots off and ironically they scored when a shot deflected of a UMass defensive player at the 5:28 mark to tie the game. That was all the scoring for the second half as UMass chipped away on countless shots but couldn't increase their total number of goals.

With thirty seconds left in regulation a UMass shot hit the crossbar and again goalie Michaud made a great save on the rebound to send the game into overtime. The overtime started disasterously as halfback Steve Dec injured his knee in a collision with a Holyoke player. When play resumed it didn't take long before Tudryn took a pass from Tony King and popped it into the upper right hand corner of the goal. The defense held and the final score was 3-2.

Following the game Coach David Jekanowski said, "I've never seen a game like that. The ball was right around the edge of their goal 90% of the time yet we couldn't score. We didn't play that badly, it was just that we didn't get any breaks. The defense played well, those two goals were flukes. I was pleased with the way the team played."

Pats Walloped By Colts

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP)—The Baltimore Colts sent Tom Matte and rookie Don Nottingham crashing for first period touchdowns and Jim O'Brien added three field-goals Sunday in a 23-3 National Football League romp over the New England Patriots.

Baltimore's tough defense led by Bubba Smith applied heavy pressure on rookie quarterback Jim Plunkett and the only patriots score was Charlie Gogolak's 34-yard field goal late in the opening half.

Veteran Earl Morrall, continuing to start at quarterback ahead of Johnny Unitas, picked apart New England's defense, completing 13 of 17 passes for 162 yards. However, he had two tosses intercepted.

With running star Norm Bulaich sidelined with a knee injury, Matte and Nottingham shared the heavy workload. Matte, an 11-year veteran carried 14 times for 47 yards and caught four passes for 38 yards. Nottingham carried 16 times for 49 yards.

Dallas Upset By Redskins

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) - Washington shocked Dallas on Charley Harraway's 57-yard touchdown gallop and a 50-yard scoring bomb to Roy Jefferson Sunday, giving the Redskins a 20-16 victory over the Cowboys and sole possession of first place in the National Football Conference's eastern division.

It marked the first time Washington had won its first three regular season games since 1947.

Curt Knight kicked field goals of 25 and 32 yards as the salty Washington defense withstood a late Cowboy rally. Harraway burst over left tackle on Washington's third offensive play and sailed down the left sideline to give the Redskins a quick 7-0 lead at 11:45 in the first quarter.

Mike Clark kicked field goals of 22, 9 and 27 yards as Washington led 14-9 at halftime.

Knight kicked field goals of 25 and 32 yards in the second half and a rout appeared in the making until Roger Staubach replaced starting Cowboys quarterback Craig Morton in the fourth period. Staubach drove the Cowboys 69 yards in nine plays, capped by Calvin Hill's one-yard touchdown run with 3:08 left.

It was Dallas' first loss this season after six preseason victories and two in the regular season. It was only the Cowboy's second loss in the last 17 games.

Other NFL Scores

Los Angeles	17
Chicago	3
New York Giants	21
St. Louis	20
San Francisco	31
Philadelphia	3
New Orleans	13
Houston	13
Detroit	41
Atlanta	38
New York Jets	14
Miami	10

Termpapers Unlimited

"WE GIVE RESULTS"
297 Huntington Ave.
Boston, Mass. 02115
(617) 267-3000

Cevert Takes Grand Prix

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) - Francois Cevert, a 27-year-old extrovert from France, passed team mate Jackie Stewart on the 13th lap Sunday and went on to win the United States Grand Prix for Formula 1 cars.

The curly-haired Cevert, in only his second year on the world circuit, finished about 40 seconds ahead of Jo Siffert of Switzerland. Ronnie Peterson of Sweden was third, Howden Ganley of New Zealand was fourth and Stewart fifth. Clay Regazzoni of Switzerland came in sixth despite an early pit stop that took him out of contention.

The race, ran in almost perfect weather after a dense fog that didn't clear until midday, drew a crowd estimated by police in excess of 100,000. They said it was a record for this event.

Cevert, son of a Parisian jeweler, collected $50,000 from the record $267,000 purse. Siffert was paid $20,000 and Peterson $12,000.

Cevert, who had started fifth on the grid, overhauled pole-sitter Stewart as they roared down the backstretch during their 13th circuit of the new 3.377-mile Watkins Glen Grand Prix circuit. He never was in danger of losing the lead, although Belgian Jackie Ickx kept his Ferrari in contention until forced into a late pit stop.

Stewart, who added two points to his total toward the world driving championship, already had clinched the Grand Prix title with six wins before coming to the Glen. Peterson had clinched second place.

Cevert covered the 199 miles distance at an average speed of 115.092 miles per hour.

Ickx, who trailed Cevert by only 3 seconds when he was forced to pit, turned the fastest lap of the race-117.495 miles per hour-and received a bonus of $5,000.

Two American hotshots, Mario Andretti and Mark Donohue, had qualified to start in the 29 car field. But Andretti had to withdraw his Ferrari in order to compete in a 300-mile USAC championship race at Trenton. His car was scratched and Skip Barber of Carlisle, Mass., was added to the field.

Donohue, who also had a commitment at Trenton, turned his McLaren M16 over to Britisher David Hobbs, who finished well back in the pack.

Pirates Even Series With SF

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Bob Robertson rocketed three home runs and Pittsburgh clawed six San Francisco pitchers for 15 hits Sunday, ripping the Giants 9-4 and squaring the National League championship playoff series at one game apiece.

The red-haired first baseman was ending a month-long dry spell. He slugged 26 homers during the regular season, but had not connected since August 25.

The Giants, riding an emotional high after Saturday's opening game victory, nicked Pirate starter Dock Ellis for a run in the first on Willie Mays RBI double.

In the second, Pittsburgh tied it on Robertson's double and a single by Manny Sanguillen, but hits by Chris Speier and Ken Henderson restored the Giants' edge in the bottom half of the inning.

It stayed 2-1 until the fourth when Robertson, leading off lofted a long fly to right field. Dave Kingman, playing in place of injured Bobby Bonds reached over the eight foot-high fence but the ball glanced out of his glove for a home run, tying the score.

Then the Pirates took the lead when Manny Sanguillen singled, stole second and rode home on Jackie Hernandez hit.

Pittsburgh added another run in the fifth when Gene Clines who had only one home run during the regular season, socked a shot over the left field wall to make it 4-2.

X-C Finish Tight

By TOM DERDERIAN

A record number of runners completed the weekly cross country run held Sunday through the grasslands and tree farms to the west of campus. Forty-five runners took off at 4 o'clock, 44 men and one woman. Mike Conti and UMass graduate student Dick Fahey, formerly a Holy Cross distance runner finished in the same, record, time of 15:00 with Conti ahead by just a foot. Last week's winner Pete Stagz improved his time, but finished third. He completed a 10 mile race in Pittsfield on Saturday.

The only woman Charlotte Lettis also improved her time and also lost places finishing 18th instead of 12th. After the race she said she felt disappointed that no other women came to run.

These races are sponsored and officiated by members of the Varsity Cross-Country team. Some of the members expressed pleasure that the race has grown since only a half dozen men and women ran two years ago when the program was started.

The top runners and their times. 45 starters, 45 finishers.

1. Mike Conti	15:00
2. Dick Fahey	15:00
3. Pete Stasz	15:27
4. Brad Kron	15:33
5. Wayne Lucas	15:38
6. Ken Kimball	15:53
7. Ed Calabrese	16:11
8. Larry LaCroix	16:35
9. Noel Saunders	16:42
10. Steve Libby	16:46
11. Robert Faudette	16:55
12. Dave McColl	16:56
13. Dave Sarrette	16:57
14. James Linehan	17:00
15. John Lave	17:08
16. Mike Priestly	17:09
17. Charlotte Lettis	17:11

DASHING Doug O'Connell, Redman top dog grunts along at the midpoint of Saturday's X-C run unsuccessfully chasing Northeastern's finest providing the only highlight for an otherwise dismal meet. (MDC photo by Charlotte Lettis)

FRATERNITY RUSH

FRATERNITY	ADDRESS	PUBLIC PHONE
Alpha Tau Gamma (ΑΤΓ)	375 North Pleasant St.	253-9239
Beta Kappa Phi (ΒΚΦ)	401 North Pleasant St.	545-0210
Delta Chi (Δ X)	314 Lincoln Ave.	253-9076
Kappa Sigma (ΚΣ)	70 Butterfield Terrace	253-9921
Lambda Chi Alpha ΔΧΑ)	374 North Pleasant St.	256-6846
Phi Mu Delta (ΦΜD)	Fraternity/Sorority Park	253-9034 549-0670
Phi Sigma Kappa (ΦΣΚ)	510 North Pleasant St.	256-6863
Pi Lambda Phi (ΤΤΔΦ)	14 Elm St.	253-3176
Sigma Alpha Epsilon (ΣΑΕ)	118 Sunset Ave.	256-6815
Sigma Alpha Mu (ΣΑΜ)	387 North Pleasant St.	253-9957
Sigma Phi Epsilon (ΣΦΕ)	9 Chestnut St.	253-9227 253-9212
Tau Epsilon Phi (ΤΕΦ)	418 North Pleasant St.	253-9971
Theta Chi (ΘX)	496 North Pleasant St.	256-6851
Phi Sigma Delta of Zeta Beta Tau (ΦΣD of ZBT)	358 North Pleasant St.	253-9031
Zeta Nu (ZN)	336 North Pleasant St.	253-9232

Monday, October 4		Tuesday, October 5		Wednesday, October 6		Thursday, October 7
ΣΦΕ	(7:00)	ΦMD	(8-10)	ΣΦΕ	(7-9)	ΘX	(9:30)
KE	(7:00)	ΔX	(9:00)	ΔΧΑ	(8:00)	ΤΤΑΦ	(8:00-10:00)
TEO	(7:00)	ΦΣΔ of ZBT	(9:00-10:30)	*ΔΧ	(8:00)
OEΔ of ZBT	(7:30-10:00)	OX	(9:30)	ΚΣ	(9:00)
ΤΤΑΟ	(8:00-10:00)	ΛΧΑ	(9:30)
ZN	(8:00-10:00)
Λ ΧΑ	(8:30)
ΦΕΚ	(8:30)
*ΑΤΤ	(8:00)

*Stockbridge only *Coffee House

Soccer Team Escapes with Tie

By STEVE FERBER

It was one of those games that gets you really psyched up. One of those times when you're on the edge of your seat, with the players on the bench all standing, and everyone is waiting for something to happen, but it never did, as UMass tied Boston University Friday night at Nickerson Field in Boston.

Unlike most scoreless games, this one was anything but dull. Despite the fact that the Redmen were clear favorites before game time, one would never have known it after the 98 minute battle, for B.U. undoubtedly felt that they had been robbed of a victory, and UMass had to feel somewhat fortunate to escape with a tie.

As the Redmen chalked up their third consecutive shutout, the Redman defense got its most intensive workout thus far this season. While the Redman offense was warming up in quarters one, two and three the defense was scrambling, and scrambling well as goalie John Kiah did a tremendous job in snuffing out the numerous B.U. opportunities.

Reverting back to their preseason play, UMass began very very slowly, and the first quarter "adjustment period" was just that, as the astroturf field produced a roll to which the Redmen booters were quite unaccustomed.

Not until the fourth quarter did UMass look like the team that faced Boston College last Tuesday, but even then their pressure went for naught.

BU., on the other hand, mounted an attack that kept Kiah busy all game long, and Kiah responded to the challenge tremendously. The first test came when a B.U. forward moved in on the left side, only to hit the cross-bar and be denied. But that was the first of many, perhaps five shots, that were to hit one of the side posts, or the cross-bar and rebound out.

After the first quarter indirect kicks were B.U.'s business, having been awarded three within a matter of minutes, deep in Redman territory. In addition to indirects were thrown-ins, as B.U.'s throw-in specialist, Al Schisano, sent balls right in front of the goal area from the sidelines, giving the B.U. forwards plenty of chances, and giving goalie Kiah plenty of trouble.

After 44 minutes, shots on goal read: B.U. 9 UMass 5, and the trend continued into the second half. Then all of a sudden both offenses started to move, and both goalie's found themselves in the midst of scrambles, corner kicks, and indirects.

UMass' closest chance of the game came when Augie Calhieno let go one of his corner kicks. Rebounding out, Gary Hart had the good shot, but couldn't find the handle, and by the boards when the goal opportunity.

B.U.'s most frustrating moment came with less than 12 minutes to go. They watched their linemen send the ball towards the left corner when all of a sudden Kiah flew out from his position; parellel to the ground he knocked the ball down, fell on it, and kicked it out of the defensive zone.

Kiah indeed was a busy man, as his good night's work consisted of over 20 saves. And as Kiah worked, the B.U. bench stayed in a frenzy as they rose and fell at each opportunity, getting more and more frustrated as the double overtime period ran out.

For the last quarter both squads were on their feet, as were many of the fans. All were waiting for someone to crack the ice, but solid it stayed, and UMass came home with their third straight shutout, and a 2-0-1 record.

Coach Berryman traced the Redmen's problems to that of hustle. "We were relaxing too much and hanging back," said Berryman, "we just weren't getting to the ball, and every time a ball was up for grabs a B.U. player was there first."

How much can be blamed on the astroturf field is tough to judge, but undoubtedly this new surface gave UMass a bundle of troubles. Now with a week layoff the Redmen can get ready for their third Yankee Conference opponents UConn, and will have seven days to round that offensive punch back into shape.

Runners Beaten

By JAY NESTOR

Saturday was a trying day for the UMass harriers as they were soundly beaten by a very strong Northeastern unit and barely scraped by a surprising St. John's team.

The Huskies put their top five men within the first ten positions, and their overall depth was examplified at the fact that they left three fine performers at home to rest through this meet.

Bill Rowe and Bruce Butterworth, both of Northeastern, held off the closing charge of Redman Doug O'Connell to capture the individual honors. Closely following O'Connell was Huskie Joe Crowly. This combination of first, second, and fourth places sewed the race up for NU.

The Redmen of St. John's garnered the next two positions and were followed by UMass freshman Bill Gillin in seventh place. This was Gillin's first taste at collegiate and varsity action to which he responded brilliantly. If his performance is any indication of future happenings, he is headed for a stellar running career here at UMass.

Tom Dederian, Bob Sullivan, and Peter Crisci rounded off the Redman scoring with eleventh, twelfth, and fifteenth positions respectively. Chris Chambers and Don Dunsky were close behind Crisci to top off the first seven Redman finishers. Chambers and Dunsky are credited with holding off Bob Devlin of St. John's, thus securing second place for the Redmen and preventing St. Johns from scoring an upset victory over UMass. The final score was NU-26, UMass-48, and St. Johns-50.

Overall, Soph Doug O'Connell established a domineering top man position on the cross country team. He exhibited a half a minute difference between himself and Bill Gillin, the second UMass finisher. The team split was poor sixty nine seconds, but Coach O'Brien was not disheartened. He pointed out that last year's team had the same early season problem, but corrected itself as the season went on.

Sullivan, Crisci and Dunsky look to be in fine shape and should really begin to produce as the season progresses. Veteran Dederian returned to action after a year's absence and seems to be ready to resume his UMass running career.

Perfect race conditions prevailed as the harriers christened the new cross country course, which is, by the way, a perfect course for spectators since the runners can be viewed for some time from a vantage point in the Orchards.

* * *

The freshman race produced a surprise winner as well as a fine victory for the little Redmen. Randy Thomas, a native of Fitchburg, took top honors in his first race in two years. He set the early pace and never relinquished the lead, building his margin steadily until the finish.

St. Johns grabbed the next two positions followed by a Huskie. Bruce MacLean, Paul Albini, and Steve Brown capped the freshman victory as they took the fifth, sixth, and seventh places.

Devon Croft, Rick Vose, and Tom Wilson completed the top seven for UMass. The final stood at UMass-28, St. John's-38, and NU-69.

The harriers travel to Franklin Park in Boston, Tues., to run powerful Harvard and equally tough Providence in a highly competitive tri-meet. This second meet should sharpen up the team to realize how far it can go.

Oakland Blue; O's Win 5-3

BALTIMORE (AP) - Paul Blair's two-run double in the seventh inning put the finishing touches on a four-run Baltimore uprising and Vida Blue's attempt to still the Orioles' bats as the defending world champions belted the Oakland A's 5-3 Sunday in the opening game of the American League playoffs.

Blue, the moody, silent lefthander whose confidence had been questioned prior to the opener, breezed into the seventh inning with a three-hitter and a 3-1 lead, raising the specter of the Orioles' first defeat in playoff history.

But the world champions, winners of all six of their previous playoff games over two season, struck decisively in their half of the seventh and took a 1-0 lead in the best-of-five series to determine the American League representatives in the World Series.

Frank Robinson, who had struck out twice previously, opened the Baltimore seventh with a walk, and one out later Brooks Robinson singled him to second. But Blue bore down and got Andy Etchebarren for the second out on a fly to right that enabled Frank Robinson to move to third.

Mark Belanger, the Orioles' shortstop, then singled to center, scoring Frank Robinson, and Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver went to his bench, sending up reserve outfielder Curt Motton to pinch hit for starter Dave McNally.

Motton, a .189 hitter during the season, lashed a liner to the left field corner that drove in Brooks Robinson with the tying run. Jim Palmer went in to run for Motton, and scored behind Belanger when Blair stroke a liner down the third base line for two runs and a 5-3 lead that put it out of the A's reach.

Blue, a 24-game winner with just seven of those victories after the All-Star Game, finished the inning but was subjected to derision in absentia when Roland Fingers went to the mound for the A's in the eighth.

As Fingers walked slowly to the mound, the crowd of 42,000, some 10,000 under capacity, howled "We want Blue, we want Blue." But there was no more Blue to be had. The Orioles had taken him as they extended a season-ending winning streak to 12.

The A's, who appeared to have game No. 1 tucked away behind Blue, now will send Jim "Catfish" Hunter against Baltimore's Mike Cuellar in the second game of the playoffs here Monday before the scene switches to Oakland for the resumption of the series Tuesday.

Bengals Gamble Fails; Packers Win

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) - Rookie John Brockington sparked a powerful ground attack with 120 yards in 18 carries and Lou Michaels kicked two field goals, including a decisive 14-yarder with 8:45 left, to lead the Green Bay Packers to a 20-17 National Football League victory over the Cincinnati Bengals Sunday.

Rookie quarterback Ken Anderson, replacing injured Virgil Carter, almost pulled the game out when his five-yard touchdown pass to Eric Crabtree lifted the Bengals to within 20-17 with four minutes left.

Fletcher Smith recovered a Dave Hampton fumble at the Packer 15 on the next play and Anderson scrambled seven yards to a fourth down and two situation at the seven. Cincinnati sent its field goal unit on the field, then pulled it off and decided to try for the first down. Willie Wood and Ken Ellis then nailed Anderson for no gain with two minutes left.

Carter, the American Conference's leading passer suffered a shoulder separation in the second quarter. Cincinnati safety Ken Dyer was taken to St. Mary's Hospital, Green Bay, with what was described as a contusion of the spinal cord at the neck suffered on the game's second play.

Green Bay took a 3-0 lead when Michaels kicked a 15-yard field goal after Hampton had returned the opening kickoff 80 yards to the Bengal 25. The Packers went 63 yards in five plays, including a 32-yard Scott Hunter to Carroll Dalpass, to a four yard touchdown run by Donny Anderson to make it 10-0 at the half.

Horst Muhlmann got Cincinnati on the board with a 26-yard field goal set up by Anderson's 44-yard pass to Bob Trumpy in the third quarter. The Bengals gained a 10-10 tie moments later when Lemar Parrish intercepted a Hunter pass and raced 65 yards for a touchdown.

The Packers took a 17-10 lead on the first play of the final quarter when Hunter passed 19 yards to Rich McGeorge for a touchdown.

BOB SULLIVAN bashes his way through the high grass of the orchards pursued by Carns of NorthEastern and Bill Gillin of UMass. Sullivan was fourth man Saturday and Gillin 2nd for UMass. (MDC Photo - Charlton)

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather
Make up your own.

VOLUME XCIX, ISSUE 20 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS TUESDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1971

Wood: No Comment So Far, Will Speak Today In Ballroom

WOOD AND HEALEY-President Wood spoke in closed sessions with several groups yesterday and will address a special University Convocation today at 4 p.m. Healey has expressed the Board of Trustees' appreciation to Chancellor Tippo for his service to the campus. See page two for his letter. (Photo by Gib Fullerton)

By ANNE STADNICKI

President Robert C. Wood met yesterday in closed sessions on the UMass campus with the Council of Deans, the Executive Committee of the Student Senate and the Committee of Concern established by the Faculty Senate at its meeting last week. He will address a University Convocation this afternoon at 4 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom on general matters of University administration and development.

Wood has not released his official reaction to Chancellor Tippo's resignation. He has not yet commented on the statement from the Committee of concern on the disposition of non-state funds, either. He may speak on these topics at this afternoon's convocation.

Wood presented what he termed his side of the story in light of Chancellor Oswald Tippo's resignation, according to an informed source. Wood said he was speaking to the groups because "being open" was the best possible way to stop a crisis.

Chairman of the UMass Board of Trustees, Joseph P. Healey, has accepted Chancellor Tippo's resignation, according to Wood. He said the Board's executive committee met early yesterday to pass a motion concerning the situation the resignation has created. The recommendation will remain confidential, however, until the Trustees meet Thursday in Lenox. The MDC's source said the executive committee will specify just when Tippo's resignation will be accepted, and who will govern the Amherst campus once it has been accepted.

See Faculty Senate Story, page two

Outlining the procedure he expected for selection of a new chancellor, Wood said it would be similar to the process by which he had been selected for the post of UMass President, but more campus-oriented. There will probably be two levels of committees, he speculated. One would be a search committee, which would probably be made up of students, faculty and administrators from Amherst, and the other would be a review committee on the Trustee level, which would review the recommendations coming from the search committee's study of applicants.

On the subject of rumored disputes between Chancellor Tippo and himself, Wood was reported to have said there is "no personal animosity" between them. He said it is "a question of principles".

"It's really an issue of how one builds up a University-wide system especially in the 'flagship'", Wood explained.

He views his job as "executive" rather than "secretarial". The executive should "take charge", he should "set the direction" of the University, according to Wood. He said centralized budget action, such as the proposed trust fund transfer, is a part of his executive role.

Wood told one of the closed sessions that he wants a chancellor who will represent his campus to the President. He was reported to have said that the chancellor should articulate the campus' needs to the President and from there it is his (Wood's) responsibility.

The MDC's source said Wood pointed out the dispute over "policy" and "operation" as the difference between Chancellor Tippo and himself. Wood was reported to have said that "policy" is a function of the President and Trustees of the University, while "operation" is the responsibility of the individual campus, therefore the chancellor.

Tippo's Letter And Healey's Reply on page two

Wood praised the new budget procedures and said they make the process relatively clear, especially compared to the former budget procedure. He said in the past it was difficult to tell what funds went for what part of the budget. One of the reasons he gave for not approving the F'72 budget last week was that more information was needed on one specific account.

That trust funds that have always been given to the Amherst campus don't belong to the University, but to the Trustees and therefore should be controlled by the systems office, was Wood's contention, according to the MDC's source. He is in direct disagreement with Chancellor Tippo in this area. Chancellor Tippo's second point in his July 26, 1971 letter to Wood read: "Trust fund interest be allocated to the campus which produces the trust fund, except that reasonable amounts be transferred to the President's office (with the further understanding that all campuses share in this responsibility)".

Chancellor Tippo also made the point in his letter that "the land-grant, Bankhead Jones, Morrill-Nelson funds continue to be budgeted by the Amherst campus in recognition of its historic land-grant functions and responsibilities". Wood was reported to have said that because the University is only peripherally a land grant institution, historic grants are not relevant.

Wood will presumably clarify his position at the convocation in the ballroom this afternoon.

Students Feel Tippo Is Sincere

By STEPHAN SOSNICKI
and
SUSAN STADNICKI

The student reaction to Chancellor Tippo's resignation was, for the most part, one of admiration, as evidenced by a MDC survey taken yesterday.

Most students agreed that Tippo is a sincere and honest man, and they felt, as one student put it "He's a good man who cares about what happens to the Amherst Campus. The consensus is that Tippo will follow through with his resignation and the University will suffer severely for it.

One student commented that Tippo's resignation should come as no surprise and wonders how he stood alone for so long. "He's taken a lot from a lot of people", the student said. Another student commented that it was curious that President Wood would go so far as to take $850,000 from the Amherst Campus funds since the Boston Branch is much smaller and basically a commuters' school.

The general attitude toward Wood and his position is that he will stand firm and accept Tippo's resignation. They used phrases such as "bullheaded politician", and a "hard man" to describe him. None felt he would back down. He was accused of not being concerned with the Amherst campus and trying to create an urban University here.

Since students feel that Tippo's resignation is valid and will be accepted by President Wood, the question arises "Who will take his place?" The general attitude is that as students they are not qualified or well enough informed to conjecture but they feel that students should have a good proportion of say in the matter. One idea was to have a committee of nine people-three students, in authority such as Senate or SUG Board members, Three faculty members, and three members from the Board of Trustees. This committee would choose the new Chancellor. "One thing we don't need is token representation," commented another student.

On The Inside:

● Afro Am Statement On Tippo
See page three

● Thieu Victorious
See page four

● Fac-Sen On Tippo
See page two

Faculty-Senate Meets Over Tippo Action

By BOB CALLAHAN

The Faculty Senate Committee of Concern formulated a statement of principles on the disposition of non-state funds after it met in a special session yesterday morning.

The statement which has not yet been released officially, was in an effort "to avoid a repetition of the unfortunate and unnecessary events which led to the resignation of Chancellor Oswald Tippo", in the words draft.

The committee, which first drafted the statement Friday, urged that the functions of the central office and the constituent units of the University be clearly outlined. They also asked for the greatest possible degree of the autonomy for the units within the general policies developed by the trustees and the central administration.

The second major point of the early morning meeting concerned Senate consultation on all important matters. The committee urged that there be continuous and full consultation to the Senates and their committees on all important matters, before final decisions are taken in decision-making processes.

The Committee of Concern wrote in its first draft of the statement that "the Senates of the Campus are deeply concerned with the budgetary process." Although this is only one of their concerns, they feel that the disposition of non-state funds is of immediate concern.

A reliable source told the Collegian that this budget issue is a symptom of the real problem which is President Wood's consolidation of authority at the systems office level. In concluding he said, "Even if we win the battle of the budget, we've lost the war because we've lost Chancellor Tippo."

The group stated that the non-state funds have been crucial to the development and support of new quality programs essential to achieving excellence. "Their re-allocation within the system is a matter of grave concern," the committee said.

Along with the two previously mentioned statements arrived upon at the meeting, the committee hopefully with student support, urged the Board of Trustees to outline the principles by which non-state funds shall be allocated.

The Committee of Concern urged that non-state funds be allocated to the campus which is responsible for generating the funds, or for which gifts or grants of funds were clearly intended.

The group also urged that changes in allocations shall be made with sufficient advance notice so that necessary changes in programs which they support can be made.

The special report of the Committee of Concern asked for full consultation of all the elements within the system, including the faculty and student senates, before these and other funds are allocated.

In the closing part of the report, the body urged that the present proposed re-allocations be postponed for this year, in order that a full study may be made of the impact of any possible re-allocation.

Tippo Mum On Other Resignations

Chancellor Oswald Tippo, who resigned from the University Friday, yesterday said that he has not acted on the resignations of special assistant David Clay, and vice-chancellors Robert W. Gluckstern and Randolph W. Bromery.

Clay and vice-chancellor for administrative affairs Robert W. Gluckstern and vice-chancellor for student affairs Randolph W. Bromery resigned in the wake of Tippo's action. The Chancellor said that he hoped the officials would reconsider their action.

Healey's Statement

Chairman Joseph P. Healeyof the UMass Board of Trustees announced that he had met yesterday with the Board's Executive Committee regarding the letter of resignation that he received from Chancellor Oswald Tippo of the Amherst campus.

Healey said that the committee adopted a recommendation respecting the Chancellor's request which would be presented to the full Board of Trustees at the meeting at Lenox which has now been rescheduled for Thursday, Oct. 7, at 2 p.m.

The Official Letters

September 30, 1971

Mr. Joseph P. Healey
Chairman, Board of Trustees
University of Massachusetts
Middlesex Bank, N.A.
431 Broadway
Everett, Massachusetts 02149

Dear Joe:

I write to submit my resignation as Chancellor, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, effective September 1, 1972 or earlier if the Board wishes. It is my hope that I be granted sabbatical leave for one semester after which it is my wish to take up duties as professor of Botany.

I want to take this opportunity to thank you personally and the Board of Trustees for the support and encouragement you have extended to me since I came to Amherst in 1954.

Sincerely yours,

Oswald Tippo
Chancellor

cc. President R.C. Wood

***

October 4, 1971

Dr. Oswald Tippo
Chancellor, University of Massachusetts Amherst
Whitmore Administration Building
Amherst, Massachusetts 01002

Dear Oz:

This will acknowledge receipt of your letter of resignation as Chancellor, University of Massachusetts Amherst. I shall submit the letter to the meeting of the Board of Trustees on October 7.

On behalf of all the Trustees I wish to convey to you our deep appreciation for your outstanding contributions to the academic excellence of the University of Massachusetts.

Yours sincerely,

Joseph P. Healey
Chairman

Town Debates New Sewage Treatment Facility

By CHARLES BERKOW

A special Amherst Town Meeting was held last night at the Amherst Regional Junior High School. In early action, the Town Meeting heard reports from the Town Manager Allen Torrey

Traffic Circulation Committee, from Town Manager Allen Torrey about a proposed new sewage treatment facility and from the Amherst School Committee.

Mrs. Nancy Eddy, Chairman o the Traffic Circulation Committee, talked about negotiations between the committee and the Mass. Department of Public Works. The DPW approved, and agreed to construct with state and federal funds, a proposed bypass to North Pleasant Street where it goes through the UMass campus. Under the proposal, North Pleasant Street would be closed to traffic where it is on the UMass campus. When the total project is completed, estimated at about 8 years from now, Amherst would turn over the title of that portion of the road to UMass. Final details of the bypass are not yet worked out, and the committee will continue to serve as it has in the past.

The meeting also heard the preliminary report on a proposed waste water treatment plant. The plant would cost about $6.3 million, 80% of which would be paid by state and federal funds. The plant would provide secondary treatment of sewage wastes, thus reducing pollution in the Connecticut River. The proposal will be studied for another year to determine how it could best meet Amherst's needs.

Later, the Meeting voted to establish a Redevelopment Authority to look into proposed redevelopment of the Center School Complex.

This was the first meeting served by new Town Clerk, Mrs. Estelle Matusko.

At the time of the Collegian deadline, the Meeting was hearing

Town Moderator William Field

a proposal to acquire 2 pieces of land in East Amherst for school purposes.

MDC
NEWS HOTLINE
5-2550

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN are on the second floor of the Student Union on the University campus, zip code 01002. Phones are 545-2550 (news), 545-0344 (sports), and 549-1311 (editor).

Second-class postage paid at Amherst, the DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes five times weekly Monday through Friday during the academic year except during vacation and exam periods, three or four times a week following a vacation or exam period or when a holiday falls within a week. Accepted for mailing under the authority of the act of March 3, 1879 as amended by the act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester, $10.00 per year.

Senate Vote Snafu Cleared Up

By HUGH OWEN

Student Senate elections will finally be held this Thursday after a week's delay.

According to Bill Spin, who is organizing the elections, there were two reasons why the elections were postponed. The first was that the initial phases of the election procedures were fouled up due to disorder in the Senate. Subsequently not many people knew the procedure to run for a Senate seat.

After a week's delay, things are now going fine and the increase in applications, says Spin, is overwhelming. Before the delay only thirteen commuters applied for thirty open seats. Now there are forty commuters running for the Senate.

Voting for the dorm students will be from 6-9 P.M. in the main lobby or lounge of the dorms. One hundred and forty-five dorm students are running to fill approximately one hundred seats.

Commuters will be able to vote from 9 A.M.-5 P.M. Thursday. A booth will be set up in front of the Campus Bookstore for all commuters to cast their ballots. Fraternity and Sorority members will also vote in front of the bookstore but on a ballot separate from the commuter's.

Also at the commuter voting tables sheets will be passed out to students in an attempt to find out just how many are interested in registering to vote in Amherst. If you wish to vote in Amherst go down and find out what it's all about.

MDC
Classifieds
Pay

TONIGHT
COMPARATIVE LITERATURE FILM SERIES
presents
PHAEDRA
with Melina Mercouri and Anthony Perkins at 8 and 10 in Thompson 104 single tickets $.75 at the door. Season tickets, $3.00 available

PROTEST
HIGH HOTEL RATES IN NEW YORK CITY
Stay at the world-famous Hotel Roosevelt for just $10 A DAY SINGLE
$15.00 Double
$ 3.00 for 3rd person in room
Columbus Day - Reserve now for a gala 3-Day Holiday weekend.
Get into it on the East Side, the best location in the city. You're within walking distance of famous shops, boutiques, popular East Side pubs, the U.N., the Main Library, Museums and those great little restaurants from every country in the world.
The Roosevelt HOTEL
For reservations call FREE
800-522-6449 New York State
800-221-2690 All other States
Madison Avenue & 45th Street
New York, N.Y. 10017
A REALTY HOTEL

New Social Action Group Meets

Joe got his head together last night. He moved from the second to the third consciousness level. Volunteer staff people for the Westfield Detention Center got into the nitty gritty of juvenile delinquency and the idea of institutional reform.

"Joe" (Juvenile Opportunities Extension) is the name of a new RSO group that will involve itself with the kids held at the Westfield Detention Center. Last night, the third of a series of organizational meetings was held in the Campus Center.

Cyndi Dunbar, the president of JOE, described the past few weeks as being a little strange but exciting. She said that, "many good people moved JOE along from a group of interested bodies to a point where these individuals were actually making trips to the detention center to get the feel of the place and the kids there. People just seemed to exchange names and phone numbers and the next thing you knew they were knocking at the door."

Last night's meeting centered around the first impressions people got at the detention center. The impressions varied with the times people went down. Sometimes it was beautiful considering the starkness of the place while other times the detention center seemed ready to explode. Much of this was attributed to the tensions in Springfield over the past few weeks.

While people were getting it together-more or less figuring the best and most productive approach in helping some kid in trouble some pretty hard facts were brought out. Much more than was expected will be resting on the individuals involved. It seems that the Commonwealth in its wisdom spends approximately 7¢ per kid at the detention center for education. Again the lack of material and financial resources will be facing the goodwill of a group of UMie's.

This doesn't seem to phase Cyndi Dunbar. "What the fuck," she says, "We've come this far and we'll just see how far we can go." JOE over the past few weeks has received some help in becoming established from the Community Action Foundation the largest community service group on campus, however JOE is now on its own.

Anyone interested in working with juvenile delinquents, specifically at the Westfield Detention Center should either call Cyndi Dunbar at 253-9353 or drop JOE a line. His address is RSO #319, Campus Center, UMass.

"Transportation to Westfield remains as the major problem, but still people are going to the detention center with various activities in mind from candle making to guitar lessons," says President of JOE Cyndi Dunbar.

Sorority Sing In New Hatch

Listen to the pitch pipe, sweeties, smile a lot and put on your hats--it's time for the Soroty Sing In in the New Hatch. A splendid time was had by all at this gathering of all those Sweethearts of Sigma Chi.

Chancellor Tippo

House Hunting In Amherst

By MDC STAFF

What do you do when you've just resigned as the Chancellor of a huge university? Well, if you're Oswald Tippo you go out and look for a new house.

Yesterday when any number of reporters and University people were wondering where the Chancellor was; when all the Whitmore secretaries would say is that he is "probably at some sort of meeting", Oswald Tippo was quietly making the transition from harried administrator to befuddled professor by "spending a couple of hours looking at houses."

Tippo now resides in the official University residence for chancellors on top of Orchard Hill. Now that his resignation is in and accepted, the more practical things in life, like buying a house, are on Dr. Tippo's mind.

Tippo said in a brief discussion last night that he won't be making any long statements explaining or justifying his resignation.

"It is a closed chapter as far as I am concerned," said Tippo of all the worries and trials of his chancellorship here at UMass.

"I don't see any particular need added.

Chancellor Tippo is looking forward to returning to teaching and has expressed a particular desire to teach introductory level Botany courses.

Despite the speculation which surrounds his surprise move, from all one can observe of Chancellor Tippo, he is glad to be out of the administrative rat-race.

"Maybe I'll grow a beard," said Tippo.

STUDENT SENATE ELECTIONS will be held on
Thurs., Oct. 7
University Store (in front) — 9 a.m.-5 p.m.
(sororities, fraternities, commuters)
Dormitory Lobbies — 6-9 p.m.
ID's required for voting

Afro-Am.'s Statement On Tippo Action

It was with great surprise and genuine dismay that we learned of the resignation of Chancellor Tippo, along with several members of his administration, from the leadership of the Amherst campus.

If, during this period, this campus has taken large and important strides towards ending the provincialism and racist exclusiveness that characterized the first 100 years of its existence, and we believe that it has, this is very largely due to the vision, influence and leadership of Chancellor Oswald Tippo. That, during this period of transition, this campus has been spared any serious outbreak of racial conflict and violent confrontation is again largely due to Chancellor Tippo's reasonable and enlightened approach to critical situations.

Traditionally, relations between representatives of the white establishment and the black community have been a tapestry of betrayal, manipulation, attempted bribery and duplicity on the part of the establishment. Being aware of this we entered into initial discussions with this administration with very serious misgivings and suspicions.

All of our relations with the Tippo administration and with the chancellor himself have been marked by a candor, and forthright Honesty which had been very rare indeed in our previous experience of the establishment. There was a sense of integrity which one had to, at the very least, respect. It was possible for us to feel that we could accept the word and commitments of the administration.

This relationship of confidence and respect along with a sense of the seriousness of the administration in wishing to break with the educational and cultural rigidities of the past and to build a great university was what permitted us to recruit in good conscience, serious and dedicated black people to this predominantly white campus and community. What success we have had is directly attributable to the support and posture of the administration, and particularly to the Chancellor.

For these reasons the Chancellor's resignation, and the attendant uncertainty and speculation surrounding future directions of the university have precipitated some serious questions in the department, and indeed in the general black community of the university.

Since the Chancellor has said that his decision is irrevocable, there is nothing for us to do but wait. We shall be watching very closely the words and deeds of the new regime.

Submitted by Michael M. Thelwell
Acting Chairman

TONIGHT
Lady's Night
at
The English Pub
DANCE
to the DESATATIONS
9:30-12:30 only 25¢

Gala Cocktail Party
Following the UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS vs. BOSTON UNIVERSITY football game.
- Saturday, Oct. 9, 1971 -
- Immediately after the game
- Boston City Club -
(969 Commonwealth Ave.)
$1.00 donation to cover the entertainment costs.
Beer 50¢ Mixed Drinx 90¢
See You All After the Game.
Greater Boston Alumni Club

In The Nation And The World

Thieu Claims "Victory For Democracy"

SAIGON (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu won re-election by a far greater margin than the 50 per cent "vote of confidence" he sought, South Vietnamese election officials announced yesterday.

But even as the final vote tally was reported, opposition politicians charged that the election was rigged. An election official in Saigon said he was ordered to replace anti-Thieu ballots with votes for the president.

The national election center claimed Thieu—the only candidate—won 91.5 per cent of the votes cast, with 5.5 per cent of the votes against him. They were unable to account for the remaining three per cent of the votes cast.

"Now, for the moment, we can't say where they are," said government spokesman Vu Khanh. "Maybe later."

One election official said the discrepancy could be due in part to the fact that seven ballot boxes were stolen in Da Nang, the scene of bloody anti-Thieu street riots during the election.

He added that some voters might have thrown away both the Thieu ballot and the voting envelope after having their voting cards punched, possibly accounting for more of the "missing votes."

Before the election, Thieu told voters he would step down if he did not receive at least a 50 per cent of the vote. He said they could vote against him by mutilating or defacing their ballots or by putting an empty envelope into the ballot box.

Thieu's office issued a statement, read over national television and radio, that was described as "the president's first impressions" of Sunday's elections.

Thieu noted the official nationwide voter turnout exceeded 87 per cent of the more than 7-million registered voters, while the turnout in 1967—when there were 11 candidates-was 83 per cent.

"This proves that our people as a whole were aware of the election's decisive importance," he said. "And by taking part in large numbers they expressed their respect for the constitution and laws and fulfilled their citizens' right in a free and democratic way."

Thieu also congratulated "our soldiers and cadres for having maintained the utmost security on election day."

At least 21 persons were killed and more than 100 wounded in enemy shellings, terrorist incidents and antigovernment riots Sunday.

There were a number of indications that neither the large voter turnout nor the high number of pro-Thieu votes were entirely authentic.

An election official in charge of a Saigon polling station said that "all polling places received orders prior to the election to replace invalid—anti-Thieu—ballots with valid ones.

"At my polling station, more than 400 invalid ballots were replaced. We were told not to allow newsmen into the polling place, that if they insisted we should call the police.

"Two plainclothes police supervised the entire operation of our polling station. We were told that if any election workers objected to the procedure we should notify the authorities and they would be removed."

In Long An Province, just south of Saigon, television cameramen filmed the same voter casting two ballots.

Opposition leader Ngo Cong Duc, a National Assembly deputy who lost a bid for another term Aug. 29 in what the supreme court has since ruled was a rigged election, showed newsmen 200 blank voting cards.

He charged that "more than three million" of the cards were distributed to province and district officials "to be used in case of a low voter turnout."

U.S. pacification program officials have pointed out that all of South Vietnam's 44 province chiefs were full colonels and that their promotions had been frozen until after the election.

"Those who got out the biggest vote for Thieu will have the best chance to make general," one said.

Post-election demonstrations occurred today in Saigon and the coastal city of Qui Nhon.

Some 200 medical students demonstrated in Saigon against "Thieu's dictatorship" and the election. They threw firebombs and burned tires. Police broke up the demonstration and arrested several of the students.

In Qui Nhon, a demonstration by Buddhists, students, veterans and orphans protested an accidental police tear gas attack on an orphanage Saturday. The protesters dispersed when police fired tear gas but regrouped. Police then asked them to go home, and they complied.

In another development, the newly elected lower house of the National Assembly was convened and new deputies sworn in. The deputies heard a brief message from Thieu, in which he said Sunday's election was a defeat for "the deceitful propaganda of the Communists and their agents."

The speaker of the house said the first order of business would be to validate the newly elected deputies. Last week the supreme court charged that the Aug. 29 lower house election was rigged in at least three provinces.

President Acts On Dock Strike

President Nixon took the first step Monday toward invoking the Taft-Hartley Act to end the longshoremen's strikes. He signed an executive order creating a five-member inquiry board to look into the dock negotiations.

Under provisions of the national labor law, Nixon could seek court action to send the Pacific Coast longshoremen, the Atlantic-Gulf Coast longshoremen or both back to work for an 80-day cooling-off period.

Nixon signed the executive order on his return to Washington from the Florida White House. The inquiry board was to report to him by Wednesday after which Nixon will decide whether to seek injunctive relief. Nixon said that if the strikes continue they "will imperil the national health and safety."

Meanwhile, in another industry, a strike by 80,000 soft coal workers continued with no sign of an early settlement.

Nixon's action in the dock strike came after the West Coast negotiations were reported at an impasse. First word of the move came from press secretary Ronald Ziegler in Florida.

Ziegler told newsmen at Key Biscayne that the main question in seeking an injunction would be whether it would apply to the West Coast strike alone or also include the less than a week old Atlantic-Gulf port walkout.

Earlier, the chief federal mediator in the West Coast negotiations said an injunction was "likely" because of the impasse in talks.

The 15,000 West Coast members of the independent International Longshoremen's Union struck July 1 over a dispute about offdocks container handling and a demand for a guaranteed annual wage.

About 45,000 members of the International Longshoremen's Association at East and Gulf ports struck last Friday when management tried to remove from a new contract a guaranteed annual wage for 2,080 hours a year.

Workers in Houston, Galveston, Corpus Christi and Brownsville, Tex., and in Lake Charles, La., continued to work, as did hands on the Great Lakes where a different union contract is in force.

The strike by soft coal miners began Friday when an old contract expired. Union representatives met Monday in New York to discuss their demands that top daily wages of $37 be increased to $50 and for additional management contributions to retirement and welfare funds.

Justin McCarthy, a spokesman for the United Mine Workers, said the parties are "not even close," and that nothing has been settled in negotiations with industry that began Aug. 12.

Mine workers in 20 coal producing states were affected.

The union was scheduled to resume negotiations Tuesday in Washington with industry representatives and federal mediators.

Nixon's Economic Policy Upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon's order for a $1.3-billion six-month delay in a federal pay raise was upheld by the House yesterday 207 to 174. The Senate has yet to act.

A host of Southern Democrats joined Republicans in turning back a House move to make the pay raise effective Jan. 1 instead of next July 1, as Nixon ordered.

It was the first congressional vote on any of the President's emergency economic proposals, and he said a veto of his action postponing the pay raise would torpedo the whole package.

Sen. Frank Moss, D-Utah, plans to press for a vote in the Senate Wednesday or Thursday. Either the Senate or the House can override the President's pay-raise deferral action, without concurrence by the other chamber.

The Senate voted 65 to 4 Monday to give members of the armed forces a $381-million annual pay raise in addition to a $2.4-billion increase included in the already-enacted legislation to extend the draft.

Nixon has indirectly approved this action but Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, R-Maine, opposed it as inflationary. She was joined in voting against the extra raise by Sens. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Adlai E. Stevenson, D-Ill.

The action is subject to a second Senate-House conference which is likely to take a dim view of the added increase.

In other developments on the economic front Monday:

—The Cost of Living Council ruled that retailers must keep available at each store a list of maximum prices permissible under the wage-price freeze.

—AFL-CIO President George Meany urged Congress to take active control of the economy. He told the House Banking Committee that Nixon has proven unworthy of trust in his moves to stabilize wages and prices.

—Dock strikes continued on West, East and Gulf Coasts amid indications that the President is preparing to act in the prolonged West Coast tie-up if a settlement is not reached quickly.

—A soft-coal strike continued but the United Mine Workers Scale and Policy Committee met in New York. This committee is the one that passes on contracts agreed bo by union and industry negotiators and its convening raised hopes that a settlement might be near.

In the House, leadership-backed Democrats pressing for a veto of Nixon's six-month pay raise delay accused the President of sacrificing federal employes' pay for his economic program before wage guidelines for everyone else have been announced.

But Republicans with strong help from Southern Democrats supported Nixon's argument that federal employes must share sacrifices and that rejection of the $1.3-billion saving would break up his anti-inflation package.

1971-72 ID Card
Validation Labels Are
Now Available In
ID OFFICE
109 Hampshire

MDC Classifieds

Seats still open in the
Commuter Assembly

Nomination papers may be picked up in front of RSO, 1st level, CC.

Due back by 5 p.m., Fri., Oct. 8.

Rogers Asks UN For Peking Seat

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)-Secretary of State William P. Rogers urged the United Nations yesterday to seat Communist China but said that to expel Nationalist China would be "perilous" for the future of other U.N. members.

In a broad policy speech to the 130-nation General Assembly, Rogers also offered Egypt and Israel the continued help of the United States in expediting a six-point interim agreement to reopen the Suez Canal as a step toward an over-all settlement.

Later, Foreign Minister Abba Eban of Israel told reporters there were "points of convergence" between Israel's position and some ideas Rogers put forth. But Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad accused Rogers of making "vague proposals" and so "contributing to confusion."

Rogers opposed the pending Soviet proposal for a world disarmament conference outside the United Nations. He said such schemes are likely "to generate many words and few results."

But he called for going beyond "coexistence" to "cooperation" between the United States and the Soviet Union.

He said that in their strategic arms limitation talks recessed recently in Helsinki, the two were "closer together on the concepts and details of an agreement to limit antiballistic missile systems" and were agreed that when the talks resume in Vienna, Austria, next month, "discussions in greater detail will be undertaken on the limitation of offensive weapons."

Rogers called on East Germany to agree with West Germany for "unrestricted transit traffic" between West Berlin and West Germany, as provided in a Big Four understanding. He said a final Berlin agreement, effectively implemented, would "make more realistic the prospects of a European conference with United States and Canadian participation."

Rogers said the assembly "must choose an outstanding successor" to Secretary-General U Thant, retiring at the end of this year. He said that, "given adequate assurances of adequate contributions by others, the United States will...assist toward an over-all solution" of the United Nations' money shortage.

He also said the United States:

—Is "not adopting a policy of economic system which meets present-day conditions" and encourages "the flow of goods and capital across borders."

—Is making "an orderly military withdrawal from Vietnam" and continuing economic aid to the region.

—Is working for "an effective political settlement" in East Pakistan and an expanded international aid program "to avert famine and create conditions to encourage the return of East Pakistan refugees from India.

In a long argument for the U.S. proposals on China, Rogers said there was "widespread agreement" that Communist China should be seated in the assembly and become a permanent member of the Security Council.

He declared that for the assembly to expel Nationalist China would mean "expelling 14 million people from its councils" and making it the first assembly in history to "expel a member."

"The path of expulsion is perilous," Rogers said. "To open it for one would be to open it for many."

Rogers said a pending "dual representation" resolution from the United States and 16 others countries to have both Peking and Taipei in the assembly and Peking on the council is realistic because it meant all Chinese would be "represented by those who actually govern them."

He said the rival 21-nation "Albanian resolution" to have only Communist China here seeks mainly "to expel the Republic of China" and was punitive and likely to exasperate relations in Asia and weaken the United Nations' "moral and political fiber."

"The issue before this body is the issue of expulsion," Rogers said, and the U.S.-backed resolution to require a two-thirds vote "to expel a present member of the United Nations" is consistent with the charter.

Henderson Charged With False Reports

FT. MEADE, Md. (AP) - Col. Oran K. Henderson turned in a false report on the My Lai massacre after being given a direct order to investigate atrocity allegations, a battalion leader at My Lai testified yesterday.

Lt. Col. John Holladay said that the investigation order was given by Brig. Gen. George Young, Jr., then the assistant commander of the Americal Division. He said the order was issued two days after the March 16, 1968, My Lai operation.

Holladay said he was later shown a report by Henderson which did not respond to reports of indiscriminate killing Henderson received at the meeting culminating in Young's order.

"I felt that the report was in error," Holladay told the prosecutor, Maj. Carroll J. Tichenor.

Q. In what regard?

A. That it didn't tell the truth.

The witness, now stationed in Los Angeles, said the report told of 20 civilians accidentally killed by artillery and helicopter gunship fire during the operation directed by troops in Henderson's 11th Brigade.

Holladay, who commanded the aviation battalion supporting the My Lai assault, said he was informed the night of March 16 that his aviators had seen more than 100 civilian bodies at the Vietnamese hamlet.

Holladay said he was certain that figure was given to Henderson two days later at the meeting with Young and two other officers.

Hijacker Kills Two

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)—Posing as a doctor with a patient, hulking George Giffe Jr. dragged his screaming young wife aboard a private plane in Nashville, Tenn., yesterday. He forced the pilot to fly to Jacksonville. Then Giffe killed his wife, the pilot and himself when cornered by the FBI.

The Tennessee real estate man leased the plush twin-engine aircraft, saying he was a doctor and that his wife needed treatment in Miami.

Asked for medical credentials when he prepared to board the plane the 300-pound Giffe, pulled a 10-shot .45-caliber automatic and ordered the pilot to take off. Also aboard were a friend of Giffe, later identified as Bobby Wayne Wallace, and the copilot, Randall Crump.

Once airborne, Giffe ordered the pilot to head for the Bahamas, but Brant Q. Downs, 29, apparently convinced the estranged husband that a refueling stop was required.

When the plane landed at Jacksonville International Airport, waiting FBI agents shot out two tires and an engine.

Shots erupted from inside the cabin, agents said.

Agents rushed the plane and found Susan Giffe, 25, and Downs dead from gunshot wounds. Giffe was fatally wounded from a shot in the temple, they reported.

Wallace and Crump were unharmed.

Wallace, 32, was charged with air piracy and held under $100,000 bond. He also faced a federal kidnap charge.

Giffee, 35, was once an instructor in biology at Peabody College in Nashville. It was there that he met Susan who held bachelor's and master's degrees in education from the college.

Mrs. Giffe, the former Susan Lakich, once talked of marrying a rich man who could "give me the life of a movie starlet," a former classmate said.

Friends said Giffee heaped luxuries on the well-traveled daughter of a career Army man.

The couple was married three years ago, but friends said she spent almost as much time with her parents as with Giffe.

Friends said Giffe frequently said he was a warlock or male witch.

Giffe's Global V Realty Co. recently went out of business, acquaintances said, and he was seeking money to go into the crushed rock business.

Agents who stormed the plane in Jacksonville said they found a small gray box which they said had been described as containing a bomb. Newsmen said military demolition experts who opened the box found no bomb. Instead, they found some personal papers and pictures of partially nude women, the newsmen said.

Room To Move
Drop-In Center
5-0400, 5-0401

AUTO INSURANCE
ALL CARS — ALL DRIVERS
BUDGET PAYMENTS
CYCLES — SCOOTERS
Tekoa Insurance Agency
160 Pleasant St. Northampton 586-2742
10 Broad St. Westfield 562-3604

Abbie Cuts Hair

NEW YORK (AP) - A 35-year-old man with short-cropped hair is urging American youth to register, to vote and to run for local political office.

The man is Yippie leader Abbie Hoffman.

"Long hair doesn't have the bite of rejecting American values that it had two years ago. Now it's an affectation," Hoffman, once the possessor of an unruly mane of black curls, said in an interview Monday.

The day before, while addressing 1,500 Drew University students in Madison, N.J., he had pulled out a knife and "sheared off 10 or 20 locks-it was a rejection of the hip culture," he explained.

While still calling for social and political revolution in the United States, Hoffman also advised the assembled young people that they could help bring about some change by working through the box.

But lest anyone suspect him of turning middle class, Hoffman, one of the defendants in the Chicago Seven conspiracy trial, said with a laugh Sunday, "I'm not exactly shapin' up!"

He said he was urging his followers to register to vote for two reasons:

"One, to be able to get on juries. My chief fantasy is to hang the jury of the next presidential assassin," he said.

"The other reason is to vote-in local elections. It's still meaningless to work for candidates on the national level. But we should go for radical community control on the local level," he said.

"In college towns, with recent changes in the laws, it makes a lot of sense to engage in elective politics as an experiment. It's possible that radicals could win. Berkeley is a start. And look at Cambridge, Mass. Someone like Daniel Ellsberg running for mayor could affect it, could change it, and could win."

In Berkeley, Calif., a group of radicals recently were elected to the Town Council. Cambridge, the home of Harvard College and Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is also the home of Ellsberg, who is charged with illegally possessing the Pentagon papers.

Hoffman also suggested that members of his Youth International party as well as people in prison should start running for local office. He ruled out his own candidacy by asking, "Me? Where?"

Then he added, "Anyway, not this year. I'm going away-out of the country. But I can't tell you where because then it wouldn't be going away. Everyone would be there."

He also ruled out a new photograph of his short hair.

Hoffman said he had become angry with the current version of the youth movement because "the rock music has gotten bad, the dope lousy. Everytime I turn on the television I see another movie star with long hair. The hip cult has been taken over by Warner Bros.," he said.

"I had to disassociate myself from that."

New Water System Due In California

BAKERFIELD, Calif. (AP)-With the push of a button, Gov. Ronald Reagan will start Thursday a massive project designed to bring cool river waters from Northern California to the arid lands of Southern California.

The State Water Project, as the 685-mile, man-made waterway is known, is aimed at helping balance nature's inequities by carrying water over the Tehachapi Mountains from the north, where there is ample rainfall, to the south, where there is not.

When Reagan pushes the button at the Edmonston Pumping Plant, 80,000-horsepower pumps will begin lifting water nearly 2,000 feet up the side of the Tehachapis.

The water will begin flowing at the rate of 150,000 gallons a minute, enough to fill eight average backyard swimming pools. Later it will pick up speed. The water will be stored in holding areas south of the mountains. The first Northern California water will enter Southern California reservoirs by early December.

In 20 years the system is to deliver two million gallons of water to Southern California every minute. The Tehachapi pumping plant will push two million acre feet of Northern California water over the Tehachapis every year-twice as much as urban areas in the south now receive from the salinity-plagued Colorado River.

An acre foot is a measurement representing the amount of water in an area one acre square and one foot deep. The Colorado has been the metropolitan coastal region's principal supply, but eventually much of this will revert to Arizona under court order.

WHAT'S NEW
AT THE TOP OF THE CAMPUS?
Tuesday nite 9:00-11:30
ENJOY SUE O'NEIL'S singing + playing for the GRAND OPENING
of
THE BACKROOM
11th floor C.C. lounge

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF — Richard C. Hanson
MANAGING EDITOR — David D. Williams
BUSINESS MANAGER — James Gold
EXECUTIVE EDITOR — Barry J. Rubenstein
NEWS EDITOR — Anne C. Stadnicki
SPORTS EDITOR — Earle T. Barroll

PHOTO EDITOR — Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR — Robert Nesti

TODAY'S STAFF

NEWS STAFF — Bob Nesti, Bob Scheier
SPORTS — Fred Rosenthal
EDITORIAL — Barry Rubenstein
DARKROOM — Alan Chapman, Jim Lavrakas
AD LAYOUT — Jerry Lazar

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administration read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.
Unsigned editorials represent the views of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, and letters represent the personal views of the writers.

Our Loss

In the last few days many people have discussed and argued the ramifications of Chancellor Tippo's resignation for the future of UMass-Amherst. In light of the reasoning behind Tippo's actions, this is probably a good idea. Yet the departure of a man of his caliber should not be lost in the muddle of transition.

Oswald Tippo, more than any other figure in the last decade, has had a dominating effect on the growth and structure of this campus. Where the Amherst campus is heading today is largely the result of the dedication of the Chancellor and the directions it will take in the future can not escape his stamp.

His history of responsiveness to student needs should not go without mention for the Chancellor has put himself out on the proverbial limb many times for undergraduates who didn't really seem to appreciate what he was doing. Many of his actions in this regard drew the ire of faculty and fellow administrators and Tippo was not beyond compromise. Yet his principles were beyond the scope of academic diplomacy.

His availability to the campus at large, a change over past administrations, manifest itself in many ways. His weekly meetings with Collegian staffers not only proved informative for us, but also revealing in that we were able to discover a man truly dedicated to his task and willing to speak freely on any topic, no matter how controversial.

Our purpose is not to eulogize Tippo, for his departure will mark the passing of an era, not of a man. We simply wish to thank the Chancellor for his past successes and wish him more in the future.

Further, though, we want to expose the virtues of his administration so that we might more easily be able to judge the merits and faults of his successor. Perhaps, the feeling is best summarized in a statement made in a Collegian editorial upon Tippo's appointment as Chancellor in 1970, "The University was lucky this time to get a man of the caliber of Dr. Tippo...We may not be as lucky the next."

"MAN OVERBOARD!!"

Richard C. Hanson

Unanswered Questions

President Wood was on campus yesterday soothing ruffled feathers and using his wits to keep the tottering Amherst establishment firmly in hand.

From those who saw Wood come reports of how well the President handled himself. Wood wore a deep-blue, pin-striped suit which always seems to make him look better. He was the man who everyone knew would have to provide the answers now that Chancellor Tippo has carefully removed himself from the University scene.

When I first met President Wood he was being introduced to the Board of Trustees in the Statler-Hilton. It was May, 1970.

As a reporter I was attending the meeting where Wood was to be named President of the entire UMass system. Chancellor Oswald Tippo introduced the new President to me. He looked small standing next to the Chancellor and smiled a lot while he talked.

"What do you think you'll be doing in relationship to the Amherst campus?" I asked Wood.

"I'll let Tippo handle the disorders, and I'll pass out the degrees," he mused.

Things haven't quite worked out as simply as that. Both Wood and Tippo are strong men and strong men have a tendency to clash.

Chancellor Tippo's resignation might be viewed as realization of this inevitable state. Wood knows that he couldn't shape a three campus system without such conflicts. He will continue to mold UMass into a form that, some close to Wood say, means into one of the "top universities in the East."

There is no one issue that made Tippo resign, according to the best information available, is there any

There is no one issue that made Tippo resign. According

There is no one issue that made Tippo resign. Nor, according to the best information available, is there any reason to believe that Wood was overtly trying to pressure Tippo out of the University. Wood is quoted as viewing the resignation as one of the hazards of instituting change.

Chancellor Tippo will not be making any major statements on why he resigned. He told this reported that he "considers this chapter" of his life in public "closed".

What is important is that President Wood now must make good on his aspirations for this University. In today's University-wide convocation, Wood must answer the nagging questions that have many faculty and administrators wondering about where UMass is headed and what the President's own philosophy about universities really is.

Certainly President Wood will not give a speech like the "full treatment" he handed the faculty with his inscrutable budgetary explanation at the Faculty Senate two weeks ago. Many faculty members were annoyed by Wood's unreadable charts and figure-laden commentary.

What of the immediate future? It is clear that the Amherst campus will need some kind of effective communications with the Systems Office? Without Tippo in that slot, the best speculation says that Wood will try to present an interim acting chancellor to the Board trustees meeting this Thursday in Lenox.

Where Has All The Money Gone?

By FRANK M. BAGLIONE
Editorial Staff

Over the past few years the Student Senate has expanded its concept of a Recognized Student Organization to include a number of minority and special interest groups. These groups seem to have experienced little difficulty in securing funds from the Senate, their aberrant political and social views being more of a help than a hinderance in this endeavor. Recently, however, the Senate made a move which suggests it will finally begin questioning of what value to the student body are the activities of these groups.

The hopeful sign occurred last week when Student Senate officers announced they had frozen a portion of the $15,000 Free University budget because of the possibility that the funds had been subverted to activities other than those for which they were allocated. The money involved was from a three hundred dollar fund to be used to pay technical consultants. It was discovered that Free University had awarded the consultant contracts to three of its own members, and further, that the money was allegedly to be used to defray transportation costs for the three attending a radical architects conference in Spain.

According to Albert Olmstead, Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Student Senate, the money was intended to go to consultants from outside the group to advise them in the operation of their newly purchased video-tape equipment. It was never intended to go to members of the group--that amounts to granting salaries; and it certainly was not intended to pay anyone's transportation to Spain. Olmstead stated that it was the Senate's intention to keep the consultants' fees frozen until the three return from Spain and can be present at an investigation of the matter.

Gerald Scanlon, newly appointed Co-ordinator of Student Activities, agreed that it was not general policy to salary members of an organization. Exceptions to this policy occur in the case of organizations, like WMUA and the Collegian, which provide a service to the entire campus. Still, Scanlon approved the contracts because they were proceedurally correct, that is the item for which funds were requested was in the budget. The checks were held up when Olmstead along with Student Senate Treasurer Rick Verrochi and Student Senate President Lee Sandwen agreed that a subversion of funds in violation of Senate policy might have occurred.

At Free University, I spoke on this issue with John Dubois and, for a short time, Jeffrey Segel. We sat at a desk in the near empty space of the Old Bookstore in the Student Union that now houses Free University. At one end of the room was a table and chair above which hung a sign "Gay Liberation Center". In the opposite corner was a couch, and a few feet from it a TV set on which the first video-tape sent from Spain was showing. John told me there had never been any question that the three who were to receive consultant's fees were also members of Free University. This had not been regarded as counter to any policy.

John took from a neatly arranged file cabinet copies of the contracts which I had also been shown at the RSO office. The contracts provide for the three to work one day a month for nine months: consultant A in the field of video taping, auto mechanics and carpentry; consultant B in video taping and environmental design using polyvinyl chloride and inflatable structures; and consultant C again in video taping, media arts, and to establish an information exchange between Instant City and the American community.

Instant City, it was explained, is the name of the environment the radical architects had designed and built on the spot where they were gathered in Spain. The twenty video tapes the three consultants carried with them to Spain would record what is happening over there for later showing to students at the University. Their significance? The information they will provide in developing "nomadic life-styles."

Our story now enters its second stage. There is reason to believe that the Senate, in freezing that small $300 out of a budget of $15,000, was really challenging the value of what Free University was doing with the money. How will being aware of the Architects Conference in Spain benefit the student body? To Free University the answer is obvious. They see developing among young people a New Tribalism, one of the major characteristics of which is nomadism, the wandering from place to place with no fixed abode. These tribes, or collectives, are also distinguished by the fact that they have no nuclear families, no head of households, only a group of people who have come together around a specific task or vision. Children, clothing, everything is held in common.

One of the purposes to which Free University will put the new video tape equipment costing the students some $7,000 will be that of placing students in touch with what is happening in the counter culture. A network of stations will be established for this purpose, this is one of the things the people in Spain are learning about and one of the reasons their trip is valuable. Free University will also house projects to instruct people how to become mechanically self-sufficient, for example repairing your own car, or bus as the case may be. In closing I was told it was truly incredible how little one actually has to work to survive if we know our real needs and everyone shares.

Despite these noble sentiments, it is obvious that someone has skipped off the track. I am very skeptical about the possibility of the world's billions breaking down into tribal units. To suggest that even the smallest percentage of this University's graduates are going to abandon monogotomous relationships. Join a tribe and move into a polyvinyl chloride inflatable structure is lunacy. And video tapes of young men and women laboring to inflate their homes in Instant City, Spain are not going to "pack 'em in" at the Student Union Ballroom. Free University is a joke, and an expensive one. It cost the students $4,000 last year and will cost them $15,000 this year. John Dubois was quite correct when he said it was amazing how little work one must do to survive if we all share. All one needs, after all, is a $15,000 subsidy to discover this.

The university should certainly be the place where somewhat odd ideas and spokesmen may be tolerated, protected and even helped. Somewhere along the way, however, it should be asked in each case whether we are the patron of a philosopher or host to a parasite. The students supporting these organizations are entitled to rigorous explanations of the theories they espouse. In the case of Free University it seems the Student Senate should do more than withhold a mere three hundred dollars, it should, rather, gather all the marbles and request that the nomads in the old Bookstore fold up their polyvinyl chlorid inflatable tents and move on.

'OH, IT'S YOU—WE THOUGHT YOU WERE DEAD!'

Editorial Points

It's about that time of year when this area of the country really becomes beautiful with the changing colors. Just look at the Cage.

***

A jock was overheard in the Bookstore the other day telling a young lady friend, "I saw Carnal Knowledge the other night and it made me feel guilty. If I had seen it at a drive-in though, I wouldn't have felt bad at all."

***

With Julius Erving and Oswald Tippo leaving UMass all in one year, maybe somebody ought to tie a rope around Metawampe.

***

Has anybody stopped to think what all this means to Emma?

Letters To The Editor

A Request For Action

To the Editor:

The members of the Environmental Design Club of the department of Landscape Architecture and Regional Planning request that action be taken to facilitate proper working conditions for the students and faculty subjected to Arnold House Basement.

Minimal, necessary physical improvments must be made if students are to carry out productive classroom designs. Our demands are not extreme; they concern very basic facilities that must be provided if students are expected to use the studio for the creative purpose of design. Requests to alleviate the following conditions have been made to the University maintenance department by faculty of our department but to no avail.

Therefore, we have requested to the administration that the following demands be met in order to ameliorate working conditions in Arnold House Basement.

1. Removal of all math department equipment - approximately 20 7' metal bookcases and many cartons of papers and books.
2. Additional and improved light facilities for drawing.
3. Addition of a pencil sharpener - at present there is not one.
4. Addition of bulletin boards - at present there is nowhere for students to display their designs for presentations and criticisms by faculty and other students.
5. Additional storage spaces for student's drawing supplies - at present 3 to 4 students must share storage drawers and are not able to lock up their equipment which could be valued at about $50 per student.
6. Additional drawing tables - at present each table in the senior design studio is used by three different students. The studio is in use from 8 to 5 during the days with three different design studios meeting for 3 hours at a time. There are no tables available for a student to use during the day other than during his allotted class time, since his table is used by two other students. Also the limited number of tables causes problems at night when students who live in dorms and do not have the space to set up a 3' x 5' drawing table all come to the basement to try to get a table on which to work, only to find all the tables in use.
7. Access to the basement studio by more than one entrance - at present only one of the two doors can be used and since the room has been divided into two different studios, one for junior design classes and the other for senior design studio, the seniors must walk through the junior studio and disturb the students and faculty. There is another door that could be used for entrance into the senior studio and alleviate this problem, however it is locked.
8. Keys for the doors in the room for our department - at present time the math department still has the keys to the room.

We do not feel that we are making excessive demands of the University. We have had to suffer with these conditions for four weeks now. We do not hope or plan to continue to work under these adverse conditions much longer.

Environmental Design Club.

For The Sake Of Art

To the Editor:

Last week UMass was indeed honored to have the distinguished columnist Art Buchwald as a guest at the Cage. And, of course the story was covered quite fully in the Collegian the following day - describing the happy atmosphere, the great wit of Mr. Buchwald, and several of his political comments that hit home.

But one aspect wasn't mentioned - one thing which has remained in my (shall we say-embarrassed?) mind and in those of my friends who attended. It seems very insignificant at first - just one male's voice suddenly echoing out during a pause. Just one sentence, "Free Jenny!", that left everyone baffled and tense. Nothing was made of the issue. Art went on being funny, seemingly almost oblivious to the interruption. But somehow the mood had changed and his jokes weren't so comical. Our thoughts were drifting away - "Who's Jenny?" was echoing through the auditorium. Although I didn't at that time know the meaning of the statement, I felt ashamed and inwardly angry that one person could ruin an entire evening; and perhaps influence one man's opinion of our University.

It wasn't until on the way home that I found out who "Jenny" is. It seems that Art Buchwald's daughter Jennifer is in a mental hospital near Boston.

I am shocked to think that someone out there felt the need to express his opinion by deeply hurting another human being. All I can think of is "How did Art Buchwald feel up there struggling to carry on, but maybe wanting to lash out or even to break down."

I apologize on behalf of the University of Massachusetts.

Donna Hodgson

Final Chapters

To the Editor:

The youth of this country have an important decision to make. Will they or will they not allow oil into the Arctic of Alaska and the construction of the trans-Alaska pipeline? What they decide will determine whether we continue this downward spiral of our society and its environment or whether we finally turn the country around toward a better tomorrow.

We should not be debating this issue of oil in Alaska. Instead we should be demanding a full scale investigation into why the oil industry has become so powerful. The petroleum industry is undermining national security and threatening our very survival by squandering away resources in its lust for profits.

In less than ten years we put a man on the moon. But in nearly 80 years since the automobile has been on the streets of this country, we still get less than 15 miles to a gallon of gasoline. This is progress? Where are our priorities?

Our mass transit system is on the brink of collapse, yet the oil industry vigorously promotes the highway trust fund. Eighty per cent of all our miles of highways are paved with asphalt. What kind of social responsibility does the petroleum industry practice when it lets our cities strangle themselves just so oil can satisfy its own selfish aims?

But will the young generation follow the same path of apathy that the older generation did? If it does it will be sowing the seed for alienation and a generation gap far greater than exists today. It too can expect to feel the sting of "hypocrisy" and "hypocrite" flung at it by the next generation and with more profound vengeance.

More efficient forms of energy are being suppressed. Why? Will those concerned about the future of this country win out over greed, or will greed write the final chapters to this planet's history?

Kenneth Quade
Pembine, Wisconsin

Would anyone who would like to write columns and has not submitted any yet please contact Barry in the Collegian office before Friday.

A Product Of Society

By BILL GORCZYCA
Editorial Staff

A yellow Toyota weaves its way though the maze of streets which constitutes suburban Lynn. It is late, almost midnight, and the two young occupants of the car are returning home from a night at the races. They approach an intersection, and having the green light, start their way across.

The sound of crumpling steel shatters the silence of an autumn night as the Toyota spins madly from the intersection and careens off streetlamps like a pinball gone berserk. The car comes to a halt seventy feet from the point of impact; its occupants now entwined in a ball of broken bones, blood, and pain. One is unconscious but the other, spite of multiple injuries which include a broken pelvis, manages to kick his way through the shattered rear window and drag his companion to safety by the side of the road. He then collapses.

The police are on the scene instantly for they were pursuing the cause of the accident, a Boston taxi cab driver who had held up a local resident minutes earlier. He had stolen goods in his taxi and was fleeing from the cops when he decided to run the red light at seventy miles per hour. After smashing into the Toyota and being relatively uninjured, he started to run from the police on foot, oblivious to the occupants of the car he had just demolished. He was apprehended shortly afterwards.

Every time I think of this accident it makes me sick. Sick that the police did not have their siren on. Sick that the Toyota did not enter the intersection a few moments later. Sick that some bastard thought his own ass the most important thing in the world and did not give a shit for the safety of the people proceeding through a green lighted intersection. And sick of the fact that the cab driver is a product of our society and was only trying to make it the best way he knew how.

I'd like to change this society-but it will have to wait. My weekends are pretty much tied up now, since I spend them visiting at Lynn Hospital. My two brothers were in that Toyota. Thank God they're still alive.

Dress Rehearsal

How many tymes it is,
the telephone has rung off the wall,
with me not there.
or able to answer,
I should like to think
it has spared me being included
in a dozen little murders,
but actually, I know,
it was probably God calling,
and inviting me over with some
of his other friends,
to witness the flooding of the world,
and so,
I'm just as glad to have been out,
drunk somewhere,
and have missed the call.....

Bear Acker
20 July '7
Post-War Year
Poughkeepsie, New Yorl

LANDSLIDE VICTORY.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF — Richard C. Hanson
MANAGING EDITOR — David D. Williams
BUSINESS MANAGER — James Gold
EXECUTIVE EDITOR — Barry J. Rubenstein
NEWS EDITOR — Anne C. Stadnicki
SPORTS EDITOR — Earle T. Barroll

PHOTO EDITOR — Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR — Robert Nesti

TODAY'S STAFF

NEWS STAFF — Bob Nesti, Bob Scheier
SPORTS — Fred Rosenthal
EDITORIAL — Barry Rubenstein
DARKROOM — Alan Chapman, Jim Lavrakas
AD LAYOUT — Jerry Lazar

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administration read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the views of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, and letters represent the personal views of the writers.

Our Loss

In the last few days many people have discussed and argued the ramifications of Chancellor Tippo's resignation for the future of UMass-Amherst. In light of the reasoning behind Tippo's actions, this is probably a good idea. Yet the departure of a man of his caliber should not be lost in the muddle of transition.

Oswald Tippo, more than any other figure in the last decade, has had a dominating effect on the growth and structure of this campus. Where the Amherst campus is heading today is largely the result of the dedication of the Chancellor and the directions it will take in the future can not escape his stamp.

His history of responsiveness to student needs should not go without mention for the Chancellor has put himself out on the proverbial limb many times for undergraduates who didn't really seem to appreciate what he was doing. Many of his actions in this regard drew the ire of faculty and fellow administrators and Tippo was not beyond compromise. Yet his principles were beyond the scope of academic diplomacy.

His availability to the campus at large, a change over past administrations, manifest itself in many ways. His weekly meetings with Collegian staffers not only proved informative for us, but also revealing in that we were able to discover a man truly dedicated to his task and willing to speak freely on any topic, no matter how controversial.

Our purpose is not to eulogize Tippo, for his departure will mark the passing of an era, not of a man. We simply wish to thank the Chancellor for his past successes and wish him more in the future.

Further, though, we want to expose the virtues of his administration so that we might more easily be able to judge the merits and faults of his successor. Perhaps, the feeling is best summarized in a statement made in a Collegian editorial upon Tippo's appointment as Chancellor in 1970, "The University was lucky this time to get a man of the caliber of Dr. Tippo...We may not be as lucky the next."

"MAN OVERBOARD!!"

Richard C. Hanson

Unanswered Questions

President Wood was on campus yesterday soothing ruffled feathers and using his wits to keep the tottering Amherst establishment firmly in hand.

From those who saw Wood come reports of how well the President handled himself. Wood wore a deep-blue, pin-striped suit which always seems to make him look better. He was the man who everyone knew would have to provide the answers now that Chancellor Tippo has carefully removed himself from the University scene.

When I first met President Wood he was being introduced to the Board of Trustees in the Statler-Hilton. It was May, 1970.

As a reporter I was attending the meeting where Wood was to be named President of the entire UMass system. Chancellor Oswald Tippo introduced the new President to me. He looked small standing next to the Chancellor and smiled a lot while he talked.

"What do you think you'll be doing in relationship to the Amherst campus?" I asked Wood.

"I'll let Tippo handle the disorders, and I'll pass out the degrees," he mused.

Things haven't quite worked out as simply as that. Both Wood and Tippo are strong men and strong men have a tendency to clash.

Chancellor Tippo's resignation might be viewed as realization of this inevitable state. Wood knows that he couldn't shape a three campus system without such conflicts. He will continue to mold UMass into a form that, some close to Wood say, means into one of the "top universities in the East."

There is no one issue that made Tippo resign, according to the best information available, is there any

There is no one issue that made Tippo resign. According

There is no one issue that made Tippo resign. Nor, according to the best information available, is there any reason to believe that Wood was overtly trying to pressure Tippo out of the University. Wood is quoted as viewing the resignation as one of the hazards of instituting change.

Chancellor Tippo will not be making any major statements on why he resigned. He told this reported that he "considers this chapter" of his life in public "closed".

What is important is that President Wood now must make good on his aspirations for this University. In today's University-wide convocation, Wood must answer the nagging questions that have many faculty and administrators wondering about where UMass is headed and what the President's own philosophy about universities really is.

Certainly President Wood will not give a speech like the "full treatment" he handed the faculty with his inscrutable budgetary explanation at the Faculty Senate two weeks ago. Many faculty members were annoyed by Wood's unreadable charts and figure-laden commentary.

What of the immediate future? It is clear that the Amherst campus will need some kind of effective communications with the Systems Office? Without Tippo in that slot, the best speculation says that Wood will try to present an interim acting chancellor to the Board trustees meeting this Thursday in Lenox.

Where Has All The Money Gone?

By FRANK M. BAGLIONE
Editorial Staff

Over the past few years the Student Senate has expanded its concept of a Recognized Student Organization to include a number of minority and special interest groups. These groups seem to have experienced little difficulty in securing funds from the Senate, their aberrant political and social views being more of a help than a hinderance in this endeavor. Recently, however, the Senate made a move which suggests it will finally begin questioning of what value to the student body are the activities of these groups.

The hopeful sign occurred last week when Student Senate officers announced they had frozen a portion of the $15,000 Free University budget because of the possibility that the funds had been subverted to activities other than those for which they were allocated. The money involved was from a three hundred dollar fund to be used to pay technical consultants. It was discovered that Free University had awarded the consultant contracts to three of its own members, and further, that the money was allegedly to be used to defray transportation costs for the three attending a radical architects conference in Spain.

According to Albert Olmstead, Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Student Senate, the money was intended to go to consultants from outside the group to advise them in the operation of their newly purchased video-tape equipment. It was never intended to go to members of the group--that amounts to granting salaries; and it certainly was not intended to pay anyone's transportation to Spain. Olmstead stated that it was the Senate's intention to keep the consultants' fees frozen until the three return from Spain and can be present at an investigation of the matter.

Gerald Scanlon, newly appointed Co-ordinator of Student Activities, agreed that it was not general policy to salary members of an organization. Exceptions to this policy occur in the case of organizations, like WMUA and the Collegian, which provide a service to the entire campus. Still, Scanlon approved the contracts because they were proceedurally correct, that is the item for which funds were requested was in the budget. The checks were held up when Olmstead along with Student Senate Treasurer Rick Verrochi and Student Senate President Lee Sandwen agreed that a subversion of funds in violation of Senate policy might have occurred.

At Free University, I spoke on this issue with John Dubois and, for a short time, Jeffrey Segel. We sat at a desk in the near empty space of the Old Bookstore in the Student Union that now houses Free University. At one end of the room was a table and chair above which hung a sign "Gay Liberation Center". In the opposite corner was a couch, and a few feet from it a TV set on which the first video-tape sent from Spain was showing. John told me there had never been any question that the three who were to receive consultant's fees were also members of Free University. This had not been regarded as counter to any policy.

John took from a neatly arranged file cabinet copies of the contracts which I had also been shown at the RSO office. The contracts provide for the three to work one day a month for nine months: consultant A in the field of video taping, auto mechanics and carpentry; consultant B in video taping and environmental design using polyvinyl chloride and inflatable structures; and consultant C again in video taping, media arts, and to establish an information exchange between Instant City and the American community.

Instant City, it was explained, is the name of the environment the radical architects had designed and built on the spot where they were gathered in Spain. The twenty video tapes the three consultants carried with them to Spain would record what is happening over there for later showing to students at the University. Their significance? The information they will provide in developing "nomadic life-styles."

Our story now enters its second stage. There is reason to believe that the Senate, in freezing that small $300 out of a budget of $15,000, was really challenging the value of what Free University was doing with the money. How will being aware of the Architects Conference in Spain benefit the student body? To Free University the answer is obvious. They see developing among young people a New Tribalism, one of the major characteristics of which is nomadism, the wandering from place to place with no fixed abode. These tribes, or collectives, are also distinguished by the fact that they have no nuclear families, no head of households, only a group of people who have come together around a specific task or vision. Children, clothing, everything is held in common.

One of the purposes to which Free University will put the new video tape equipment costing the students some $7,000 will be that of placing students in touch with what is happening in the counter culture. A network of stations will be established for this purpose, this is one of the things the people in Spain are learning about and one of the reasons their trip is valuable. Free University will also house projects to instruct people how to become mechanically self-sufficient, for example repairing your own car, or bus as the case may be. In closing I was told it was truly incredible how little one actually has to work to survive if we know our real needs and everyone shares.

Despite these noble sentiments, it is obvious that someone has skipped off the track. I am very skeptical about the possibility of the world's billions breaking down into tribal units. To suggest that even the smallest percentage of this University's graduates are going to abandon monogomous relationships. Join a tribe and move into a polyvinyl chloride inflatable structure is lunacy. And video tapes of young men and women laboring to inflate their homes in Instant City, Spain are not going to "pack 'em in" at the Student Union Ballroom. Free University is a joke, and an expensive one. It cost the students $4,000 last year and will cost them $15,000 this year. John Dubois was quite correct when he said it was amazing how little work one must do to survive if we all share. All one needs, after all, is a $15,000 subsidy to discover this.

The university should certainly be the placé where somewhat odd ideas and spokesmen may be tolerated, protected and even helped. Somewhere along the way, however, it should be asked in each case whether we are the patron of a philosopher or host to a parasite. The students supporting these organizations are entitled to rigorous explanations of the theories they espouse. In the case of Free University it seems the Student Senate should do more than withhold a mere three hundred dollars, it should, rather, gather all the marbles and request that the nomads in the old Bookstore fold up their polyvinyl chloride inflatable tents and move on.

'OH, IT'S YOU—WE THOUGHT YOU WERE DEAD!'

Letters To The Editor

A Request For Action

To the Editor:

The members of the Environmental Design Club of the department of Landscape Architecture and Regional Planning request that action be taken to facilitate proper working conditions for the students and faculty subjected to Arnold House Basement.

Minimal, necessary physical improvments must be made if students are to carry out productive classroom designs. Our demands are not extreme; they concern very basic facilities that must be provided if students are expected to use the studio for the creative purpose of design. Requests to alleviate the following conditions have been made to the University maintenance department by faculty of our department but to no avail.

Therefore, we have requested to the administration that the following demands be met in order to ameliorate working conditions in Arnold House Basement.

1. Removal of all math department equipment - approximately 20 7' metal bookcases and many cartons of papers and books.

2. Additional and improved light facilities for drawing.

3. Addition of a pencil sharpener - at present there is not one.

4. Addition of bulletin boards - at present there is nowhere for students to display their designs for presentations and criticisms by faculty and other students.

5. Additional storage spaces for student's drawing supplies - at present 3 to 4 students must share storage drawers and are not able to lock up their equipment which could be valued at about $50 per student.

6. Additional drawing tables - at present each table in the senior design studio is used by three different students. The studio is in use from 8 to 5 during the days with three different design studios meeting for 3 hours at a time. There are no tables available for a student to use during the day other than during his allotted class time, since his table is used by two other students. Also the limited number of tables causes problems at night when students who live in dorms and do not have the space to set up a 3' x 5' drawing table all come to the basement to try to get a table on which to work, only to find all the tables in use.

7. Access to the basement studio by more than one entrance - at present only one of the two doors can be used and since the room has been divided into two different studios, one for junior design classes and the other for senior design studio, the seniors must walk through the junior studio and disturb the students and faculty. There is another door that could be used for entrance into the senior studio and alleviate this problem, however it is locked.

8. Keys for the doors in the room for our department - at present time the math department still has the keys to the room.

We do not feel that we are making excessive demands of the University. We have had to suffer with these conditions for four weeks now. We do not hope or plan to continue to work under these adverse conditions much longer.

Environmental Design Club.

For The Sake Of Art

To the Editor:

Last week UMass was indeed honored to have the distinguished columnist Art Buchwald as a guest at the Cage. And, of course the story was covered quite fully in the Collegian the following day - describing the happy atmosphere, the great wit of Mr. Buchwald, and several of his political comments that hit home.

But one aspect wasn't mentioned - one thing which has remained in my (shall we say-embarrassed?) mind and in those of my friends who attended. It seems very insignificant at first - just one male's voice suddenly echoing out during a pause. Just one sentence, "Free Jenny!", that left everyone baffled and tense. Nothing was made of the issue. Art went on being funny, seemingly almost oblivious to the interruption. But somehow the mood had changed and his jokes weren't so comical. Our thoughts were drifting away - "Who's Jenny?" was echoing through the auditorium. Although I didn't at that time know the meaning of the statement, I felt ashamed and inwardly angry that one person could ruin an entire evening; and perhaps influence one man's opinion of our University.

It wasn't until on the way home that I found out who "Jenny" is. It seems that Art Buchwald's daughter Jennifer is in a mental hospital near Boston.

I am shocked to think that someone out there felt the need to express his opinion by deeply hurting another human being. All I can think of is "How did Art Buchwald feel up there struggling to carry on, but maybe wanting to lash out or even to break down."

I apologize on behalf of the University of Massachusetts.

Donna Hodgson

Final Chapters

To the Editor:

The youth of this country have an important decision to make. Will they or will they not allow oil into the Arctic of Alaska and the construction of the trans-Alaska pipeline? What they decide will determine whether we continue this downward spiral of our society and its environment or whether we finally turn the country around toward a better tomorrow.

We should not be debating this issue of oil in Alaska. Instead we should be demanding a full scale investigation into why the oil industry has become so powerful. The petroleum industry is undermining national security and threatening our very survival by squandering away resources in its lust for profits.

In less than ten years we put a man on the moon. But in nearly 80 years since the automobile has been on the streets of this country, we still get less than 15 miles to a gallon of gasoline. This is progress? Where are our priorities?

Our mass transit system is on the brink of collapse, yet the oil industry vigorously promotes the highway trust fund. Eighty per cent of all our miles of highways are paved with asphalt. What kind of social responsibility does the petroleum industry practice when it lets our cities strangle themselves just so oil can satisfy its own selfish aims?

But will the young generation follow the same path of apathy that the older generation did? If it does it will be sowing the seed for alienation and a generation gap far greater than exists today. It too can expect to feel the sting of "hypocrisy" and "hypocrite" flung at it by the next generation and with more profound vengeance.

More efficient forms of energy are being suppressed. Why? Will those concerned about the future of this country win out over greed, or will greed write the final chapters to this planet's history?

Kenneth Quade
Pembine, Wisconsin

Would anyone who would like to write columns and has not submitted any yet please contact Barry in the Collegian office before Friday.

Editorial Points

It's about that time of year when this area of the country really becomes beautiful with the changing colors. Just look at the Cage.

***

A jock was overheard in the Bookstore the other day telling a young lady friend, "I saw Carnal Knowledge the other night and it made me feel guilty. If I had seen it at a drive-in though, I wouldn't have felt bad at all."

***

With Julius Erving and Oswald Tippo leaving UMass all in one year, maybe somebody ought to tie a rope around Metawampe.

***

Has anybody stopped to think what all this means to Emma?

A Product Of Society

By BILL GORCZYCA
Editorial Staff

A yellow Toyota weaves its way though the maze of streets which constitutes suburban Lynn. It is late, almost midnight, and the two young occupants of the car are returning home from a night at the races. They approach an intersection, and having the green light, start their way across.

The sound of crumpling steel shatters the silence of an autumn night as the Toyota spins madly from the intersection and careens off streetlamps like a pinball gone berserk. The car comes to a halt seventy feet from the point of impact; its occupants now entwined in a ball of broken bones, blood, and pain. One is unconscious but the other, spite of multiple injuries which include a broken pelvis, manages to kick his way through the shattered rear window and drag his companion to safety by the side of the road. He then collapses.

The police are on the scene instantly for they were pursuing the cause of the accident, a Boston taxi cab driver who had held up a local resident minutes earlier. He had stolen goods in his taxi and was fleeing from the cops when he decided to run the red light at seventy miles per hour. After smashing into the Toyota and being relatively uninjured, he started to run from the police on foot, oblivious to the occupants of the car he had just demolished. He was apprehended shortly afterwards.

Every time I think of this accident it makes me sick. Sick that the police did not have their siren on. Sick that the Toyota did not enter the intersection a few moments later. Sick that some bastard thought his own ass the most important thing in the world and did not give a shit for the safety of the people proceeding through a green lighted intersection. And sick of the fact that the cab driver is a product of our society and was only trying to make it the best way he knew how.

I'd like to change this society-but it will have to wait. My weekends are pretty much tied up now, since I spend them visiting at Lynn Hospital. My two brothers were in that Toyota. Thank God they're still alive.

Dress Rehearsal

How many tymes it is,
the telephone has rung off the wall,
with me not there.
or able to answer,
I should like to think it has spared me being included
in a dozen little murders,
but actually, I know,
it was probably God calling,
and inviting me over with some
of his other friends,
to witness the flooding of the world,
and so,
I'm just as glad to have been out,
drunk somewhere,
and have missed the call.....

Bear Acke
20 July '7
Post-War Year
Poughkeepsie, New Yorl

You Are What You Eat (Again)

Sunflower seeds and other healthy things to munch on can be found at the Yellow Sun Co-op in Amherst Center. Founded last February, the popular natural food co-operative re-opened last Thursday.

The Yellow Sun is rising.

The area's only natural food, member-owned cooperative opened a new office and retail store at 35 N. Pleasant St. in Amherst, Thursday, September 30.

Founded last February, Yellow Sun operated out of the Student Union at the UMass for five months and quickly enrolled nearly 400 members.

Despite the new retail business, Yellow Sun remains a cooperative concerned with group buying, consumer action and food distribution at wholesale prices.

Store hours will be 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Friday's the store will be open until 8 p.m. Co-op membership will be sold at the store.

According to organizers Arthur Cohen and Craig Meadows Yellow Sun will carry a full line of natural and organic grains, cereals, seeds, beans, flours, oils, sea vegetables, produce and cosmetics. New items will include organic apples, cider and snacks. A book and pamphlet section is arranged in the back of the store.

Yellow Sun is incorporated under state law with all members holding one share of stock. An annual stockholders meeting is planned for later in October.

Cohen noted that membership in the co-op entitles people not only to the wholesale food prices but makes them eligible for a share of the net profits that are returned to stockholders annually.

Cohen said the co-op was looking to the new retail business as a way of improving Yellow Sun's financial base and providing non-members with an opportunity to sample natural food products.

One of the prime goals of Yellow Sun is to set up a natural foods education program. Cohen said, "Yellow Sun was founded in large part because of our concern about people's diets and the need to educate people about preparation and use of the natural food."

Cohen said that members would be on hand at all times in the new store to answer questions about natural food cooking.

The co-op spirit was evidenced at Yellow Sun's new store last week as members wielding hammers and saws laid a new pine floor, cedar-shingled the store front and built shelves and storage facilities.

Cohen said that a condition of membership is two hours of volunteer work per month.

School Of Ed Notes

Ombudsman Elected

By GERALDINE COLELLA

Dr. George Urch, Program Director of International Education, has been elected Ombudsman this past week, by the School Council of Education. Urch will be assisted by Mr. John Hatch, also from the School of Education.

Dr. Urch and Mr. Hatch will work with students in an attempt to solve problems inhibiting success in school and a full meaningful life on campus. This includes anything related to a students struggle with administration procedure, communication with the system and its personal courses.

Personal problems will also be dealt with if the student so desires. The Ombudsman is willing to aid students in having an enjoyable more productive experience at UMass.

Dr. Urch is located in Room 230 of the School of Education. His office hours are, Monday and Wednesday from 10:00-12:00 A.M. and on Thursday from 2:30-4:00 P.M.

Christian Activist To Address Campus Group Wednesday Night

Josh McDowell, Christian activist, will be at UMass this week to speak at a rally and two lectures on the ultimate solution to the problems of man.

McDowell, 32, is an international representative of Campus Crusade for Christ. The seminary graduate spoke to more than 250,000 collegians on 70 campuses last year and has spoken on more than 400 campuses in 35 countries in the past five years.

In a recent lecture in Buffalo, New York, McDowell said "The majority of student movements are in error today because they are based on a thesis that history has proven to be false. A change in the social and economic system of society is not enough to bring about peace. Envy, greed, racism and hatred will still be present in the basic nature of man. What we need is a power that can change man's basic nature."

A native of Union City, Michigan, McDowell graduated from Wheaton College cum laude and from Talbot Theological Seminary magna cum laude. He holds degrees in economic theory, in languages and in history and is a member of two national honor societies.

He has been the recipient of numerous speaking awards including the Lyman Strauss Speaker of the Year Award which he received in 1965.

Campus Crusade for Christ is an interdenominational Christian movement of students and laymen which was founded in 1951 at UCLA by Bill Bright. It has grown to include a staff of approximately 3,000 who work on more than 250 campuses in the United States and in 45 foreign countries.

On Wednesday October 6, Josh McDowell will be speaking on "Midnight of History" at 7:30 p.m. in the Murray Lincoln Campus Center Auditorium at the University of Massachusetts.

Beware The "Big Ditch" Today

Blasting will begin at 2:00 P.M. at the entrance of the Orchard on Eastman Lane. An engineer from Warner Bros. who is constructing the "Big Ditch" reports that the blasting should last for an hour. Forestry classes using this area should be warned to keep clear of the area. There will also be workmen stationed along the area to assist those travelling on foot.

Norwich Hill Stable
ENGLISH AND WESTERN STYLE RIDING
TRAIL RIDES
INSTRUCTIONS
Prices - Weekdays
Couples - $5.00 an hr.
Singles - $3.00 an hr.
Weekends -
All $3.00 an hr.
Lessons - $5.00 an hr.
up Rt. 66 to Cullen Road
Huntington, Mass.
Tel. 1-413-667-3018

CAMPUS CENTER STUDENT UNION GOVERNING BOARD wants
YOU !
If you want to join come to Room 174-176 today.
WE WANT YOU

Proposed Consumer Protection Act Leaves Nader Wary

WASHINGTON (AP) - To the average person, Section 204 would be just 97 lines of complicated lingo loaded with unfamiliar legal references.

But to Ralph Nader it is the heart of the proposed consumer protection act of 1971. And his complaint to Congress is that a House committee has given the bill heart trouble.

Nader and Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-NY., are unhappy because, they say, Section 204--on "representation of consumers"--would not give the proposed new consumer protection agency the right to intervene in enforcement proceedings during preliminary, informal stages.

That is important, they say, because most cases involving alleged violations of consumer protection regulations are settled without formal proceedings.

For example, they say:

—The Federal Trade Commission resorted to formal adjudication only 25 times in 1970 to enforce flammability standards while disposing of more than 250 cases through informal proceedings.

—Agriculture Department disciplinary actions under meat and poultry inspection laws against adulterated food and unsanitary processing plants are done informally before a department attorney.

—The Civil Aeronautics Board instituted or concluded more than 1,800 informal conplaints against air carriers for violations of law, while settling only 231 cases through formal proceedings during fiscal 1971.

In addition, Nader and Rosenthal say the bill would not give the proposed agency the right to intervene or participate in "all formal adjudications 'seeking primarily to impose a fine, penalty or forfeiture,' all agency investigations and internal procedures."

This means they said, that the proposed agency could not investigate vehicle defects, food contamination, dangerous toys, possible violations of the Flammable Fabrics Act, or industry compliance with Interstate Commerce Commission rules governing household movers.

They also said the bill would keep the new agency from participating in agency supervisory practices-such as Federal Communications Commission supervision of radio and television licenses.

Nader and Rosenthal also lost a battle to give the agency what would have amounted to subpoena powers.

But Chairman Chet Holifield of the House Government Operations Committee which wrote the bill takes a different view.

"The allegation has been made," Holifield said, 'that 80 to 90 per cent of federal agency actions would be outside the purview of the consumer agency because they involve 'informal' rather than 'formal' proceedings.

"The Administrative Procedures Act makes no distinction of that kind. There is no valid basis for that allegation."

Holifield said the bill "does not give this new agency the right to dominate its sister agencies of government, nor to stand as a super agency above them, but it does direct the others to cooperate with the consumer agency in furnishing information.

"And it gives the consumer agency's administrator the right to request an agency to initiate a proceeding or publicly explain its failure to do so."

Notices

AHEA
Do you still want to make a difference? Organizational meeting, 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Skinner Lounge. Applications will be available. Be active!

CEQ
Meeting of the recycling committee Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Student Activities office (CC). All interested and concerned persons invited.

EQUESTRIAN CLUB
There will be a meeting for all members and all interested in joining at Grinnell Arena--Oct. 7 at 6:30 p.m.

FINE ARTS EVENTS
In consideration of the artist, all Fine Arts events will start promptly at 8 p.m. unless otherwise advertised.

GEOLOGY DEPT.
Geology majors: NEW & OLD departmental poop & Show & Tell tonight, Oct. 5 at 8 p.m. in Morrill 161.

HEYMAKERS SQUARE DANCE CLUB
The regular square dance will be held in the SUB tonight at 7:30. New members warmly welcomed. Bring your friends and learn how to square dance the fun way.

MEDICAL LOAN FUND
Emergency medical loan fund meeting Tuesday, at 9:30 in CC 811 for all interested.

MIRKWOOD
Anyone interested in performing at the Mirkwood Coffee House on Oct. 16 please contact Jim 6-6577 or Joey 6-6681.

NADER'S P.I.R.G.
Organizational meeting for all interested in a UM Public Interest Research Group Oct. 6 at 7 p.m. in Rm. 904-908 CC.

SIMS
Find out what SIMS is all about. Introductory movie and discussion Thurs., 2 & 8 p.m. in CC Aud.

In conjunction with FraternityRush
the Interfraternity Council and Campus Pizza
presents
"GREEK" GRINDER WEEK
Any Grinder on the Menu worth 75¢ for only 50¢
"Go Greek" with Campus Pizza
RT. 9, HADLEY
586-3880
Orders To Go
Visit with the Greeks this week.
Oct. 4, 5, 6, 7 1971
worth 25¢ OFF on any 75¢ Grinder
or 1 FREE PIZZA with every 4 ordered
with this coupon
at CAMPUS PIZZA

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

Must sell immed. 69 Fairlane 500 conv. blue/black/top, V8 auto PS 4, new ww tires, 32000 mi. First reasonable offer. Call 586-3665. tf10-8

Rebuilt Volvo B18, and B16 engines, new valves, guides, rings, bearings, clutches and rblt. carbs 200 & 100 and B18 4 spd. trans. and clutch linkage to convert your automatic 1225 Volvo to std. Also Pv44 Volvo in good cond. without engine and A 1225. For parts call 584-4820 eve dogs-will bargain on everything. tf10-6

'55 Olds, runs, needs work. 1-247-5828, after 5:30 p.m. tf10-6

61 VW Bus rebuilt engine, new brakes, muffler ex. mechanicsl some body, red. Good deal at $450 or best offer. Call Hon. 549-4150. tf10-6

1967 BSW - 1800 T 1 4-door sedan, am-fm, sw blaupunkt, Pirelli, excellent condition-best offer over $1600. 253-2412. tf10-5

67 Mustang conv. V8 3 spd., 4 new tires, excellent condition. $1050. Call 253-7840 after five. tf10-5

1968 Ford Mustang, 6 cyl., good running cond. See John 120 Amity St., across from Drake. $400. tf10-5

1967 MGB-GT, special, overdrive, wirewheels, new clutch, snow tires. Good condition. 584-2700 ext. 257 after 7 p.m. tf10-7

62 Austin Cooper with cooper s engine. $650. Call 549-1567. tf10-7

1960 Nova 6 cyl., new exhaust, and cooling system, 2 studded snow tires, $1300 or best offer. Days 545-2319, nights 586-3618, ask for Jim. tf10-8

1968 Austin Healey Sprite, convertible $400 or best offer. Needs some body work. Come to Butterfield House and ask for Ned. tf10-8

VW Bug 1967, fan., exc. cond., R & H cheap. Call Jan 545-0152 or 256-6868. tf10-11

1969 Fly Prunner 4 spd. $1700. Michael 546-5293. tf10-7

1967 VW Bug $700. Michael 546-5293. tf10-7

1966 Mustang, 6 cyld., std., excel condition, $850. 546-9026 evenings. tf10-7

1967 Volkswagon, blue, 48,000 miles, 3 new tires, new battery, excellent running condition. $600.00 or best offer. Call 665-2652. tf10-7

70 MGB exc running cond. Must sell. 249-8493. tf10-11

MOTORCYCLES FOR SALE

Must sell Honda CB 350, Heading West, 1969 excellent shape, 13000 mi. $450. Call Steve 549-6600. tf10-8

FOR SALE

TEAC-4010S, Stereo-tapedeck: 3-motors, automatic reverse, professional quality. Bought in Vietnam; never used, must sell, $300. 253-7629. 10-5

54 volume set of Great Books by Britanica, like new $150. 253-7807 after 5. tf10-6

Ten year old Peugot, rebuilt engine. Best offer, call Keith 253-2215 before 10 a.m. or after 10 p.m. tf10-12

Brand new 8 track stereo tapes - $3-latest hits incl. Superstar, Stewart. Send for free list. 43 Longview St., Spfld., Mass. 01108. tf10-12

Hofner bass guitar with case, exc. cond., $175 or best offer. Contact Bob 548-1190. tf10-8

Large Racoon Coat, excellent condition. Call 549-3068 $50. Tf 10-6

Snow tires, Firestone Town & Country, 7.75 x 14 white walls, mounted. Call Harold at 546-4240. tf10-6

8 track stereo tapes-Who, Stones, Tull, etc.-$2.85. Allman Bros., 4-Waistreet, etc.- $3.95 Call 546-8934.

Guitars, amps, acc., & records, at reasonable prices. The Guitar Workshop 99 Main St. Northampton 586-1706. tf10-6

Waterbeds-now all sizes $19.95! Factory warranty. Also, frames, liners & pads in stock. Call Mark at 546-5450. tf10-17

Brown suede pants, skirts, skins, top quality, wholesale. Pants $27, skirts $9.40, skins $5. Stop by to look Jan-424 Claiborne 5-2630 leave number if not in.

Benjamin stereo compacts, miracord and lenco turntables, elac cartridges and FMI speakers. At discount prices. Call 536-6917. tf10-5

Realistic Stereo, tape recorder, model, 900, 2 mikes includes 2 speakers, tapes. Call Sean $125 or 305 Johnson. Best. tf10-5

KLH model 24 (FM & changer) with 2 big KLH 17 speakers. Exc. cond. $210. Call Steve 256-8084. tf10-4

1 pair studded snow tires 650-13 new last season $30. Call Peter 253-7236 around 6. tf10-5

Portable stereo Phono Bell 25W Amp. Harris Tweed Jackets 38 studded snow tires 560 x 13. Womans unused Dacron Coat 14. 253-5115. tf10-5

$90 Buckle Ski Boots used 6 times $60 with stand sz. 8 1/2, head ski poles good cond. $20, Dourc Ski Rack used twice $10 Concorde Compact Stereo, AM-FM receiver, loudness and filter controls, 40 watts peak 28 usable with Kemp 11 speakers 6 mo. old $190. Panasonic TV 1 mo. old $70. Will bargain on everything. Call 584-4020 evenings. tf10-6

We undersell all. Any and all top name appliances, stereos, radios, refrigerators, anything. Call Larry 6-5090 or come to 350 Cance. tf10-13

Just like people: bruised on the outside, but beautiful inside. 1965 Chevy convert. Call 586-2780. tf10-6

LOST

Reward! A gold link bracelet positively lost Wed., Sept. 29 in Thompson 102 between 3:20-4:30 p.m. 549-0105 after 5 & 5-2741 84-5 Debl. tf10-6

Lightweight blue jacket. Had NSJCC State Champs inscribed. Call 6-7537. tf10-6

ROOMMATES WANTED

Male share 2 bdrm. apt. in sund. with 2 others. $60 Mike 665-3012, 545-1318. tf10-6

Roommate female to share rent with 2 girls, own room in Hadley. Call 586-2815. tf10-5

Female roommate wanted-furnished studio apt.-$65 mo.-15 min. from UMass. Call 323-4097 keep trying. tf10-4

Working girl desires roommate with apartment. Must move soon! Call Diana 549-1079. tf10-6

HELP WANTED

Need Monday? Earn $25 or more per week! Work your own hours at your convenience! Call Barry or Dave, 4:00-5:30, 546-6663. tf10-8

Girl with insurance exp. exp. auto & homeowners, rating & typing essential. Call 584-5555, AW Borawski, Inc., 88 King St., Northampton. tf10-6

Ambitious people wanted to sell jewelry on campus-no experience necessary-high commissions - send name, address and tel. no. to Richards, 1181 Main St., Springfield, Mass. tf10-8

Need money? Earn $25 or more a week! Work your own hours at your convenience. Call Barry or Dave 406-530. tf10-5

FOR RENT

$75/month, utilities included, one block from campus. Call Bonnie 253-9985, 9-11 p.m. tf10-6

Available now-one bedroom apartment at Puffton Village. Call 549-3687 tf10-8

WANTED

Wanted to buy - Ten speed racing bike. Will pay top dollar. Call 542-3052, ask for Scott. tf10-6

PERSONAL

Josh is coming this Wednesday and Thursday! 10-5

Free young female cat long hair, clean. Call 1-323-7505. tf10-11

Mike and Dave, definately lonesome blond and brunette. But shy will be in contact, very agressive once known. tf10-5

Melville Basement invites James Basement and 4th floor to a party Friday night at 8. tf10-31

Horoscopes done professionally. Call 549-6766, Write David Elliot-Mannique A-11 North Village. Minimum $5 tf10-6

KITTENS

Black Angora 6 weeks old, housebroken, healths happy, lovable pets. Call 584-8901 after 5 p.m. tf10-5

LECTURE NOTES

Lecture notes are now available in room 31R in the Student Union Lobby for all sections of Anthro 104, Botany 101, Econ., 125 and 126, Geology 101, Gov. 100 and 150, Hist. 151, Human Dev. 270, Micro. 140, Phil. 105, Psych. 101, 262, 283, 270, 280, 301, and 302, Soc. 101, 200, 101 and 135. One section of Hist. 150 and Psych. 325 also in. tf10-7

ENTERTAINMENT WANTED

Every Wednesday night at the English Pub-Do your own thing! Shure vocal master PA system available! Call Jerry, 549-1200 or Mark, 256-8270. tf10-8

TYPING

Typing - thesis, dissertations, etc. Fast, accurate; have Greek alphabet, math. & chem. symbols. Call 253-3081. tf10-13

Typing - thesis, dissertations, etc. Fast, accurate; have Greek alphabet, math & chem symbols. Call 253-3081. tf10-3

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY

Want a part-time or full time job? Running your own business, no door to door, no telephone surveying. Call 253-5847 after 5. tf10-5

SERVICES

Amherst Audio services. Stereo components, tape decks for home or car. 197 No. Pleasant St. 256-8133. tf5-12

Radio

Wood Speech Live

WMUA, 91.1 FM

4:30 p.m. President Robert C. Wood-live from the Student Union Ballroom

7:00 p.m. EVENING NEWS-a full half hour of complete news and information from Amherst's largest broadcast news department, WMUA NEWS. Area news and regional, national and world news from UPI, AP, and UPI World Audio Network. Includes sports and a five minute update of major stories at 7:25.

7:30 p.m.-9:00 p.m. Progressive music.

9:00 p.m.-10:00 THE FIRESIGN THEATRE

10:00 p.m.-11:00 p.m. FOCUS-Tonight's Focus program will take a slight departure from the sordid world of politics. Ken Mosakowski's special guests for tonight's forum will be Robert and Elizabeth Backman, the couple who recently gained extensive notoriety by giving up their Northfield Mass., home for occupancy by the "Brotherhood of the Spirit" commune. The Backmans will talk about such diverse subjects as graphology, education in America, and their proposal for an unconventional "free school".

11:00 p.m. LATE NIGHT NEWS REPORT-another complete half hour report.

11:30 p.m.-3:00 a.m. LAREDO-rides your way with progressive sounds.

WFCR, 88.5 FM

2 PM-MUSIC IN THE AFTERNOON (S)-Mendelssohn, Italian Symphony; Schoenberg, Chamber Symphony, Mozart's Requiem, and works of Brahms, Spoor, Williams, and Martin.

5 - ALL THINGS CONSIDERED

6 - QUE TAL, AMIGOS

7 - LOUIS LYONS: NEWS AND COMMENT

7:30 - COLORS, A Black nation magazine.

8:30 - BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA, (S)-live; Beethoven, Symphony No. 6, "Pastorale"; Einem, Violin Concerto; Hindemith, "Mathis der Maler," symphony.

10:30 - RAPPING NIGHTLY

11 - JEAN SHEPHERD

11:45 - JAZZ OMNIBUS (S)

(S) denotes stereo broadcast.

Day School Seeks Items

The University Day School (the new U.Mass. day care center for preschool children of students and staff) needs rugs, bookcases, shelves, chests, large and small tables, an electric frying pan, cushions, and other household items. We can also use plastic dishes, kitchen utensils, remnants and yarn scraps, magazines and newspapers, children's books, records, toys and educational materials. Magnets, baby scales, thermometers, and other scientific equipments are also needed. Any donation no matter how old or battered will be greatly used and appreciated by the children and staff. Call 545-2466 or come to Bowditch Lodge.

Draft Counselor's Corner

What About The Next Guy?

By GILBERT J. SALK

A lot of you have been blessed by the fates and have high lottery numbers, medical problems, or something else which will get you out of the service with a minimum of hassles. I'd like to ask you to think a little beyond your own immediate situation and consider how you are now going to relate to the fact that a large number of your brothers, not so lucky, are still fucked over by the Selective Service System.

One of the nice things about the lottery is that it cut the anti-war movement in half; almost everyone with a high number immediately began to view the war, and the draft, as an academic question not deserving any more of their attention than the football scores.

Unfortunately, people are still dying, and people are still being drafted. You have an opportunity to help those who don't have an easy out if you're willing to exert yourselves a little bit.

Ask yourself what you would do if you had a low number and no medical problems. Would you go into the service? Or do you really believe that it is wrong for one man to kill another? That war is morally unjustifiable? If you believe that your moral code would make it impossible for you to participate in war, does it also go so far as to make you want to help others find a way out of participating?

Think about a draft board member for a moment. He sees some kid who's about to lose his student deferment and carrying a number 23 in his pocket come in with a CO form. The board member doesn't understand what CO is all about anyway, so he's real hard on the guy. He figures the kid is either a coward, a commie-symp, or some kind of a queer. In any case, he's positive that the kid is only applying because he has a low number--that nobody can really be serious about not wanting to participate in war for moral reasons. He's not too likely to vote favorably on the kid's application.

Now, let's assume that you enter next, with your high number which is obviously never going to be called. All of a sudden, that board member has a hard time categorizing you. Your request for a I-O classification is not an act of cowardice because there's no way they're going to draft you anyway. He has no choice but to grant your position a certain amount of legitimacy, just because you went to the trouble of demanding recognition for it even though you didn't need it.

Once that legitimacy is established in his mind, it holds over to the next guy who comes in as a CO, making it just a little easier for him. You risk nothing: a CO whose number is not called does not have to perform alternative service.

But by requesting and getting a I-O, you are helping others get out who may not have any choice. Think about it. You're lucky, maybe. But what about the guy across the hall?

MDC Classifieds Pay

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

by SYDNEY OMARR

Where the Stock Market is concerned, Gemini individuals do well with issues associated with communication and transportation, especially railways. The printing industry, publications which include newspapers and books, also fit into the Gemini Market portfolio.

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on money, personal possessions, collecting of needed material. Key is to perceive what is of value-versus what merely glitters. Pisces person could play prominent role. Seek in out of way place.

TAURUS (APRIL 20-May 20): Lunar cycle promotes activity which requires daring, originality. Stick to beliefs. Don't compromise principles. New ventures are favored. Invest in your own abilities. What you require will be available.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Finish what you start. Expand sphere of activity, influence. Follow lead of Aries person. Visit individual confined to home, hospital. Cooperate in club, group, civic project. Gain is shown.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Income from professional endeavors is spotlighted. Some desires are fulfilled. Creative spark gets things going; you attract success. Member of opposite sex is involved. You are inspired.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Hunch pays off; heed inner voice. Don't be misled by one of little faith. Accent now on professional efforts. You get backing from those in authority. Know that there is room for you at top. Act like it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Good lunar aspect coincides now with long range goals. You get word related to published material. You find out where you stand with one who is far away. Distance no longer will make a difference.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Money belonging to another may temporarily be your responsibility. Check details; be thorough. Take nothing for granted. Some restrictions are actuality for your benefit. Know this; respond accordingly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Play waiting game; time now is on your side. Don't be stampeded into signing agreement, contract. Wait and see. Let others reveal their plans. Set up stronger line of communication. Find guidelines.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be moderate. Applies to health habits and work procedures. Co-operate with Taurus, Libra individuals. Diplomacy now pays dividends. Avoid any tendency to force issues. Take it slow, easy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Study Sagittarius message. Be perceptive. Avoid self deception. Emotions tend to dominate logic if you so permit. Creative urge is evident. Use it constructively. Express self in unique way.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Live up to responsibilities. Don't duck issues. Basic issues surge to forefront. Older person figures prominently. Check property, home safety measures. Apparent minor detail could hold key to achievement.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on short journeys, dealings with close neighbors, relatives. Take care with what you say, write. It is apt to be on record. Obtain hint from Aquarius message. Be specific.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are vibrant, dynamic, attractive to opposite sex. Domestic adjustment, made this year, should prove beneficial. You should harmonize especially well with Gemini persons. Scorpio is good for your finances.

Copyright 1971, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS

1 Piece of dinnerware
6 Mountain nymph
11 Covering for ankle and instep
12 Industrious animal
14 Devoured
15 Protuberances
17 Compass point
18 Pronoun
19 Helps
21 Old Testament (abbr.)
22 Brief
24 Brother of Odin
25 Heraldry: grafted
27 Fabulous bird
28 Preposition
29 Cry of Bacchanals
30 Reveres
33 Man's nickname
34 101 (Roman number)
35 Communist
37 Difficult
38 Spanish for "yes"
39 Crates
41 Printer's measure
42 Device for applying words to a surface
45 A state (abbr.)
46 Sum up
48 Royal
49 River island
50 More profound
52 Responsible for 54 Remains at ease
55 Diminishes

DOWN

1 Idle talk
2 Falsehood
3 Near
4 Taut
5 God of love
6 Fat
7 Remainder
8 Babylonian deity
9 Hail!
10 Signify
11 Manner of running
13 Nerve network
16 Separating
19 Rises
20 Indefinite number
23 Roamer
26 Part of face (pl.)
28 Symbol for tellurium
29 Latin conjunction
31 Compass point
32 Three-toed sloth
33 Male goose
36 Wretched fellows
37 Chief
38 Prophets
39 Eyelashes
40 Satiate
43 Allowance for waste
44 Young cow
47 River in Scotland
49 Man's nickname
51 Postscript (abbr.)
53 Paid notice

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

A	C	T	A		T	R	A	M		S	O	W
C	O	E	D		R	O	M	E		I	K	E
E	N	D	R	A	G	E		T	A	L
		T	A	C	T		A	R		T	A	P	A
E	R	R	S		E	R	O	S			S	E	R
R	A	G	E	S			T	O	A	D		R	I
A	D	O	R	E	S		D	R	E	A	M	S
S	I		E	L	L	A		A	E	R	I	E
E	C	F		L	A	M	E		M	E	S	S
S	T	A	B		M	O	L	E		A	S
		B	E	T		N	I	L	E		I	S
A	L	L		A	N	E	T		S	T	O	A
B	E	E		R	O	S	E		T	O	N	Y

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc. 5

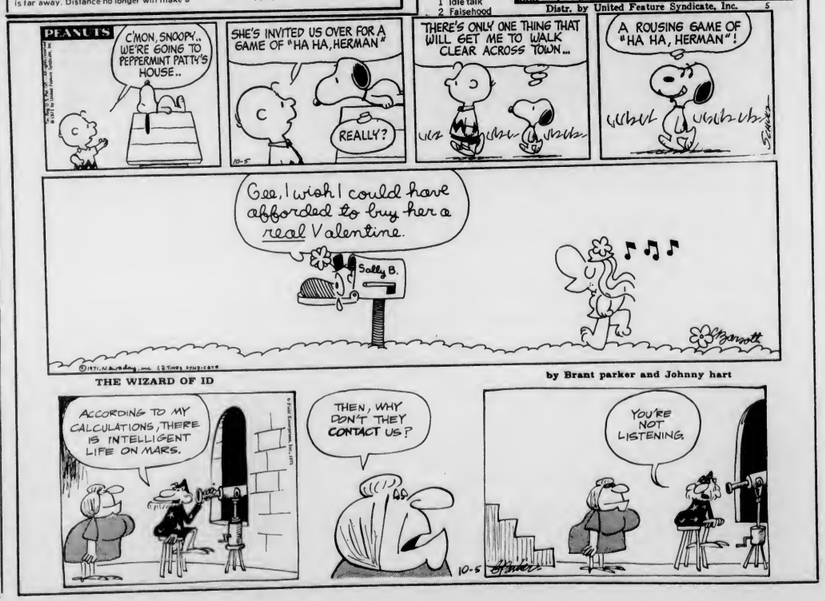
WATER BEDS SALE

Your Choice

KING, QUEEN, or DOUBLE SIZE MATTRESS-

5 yr. guarantee with 1" Foam Insulating Pad $24.99

$29.99



A Head of Time

360 College St. Amherst

Rt. 9 Tel. 253-5394

Open Noon til 9

Commentary...

Johnson Decision A Monumental Step

By STEVE GERSHMAN

Tuesday September 28, 1971 may well go down in history as a momentous day in the history of professional sports. For on that day, Alex Johnson and players everywhere won a case that should have been won years ago. This decision against the baseball management may well set a precedent for all sports.

An arbitration board ruled out that Johnson, suspended by California, is to receive his full salary and be placed on the disabled list for the remainder of the season for emotional factors.

What was said in effect was that a player who is emotionally ill, is as ill as a player with a physical injury. It is about time that baseball and all sports catch up with our modern day health standards. While for years we have treated mental problems as an illness just like a physical illness, sports has not.

In the past, a player with a physical injury was put on the disabled list and paid while recuperating. Meanwhile, a player with an emotional problem was either hidden, fined or forced to retire without pay. With this decision the panel set up new standards in baseball and hopefully all sports.

It seems the owners just wouldn't admit that an emotional problem like Johnson's may have been a direct result of the pressures of the game. Baseball players play 162 games in only four and a half months. As a result they may go three weeks without a day off in the middle of the season. While they are playing, players are under great pressure to do well before the fans and management. All this coupled with the hours of traveling and lack of sleep for many nights can do a job on a player's nerves. The owners have failed to realize this and refused to cut down on the games and straighten out the crazy hours. So, it seems only right that this decision was made, and none too soon. I only hope that other sports follow suit and realign their thinking toward player problems. It is about time that baseball lived up to its reputation of being our national pastime and leader.

O's Take 2nd From A's

Try To Wrap Up Series Today

BALTIMORE (AP)—Boog Powell hammered two home runs in a four-homer Baltimore barrage off Jim "Catfish" Hunter that trumped Oakland's last remaining ace yesterday and gave the defending world champion Orioles a 5-1 victory over the A's in the second game of the American League Playoffs.

The victory extended the Orioles' string of playoff triumphs to eight over three seasons, gave them a commanding 2-0 lead over the A's in this best-of five series and left them just one victory away from their third consecutive American League championship.

The series shifts to Oakland for game No. 3 today, with Oakland Manager Dick Williams left with only 10-game winner Diego Segui to throw against the third of four Baltimore 20-game winners, Jim Palmer, after watching Vida Blue and Hunter whacked by the heavy-hitting Orioles.

Williams, who pointed out following the opening defeat he had "one ace left even though they trumped my first ace," saw Brooks Robinson and Ellie Hendircks collect homers along with Powell in a seven-hit attack.

Mike Cuellar, meanwhile, checked the A's on six hits, pitching out of several jams with the aid of a pickoff and the continued conservatism of Williams, who in the sixth inning had clean-up hitter Tommy Davis sacrifice.

The A's were able to crack through against the 34-year-old Cuellar only in the fourth on a Sal Bando double on a single by Dave Duncan despite getting the first runner on base in three other innings.

One of those occasions came in the sixth with Baltimore leading only 2-1. Reggie Jackson opened the inning for the A's with a double, and Cuellar appeared to be headed for some difficulty with the Nos. 4-5-6 hitters coming up.

But Williams, who tried a suicide squeeze that backfired in Sunday's 5-3 loss, had Davis sacrifice Jackson to third. Jackson, however, remained there as Bando grounded out to third and Angel Mangual flied to center.

That, as it turned out, was the lst time the A's got a base runner on against Cuellar, who set down the last 12 men in order.

The Orioles, looking for victory No. 13 in succession after a season-ending 11-game winning streak, broke through against the 21-game winning Hunter in the second inning when Robinson tagged the first pitch to him 370 feet into the left-field bleachers.

Powell, whose two homers gave him a total of four in playoff action dating back to 1969, apparently liked what he saw of Hunter's first pitch to Robinson. He also tagged a first pitch for a homer in the third inning, a drive deep into the right-field bleachers.

After Powell's homer, Hunter retired 12 straight batters before Hendricks homered to deep right center in the seventh inning to make it 3-1. Powell then wrapped it up in the eighth, after a walk to Dave Johnson, by tagging his second homer 390 feet to right center.

The homer came on a 3-2 pitch after Powell had previously bunted foul.

The A's, meanwhile, kept at Cuellar but never could get the big hit.

In the second, Davis led off with a double but remained there as the next three batters went out in order. In the third, Dick Green led off with a bunt single and got a second on a walk, but Reggie Jackson flied out to end the inning.

In the fifth, Bert Campaneris singled with one out, but was picked off first by Cuellar. And, finally, in the sixth, Williams' strategy backfired.

A crowd of 35,003, more than 15,000 short of capacity, watched the game that had to be a bitter defeat for the A's, who came in here with a record 55 road victories and now leave with two defeats.

And their pitching is in extremely poor shape with only sore-elbowed Chuck Dobson and possibly Blue, working with two days' rest, available if Segui can turn back the Orioles at Oakland today.

That game will be nationally televised by NBC following the third game of the series between Pittsburgh and San Francisco in the National League playoffs.

The winners of the two playoffs meet in the World Series beginning in the American League city next Saturday.

UConn Dominates YanCon Stars

Connecticut halfback Lou Allen (Windsor, Conn), Maine tackle Dick Todd (Shelton, Conn) and Vermont halfback Steve Coon (St. Albans, Vt.) have been chosen as the top offensive, defensive and sophomore players in the Yankee Conference for their performances last Saturday.

Allen, a 5'10 180-lb. sophomore, gained 178 yards rushing on 24 carries for 2 touchdowns, including a game- winning 72-yard run in which he broke 3 tackles as UConn came from behind to nip New Hampshire 28-21.

Todd, a 6'3 235-lb. senior, tackled three ball-carriers for losses, made 8 unassisted tackles and led a pressure-defense that forced 3 interceptions as Maine upset URI 21-7.

Coon, a 6'2 200-lb. sophomore, led Vermont with 64 yards on 13 tries and returned 3 kickoffs for 53 yards as the Catamounts lost to Lehigh 49-8.

Other nominations were: Offense - HB Mike Porter (Maine), TE Tim Sullivan (Vermont) & HB Ed Jenkins (Holy Cross); Defense - HB Dom Carlucci (Connecticut), MLB Dan Harper (Holy Cross), T Rick Versocki & E Steve Furness; Sophomores - OT Frank Spencer (Maine), C Rich Foye (Connecticut) & FB "Molly" McGee (Rhode Island).

Powder Puff Football Is No Ruse

As the Mushrooms sprouted, Ducks quacked, Vikings conquered and Whalers splashed the Powder Puff Football season kicked off under the lights on the Intramural fields. The opening games were a display of clockwork precision mixed with predicted confusion. The tension and excitement of the participants was contagious. The male audience was left in awe over the finesse exhibited by the various teams. In the Sorority league the gathering was beyond expectation. The cheers and proud smiles were plentiful as ACO shocked PBI, TRI SIG smucked CO and GSS crunched SK. It was evident to all that Powder Puff Football was indeed a success.

The organization of the program is under the direction of Miss Merrie Fidler formerly from UCCA of Davis. The various teams have been divided into five leagues. The resident teams are grouped into the Saphire and Emerald leagues. The Thalian and Uranian leagues are composed of sororities. All independent teams belong to the Topaz League. The games are scheduled for Mon. - Thurs. nights at 6:00. The women's program is new but steady under the qualified leadership of Miss Fidler. It is hoped that participation will increase in equal proportion to the enthusiasm already displayed. As the program runs parallel to that of the men, there is ample opportunity for recognition and reward for success. Come join us either through participation or encouragement. We'll see you on the gridiron.

Bowling Tryouts

The UMass bowling team will hold tryouts at the Boyden bowling alleys Wednesday October 6 at seven o'clock.

All undergraduates interested in competing for a position on the team are welcome to try out. The tryout will be held in the form of a "roll off" (each bowler will bowl four games). Players with the ten highest total scores will make the team.

A $2.00 fee will be charged of each bowler to cover the cost of his bowling.

Please contact: Ernie Malagrida, 546-7882 before Wednesday night if you want to try out.

Paige Reveals Age

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Satchel Paige sat there, his elbow on the table lined with dignitaries and his chin resting in the grip of his hand.

He listened while one speaker after another traced Ol' Satch's 42 years in baseball and joked about his reluctance ever to reveal his age. He was subdued and visibly shaken, possibly thinking this was all just a wild nightmare.

Satch heard Ewing Kauffman, owner of the Kansas City Royals, tell how Paige "fought adversity, fought color, fought prejudices." Kauffman then revealed that a plague of Paige would be erected prominently in the 'Royals' new stadium in the Harry S. Truman sports complex.

Paige gazed out over the throng of 700 who gathered to pay tribute Sunday night to Satchel, a Negro many say was the greatest pitcher ever. His eyes faded shut during the ovations. Beside him was his wife, Lahoma. Not far away were his children, seven of them, some too young to know what adversity, color and prejudices are all about.

Paige listened while Bill Veeck, who gave Satch his first major league chance with Cleveland at the age of 42, tell how the old pitcher made his debut by striking out three Yankees in the ninth inning on 10 pitches. Veeck described Paige as "the greatest pitcher I've

Paige heard Buck O'Neil, a player like Satch for the old Kansas City Monarchs, say Satch was the "greatest who ever lived."

Finally, Satch strode to the microphone, and thin mist sifted from his eyes. He seemed lost for words, admitted that "it looks like my writing has done got cold."

He stood there like a statue, this Negro legend who was to hint that honors had passed him by until now except for his induction into the Baseball Hall of Fame in August.

Paige spoke briefly about his Hall of Fame induction. He was proud. "At Cooperstown," he said, "they told me I was worthy but didn't tell me what I was worthy of." He cleared his throat. "Everybody's always wanted to know my age. I told you tonight. I'd like to know if everybody's happy."

The testimonial program had a reproduction of the verification of Paige's birth record from the Mobile, Ala., Health Department. It said he was born July, 1906. That confirms he is 65.

"I revealed my age," Paige said, "because when I told people I was 50, they told me their grandpappy saw me pitch."

"I never had a night until now. I made the Hall of Fame and now I've had my night, and I feel like I can go out of baseball by the front door. I can give it up with ease."

Intramurals

FOOTBALL

FIELD	TIME	TEAMS
1	6:00	ACO vs. SK
2		CO vs. GSS
3		Conglos vs. Government
4		Civ. Eng. vs. Education
5		Zeroes vs. Burners
1	7:00	Whalers vs. Kumquats
2		Vikings vs. Abigails
3		BKP vs. SAE
4		PSD vs. APO
5		SPE vs. KS
6		PLP vs. DS
1	8:00	SAM vs. PMD
2		ZN vs. LCA
3		Orcs vs. Cull
4		Acme vs. Fellas
5		Mouse vs. Buldogs
6		Spunk vs. 3M's
1	9:00	Bunch vs. Dildoughs
2		Mags vs. Heads
3		Monuments vs. Bulldozers
4		Terrors vs. Senators
5		Barracudas vs. Bruins
6		Broncos vs. Chestnuts
1	10:00	Kumquat vs. Machine
2		Gypsies vs. VVV
3		Tubes vs. Brotherhood
4		Mauraurders vs. Lions

TUG-O-WAR

1	7:00	Staylee's vs. Lemons
2		Pipers vs. Lovers
1	7:15	Heifers vs. Trojans
2
1	7:30	Browns vs. Stnuts
2		BX vs. Mouseketeers
1	7:45	Civ. Eng. vs. Dutchmen
2		3M's vs. Munchkins

Frosh Gridders Rout BU In Opener, 32-19

By BILL BALLOU

The UMass freshman football team opened its season on a winning note Friday, with an impressive 32-19 decision over the Boston University frosh. There was little doubt as to the outcome of this game from the opening whistle on, as the Redmen simply outclassed their opponents despite a game comeback effort in the second half by the Terriers.

The balance that Coach Bill Maxwell had hoped to show the BU team was in evidence throughout the contest, with the UMass offense combining time-consuming running plays with the passing of quarterbacks Fred Kellihet and Dave Modugno.

On the other hand, BU quarterback Mark Ryll was forced to play practically a two-man offense, relying on halfback Gary Guerin to run and flanker Ed Modoono to grab his passes.

The defensive pattern of the game was set early in the game when Boston University, on a third and inches situation was twice stopped short and had to turn the ball over to the Redman offense. From here the frosh ran 18 plays and ate up a good part of the first period before being forced to settle for a 15 yard field goal from the toe of John Ames.

The Redmen struck paydirt again in the second quarter on a drive that covered just 37 yards and culminated in Rich Herman powering in from the three on fourth down. Ames converted and it was 10-0, UMass.

Again Boston University could not move the ball and was forced to punt. A bad snap from center was finally covered on the B.U. two yard line and two plays later Tom Szematowicz ran it in for six more points. The PAT kick was blocked off and the Redmen led 16-0, and were threatening to run the Terriers into the Charles.

A few punts and two interceptions later in the period, BU scored its first points. After an interception gave the Terriers the ball on the UMass 25, Ryll mixed a run with a short pass and set up a 23 yard strike that he threw to Ed Modoono for the score. Modoono kicked the extra point to make it 16-7. That's how the half ended.

The second half proved to be virtually a stalemate, with both teams scoring two touchdowns, and UMass adding a field goal by their shoeless soccer kicker, Dennis Lombardo.

The TD that proved to be the game winner for the Redmen was a real pip. On a punt, the deep man for BU, Rich Porter, fumbled the ball amidst a swarm of white jerseys, with the result being the Redmen having the ball on the Terrier 13.

The Boston defense held and forced Lombardo to come in for a field goal attempt. The snap from center sailed over everybody, with Lombardo picking it up out near the 25 yard line. The kicker, weighing only 150 pounds and wearing no shoe on his right foot and being pursued by about six BU linemen literally took his life in his hands and fired a desperation pass toward the end zone.

It went in and out of the hands of Bill Wolfe at the goal line, and BU figured it would take over. However, there was a penalty on the play, with the result being first and goal from the one for UMass.

Larkey Mays ended the foolishness on the next play with a TD. Dennis Lombardo converted making it 23-7. Despite a 75 yard touchdown bomb from BU quarterback Ryll to his big tight end Paul Stone, the game was pretty well decided and UMass took it by 32-19.

Especially impressive for the Redman frosh was the work of the offensive and defensive lines. Offensively the line help the Redmen gain control of the ground and did a great job on screen passes. Two crunching blocks on screens by guard Don Sokolnicki were key plays on TD drives and are indicative of the overall line play. The defensive line, led by Big Ed McAleney dumped BU quarterback Ryll several times for massive losses and forced him out the pocket countless other times.

After this impressive start, the freshmen hope to continue their winning ways this Sunday in a home game against Boston College. Game time is 1:30 P.M. at Alumni Stadium.

Daily Collegian SPORTS

Runners Travel To Hub For Tri-Meet

By JAY NESTOR

The UMass cross country team travels to Boston this afternoon for a tri-meet with New England powers Harvard and Providence College. The 5.5 mile race, to be run over Franklin Park, will provide the Redmen with more competition than they experienced in their opener against Northeastern and St. Johns on Saturday.

Providence features Bill Speck who was runner-up to UMass' Ron Wayne last year in the New England's and is again one of the top two or three runners in New England this year. Thomas Aman also returns from last year's friars squad and along with Speck leads a strong group of veterans and freshman.

Harvard...well, what can you say about the Crimson? Undoubtedly the finest cross country program in New England and one of the best in the East year after year after year...And this year is no different. They are the best in New England again.

Sophomore Rick Rojas has emerged as one of the top harriers in the region this season and along with veterans Mike Koerner and John Quirk and some excellent depth constitute a formidable squad. Last week the Crimson romped over Northeastern, 21-47...this speaks for itself.

The outlook for the Redmen is extremely overcast, but a victory may not be as important as the experience to be gained.

THE CRISCI CRUNCH-UMass cross country runner, Peter Crisci, churns through the rugged Orchards on way to a fine opening meet performance against Northeastern and St. Johns on Saturday. Today he'll be at Franklin Park along with the rest of the Redman harriers to due battle against New England powers Harvard and Providence. (MDC Photo by Charlotte Lettis)

Giants, Pirates All Even; Series Resumes Today

PITTSBURGH (AP) - Nelson Briles took heat treatment on his right thigh; Juan Marichal played catch with coach Ossie Virgil; managers Danny Murtaugh and Charlie Fox sat on rocking chairs and talked with reporters.

This was all the action yesterday as the Pittsburgh Pirates and San Francisco Giants rested for today's third game in the best-of-5 National League playoffs. The teams are tied 1-1, with the rest of the series-as many games as necessary-scheduled for Pittsburgh's Three Rivers stadium.

The 28-year-old Briles, a spot starter and reliever in Pittsburgh's drive to the Eastern Division championship, was Murtaugh's pitching choice in the third game.

Briles said that his right thigh stiffened during three innings of pitching last Thursday in Philadelphia.

The Pirates lost the playoff opener 5-4 with Steve Blass the starter, and won the second game Sunday 9-4 although starter Dock Ellis only lasted five innings.

The Pirates are depending on their slugging prowess for an edge over the 32-year-old Marichal, an 18-game winner this season as the Giants won the Western title on the last day of the season behind the righthander.

Marichal, who injured a hip Sept. 26 in a collision with Cincinnati's Lee May, said he still doesn't feel 100 per cent but that the hip is okay.

San Francisco Manager Charlie Fox makes no secret of the fact that he feels the Giants have the edge because they have Marichal and right-hander Gaylord Perry.

"In any given contest it's who has the pitching," Fox said, as he rocked alongside Murtaugh in the Pittsburgh manager's office.

Fox could have a bigger pitching edge than he realizes. Murtaugh disclosed that Ellis, the Pirates' 19 game winner, has elbow trouble and may not pitch again in the playoffs, or the World Series if the Pirates should win the National League pennant.

Murtaugh has Blass slated for the fourth game tomorrow, but if it goes five he might not have Ellis to come back.

Murtaugh said Ellis has an appointment with a doctor.

Ellis wasn't happy with the scheduled medical examination.

"Hell, the season's almost over," he said. "There's no sense in seeing a doctor now."

Ellis also had a few other words for the Pirates' management yesterday. He rapped them as cheapskates, saying he had to pay $50 out of his own money in San Francisco to get a hotel room with a bed big enough for him. He also said the Pirates didn't hire a big enough plane for the team to travel comfortably.

"The management don't deserve to win the pennant; don't deserve to win the world series...but we're going to win because we have the best team," Ellis added.

Nixon Bores Billie Jean

NEW YORK (AP) - President Nixon had to call three times yesterday to congratulate Billie Jean King on becoming the first woman tennis player to win $100,000 in a year.

The first two times the President tried, Billie Jean, wearing a cherry red pants suit, stood by uncomfortably while the phones were jiggled.

"Nobody comes on," she said.

Finally, the connection was made and Billie Jean joined other sports figures-golfer Orville Moody, Kansas City quarterback Len Dawson and the Texas football team-as well as astronauts on the moon as persons privileged to get a personal call from the White House.

"Billie Jean, I want to congratulate you," the President said in clear tones. "I'm glad to see a fellow Californian has won more than $100,000.

"It's marvelous. You remember when I saw you play about six years ago in New York?"

"Yes, Mr. President," Billie Jean replied. "It was at Piping Rock, Long Island."

"That's right," the President said. "You have won many tournaments but this is your best year, don't you think?"

Billie Jean started to reply, but the President continued: "It's really been a great year and you have been very helpful in our program for physical fitness."

There was a lull. Billie Jean fidgeted. Then she turned to the telephone and asked: "Are you through?"

Afterward, the bespectacled Mrs. King, recent winner of the U.S. Open championship and three times Wimbledon champion, was asked if Nixon's call made her nervous.

"Naw, not at all," she replied. "I've met him before. Besides this sort of stuff doesn't excite me. I get charged up when I get on a tennis court."

"O'Brien's Creation" Fills The Orchard

By EARLE BARROLL

The Orchard was alive and kicking on Saturday...nothing out of the ordinary for the Orchard Hill Residents who make it their "in spot", but particularly abnormal for a group of athletes who call themselves the UMass Cross Country Team.

You see, cross country has not been a growing commodity in the field of spectator sports at UMass and while the program has grown to that of a New England power the campus support has been less than worthy of their performances.

And this all goes back to the cross country stigma that "you only get to see the start and the finish of the race," which at UMass and in most schools in New England has been the case over the years.

But now this has ended at UMass. Thanks to the "ditch" running up Eastman Lane and the genius of cross country coach Ken O'Brien a new course has been layed out that gives the spectator perhaps the most viewing time of a race in the east and maybe in the entire country.

Saturday was the premier showing for the new "O'Brien Creation" and what came out of it was a new dimension in cross country viewing that has never been seen on this campus. Almost three miles of the race could be seen...that's right, three miles, two of which were in the Orchard, the two which make up the meat of the race, miles two through four.

The race got underway behind the Women's Physical Education Building and proceeded past the School of Education, through the pastures and on to East Pleasant Street for the trudge up to the Water Towers and then on to the Orchard for what proved to be the toughest stretch of cross country running in New England.

From the Observation Tower the progress of the runners could be picked up when they passed Eastman Lane on the way up to the towers. The runners then snuck out of view for a little over a minute and then came into view entering Orchard Hill.

During the first couple of miles of a cross country race the runner's main concern is to get into good position in the pack for the demanding miles, two through four, which pit runner against runner, team against team, heart against heart, man against man.

Orchard Hill was like the Coliseum on Saturday. The hills were lined with spectators as they watched the gladiators, clad so scantly, battle head to head through the valleys, up the steep hills, over rocks and sand and through the scorching heat.

This was cross country at its best, the portion of the race that makes or breaks the conditioned athlete, the battle ground where many a team battle has been won or lost...and it was brought to the spectator through the ingenious of Ken O'Brien and the UMass, Northeastern and St. Johns cross country teams.

On Saturday, the UMass harriers host Yankee Conference rival UConn in what will be a classic example of runners "wanting at each other"...This is one of the top rivalries in New England and the Coliseum setting is perfect for the gladiators who will due battle this Saturday.

Get there early, as the Orchard will probably fill a little quicker this week. And if you get a little fidgety waiting you could always grab an apple or two and wait for the horns to blare out, announcing the coming of the runners.

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather Hey, it's gonna be sunny today.

VOLUME XCIX, ISSUE 21 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1971

Wood Explains...

By ANNE STADNICKI

With the transfer of $850,000 figuring prominently in the discussion of UMass Chancellor Oswald Tippo's resignation from his post last Friday, Robert C. Wood, President of all three UMass campuses, addressed a University convocation yesterday afternoon on the allocation of authority to his central systems office, and what portion of the sum would go towards its operation.

Wood praised Tippo for the quality of education that he achieved in his administration, but said that the successful resolution of the budget allocation issue promises not only more but better education.

It was reported that Tippo's resignaion last week was due partly to disagreement on the transfer of nonstate funds from the Amherst campus to the central systems office.

"The point is that building and sustaining a statewide university system is everywhere a difficult, tough, and adventurous undertaking," Wood said.

Quoting the report issued by the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education, he explained that the division of labor between the system and the campus executive requires "a high degree of sensitivity and flexibility on the part of both executives, a tolerance for ambiguity as to their respective authority, and a considerable measure of personal trust..."

Wood said that since the state funds UMass receives are pretty well fixed in a line-item budget. The unrestricted nonstate funds (commonly lumped together as "trust funds") are of considerable importance.

"Since these modest funds (unrestricted nonstate funds) are our principal resource for innovation or emergencies, it seems to me important and entirely fitting in a university system that the Trustees and the President have the major role in their allocation," Wood said.

He said that in transferring the $850,000 UMass Amherst campus would not suffer, contrary to Tippo's remarks on the situation.

"In all but one of the major sources of unrestricted funds the fical '72 budget for Amherst has grown substantially" he pointed out. The exception noted was a grant which Wood says was committed to the Amherst campus in fiscal '71 but was not entirely used. The budget of the funds was dropped from $206,000 in '71 to $188,000 for '72.

To date $450,000 of the $850,000 has been allocated to the systems office. Wood said that at most only $345,000 could be attributed to the new requirement of the President's systems office, and that the remainder is due to general growth. The office is growing because it is taking on functions that used to be handled somewhere else according to Wood.

In the question and answer period following his speech Wood defended the development and relocation of his systems office. He said that when the President governed only one campus, there was comingling of staff and utilities, but now that the office administers to three campuses detachment from the involved campuses is necessary, and therefore the costs of maintaining the office have increased.

The role that Wood outlined for the systems office in formulating policy was challenged by members of the audience. One of the faculty members present questioned just how far down the line Wood intends to go in formulating policy? Several others at the convocation were concerned that the quality of academic programs would suffer if more and more money were allocated to a central office rather than the campus.

Wood said "...in the case of all trust funds the amounts reserved by the Trustees can be further allocated for program purposes." He reassured the group that the trust funds are not for the operation of the systems office and that the chancellors of the individual campuses will continue to have the opportunity to present their programs for additional funding.

Wood said he had no plans to select a temporary or replacement chancellor until he hears the recommendations of the Board of Trustees at its meeting Thursday in Lenox.

The UMass president stressed that he would continue to discuss the matter of the budget misunderstandings with representatives of the Amherst campus.

UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT ROBERT WOOD spoke yesterday before a standing room only audience in the Student Union Ballroom, explaining the issues and problems leading to the budget crisis and the ultimate resignation of Chancellor Tippo. (MDC Photo.)

OSWALD TIPPO, who recently resigned his position as chancellor, thus touching off a controversy which could rock the University system, is shown here as he spoke before the Faculty Senate last week. (MDC Photo)

...Tippo Responds

By NATHAN GORENSTEIN

In an exclusive interview last night Chancellor Oswald Tippo refuted a portion of President Wood's speech of yesterday charging that it was inaccurate.

Chancellor Tippo said that the use of UMass-Amherst endowment funds on other UMass campuses has been considered by President Wood and the trustees.

After thanking the President for his gracious remarks concerning himself in yesterday's speech the Chancellor preceded to take issue with several of Wood's remarks and policies.

Tippo's main disagreement with President Wood's speech was Wood's assertion that, "Amherst endowment funds have always and will continue to go to this campus. No change has been considered in this policy."

Chancellor Tippo said that he had three memo's to the contrary, all of which considered the use of Amherst endowment funds off the UMass Amherst campus. These memos, he said, came from the President's office, dated July 22, the systems office and from another UMass campus which he declined to name. The latter two were dated in July of this year according to Tippo. The subject was also discussed at the July 28th meeting of the Trustee Executive Board.

Tippo also questioned what was meant by endowment funds. The Chancellor explained that if President Wood means all funds given to the University before the instituion of the Systems Office, there would be no conflict. However, Tippo said that if Wood means all endowment funds ever granted, only those which specifically say the University of Massachusetts at Amherst would be guaranteed for this campus. All others would be open for transfer to other university campuses, he said.

President Wood is also asking for $175,000 of the total trust fund interest of $500,000 for his office. The Chancellor agreed that this was a valid request, but said that $50,000 would be a more reasonable figure.

Continuing, Tippo said that the $850,000 Wood is transferring from the Amherst campus to the Systems office is not, as the President seems to feel, a small amount of money. Especially when one considers the relatively small budget that the University begins with, Tippo commented.

Out of the total UMass budget, the state is this year taking one million dollars for those administrative positions which are not expected to be filled. $600,000 is also being removed from the utilities budget money which Chancellor Tippo says we are short of already.

The funds from which President Wood is taking the $850,000 is also a factor, according to Tippo.

$35,000 dollars is from the University travel funds, a sum which makes up one-sixth of the entire travel budget for the faculty. Tippo says this leaves only $50 per faculty member, which the Chancellor feels is a small sum for faculty members to attend conferences, search for grants and perform other necessary duties.

$40,000 of the sum is from the money used to pay the University's telephone bills. The Chancellor feels this is a large bite considering that the University is already in debt $11,000 to the telephone company.

Another $40,000 was to be used to pay for office furniture for the one hundred new faculty members the school has acquired this year.

When asked how these bills would be paid, Tippo replied that the University would have to cut the money spent on faculty travel and remove telephones in order to make up for the cuts in those two areas.

Tippo expressed concern that a precedent might be set if the budget is finally approved transferring the $850,000 to the systems office in Boston. The Chancellor said this would be dangerous, encouraging further moves of this sort.

President Wood, reached late last night at his home, would not deny that the allotment of small amounts of funds had been discussed. However, he also said that there are over 100 unrestricted trust funds.

"We're really dealing with definitions of what we mean by 'Amherst' and 'considered'", the President stated. "Also, we're dealing with amounts of money in the tens of thousands of dollars and less."

Inside Spectrum

By KAREN PEARSON AND STEPHEN FINE

Spectrum, is a bi-annual literary magazine containing art, photography, fiction, journalism, poetry and essays on contemporary issues. Although this staff keeps its content open to anyone most of the material is produced by University undergraduates.

Last year the Spectrum received the PIA award (Printing Industry of America), a national presentation made yearly to publications possessing "professional skills, creativity, ingenuity and personal attention." It was given the award for its excellence in printing, layout and design as exemplified in the 1971 February edition.

The PIA is not the only recognition Spectrum has gotten. Material has also been printed in two anthologies of the best in college writing, the Transatlantic Review, and the Massachusetts Review.

The staff members agree the quality of the magazine depends on monetary support. Their budget this year is $26,522 an increase over last year of $2,000. According to Spectrum editor Peter Spiegel, $25,000 goes for printing alone. The remainder is channeled into photography, telephone, and other facilities and general office items. "The printing is done by the Woodland Publishing Co., a bidder," Siegel said in an interview.

The production of a good literary magazine, says Siegel, is not simple. To sort and choose from the deluge of literature a staff is needed. Each prospective item is read and rated by each member; the piece with the highest rating makes it. Editor Siegel states, "The policy is to keep the magazine as open as possible and as good as possible. If we didn't keep up our standards it would become an idiot magazine."

The staff's duty does not end at selecting material though. They must also aid in the task of layout and design. Much work is required in putting the magazine together.

The greatest problems are understaffing and differences of opinions as to what should or should not be done with design. The general result according to Seigel is that "Studies suffer and neuroticism is not uncommon."

According to Carnegie Commission

College May Be Worthwhile

WASHINGTON (AP)-A college education isn't worth as much in dollars as it once was, a new report claims, but it definitely leads to the good life.

College graduates do make more money, and their jobs are more comfortable,says a study for the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education.

What's more, they are more likely to be Republicans, although their political philosophies are decidedly liberal. They read more, know more, vote more and take a greater part in community activities.

"The college experience appears more likely than not to make students more open-minded and liberal, less concerned with material possessions, more concerned with aesthetic and cultured values, more relativistic and less moralistic, but more integrated, rational and consistent," the report says.

"Students tend to lessen in their adherence to traditional values and traditional behaviors," the report adds, "They become less authoritarian although this may be related to the social climate at the time of their education. They become more aware of themselves and of interpersonal relationships and show a greater readiness to express their emotions."

Dr. Clark Kerr, chairman of the commission, said at a news conference Tuesday the study was undertaken to answer questions about whether college training is generally worth the time, effort and money required.

The study was conducted by the Institute for Social Research at the University of Michigan. The report, "A Degree and What Else? The Correlates and Consequences of a College Education," will be published by McGraw-Hill later this month.

In a foreword to the published report, Kerr said People who go to college tend to be:

—More satisfied with their jobs.

—More highly paid and less subject to unemployment.

—More thoughtful and deliberate in their consumer expenditures.

—More likely to vote and to participate generally in community activities.

—More "liberal" and tolerant in their attitudes toward, and relations with, other individuals.

—More informed about community, national and world affairs.

US China Policy Denounced

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)-Albanian Foreign Minister Nesti Nase said Tuesday changes in United States China policies are only for show and Washington is preparing war against Peking in "secret deals" with the Soviet Union.

Nase, in speech before the U.S. General Assembly, also declared that Peking would have nothing to do with the United Nations if Nationalist China keeps its seat in the world body as Washington has asked.

His speech came a few hours after the White House announced that presidential advisor Henry Kissinger will make a second visit to Peking this month to arrange for President Nixon's own visit there, scheduled for sometime before May.

U.S. Ambassador George Bush said that since the Red Chinese were receiving Kissinger again, "there's every appearance that our policy here will not adversely affect or cause them to cancel the President's visit."

U.S. policy at the United Nations is embodied in two resolutions-one to have both Communist China and Nationalist China in the assembly and Communist China on the Security Council, and the other to subject expulsion of Nationalist China to a two-thirds vote as an "important question."

Albania, often regarded as Peking's spokesman at the United Nations, has sponsored the resolution to expel the Nationalist regime. The Albanian foreign minister predicted that even countries under strong U.S. pressure would vote for his country's resolution.

In other speeches to the General Assembly:

—Pakistan accused India of carrying on a secret war on Pakistan and of generating border skirmishes along the Indian border with East Pakistan. Mahmud Ali, chairman of Pakistan's U.N. delegation, charged India with "armed intervention."

—Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam said U.S. peacemaking efforts in the Middle East are only designed to give Israel the time to tighten its grip on occupied territories in Syria, Jordan and Egypt.

—A U.N. spokesman announced that Vladimir P. Pavlichenko of the Soviet Union will retain his high U.N. post despite published allegations that he is a member of the Soviet secret police.

Debaters Ready For New Season

Faced with another busy season, six of the University's debate teams participated in an intramural tournament (at South College) last Thursday and Friday. Each team took part in four debates which were scheduled in- between classes on both days. Professor Matlon, Director of Debate here at UMass, said the purpose of this preliminary tournament was "to provide practice prior to going out" to the first tournaments of the year.

The debaters in this event were; Paul LaMarche and Roger Legendre, Harry Feinzig and Jeanne Bayer, David McCaffrey and Bruce Murphy, Steve Fisher and Betsy Kohler, John Day and Jim Lane, and C. C. Hooper and Terry Hofmann. They debated both affirmatively and negatively this year's topic: resolved that greater controls should be imposed on the gathering and utilization of information about U.S. citizens by government agencies. The debaters were judged by the following members of the faculty from the Speech Department: Professor Matlon, Dick Shoen, Chuck LaGrave, and Harry Miles.

At 5 P.M. on Friday, the results and awards for the two days work were given out. The top speaker award was given to sophomore Terry Hofmann. There was a tie for a second speaker between juniors David McCaffrey and Roger Legendre. The top team award went to juniors Bruce Murphy and Dave McCaffrey, while freshmen C. C. Hooper and Terry Hofmann received second place.

All aspects (3) of the UMass debate program are active and starting early this year. The first intercollegiate tournament is this weekend at MIT with others this month at Brandeis, Dartmouth, and Bridgeport University. The audience debate program, (in which teams debate in front of high school audiences throughout Massachusetts) includes debates this month at Southwick, St. Mary's (Westfield), Blackstone, Dimon (of Fall River), Natick and Framingham High Schools.

Then under the third aspect (on-campus debates), the debate team will host their first on-campus audience debate in Mahar Auditorium tonight at 8 P.M. The debate will be between Dwight Allen, Dean of the School of Education, and Father James Quigley, Pastor of the Newman Center. Their topic for debate will be "The Bah ai Faith or Christianity: Legitimacy and Relevance", which should spur some entertaining argument and discussion.

All things considered, the debate team has a new, busy season to prepare for.

For DECORATING SUPPLIES
CREPE PAPER
STREAMERS
ETC.
see
A. J. Hastings
Newsdealer & Stationer
45 So. Pleasant St.,
Amherst

THE IMPORT SHOP
Dresses from India
Wall Furnishing's
Pipes and Incense
Wall Hangings and Bedspreads
64 Green St. Northampton

TONIGHT AT
The English Pub
9:30 - 12:30
JACK VERONISI
IN CONCERT
25¢ COVER

CAMPUS II
7:15
9:15
JENNIFER O'NEILL
GARY GRIMES
In everyone's life there's a
'SUMMER OF '42'
Maid In Sweden
CAMPUS III
screens 7 & 9
No One Under 18
Campus Cinemas 256-6411
Located Right on Route 9 in the Zayre's Shopping Center
Mon. Night! Ladies $1.00
CAMPUS I
JANE fonda
DONALD sutherland
One Man Is Missing... Two Call
klute
Girls Lie Dead.
7:00
9:00

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN are on the second floor of the Student Union on the University campus, zip code 01002. Phones are 545-2550 (news), 545-0344 (sports), and 549-1311 (editor).

Second class postage paid at Amherst, the DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes five times weekly Monday through Friday during the academic year except during vacation and exam periods, three or four times a week following a vacation or exam period or when a holiday falls within a week. Accepted for mailing under the authority of the act of March 8, 1879 as amended by the act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester, $10.00 per year.

Open Joint Session Tonight

Student Senates To Discuss Tippo Resignation

By BOB CALLAHAN

The issues surrounding the resignation of Chancellor Oswald Tippo and the selection of a temporary chancellor will be discussed this evening in a joint meeting of the Graduate Undergraduate Student Senates. The open meeting called by Undergraduate President Lee Sandwen and Graduate President Mrs. Veda Ross will be held at 7:00 in room 167 of the Campus Center.

President Sandwen discussed the three main issues which will be aired in a Collegian interview last night. The open meeting will be held prior to the regularly scheduled meeting of the undergraduate Student Senate.

According to Sandwen, the four main topics to be considered concerning Tippo's sudden resignation are:

—The statement which has been drawn up by the Faculty Senate Committee of Concern which will be presented to the trustees at their meeting in Lenox on Thursday.

—The selection of a temporary chancellor to fill Tippo's place. This selection will take place immediately if the Board of Trustees give their approval to the Chancellor's resignation.

—The selection of the procedures to be used in selecting the permanent successor to Chancellor Tippo.

—The selection of a committee of students to present the case of the two Senates before the Trustees.

Also on the agenda of tonight's meeting will be a discussion concerning the formation of a committee to negotiate a merger between the Graduate and Undergraduate Student Senates.

Sandwen also announced that the final course of action to be taken at the meeting will concern callfng in the Office of Emergency Preparedness (O.E.P.) and investigating teams from the Federal Government to investigate the rent increases which affect both graduate and undergraduate students who live on campus. Sandwen said that this is being done because the Senate found Vice-Chancellor Campion's presentation on the rent issue very inadequate.

Dallas Inmates Riot

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)-Sheriff Clarence Jones stood amidst the rubble of a night of rioting in Dallas County jail Tuesday and said: "We've got our jail back and by God we're going to keep it."

One prisoner was dead, a jailer hospitalized with a heart attack, and two other prisoners and two officers injured in hand-to-hand combat after about 800 inmates went on a four-hour rampage.

Screaming "We want justice!" they burned their mattresses and held off officers with makeshift weapons fashioned from pieces of metal sinks and bunks, broom handles and sharpened glass.

It was the third and most serious revolt prisoners have staged in 15 days.

Jones called it "a rebellious thing that we are seeing all over the country." He blamed the trouble on "outside elements."

Only about 300 prisoners confronted the officers. The others involved in the rampage either were sealed off or went to their cells voluntarily.

Dr. Charles Petty, the county's chief medical examiner, performed an autopsy on the dead prisoner, Laurence Edward Jackson, 36, indicted for robbery.

A spokesman in Dr. Petty's office said no injury was found on the body and it was the doctor's opinion that death was due to a disease process, although confirmation of this would have to await further tests.

Assistant Chief Deputy O'Bryne Cox said Jackson had no apparent injury beyond a cut finger.

The prisoners remained confined in steel-barred tanks, where they are grouped together during part of each day.

They were forced back-"fighting like dogs" as one deputy put it-with high pressure fire hoses. Deputies swinging riot sticks followed. Then came six police dogs.

As each tank was brought under control, prisoners were searched, stripped, and sent to solitary confinement.

Nixon Readies Tax Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon worked on the next stage of his campaign against inflation Tuesday while the House took up his tax-cutting program and labor leaders renewed their attack on the President's economic policies.

"Robinhood in reverse" and "socialism for the rich" was the description applied to Nixon's program by Patrick E. Gorman, chief executive officer of the AFL—CIO Amalgamated Meat Cutters union.

Testifying before the House Banking Committee, Gorman urged Congress to reject the tax bill as a "bonanza for industry."

The House began debate on the measure and scheduled a vote on it Wednesday. Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, D—Ark. of the House Ways and Means Committee predicted it will pass. He called the bill an improvement over the President's proposals.

Nixon, back from a weekend at Key Biscayne, Fla., conferred at the White House with Secretary of the Treasury John B. Connally and Director George Shultz of the Office of Management and Budget.

These men, along with members of the President's Council of Economic Advisers and other top aides, are helping the chief executive round out the program that will replace the 90-day wage-price-rent freeze that expires Nov. 13.

White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler indicated the President will be ready to announce the Phase 2 program soon, perhaps sometime over the coming weekend.

No. Ireland 'Bleeding To Death

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP)—Prime Minister Brian Faulkner said Tuesday he is flying to London this week for more emergency talks about the violence in this British province, which he described as "bleeding to death."

As he spoke at Stormont, the provincial parliament, guerillas robbed a bank and fought a gun battle with troops caught in ambush.

Faulkner told the session, boycotted by the pro-Roman Catholic opposition, that he will hold new crisis talks on Thursday with Prime Minister Edward Heath.

Faulkner and Heath conferred a week ago in a three-way summit with Prime Minister Jack Lynch of the Irish republic to the south.

Their peace plea was spurned by terrorists trying to oust the British from Protestant-dominated Northern Ireland.

The parliament debate and street shootings came on the third anniversary of a Catholic civil rights march that has been followed by escalating violence in which 116 persons have died.

With public galleries emptied for security reasons, Faulkner told the Stormont he would try yet again with Heath to find a peace formula.

Fourteen of the 52 seats in parliament were vacant because of a boycott by oppositionists charging Faulkner with being too tough by jailing 220 suspected terrorists without trial.

Faulkner rejected as "a waste of time" oppositionist plans announced earlier in the day to convene their own rival parliament at Strabane on Oct. 26.

While the oppositionists claim he's too tough, Faulkner was under pressure from militant Protestants in his Unionist party who claim he's not tough enough.

Observers feared a Protestant backlash against Catholic-based guerrillas that could touch off a civil war unless Faulkner and Heath crack down harder on the outlawed Irish Republican Army-IRA. The IRA wants to unite Ulster with the Irish Republic.

Ulster is the official name of the six Northern Provinces.

Faulkner defended his Aug. 9 decision to intern IRA suspects without right of trial.

"Among the many dangerous men interned," he said, "are some of the most senior officers of both wings of the IRA-63 officers and 96 volunteers of the provisional IRA and 33 officers and 29 volunteers of the so-called official IRA."

The provisional wing is the more militant IRA faction. It claims responsibility for a mounting wave of terrorism.

During his speech, gunmen robbed about $7,200 from a bank in Rostrevor, possibly to fill IRA coffers.

A guerrilla with a submachine gun ambushed troops and police recovering a hijacked bus outside Belfast. In the ensuing gun battle he shot a soldier in the cheek and a civilian in the arm. The gunman escaped.

Troops caught five suspected guerrillas but found no arms in a search of 150 houses in Belfast's Catholic Ardoyne district. The hunt for gunmen came after 24 hours of riots, gun battles, fires and explosions that left a young British soldier dead and 12 civilians injured.

Stockbridge Senate Meets

The Stockbridge Senate held its first meeting last night in the Campus Center. The meeting was mainly concerned with organizing the Senate, reviewing parliamentary procedure, and discussing the budget.

Because of some errors in calculating the budget for this year, this semester's budget will not include monetary aid for such organizations as WMUA. Support of this organization had been originally figured into the budget.

The Senate is comprised of one representative from each of the nine clubs and two representatives from each of the fifteen majors. The yearbook and Stockbridge paper "Shorthorn" also have representatives on the Senate. Elections will be held at the next meeting.

The Stockbridge Senate is an organization within the Stockbridge School itself. It does not, however, have a vote on the University Senate. Thus, as a school it has no power within the University itself, according to acting President Larry Lehto.

THE DEALER
A Clothing Store
10% Off
ANY ITEM
WITH THIS COUPON
good thru Sat., Oct. 16
56 1/2 Main St.
Bank Americard
"In the Alley"
10-6 (Fri. till 9)

AUTO INSURANCE
ALL CARS — ALL DRIVERS
BUDGET PAYMENTS
CYCLES — SCOOTERS
Tekoa Insurance Agency
160 Pleasant St.
Northampton
586-2742
10 Broad St.
Westfield
562-3604

Old Weird Harold's
(Route 9 in Hadley, next to Walter's)
NEW & USED CLOTHING
Jeans $2.50
Flannel shirts $1.50
Antique Dresses $5.00
Workshirts $2.00
Furs $10-30
Overalls - $4.50
Suede Coats $8.00
Leathers, Corduroys
P-coats, Parkas
13 button Navy Pants
Boots
COMPLETE ARMY-NAVY HANDICRAFTS TO BUY & SELL
Free Food & Nutrition Information Center

In The Nation And The World

'To Make Concrete Arrangements'

Nixon Sends Kissinger To China-Again

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon, apparently ready to proceed with plans to visit Communist China, is sending foreign-policy adviser Henry A. Kissinger back to Peking this month to "make concrete arrangements."

Word of Kissinger's second journey to Peking in less than four months was given Tuesday by White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler.

Kissinger himself made a rare on-the-record appearance before White House reporters to disclose that he will be accompanied by a full advance party of technical specialists from such arms of government as the Secret Service and White House Communications Agency.

This development, coming while Westerners continued to speculate on murky happenings that might indicate significant events within China, was seen as indication that the President's plans remain unchanged-as of now, at least.

"There is nothing unusual or unforeseen that has produced this announcement," Kissinger said.

Under questioning, he said it is the official policy of the White House and all federal agencies to avoid speculation on whatever happened in Mainland China to produce the much-publicized grounding of air traffic and cancellation of an Oct. 1 National Day parade.

Kissinger, who confirmed that Washington has been in direct although "cumbersome" contact with Peking since the July announcement of Nixon's trip plans, emphasized several times that planning for the journey has been handled by the Chinese "meticulously, correctly and carefully, and there has been no impact of whatever developments may be occurring on these preparations."

Ziegler said Kissinger and a traveling party of about 10 will fly to Peking during the last half of this month.

Kissinger said he would fly to Peking aboard a presidential jet via Honolulu and would spend no more than four days in the Chinese capital. He indicated the timing of Nixon's visit would be announced soon after his return.

Asked about the timing of the Nixon visit, Kissinger said:

"We will, of course, discuss that while I am in Peking, and I think we should zero in on a date while I am there and, therefore, should have an announcement within a reasonable period after that."

The President's chief national security affairs adviser said he expects to meet in Peking, as he did during his secret trip in July, with Premier Chou Enlai.

Asked whether he would see Mao Tse-tung, the aging chief of China's Communist party, he said, "I have no idea who else from the government of the People's Republic I will be seeing."

As for the timing of his trip he said he personally thinks it will take place closer to the middle of October than the 30th. He said a full itinerary and list of participants will be made public, but that no newsmen will be taken along.

North Vietnamese Suffer Heavy Losses In Offensive

SAIGON (AP)-North Vietnamese forces have withdrawn from the Cambodian border battle area after suffering heavy losses in their 10-day offensive, the South Vietnamese commander of the campaign said Tuesday.

"We plan to pursue them," declared Lt. Gen. Nguyen Van Minh. "We are going after them with heavy air attacks and other offensive operations."

Minh said the North Vietnamese lost 450 men killed in their campaign on the Cambodian-Vietnam frontier.

He told Associated Press correspondent George Esper at his headquarters in Tay Ninh that South Vietnamese casualties in the border fighting were 41 killed and 289 wounded.

Minh said allied radar and other electronic detecting devices confirmed reports that the North Vietnamese had withdrawn eastward and north-eastward from the main battle arena around the highway junction town of Krek, seven miles inside Cambodia.

Minh reported the North Vietnamese pullout less than 24 hours after the heaviest fighting of the border campaign, a series of savage clashes near Fire Base Alpha, 3 1/2 miles east of Krek, over a seven-hour period Monday.

As the fighting raged, a tank-led South Vietnamese relief force pierced the North Vietnamese blockade of Alpha and relieved the garrison that had been cut off 10 days. Two earlier attempts to crash through had failed.

Saigon headquarters claimed 134 North Vietnamese were killed in the ground fighting near Alpha and that 230 men were killed by the relentless allied air strikes and artillery bombardment. South Vietnamese losses were 10 killed and 39 wounded, the command said.

During the siege, the Alpha garrison of South Vietnamese and Cambodian troops had been resupplied by Vietnamese C123 transport planes which made low-altitude parachute deliveries.

The cargo planes had been fitted with machine guns and they raked enemy positions on both sides to suppress ground fire as they came in.

The Lucky (Draft) Number is 125

WASHINGTON (AP) - Men classified as 1A in this year's draft pool won't be called if their lottery numbers are over 125, but all with numbers below can expect a summons, Selective Service announced Tuesday.

Earlier, draft officials had said men probably would be called with numbers as high as 140. But that was when 15,000 to 20,000, instead of 10,000 were expected to be drafted in the remaining months of this year.

Draft Director Curtis W. Tarr, in another change, said draftees will be given 30 days' notice to report for induction rather than the 10 days minimum set down in law.

The 30-day notice means that nobody will be drafted this month. But the Pentagon's 10,000-man call will be split 6,500 between Nov. 1 and 18 and 3,500 between Nov. 29 and Dec. 9.

When the draft was suspended on June 30 there had been calls totaling 88,000 for the year, with 84,000 men called. Selective Service said it does not plan to make up the 4,000-man backlog.

Tarr, in another announcement, said he has ordered local and appeals boards to defer action on classification, personal appearances and appeals until new regulations on draft requirement provisions under the new draft law are drawn up.

The regulations will be completed in about two weeks, draft officials said, but they can't be put into effect under the new law until 30 days after they are published in the Federal Register.

Every young man classified 1A who drew a number 125 or lower in the 1969 and 1970 lotteries and is in this year's pool can expect to receive an induction notice in the near future, Tarr said.

That's because of the new system of drafting men on a nationwide basis by lottery number. Previously, Selective Service headquarters set a ceiling by lottery number and assigned states quotas of draftees.

Those to be called this year will, as indicated earlier, be mainly men who lost deferments because they graduated from college, junior college or trade school in June or later.

They were not called earlier because draft calls were suspended between the time the draft authority expired June 30 and President Nixon signed the new draft law last week.

TOMORROW

Student Senate Elections will be held in front of the University Store 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.

for commuters sororities fraternities

in each dorm lobby 6 - 9 p.m.

for dorm residents

ID's required

Not everybody who is interested in figures gets off at Wall Street.

You might be happier at Ætna.

If you have a liking for figures, finance and money, Ætna Life & Casualty might be a way to both job satisfaction and success.

If you haven't thought about insurance, maybe that's because you haven't heard the whole truth about it.

For example, because our business has become so sophisticated, we have one of the largest computer installations in the country. And, if you think of insurance in terms of premiums and settlements, you'll be surprised at how deeply Ætna is involved with stocks and bonds, equities, and real estate.

If you're analytically-minded, there are many careers open to you. As an actuary, accountant, computer programmer or securities analyst, for example. In these positions and others you'll be helping 27 million people who depend on Ætna for security in a shaky world. We have a reputation for not letting them down.

A brochure called "The Whole Truth" spells out how Ætna works, and the many specific opportunities we have for people of all talents. It's an honest picture of an honest business.

Why not stop in at your placement office soon and read it.

You could do yourself—and many other people—a lot of good.

We are an Equal Opportunity Employer and a JOBS-participating company.

Ætna LIFE & CASUALTY OUR CONCERN IS PEOPLE

MADISON, WIS. NAME CHANGED–Circuit Judge Norris Maloney has granted permission for Mrs. Richard Smuckler, 23, of Madison, to change her name to her maiden name of Stephanie Twin. Her husband of three years encouraged her to make the change. The court said there is no law requiring a married woman to take her husband's name.(AP WIREPHOTO)

School Of Education Offers Free Reading Skills Program

By DON GLICKSTEIN

A no cost, no credit speed reading and study skills course will be offered twice this semester and next semester by the Reading Program of the School of Education.

The course, to be taught by Paul Pilcher, a doctoral candidate in the Education School, will be organized in modules and workshops, so that students will be able to choose what they wish to learn and be able to tailor the course to their individual needs. The units include speed reading, improving reading skills, study skills, and a self-examination of one's own learning style.

The course will meet every Thursday night for five weeks, this semester, and will be offered again in November, in order to make smaller classes. A resource center, established in the basement of Johnson House in the North East living area, will be open every Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evening to both those in the course, and any other interested person.

Registration for the Speed Reading and Study Skills workshops will be tomorrow, Thursday, October 7, 1971 in Room 174 of the Campus Center at 8:00 P.M. Anyone not able to register at this time, should get more information by contacting Mr. Pilcher at his office, 5-2799, or should leave a note in his mailbox in Room 126, School of Education.

LECTURE SERIES by

NOON RALLY
Thursday

"BASIC ERRORS OF REVOLUTIONARY MOVEMENTS" at Campus Pond

ALSO
Wed. 7:30 p.m. Campus Center Aud.
"MIDNIGHT OF HISTORY"
Thurs., 8:00 p.m. Thompson 104
"SEX AND THE SINGLE PERSON"

Josh McDowell has spoken on more than 400 campuses in 35 countries. Recently returned from two years among students and revolutionaries in Latin America.

Sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ International

Senate Rejects Missile Funding

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Tuesday rejected three proposals to add funds for major U.S. offensive-missile systems after Sen. John C. Stennis cautioned against doing anything to jeopardize chances for a U.S.-Soviet arms-limitation agreement.

It voted down also a proposal to stop U.S. air attacks in Indochina as it neared final passage, scheduled Wednesday afternoon, of a $21-billion military procurement authorization bill.

Stennis, a Mississippi Democrat and chairman of the Armed Services Committee, led the opposition to added missile funds proposed by Sen. James L. Buckley, Con-R-NY., and backed by conservatives from both parties. Stennis said they would be interpreted, rightly or wrongly, as a U.S. bid for a first-strike nuclear capability.

Their approval could upset chances of an agreement at the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks SALT, Stennis said. He added that in any case President Nixon wouldn't spend any of the funds "at least until the last glimmering hope of success for the SALT talks...is gone."

Buckley termed the argument by Stennis "something of a red herring" and contended his amendments were designed to give the United States the option of making improvements in the quality of its strategic forces.

In quick succession, the Senate voted:

—66 to 17 against his proposal to add $5 million for long-range studies to modernize the land-based Minuteman missiles and increase their range:

—By voice vote against adding $12 million to achieve a 40 per cent improvement in Minuteman accuracy;

—68 to 12 against his amendment to add $25 million for a similar improvement in the sea-based, multiwarhead Poseidon missiles.

In the day's only other vote, the Senate rejected, 64 to 19, an amendment by Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, to bar U.S. air attacks throughout Indochina and Thailand with the option for the President to continue air attacks in South Vietnam if needed to protect withdrawing U.S. troops.

"I don't understand why we're bombing all over Indochina if we're getting out," Gravel told a virtually deserted Senate chamber.

Stennis said, "You've got to do something to keep them on the defensive as much as possible."

Phi Sigma Delta
of Zeta Beta Tau

will hold an INFORMAL SMOKER on:
Wed. Oct. 6 from 7:30 - 9:30

All university men are cordially invited to stop by & see why we believe that we have adopted to the needs of the individual.

358 N. Pleasant St.

Fabricworld

CHARGE TO: "BANKAMERICARD" "MASTER CHARGE"

Sew It Yourself and Save!

FABRIC SALE

EINIGER'S MACHINE WASHABLE 100% WOOLS 54" WIDE 3.99 REG. 5.49 YARD
• GREAT FALL FASHION LOOKS FOR FALL-WINTER!
• BE EARLY!

ALL NOTIONS 20% OFF!

SHOP FOR "EARLY-BIRD" UN-ADVERTISED VALUE EXTRAS!

• NO-WALE CORDUROY 1.29 45" WIDE REG. 1.99 YARD
• MACHINE WASHABLE 100% COTTON

1.99 • PRINTED NYLON QUILTS
• MACHINE WASHABLE 45" WIDE
VALUES TO 2.99 YARD

1.99 • "HAPPY FACE" BRUSHED DENIM
• MACHINE WASHABLE COTTON
• 45" WIDE
• WHILE QUANTITY LASTS!

LARGEST SELECTION TRIMS & NOTIONS

• LAWRENCE
166 ESSEX ST., LAWRENCE
OPEN DAILY 9:30-5:30,
FRI. 9:30-9:00...TEL. 686-1040

• SALEM, N.H.
303 S. BWAY, SALEM, N.H.
OPEN DAILY 10-6; SAT. 9-6...
TEL. 893-1310

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF — Richard C. Hanson
MANAGING EDITOR — David D. Williams
BUSINESS MANAGER — James Gold
EXECUTIVE EDITOR — Barry J. Rubenstein
NEWS EDITOR — Anne C. Stadnicki
SPORTS EDITOR — Earle T. Barroll

PHOTO EDITOR — Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR — Robert Nesti

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR — Emory Rounds
NEWS STAFF — Jan Auman, Bill Manburg, Steve Fine, Charlie Berkow
SPORTS — Earle Barroll
EDITORIAL — Barry Rubenstein
DARKROOM — Garry Alpaugh, Peggy Stocker
AD LAYOUT — Bill Manburg

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administration read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the views of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, and letters represent the personal views of the writers.

A Bit Of Magic

The text of President Wood's convocation address will never be recognized as one of the great rhetorical works of our time. Yet its effectiveness can not be judged solely, or even primarily, by its literary virtues but rather can more appropriately be studied in light of its purposes.

The audience which confronted the President embodied the mild hostility which has covered the campus in the last week. After all, President Wood, the real Enemy of the People, was regarded as the man who was going to undo everything that Chancellor Tippo had done. Most of those who crowded into the Ballroom felt that this would truly be the opportunity to put this tyranical bureaucrat on the firing line. However, most of them had probably never before encountered Robert Wood.

With a quiet, low-keyed delivery, the President recited his address, chock full of figures, and lulled his listeners from their hostility into a mood of soft serenity. By the time the address and ensuing question and answer period had finished, most of the crowd was wondering what the big deal was about in the first place.

In reality, the problem of Chancellor Tippo's resignation centered around the future of the Amherst campus. For those who had been here for a while and watched the campus as it climbed in stature, there was a natural tendency to cast aside any notion that this preeminence should in any way be assaulted. In fact, we may carry the President's own marine analogy further.

For the Amherst campus was like a flagship that has lost its admiral, and thus its power and direction, and had to resignedly await the aid and support of the rest of the fleet, knowing full well that its days of preeminence were over.

The resentment of the Amherst campus to this decline in stature was a natural reaction. However, President Wood has handled the situation so well that the entire situation has become what one observer called a 'non-issue.' Only time will tell whether Wood's magic becomes our mistake.

Art Buchwald

The Guilty Parties

WASHINGTON--If you were looking for scapegoats for the downfall of the American economy, they would be easy to find. Most of the guilty parties reside right in this country and formerly worked for the Marshall Plan and other foreign-aid organizations.

I wouldn't be surprised if a new Joe McCarthy came out of the woodwork and held Senate hearings to identify the culprits who have made the American balance of payments the worst in American history.

The hearings might go like this:

"Mr. Hardeman, would you please tell us for whom you worked in 1948, 1949 and 1950?"

"I was employed by the U.S. government to act as technical adviser to the West Germans on automobile production, sir."

"And what did you advise the West Germans to do?"

"I told them to start fresh with new factories and new machinery. I said that the only way they could expect to compete with American automobiles was to build a small, inexpensive car that would appeal to young people and Americans who were looking for a second car."

"Did you realize at the time you were destroying the American automobile industry?"

"I was only following orders, sir. At that time we were supposed to put Germany back on her feet. It was Harry Truman's idea."

"A likely story, Hardeman. The truth is that, thanks to your technical advice, the United States is losing a billion dollars a year to imports."

"But building up West Germany was our way of fighting communism!"

"And destroying the American dollar. Get out of here! You disgust me...I will now call William Kotweiler. Mr. Kotweiler, it says here in your folder that after World War II you were sent by the American government to Japan to act as a sales consultant to the Japanese camera industry."

"Yes sir. Gen. MacArthur asked for me personally."

"Don't bring that great American's name into this hearing. It also says that you told the Japanese the best way to sell their cameras in the United States was to make a better product than the Americans and sell it for less. Do you deny this?"

"I probably did tell them that. You see..."

"We don't want explanations, Kotweiler. How could an American tell the Japanese to undersell the Americans?"

"I guess I got carried away. Besides, who would have ever thought the Japanese could do it?"

"May the good Lord have mercy on you. I'm holding you over for contempt...I will now call Bartholomew Wainright. Wainright, it says here you taught the Italians how to make shoes."

"That's not true, sir. The Italians knew how to make shoes. All I did was show them how to make the right shoe and the left shoe the same size. Up until then they rarely matched."

"And now, thanks to your deceit and espionage, 10 million people in this country are walking around in Italian shoes."

"But, Senator, if we hadn't taught the Italians how to make shoes for export, the Russians were going to do it. How did I know at the time that the Italians would make a good shoe?"

"You are a traitor to the American shoe industry, and if I have anything to say about it, I will see that you never work as long as you live...

"Gentlemen, I have here in my hand a list of 5,000 State Department and U.S. foreign aid employees all who have contributed to the downfall of the American dollar. They taught the French how to make fabrics, the Dutch how to make butter, the Belgians how to make lace and the Hong Kong Chinese how to make everything. I am turning this list over to the Justice Department for immediate action."

As two federal marshals carry Wainright out of the hearing room, tears streaming down his face, he keeps crying, "But I was only following orders."

Copyright 1971, Los Angeles Times

PointBlank

Draft Hurts Upperclassmen

By ANDREW SHAPIRO

Since the new draft law passed, upperclassmen have been too busy counting their blessings to notice what they have lost: a precious ace-in-the-hole known as the I—S (C) deferment.

The I-S (C) was a second lease on life for the student who failed to maintain the "satisfactory academic progress at the end of one academic year. Before his draft board found out and ordered him for induction, he would enter his next term of study. Having made a fresh start at satisfactory progress in a brand new term, the student's prior slate had to be wiped clean--at least temporarily.

He was entitled to have his induction order cancelled and be deferred in Class I-S (C) until the end of the academic year. This breather gave the student time to make up lost credits. By the time his I-S (C) expired, he would once again be maintaining overall satisfactory progress and qualify for a renewed II-S.

With little fanfare, the new draft law abolished the I-S (C). From now on, if you fall behind, or attend school part-time, you cannot wipe the slate clean by simply resuming anew satisfactory progress in a full-time course of study. Should you try this old approach and then receive an induction order, the order will not be cancelled. Your induction date will merely be postponed--normally until the end of the term and, in the case of seniors, until the end of the academic year.

There is a crucial difference between a postponement and a I-S (C) cancellation. For all practical purposes, a cancelled induction order never existed. Its cancellation left you free to effect any change in your status, so that you would merit deferment by the time the I-S (C) expired.

Not so when an induction order remains outstanding, and your induction date is merely postponed. Before you can get any deferment or exemption, you must prove to your board that "there has been a change in (your) status resulting from circumstances over which (you) had no control."

Such a change is hard to prove. Last spring, for instance, the Supreme Court decided that becoming a C.O. after receiving an induction order did not constitute an uncontrollable change in status. Similarly, any concerted improvement in academic progress is unlikely to result from circumstances over which a student has no control.

The safest course in this season of the precarious II-S is to maintain satisfactory academic progress at all cost. Selective Service Regulations measure satisfactory progress according to a rigid formula: you must earn proportionate credits for each year in your academic program.

For example, if you are in a four-year program, you must earn 25% of your degree credits after one academic year, 50% after your second year, and so forth.

While draft boards apply this test rigidly, pouncing on students a few credits short, the courts have been much more solicitous. They have indicated that satisfactory progress is a question of fact that may vary with individual circumstances. Therefore, a student might still qualify for continued II-S--even if he failed the proportionate progress test--so long as his college certifies that he is expected to graduate on time, and it seems reasonably probable that he can succeed.

The question of satisfactory progress, which will hound students for years, is about to shock some students this fall. Continued eligibility for the II-S is predicated upon the maintenance of satisfactory progress during the past academic year (1970-71).

If you did not make satisfactory progress last year, and you are wondering why you have not yet received your II-S this year, there is a very good reason. On September 22--one week before the new law was signed--Draft Director Curtis Tarr sent Local Board Memorandum 122 to his draft boards. It instructed them to: "Delay the ... reclassification into Class II-S of any registrant, eligible for such classification as an undergraduate, who ... entered college before the 1971 summer session but who during the 1970-71 regular academic year failed satisfactorily to pursue a full-time course of instruction..."

The message is clear: your draft board is already starting to scrutinize student progress. The abolition of the I-S (C) just may be the incentive to touch off a rash of I-A reclassifications. Since draft boards follow their own rigid test of satisfactory progress--regardless of what the courts say--students may find themselves harrassed the way they once were when protesters were reclassified I-A as delinquents.

Copyright 1971 by Andrew Shapiro.

Andrew Shapiro is a draft lawyer and co-author of Mastering the Draft: A Comprehensive Guide for Solving Draft Problems (626 pp. Avon paperback). "PointBlank" is distributed by Access-The Communications Corporation.

'IN FUTURE WE WOULD LIKE THIS REFERRED TO AS A HEARTENING UPSWING . . .

Letters To The Editor

For The Bird

To the Editor:

I am writing in protest of Bob Nesti's faulty comparison of Russell's film, "The Devil's" to Jerzy Kosinski's book The Painted Bird in his review of the former (Fri. Oct. 2). Perhaps his only intent was to call to mind the terror of Kosinski's novel but nonetheless there are two crucial distinctions between the two which render the comparison conceptually inaccurate.

First, Kosinski's intent in The Painted Bird was not to portray the Nazi's moral deprivation. That has been done by many other authors in various ways. Rather his main task was that of writing about the effects which absolute evil and violence has upon the self. This examination of the self has been the underlying thread in his two latter novels, Steps and Being There.

Second, though The Painted Bird is a horrifying book in that its scenes often depict acts of perversity it never lingers on the perverse because that is not its prime consideration but is merely a vehicle for Kosinski's philosophical and psychological study.

Aside from the above small and somewhat petty objection I think Nesti's review was a good one.

Galen Tinder

Start Here

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to inform the undergraduate student body about the upcoming student elections.

Brothers and Sisters of this troubled era! The emphasis, recently, has been on your rights as voters in national, state and municipal elections.

On Thursday, October 7, an election will be held to choose your representative for the Student Senate. You are all members of the Student Government Association which affords you the privilege of being able to vote.

The Student Senate has a significant influence on your scholastic life. Therefore, it is very important that you vote for proper representation. Start here at school and learn the process of voting for your candidate who will have an avowed responsibility to you.

A vote is a step towards necessary change.

Dunstan Harris

Would anyone who would like to write columns and has not submitted any yet please contact Barry in the Collegian office before Friday.

Need Somebody To Love

WASHINGTON — If Mr. Nixon is re-elected in 1972, it will be the first time in history that a man was chosen because his policies didn't work. He supported the Vietnam war, now he is hailed for de-escalation; he deplored "too much managing of the economy," now he has a popular wage-price freeze; he advocated an economic game plan that was such an obvious flop that he brought a near-unanimous sigh of relief when he did a 180-degree Immelmann turn; and again, for 10 years he consistently and ardently opposed dealings with China, now he pleases nearly everybody by saying, in effect, that his previous policy was folly and that he is going to Peking.

Even with advantages like this we still think Mr. Nixon extremely vulnerable. It is time to think about the prospect and a good place to start is with the two-party system. This strange method of picking the most powerful man on earth is calculated to give the greatest dissatisfaction to the largest number. A two-party system is a structured compromise; it means a battle between two unstable coalitions each seeking the center. It is terribly frustrating to true believers. This is particularly true of the opposition party, in this case the Democrats. They must pick the Nixon adversary. But rival candidates face two constituencies, one for the nomination, one for the election and they are different and to a degree antagonistic.

The Democratic convention next year may be the most untrammeled in history. The activists will have more power in the convention than in the electorate at large. For example, the black vote represents only 7 to 8 percent nationally but it is apt to be much higher among Democratic convention delegates. The conservative Republicans in 1964 just loved Goldwater, nominated him, and got clobbered. The temptation to pick an all-out opponent to Mr. Nixon from the left is powerful and understandable but probably it will be curbed by the even greater desire to get a winner.

Today the nation is tortured almost beyond endurance by unsolved problems. As rarely in history, it suffers a deep spiritual fatigue. Our institutions seem incapable of doing what must be done; we need social reforms that are almost revolutionary and yet confidence in government and business leadership sags.

The two-party system is a clumsy vehicle in such stress. We expect there will actually be three or four parties: George Wallace is certain to run and, on the other side, our liberal friends are searching around for a second Eugene McCarthy to throw away their votes on and help Mr. Nixon get reelected. Nothing has been done to abolish the absurd electoral college and it will serve us right if the contest is thrown into the House in an un-election.

A lot of people think Mr. Nixon will get reelected if he makes peace and restores prosperity, but this is relative. Detestation of the war is such that getting out of Vietnam hardly seems to merit much gratitude anymore, and the Thieu election fiasco only underlines the point. As to the economy Mr. Nixon isn't out of the woods yet, though we have a private feeling that the bottom of the recession has passed and that, short of brilliant mismanagement, things are going to get better.

There is, we think, a final issue: the personality of the Administration. Try as we can, we find it hard to love Mr. Nixon. We find it hard to love John Mitchell. We suppose Martha does, and that's fine, but to us he is just a municipal bond salesman. Now Spiro Agnew is different. As a journalist we enjoy having him around. Anybody with the courage to say "nattering nabobs of negativism" deserves recognition. But one Spiro doesn't make a summer. Republicans don't produce colorful people — can you sort out Blount, Morton, Hardin, Stans, Hodgson? They are faceless men, and Mr. Nixon had to go to the Democrats to get John Connally. It has been a period of mediocrity.

In sum, we rather suspect this is a one-term affair, always assuming the Democrats don't slaughter each other. Perhaps we are in for a period of one-termers like that between Andrew Jackson and Lincoln when the problems of society were too big for the instruments of government and not a single President was reelected for 24 years. The country is going into a low pressure area, not of economy but of the spirit. It yearns for somebody to lift it up, some decent man in whose word it has faith, somebody who shows trust in the people and who gets it back again.

(Reprinted from the New Republic)

Editorial Points

Faculty members effectively demonstrated their real concern for the future of the University by their large turnout at yesterday's Convocation. Perhaps students preferred to go to class.

* * * *

The juke box in the Hatch must have been broken Monday night for it was replaced by some female imitation of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir. The only problem was that there were more moans than anything else.

* * * *

Ever feel like there is a remake of the old game show "Who Do You Trust" and Oswald Tippo and Robert Wood are the first contestants?

* * * *

One student remarked after listening to Wood's speech that he yawned once and missed the important part. Many people heard the whole thing and felt the same way.

Student Pressure

This week, UMass was invited to join a new political organization -- the National Student Lobby. This is a non-profit, registered lobby in Washington, D.C. and is the only national student organization with a tax status which allows it to lobby Congress in behalf of student interests. It has a permanent staff and office in Washington to monitor the activities of Congress and the Executive.

The National Student Lobby was organized this summer by four students from the University of California who were involved in the creation of a successful student lobby in California.

The California Student Lobby is student controlled and financed and has been an effective voice for student interests in the state legislature. On 47 bills on which the lobby took a position, Dick Twohy, the legislative counsel of the California Student Lobby, has claimed a success rate of 81 percent. Twohy also pointed out that the California lobby has concerned itself with a wide variety of issues, "ranging from supporting greater aid to higher education to opposing a state 'no-knock' law."

Using the California Student Lobby as a model, the National Student Lobby will be controlled by students. The politics and priorities will be set by a poll of students at the member campuses, and from that consensus the policy will be determined.

This month the National Student Lobby has begun a massive membership drive. From its national office at 1835 K Street in Washington, D.C., the NSL staff is sending a letter to every student body president in the nation describing the NSL and inviting the student government to join.

In addition, over 55 coordinatos in 24 states and the District of Columbia will personally contact the student body presidents of over 480 student governments. These student governments represent over 3,500,000 students.

According to Peter Coye, the Executive Director of the National Student Lobby, about 50 student governments have already indicated their intention to join, and it is expected that the NSL will have as many as 500 member schools by the end of its first year of operation.

"Crucial decisions on matters of civil liberties, higher education, war, poverty, and the environment are made at the national level," explained Peter. "The California Student Lobby showed that an effective lobbying operation can be supported by students--the next step is the National Student Lobby."

(A release of the National Student Lobby)

Thelo Apothanein

Clandestinely,
the lovers meet;
their shadows
meet and form
a four-pronged circus.
As long as there is form
the shadow is always the same, but today, this morning,
the moon haunts the sun,
and laughter cannot perform love's chosen miracle.

Jerome Nathanson

"For President? We Seem To Be Supporting Nixon — But We Don't Want To"

Culturnatives

If You Use Dope, Understand It

BY GILBERT J. SALK

Let's rap a bit about dope. There are two aspects of it I'm interested in. One has to do with use, and the other has to do with our culture's response to its existence.

I don't advocate the use of any drugs, but I'm not about to get moralistic about what you do with it. If you can use drugs without scrambling your brains, and you enjoy it, be my guest. If you're using it to run away from today and tomorrow then use it at your own risk. You may get away from the world, but the world isn't going to get away from you. The shit that's coming down will crush you with everyone else. I'm sorry you're not helping to put things right, but that's your choice.

For now, at least, that's all I want to say about drug use. One note: If you're thinking about getting into scag, go see Panic in Needle Park. It might save your life.

There's more to be said about how the mass culture reacts to dope. Nobody says much about legitimate dope, and addiction to it. Nicotine, alcohol, diet pills, tranquilizers--these are all sanctioned by those in power because they're addicted to them themselves and have to make sure that they're readily available. But they panic at the idea that their kids may turn on to something they don't know much about.

The result is that an interesting cycle is forced into being. It's primarily cultural, but with some very heavy political overtones. Keep it all in mind.

Laws get passed making use, possession, sale, transportation, and any other involvement with drugs illegal. This opens a vast market for organized crime, which immediately goes into the import business. It's a monopoly, so the price is never competitive. It's a moderately high-risk venture which forces prices extremely high, and, with addictive drugs, a truly captive market means that almost any asking price will be met--somehow.

Some poor dude somehow gets turned on to scag--heroin, for those of you who don't know the cultural slang (also called shit, horse, and a host of other things)--and becomes addicted. He builds up to a moderate $50-a-day habit. A large percentage of those hooked on shit (but not all, regardless of the myths) are unable to hold down any kind of a job because of their reactions to the drug.

But they need bread to supply their next boost--and need is the only word to use. Feel it. There's no place to go other than to steal or whore, depending on the addict's sex. As the laws get tighter, or a major shipment is intercepted, the price goes up and up and up and up. For some reason unknown to J. Edgar Hoover and our lawmakers, the crime rate also goes up and up and up.

So J. Edgar and J. Mitchell and R. Nixon all start screaming about lawnorder and crime inna streets and more money for lawrenforcement and no knock search warrants and the right to tap your phone and the right to hold you without bail and oh yeah what about tighter drug control laws so that the crime rate will go up some more so we can start asking for an end to the need for search warrants and preventive detention and free the police from having to defend their actions in brutality cases and lets suspend habeas corpus and oh yeah what about tighter drug control laws...

That ain't the whole picture, of course, brothers and sisters, but it's a big chunk of it.

And dig on the paranoia that grows out of it. Our fathers and mothers are taught to turn informer on us, and our classmates are paid to tell the police if we're turning on, and we hide our dope and smoke where we won't be seen (we hope) and we get all uptight and that helps make good uptight citizens out of us. Stop!

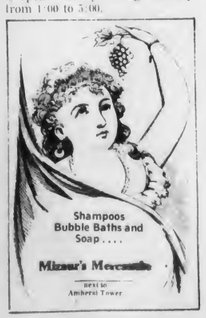
Break the cycle. What would happen if all anti-drug laws were repealed, and clinics were opened up to dispense low-cost or free dope and, for those requesting it, free drug counseling and medical help. First, the crime rate would drop overnight, because every addict in the country would stop needing huge sums of money to feed his monkey. Controlled doses of standard-quality dope would eliminate a tremendous number of deaths due to overdosing. You would know what was in the acid you buy, and that the grass you have isn't laced with strychnine or opium.

The police would have time to go back to helping little old ladies across the street and rescuing cats from trees. They might even start enforcing some long-neglected laws against polluting. Crime syndicates would lose a major source of their income. You would be able to leave your door open when you left your room. Richard Nixon would lose a major campaign issue. You wouldn't have to worry about the guy across the hall being a Fed. You might be able to turn your folks on--or vice versa.

Drug addiction would quite possibly go down, because the romance of it, the breaking of parental codes, the forbidden fruit aspects of it would be gone, and fewer people would be tempted to try it.

Think about dope every time you hear about crime in the streets, and think about crime every time you hear demands for stricter drug laws and enforcement. PEACE.

Continued on Page nine



Craft Classes To Start

There's still time to register for classes which start this week at Leverett Craftsmen and Artists in Leverett Center. Various courses will be offered, including ceramics, woodworking, painting, life drawing, macrame, film and photography, and children's art.

A fall show, open to the public, will be held, starting at 8:00 p.m. on Oct. 8 and running through to Oct. 31. The show features sculpture, painting, ceramics, and graphics and area artists will be represented.

Leverett Craftsmen and Artists is open Tuesday through Sunday from 1:00 to 5:00.

For further information, contact Jill Ray or Judi Winston at 253-5662.

Learn to Drive

AMHERST

AUTO SCHOOL

34 Main Street

256-6066

NEED EXTRA CASH? Here's How To Make It

BUY AT WHOLESALE PRICES

new, brand name audio equipment, blank tape, musical instruments and all audio accessories.

THEN SELL and make that extra cash you need. You're the boss. You set your own profit picture.

For catalogs and information, write or phone

MR. MANN, c/o SMG DISTRIBUTORS, INC.
46-35 54th ROAD, MASPETH, N.Y. 11378
(212) 786-3337

LORIN HOLLANDER "An Awesome Pianist"

Tues. & Wed., Oct. 12-13

Bowker Aud. - 8 p.m.

Tickets available: Fine Arts council Ticket Office, 125 Herter Hall. Tel. 545-0202. Reserved seats $1 UM undergrads, $2 full-time students, $3 UM faculty/staff, $3.50 general public.

Presented by the UMass Fine Arts Council

S.E.S. Going Co-op ! !

All subcribers and all other students are invited to become members of the new Students' Educational System Cooperative.

For two years we have been serving you.

Now we welcome you to share in the ownership and decision-making of our student-centered organization. Become part of our co-op, and help promote your own interests.

HOW?

If you'd like to know how the co-op can work for you, and how you can become a part owner, come to our first meeting:

GENERAL MEETING

Place: Student Union Ballroom
Date: Wednesday, Oct. 6, 1971
Time: 8:00 p.m.

In conjunction with FraternityRush
the Inter-Fraternity Council and Campus Pizza
presents

"GREEK" GRINDER WEEK

Any Grinder on the Menu worth 75¢ for only 50¢

"Go Greek" with Campus Pizza

RT. 9, HADLEY

586-3880

Orders To Go

Visit with the Greeks this week.

Oct. 4, 5, 6, 7 1971

worth 25¢ OFF on any 75¢ Grinder

or 1 FREE PIZZA with every 4 ordered

with this coupon

at CAMPUS PIZZA

Culturnatives, cont.

Grow Your Own - It's Cheaper

Continued from page eight

BOOK REVIEWS:

Today's books are for those of you who are into the world of psychedelia.

The Cultivator's Handbook of Marijuana by Bill Drake (2.50), Augur Publishing Co., Eugene, Ore.) is a fine book on the care and feeding of your pet cannabis plant. If you're into an anti-consuming bag, you will certainly want to consider growing your own, and this little book will be an invaluable resource. It covers soil, water nutrition, environment, light, and harvesting, seeds and transplanting, harvesting and drying, improving the plants, producing unrecognizable hybrids (can you dig it?), and an appendix on how to recognize and detect adulteration. This book is not a put-on; it's a highly technical examination of what makes cannabis a pleasure to grow. The illustrations and love in the book give it really fine vibes.

In a sense a companion to the Handbook, A Key to the American Psilocybin Mushroom by Leonard Enos ($5.00, Church of the One Sermon, Lemon Grove, Calif.) is a fine guide to some good additions to a steak dinner. Believe it or not, some of these mushrooms grow as close as Franklin County (that's around Greenfield, folks), and Cambridge. All the listed mushrooms are illustrated in varying stages of development, and their characteristics are carefully described.

The Hallucinogens by A. Hoffer and H. Osmond ($10.00 I think--I don't have the price, Academic Press, NYC) is a book on the scientific aspects of hallucinogenic drugs. If you're into knowing what's into you, this might be a good book. It's no-shit, no moralizing approach is based on careful, refreshingly unbiased research. It covers acid, mescaline, amphetamines, and a host of less well-known hallucinogens. Some of it is highly technical, but a great deal of it is easily readable--and interesting.

NOTE: For those of you who are into Mother Earth News, #10 is out, alive and well, with a fine collection of articles about living the cultural revolution--which may, in fact, be the only way to fight for it. Get it in the draft counseling office in 923CC or at the draft info table in the CC 2nd floor on Tues. and Fri. mornings. Or, if you prefer to patronize local business, check Mizaur's Mercantile or White Light Bookstore. They should have it.

Would people like to set up a CULTURNATIVES Rap Session on Thursday afternoons to share ideas brought up in this column? I kind of think it would be fun. If you're interested, check with me in the Draft counseling office and we'll see what we can do. These ideas aren't gospel by any means, and if they serve to generate new ideas their value will be greatly increased. In other words, your input is important.

Cultural Lecture Thursday

In a lecture titled "Culture and culture: an integrated, multidisciplinary approach," Professor Robert J. Nelson will discuss the role of foreign languages in the modern university Thursday night in Herter 227.

Professor Nelson has been working at Illinois in methods for bringing foreign culture "live" to the classroom and community. He favors an almost "collegial" status for foreign language departments, where a number of disciplines are taught in the foreign language, and students acquire real proficiency and insight into the foreign culture through extensive use of shortwave radio.

With all the walking you do - your feet deserve the best FOOTWEAR FOR CAMPUS at

"in the Alley" off Main St.

THE SHOE-BIN

STUDENT SENATE CANDIDATES are asked to attend

Tonight's Senate Meeting

CANCELLED

at 7 p.m. in Rm 163-4, 1st level, C.C.

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

Must sell immed. 69 Fairlane 500 conv. blue/black/top, V8 auto PS & new ww tires, 32000 mi. First reasonable offer. Call 586-3665. tf10-8

Rebuilt Volvo B18, and B16 engines, new valves, guides, rings, bearings, clutches and rbll; carbs 260 & 180 and B18 4 spd. trans. and clutch linkage to convert your automatic 1225 Volvo to std. Also Del Volvo in good cond. without engine and A 1225. For parts call 583-1820 evenings-will bargain on everything. tf10-6

'55 Olds, runs, needs work. 1-247-5828, after 5:30 p.m. tf10-6

61 VW Bus rebuilt engine, new brakes, muffler ex. mechanical some body rot. Good deal at $450 or best offer. Call Ron, 549-0150. tf10-6

1967 MG-B-GT, special, overdrive, wirewheels, new clutch, snow tires. Good condition. 584-2700 ext. 257 after 7 p.m. tf10-7

62 Austin Cooper with cooper s engine, $450. Call 549-1567. tf10-7

1969 Nova 6 cyl., new exhaust, and cooling system, 2 studded snow tires, $1300 or best offer. Days 545-2319, nights 586-3616, ask for Jim. tf10-8

1968 Austin Healey Sprite, convertible $600 or best offer. Needs some body work. Come to Butterfield House and ask for Ned. tf10-8

VW Bug 1967, tan, exc. cond., R & H cheap. Call Jan 545-0152 or 256-6868. tf10-11

1969 Ply Prunner 4 spd. $1700. Michael 546-5293. tf10-7

1967 VW Bug $700. Michael 546-5293. tf10-7

1966 Mustang, 6 cyld., std., exrct condition, $550, 546-9026 evenings. tf10-7

1967 Volkswagon, blue, 68,000 miles, 3 new tires, new battery, excellent running condition. $600.00 or best offer. Call 665-3652. tf10-7

Antique VW Bus, 1971 engine, Engine still on warranty, new clutch, new muffler, heater wide oval tires. Must sell, best offer, call Greg 5-8786. tf10-8

Excellent buy VW squareback '65 very good condition, radio reasonable mileage, $950. 665-3101 after six. tf10-8

67 Mustang, 8 cyl., auto, P/S new front tires snow tires, ex.-cond. $1050/B.O. 71 Pinto 4 sp on rd, 4 mos. $1600/lke ovr 1 yr mtr. 253-5223. tf10-8

1969 Nova 6 cyl., new exhaust, & cooling system, 2 studded snowtires, $1,300 or best offer. Days 545-2319, nights 586-3616 ask for Jim. tf10-13

1971 Buick Opel wagon red AM-FM, 18000 mi., excellent condition, asking 2295 will talk. Call 863-8006 after 6 p.m. tf10-8

'56 MG-B exc. running cond. Must sell. 219-8193. tf10-29

MOTORCYCLES FOR SALE

Must sell Honda CB 350, Heading West, 1969 excellent shape, 13000 mi. $450. Call Steve 549-6685. tf10-8

1968 Honda, ex. cond. 8000 mi. Call 546-8962. 10-6

1971 Harley Davidson Sprint 350, excellent condition, 1200 miles, must sell. Call Bill between 1-6 p.m., 584-7349. tf10-7

Honda 350 Scrambler, clean, recent tune-up. $350 call Rob 546-8786. tf10-7

FOR SALE

New tire 6.50 x 13, $10. Canoe $140. 586-1076. tf10-8

Seasoned Firewood. Sale and delivery. Call 665-3031. tf10-20

Records & tapes discount prices. Most new albums in stock. Come to 242 Gorman or call 546-6070 ask for John. tf10-8

1971 Atala Record 10 speed. Best offer. Call Ed - 586-3542. tf10-6

Brown suede pants, skirts, skins, top quality, wholesale. Pants $27, skirts $9.40, skins $5. Stop by to look Jon-424 Cladborne 5-2630 leave number if not in. tf10-14

51 volume set of Great Books by Britanica, like new. $150. 253-7807 after 5. tf10-6

Ten year old Peugot, rebuilt engine. Best offer, call Keith 253-2215 before 10 a.m. or after 10 p.m. tf10-12

Brand new 8 track stereo tapes - $5-listed hits incl. Superstar, Stewart. Send for free list. 43 Longview St., Spfld., Mass. 01108. tf10-12

Hofner bass guitar with case, exc. cond., $175 or best offer. Contact Bob 549-1180. tf10-8

Large Racoon Coat, excellent condition. Call 549-3968 $50. Tf 10-6

Snow tires, Firestone Town & Country, 7.75 x 14 white walls, mounted. Call Harold at 546-1210. tf10-6

8 track stereo tapes-Who, Stones, Toll, etc.-$2.95, Allman Bros., 4-Walstreet, etc., $3.95 Call 546-8034. tf10-6

Guitars, amps, acc., & records, at reasonable prices. The Guitar Workshop 98 Main St. Northampton 586-1786. tf10-6

Waterbeds-now all sizes $19.95! Factory warrants. Mfgr. frames, liners & pads in stock. Call Mark at 546-5350. tf10-12

Bumper sticker - your words printed on 3 x 12" red or green sticker for $1, copies .25. The Snide Co. Route 1, Box 93 Blaine, Wash. 98230. tf10-18

Fur coat full length, ex. cond. Best offer. Also new ski parka. Call 6-6120 between 5:30 and 7:00. tf10-8

Kenwood 1140 AM-FM tuner BSR 510X turntable Scott x15 3 way loudspeakers system retailed at 750 will sell 360. Call nites 546-7111. tf10-12

Guitars: Acoustic, Electric, Classical. New and used, also: strings and accessories. Macramed straps. All ways below. Call 546-7072. tf10-7

1970 Dunebuggy. Met-flake blue glass body on 68 chassis 100%, complete including heater, 23000 miles. Call Pete 116, Gorman 546-6548. tf10-8

TO GIVE AWAY - watches, jewelry, radios, unusual gift, and novelty items - at 50% off and more. Call S. S. Brown, 665-1115. tf10-13

Snow tires 165-14 semperit radial mounted on MG-B disc wheels $50. Call 549-6087. tf10-8

KLH model 24 (FM & changer) with 2 big KLH 17 speakers. Exc. cond. $210. Call Steve 256-8084. tf10-6

$90 Buckle Ski Boots used 6 times $60 with stand sz. 8 1/2, head ski poles good cond. $20, Dozer Ski Rack used twice $10 Concorde Compact Stereo, AM-FM receiver, loudness and filter controls, 10 watts peak 20 usable with Kenup 11 speakers 6 mo. old $190. Panasonic TV 1 mo. old $70. Will bargain on everything. Call 583-1820 evenings. tf10-6

We undersell all. Any and all top name appliances, stereos, radios, refrigerators, anything. Call Larry 6-5090 or come to 350 Lancy. tf10-13

Just like people: bruised on the outside, but beautiful inside. 1965 Chevy convert. Call 586-2780. tf10-6

LOST

Reward! A gold link bracelet positively lost Wed., Sept. 29 in Thompson 102 between 3:20-1:30 p.m. 549-6105 after 5 & 5-2711 85 Debi. tf10-6

Lightweight blue jacket. Had NSCC State Champs inscribed. Call 6-7537. tf10-6

ROOMMATES WANTED

Male share 2 bdrm. apt. in sund. with 2 others. $60 Mike 665-3012, 545-1318. tf10-6

1 empty roommate wanted-furnished studio apt. $45 mo.-15 min. from UMass. Call 323-1197 keep trying. tf10-6

Working girl desires roommate with apartment. Must move soon! Call Diana 549-1079. tf10-6

Spiritually-minded person to share a large furnished room in Amherst Center. $35 a month. Call Kent at 253-9068 after 7. tf10-7

Male wanted male to share apt., No Hadlid. 12 mil. frm camps. furnished $85/month. contact Fred, Milne Po Box 1 No. Hdlid. Tel. 247-5049. tf10-7

HELP WANTED

Need Monday? Earn $25 or more per week! Work your own hours at your convenience! Call Barry or Dave, 1:00-5:30, 546-6063. tf10-8

Girl with insurance agy. exp. auto & homeowners, ruling & typing essential. Call 584-5555, AW Borawski, Inc., 88 King St., Northampton. tf10-6

Ambitious people wanted to sell jewelry on campus-no experience necessary-high commissions-send name, address and tel. no. to Richards, 1181 Main St., Springfield, Mass. tf10-8

Need money? Earn $25 or more a week! Work your own hours at your convenience. Call Barry or Dave 800-530. tf10-5

Earn $100 or more part time, excellent opportunity for an ecology minded person. 413-323-1427. tf10-13

Need money? Earn $25 or more a week! Work your own hours at your convenience. Call Barry or Dave 4 p.m. - 5:30 p.m. 546-6063. tf10-13

FOR RENT

$75/month, utilities included, one block from campus. Call Bonnie 253-9985, 9-11 p.m. tf10-6

Available now-one bedroom apartment at Puffton Village. Call 549-3687 tf10-8

WANTED

Wanted to buy - Ten speed racing bike. Will pay top dollar. Call 542-3052, ask for Scott. tf10-6

Driver wanted S. Deerfield to U.M. 1 trip per week, good pay. Phone 5-0041 or 549-3761. tf10-7

PERSONAL

Tom S. Prof. stud service. Call 546-6091. 10-6

The P.P.P.P.A. and Debbie and Lorraine would like to wish Kazumi Ibonzai a happy birthday. 10-6

Lost call 5-2162. Gold Wittnauer watch in area of Orchard. Sentimental value reward. tf10-8

If Lynn and S. Johnson, call Alice 665-1911 immediately. 10-6

Dear Barnabee Shultz. I love you bunches and bunches with all my heart. Mousie Godiver 10-6

To the Coolidge Hilton Health Club. Oh my god!!!! Amen. 10-6

For better commuter representation Mark Dusarick for Senator. tf10-7

Free young female cat long hair, clean. Call 1-323-7565. tf10-11

Melville Basement invites James Basement and 4th floor to a party Friday night at 8. tf10-31

Horoscopes done professionally. Call 549-6768. Write David Elliott-Manhope A-11 North Village. Minimum $5. tf10-6

LECTURE NOTES

Lecture notes are now available in room 31b in the Student Union Lobby for all sections of Anthro 101, Botany 101, Econ. 125 and 126, Geology 101, Gov. 100 and 150, Hist. 151, Human Dev. 270, Micro. 100, Phil. 105, Psych. 101, 262, 263, 270, 290, 301, and 302, Soc. 101, 200, 101 and 135. One section of Hist. 150 and Psych. 325 also in. tf10-7

ENTERTAINMENT WANTED

Every Wednesday night at the English Pub-Do your own thing! Share vocal master PA system available! Call Jerry, 549-1200 or Mark, 256-8378. tf10-8

RIDE WANTED

Ride needed to and/or from Gardner, 3 days a week. Hours are flexible please, if you commute call 632-0317. tf10-8

Ride needed daily from Easthampton to U Mass. Will share expenses. Please call 527-6680. tf10-8

TYPING

Typing - thesis, dissertations, etc. Fast, accurate; have Greek alphabet, math. & chem. symbols. Call 253-5901. tf10-13

SERVICES

Amherst Audio services. Stereo components, tape decks for home or car. 187 No. Pleasant St. 256-8133. tf5-12

NOTICES

WMUA

TONIGHT ON 91.1 FM:

7:00 p.m. EVENING NEWS - A full half hour of news from WMUA NEWS, the area's largest broadcast news department with feeds from UPI World Audio Network. Original reporting of area news is 7:30 p.m. - 8:00 p.m. VIEWPOINT - a half hour public affairs program taking a penetrating look at various events from the UMass campus to Washington. WMUA's Marty Waters is the moderator.

8:00 p.m. - 11:00 p.m. THE UJAMA DRUM - three hours of black programming for the Amherst area featuring black music, soul, jazz, poetry, and black news from the Drum's own staff and a black audio network. All brothers and sisters in the area are invited to listen.

11:00 p.m. LATE NIGHT NEWS REPORT - another complete half hour of news, information, and sports from United Press International, Associated Press, and UPI Audio Network. All the news is compiled by WMUA Newsmen who also write and edit area stories. Includes a five minute recap at 11:25.

11:30 p.m. - 3:00 a.m. ERIC BENJAMIN with rock and progressive music.

Questions.....Call Paul at 6-8709 or WMUA (5-2425)

WFCR

2 P.M. MUSIC IN THE AFTERNOON (S) Verdi, Luisa Miller (Moffo, soloist), RCA Italiana Opera, Orchestra and chorus/Cleva. Also works of Van Vactor and Creston.
5 ALL THINGS CONSIDERED
6 QUE TAL, AMIGOS
7 LOUIS LYONS: NEWS AND COMMENT
7:30 GREAT BLACK MUSIC (S)
8:30 THE KOUSSEVITSKY LEGACY Copland, Lincoln Portrait, (Melvyn Douglas, soloist) : Mozart, Symphony no. 39.
9:30 THE AUTHOR SPEAKS Selected readings from original and unpublished works.
10 THE PAUL YALEN HOUR: THIRTY MINUTES OF MUSIC Excerpts from the JoJo Malone Show.
10:30 RAPPING NIGHTLY
11 INSIDE JEAN SHEPHERD
11:45 THE HUNTI AND PAULI SHOW (S)
(S) denotes Stereo broadcast.

CHESS CLUB:
Meeting tonight at 7:30 in the new Hatch. Everyone is welcome to play and try to beat members of the team.

COLLEGIATE FLYING CLUB:
Monthly meeting of the club will be held tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Rm. 165 9 CC. All are welcome to come and participate.

COMMUTER ASSEMBLY:
There will be a general meeting of the Commuter Assembly Tuesday, Oct. 12 in the Pierpont private lounge. Topic Budget. Time: 7 a.m.

DEBATE:
Dean Dwight Allen and Father James Quigley will debate the "Bahai Faith or Christianity, Legitimacy and Relevance" tonight in Mahar Aud. at 8 p.m.

EQUESTRIAN CLUB:
Interested in horses? Come to Grinnell Arena, Oct. 7 at 6:30 p.m. and join our club.

HEALTH SERVICES STUDENT ADVISORY BOARD:
Any students interested in any aspect of the Health Services, please come to our meeting Thursday at 3:30 p.m. in Rm. 805 809 CC.

HEYMAKERS SQUARE DANCE CLUB.
The nomination and election of a new treasurer will be held at the regular square dance on Tuesday, Oct. 12.

HILLEL:
Open executive board meeting tonight at 6:30 in the Hillel office. All may attend. Entertainment.

INTERNATIONAL CLUB:
International club coffee house at 8 p.m. in Rms. 168 170 CC. A film on Chinese Ceramics will be shown, and bingo will be played. Be sure to come.

JACK THE RIPPER AN TIDEFAMATION LEAGUE:
There will be an organizational meeting at 4 p.m. Oct. 13 under the largest willow by the Campus Pond.

MAROON KEYS:
Meeting tonight at 8:30 p.m. in 803 CC. Be there or be prepared to explain your absence.

NORTHAMPTON VOLUNTEERS:
Orientation meeting will be held at Northampton State Hospital at 7 p.m. today. Buses will leave from Hasbrouk Lab and Patterson at 6:30 p.m. All students are welcome.

PAN AFRICAN STUDENTS:
All invited to a picnic to Western Mass. Transportation, food and drinks will be provided. Will meet at 12 noon on Sunday, Oct. 10, CC. Bus station.

PARACHUTE CLUB:
Jump Center will be closed Sat. but open on Sun. & Mon. - if you want to join or just look, come to exciting Turners Falls airport.

REVELLERS:
Important Revellers meeting Wed. night at BK 401 N. Pleasant St. at 8 p.m. sharp. All must attend.

SCUBA CLUB:
Meeting 7 p.m. in Curry Hicks. Elections. All interested are invited. Lessons for beginning will begin. Bring bathing suit for co-ed swim. Bring tank and regulator if possible.

SPEED READING STUDY SKILLS COURSE
Reading-Study Skills Center. No fee/no credit. Increase reading speed, improve study skills, discover your own learning style. 1st meeting Thursday, 8 p.m. in CC Rms. 174.

UMASS AMATEUR RADIO CLUB:
The UMass amateur radio club will hold its first meeting tonight at 8 p.m. in Rm. 106E lab. All licensed operators are urged to attend.

LOST:
6 month old male cat, grey tiger with white belly & paws. (double) longhaired - had red collar with a jingle bell last seen Tuesday night. Call 549 1405 or bring him to 17 Fearing St.
Ankle bracelet with inscription "Lela". Personal value. Please call 545 0082.

FOUND:
Pocket knife, Central dorm area, about 2 weeks ago; call Sue at 6 1431.
A pocketbook belonging to Cheryl Mueller. Call 549 6631.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

Aries seeks to stand out, to lead, to gain recognition. The nature of this native is energetic. Sitting and doing nothing is opposite to the mainspring of an Aries individual. For Aries, the keynote is action. Some famous persons born under this zodiacal sign include Harry Reasoner, Frank Gorshin and Ann Miller.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Self-indulgence now proves expensive. Analyze needs. Have fun without being foolish. Remember to save for that proverbial rainy day. Key is to accept added responsibility. You will be rewarded.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Lunar cycle is indicative of disputes connected with secrets. Means one you usually trust may not be telling all. Maintain self-control. Finish project. Relationship is tested. Avoid speaking in anger.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): One you depend on for moral support may be traveling. Key is more self-reliance. Stress greater independence of thought, action. Highlight original concepts. Give full play to creative processes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Money and friends may not mix. Know this and be prudent in connection with paying and collecting. Pass, delay when it comes to borrowing, lending. Legal and financial angles need investigating.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Avoid actions based on anger, impulse. Tendency is to feel oppressed. You could say, do things which cause later regret. Permit this foreknowledge to act as preventive medicine. Professional gain indicated.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be aware of details, apparent minor matters. Don't neglect health. Seek balance between work, recreation. Travel now may not hold answers. Take time to evaluate basic position. Don't rush.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Activity increases. You make numerous plans, contacts. Be selective. Avoid any semblance of panic. Demands of young person should not be taken too seriously. Be diplomatic but firm.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may feel friends are opposing your desires. This, very likely, is not the case. Your timing, however, could be off mark. Key now is to permit others to have their say. Your role is that of keen observer.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Hold rein on enthusiasm. Be optimistic, not impulsive. Accent on financial arrangements, disbursions. Pisces person appears to be involved. Aggressive relative can best be ignored in a nice way.

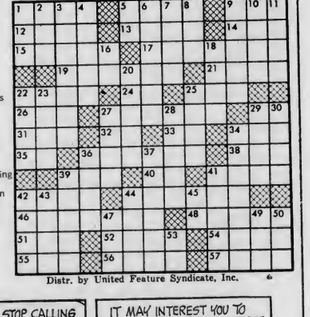
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Finances are activated. Accent also is on creative endeavors, relations with opposite sex. Achievement is keynoted. Windfall could be featured. What happens happens in a big way. Be ready.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Some claim you are hyperactive. In truth, you may be anxious about domestic matter. It is necessary to complete a project. More persons pay more attention to your ideas, views.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Hold off on journey. You need additional information. Message could be garbled. Get puzzle pieces together. See in fresh light. Reject secondhand stories, reports. Assert more independence.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have natural appreciation of harmony, in music, the arts, in human relationships. This month you are burdened with additional responsibility. However, opportunities multiply; chances for rewards are greater.

Copyright 1971, Gen. Fea. Corp.



Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Land measure
5 Desert dweller
9 Music: as written
12 Regretted
13 Wife of Zeus
14 Once around track
15 Retinue
17 Individuals
19 Inclines
21 Be defeated
22 Century plant
24 Man's nickname
25 Pinch
26 Measure of weight
27 Ventured
29 Conjunction 31 Abstract being
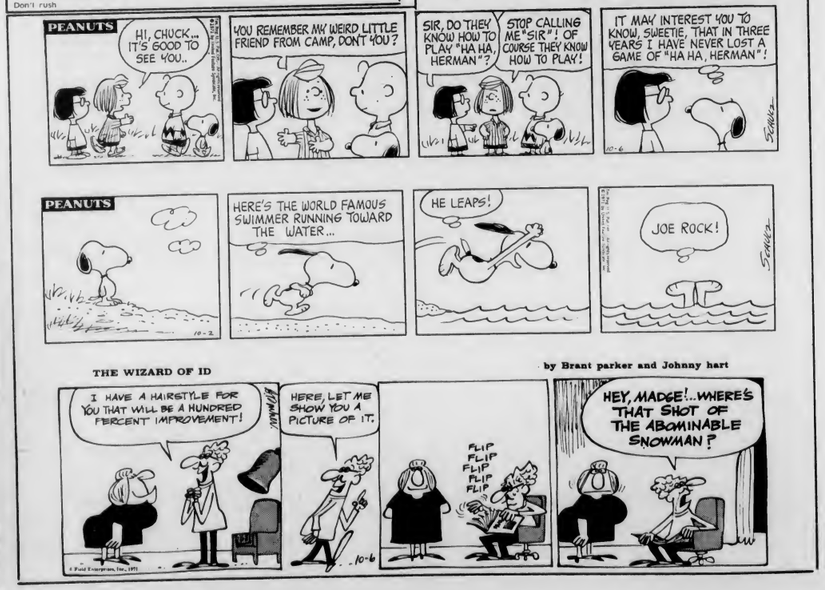
32 Teutonic deity
33 Negative
34 Plunge
35 Compass point
36 Injury
38 Mountain in Crete
39 Hindu cymbals
40 Symbol for niton
41 At a distance
42 Newspaper paragraph
44 Emphasized form of "it"
46 Notwithstanding
48 Slumber
51 Unit of Latvian currency
52 Withered
54 Heraldic bearing
55 Bitter vetch
56 Spar
57 Former Russian ruler



DOWN
1 Skill
2 Mongrel
3 Causes
4 Roman official
5 Exclamation
6 Repulses
7 War god
8 Prohibit
9 Sailing vessel
10 Makes into leather
11 Part of church
16 Negative
18 Skidded
20 Couples
22 The sweetsop
23 Solitary
25 Gaseous element
27 Walk unsteadily
28 Difficulties
29 Opera by Verdi
30 Mast
34 Disagrees
36 Lantern
37 Buries
39 Trials
41 Apportion
42 Unemployed
43 Rip
44 Virginia willow
45 Plural ending
47 Doctrine
49 Guido's high note
50 Through
53 Latin conjunction

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

P	L	A	T	E		G	R	E	A	D
G	A	I	T	E	R		B	E	A	V	E	R
A	T	E		N	O	D	E	S		E	N	E
I	T		A	S	S	I	S	T	S		O	T
T	E	R	S	E		V	E		N	T	E
	R	O	C		P	O		E	O	E
	V	E	N	E	R	A	T	E	S
	G	E	N	E		C	I		R	E	D
H	A	R	D		S	I		C	A	S	E	S
E	N		S	T	E	N	C	I	L		V	A
A	D	D		R	E	G	A	L		A	I	T
D	E	E	P	E	R		L	I	A	B	L	E
R	E	S	T	S		F	A	D	E	S

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

NOW..YOUR CHOICE OF 5!
Showcase
Rt. 5 - W. Spfld.
Cinema 1-2-3-4-5
733-5131
MORE NEW SHOWS!
MORE NEW LOUNGER SEATS!
MORE NEW PARKING!
MATINEES DAILY...POPULAR PRICES
Adults $1.50 Mon thru Fri Matts
1 WALTER MATTHAU PLAZA SUITE GP
2 In everyone's life there's a SUMMER OF '42 R
3 STEVE McQUEEN "LE MANS" G
4 Walt Disney 1,000,000 DUCK G
5 ESCAPE FROM THE PLANET OF THE APES G
ACRES FREE PARKING
ROCKER LOUNGERS
CHARGE YOUR TICKETS

Ruggers Bow To Beacon Hill

This past weekend found the UMass Rugby Football Club exchanging the sweet wine of victory for the saltier, bloodier cup of defeat against the Beacon Hill R.F.C. in Boston. In each of Saturday's three games the veterans of the Hill utilized their experience to overcome the youthful UMass fifteen.

The 'B' teams of each side were matched in the first game of the afternoon. UMass stung first with a penalty kick by Peter Herrmann, but faltered twice in the face of the Hill's smooth play allowing two tries, both converted. Then Rich Vogel made a fine break from three-quarter's to score the initial UMass try.

The second half began rather depressingly as the Hill kicked twice for goal. Then Rick Ross commemorated last year's Beacon Hill game by once again being carried from the field. An inside cut by fly-half Don Madden brightened things up as it led to another try, converted by Herrmann, but Beacon scored in turn, and the game ended, 22-13.

UMass hopes were raised again as the 'A' team took the field, but wavered as the side struggled to hold their opponents to a goal and a try during much of the first half. But it was not all Beacon Hill, for Mike Reynolds made a beautiful run and fake from a loose scrum, then passed to lock Bill Kesgen who went in for the score. Mike Donnell converted and the score stood 6-7 at the half.

The UMass side fought with determination and vigor in the second half, notably in the exciting runs of Donnell and Doug Knapp, and from an excellent combination, Asa Glaser to Bart Drake, that lacked only five yards of a try. But the actual scoring was Beacon's from a single try, unconverted, and somewhat questionable in its execution, leaving the final score at 11-6.

For a time it looked as if the 'C' team was to be the bright spot of the afternoon as they opened up with a 10-0 lead on the phenomenal runs of Buckley Wingfoot, but Beacon revived itself in the second half and stormed to a 24-10 victory.

The afternoon left all three of the UMass sides with a 1-1 record and hopefully with a much developed sense of the finer aspects of the game. For it was not from lack of desire or aggressiveness that they lost, but from a lack of seasoning and experienced play. Next Saturday should show how much they have gained.

A GOOD TRY-UMass rugger, Rich Vogel, winds his way through four Beacon Hill defenders on way to scoring a try in Saturday's rugby match in Boston. This coming weekend Vogel and his teammates will hotes an invitational tournament at the UMass Rugby fields. (MDC Photo by Gib Fullerton)

Johnson Traded To Indians

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) - Controversial outfielder Alex Johnson and catcher Jerry Moses were traded by the California Angels to the Cleveland Indians yesterday for outfielders Vada Pinson and Frank Baker and pitcher Alan Foster.

The trade of Johnson came as no surprise. In his first season with the Angels, he had hit .329 to win the 1970 American League batting title but was suspended by the club in mid-season 1971, accused of failing to hustle.

An arbitration board required the Angels to pay his full salary for the year even though he did not play after June 26. Prior to that he had been fined 29 times with the amounts reaching a total of about $3,750.

During the first months of the 1971 season, Johnson had batted .260.

Moses had voiced dissatisfaction with the Angels in his first season with the club after being acquired from the Boston Red Sox. The trade also included Tony Conigliaro, who quit the California club during the past campaign.

Moses hit .227 with eight doubles, two triples and four home runs.

Pinson, former National League standout with Cincinnati, wasn't happy at Cleveland this season, claiming the management had not lived up to salary promises. He had a .264 batting average with 11 homers, 4 triples and 23 doubles. He stole 23 bases. In a major league career dating back to 1959, Pinson has a lifetime average of .291.

Baker, who will be 27 on Nov. 1, appeared in 73 games with Cleveland the past season, batting .210 and driving in 23 runs.

Foster, 24, pitched for the Los Angeles Dodgers before being traded to Cleveland last year. With the Indians, he posted an 8-12 won-loss record with 26 starts. He appeared in 182 innings with an earned-run-average of 4.09.

Marauders, Stouts Earn Playoff Berths

By JOHN BOCK

An outsider could have guessed something was at stake had he been watching the intramural Independent League Monday night action. With the playoffs a week away the teams played with a fervor matched only by their desire to win.

A game that exemplified the spirit prevalent on the fields was the Dickinson Stouts vs. the Starters. The Stouts (4-0) had a world of confidence going into the contest, but quickly assumed a more reserved position as the Starters led 2-0 at the end of three quarters. The climax action came in the fourth quarter on a series of pass and run plays.

Stouts quarterback Denny Fogarty hit Mike Cadran with two ten yard passes and then a twenty yard pass to leading receiver Stan Sady. The show was all Sady's as he attracted the ball from Fogarty and ran the remaining yards to the goal, putting the Stouts ahead 7-2. All was not over as the Starters came back with a fourth and goal with forty seconds remaining. Credit goes to Stouts Bob Aiessio, Bob Savage, and Steve Gross who led a more than adequate defense.

In other hard fought action, it was Team over Nation 10-8. Standout performances were turned in by Nation's quarterback Doug Hebert.

A combination of interceptions and open receivers saw the Marauders over the Bucks, 23-0. QB P.J. Flaherty passed for three TD's, one each to Jim Maguire, Jerry Wallaston, and Vince Sbano. The Marauders capped the evenng with two interceptions by Jerry Dohner and a safety by Dave Carleton and rocketed into a playoff berth with the Stouts.

AP Top Ten

1. Nebraska	4 0	1058
2. Michigan	4 0	886
3. Texas	3 0	818
4. Auburn	3 0	654
5. Colorado	4 0	618
6. Alabama	4 0	607
7. Notre Dame	3 0	606
8. Oklahoma	3 0	592
9. Penn St.	3 0	289
10. Georgia	4 0	280

Excellent
Financial Assistance
for Student Nurses
a Representative of the U.S. Army will be at the ROTC Bldg. from 4 Oct. - 8 Oct. 71
No obligation - come and see us.

Pirates Win Again; Game Four Today

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Rich Hebner turned from goat to hero with an eighth-inning homer in support of surprise starter Bob Johnson, giving the Pittsburgh Pirates a 2-1 victory over San Francisco yesterday in the third game of the National League playoffs.

The triumph, in which the Pirates beat Giants' ace Juan Merichal, gave Pittsburgh a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five series to determine the National League pennant winner.

Hebner lashed a 1-2 pitch from Marichal just over the outstretched glove of rightfielder Bobby Bonds for the decisive blow in the dramatic struggle with two out in the eighth inning as 38,322 fans rained clouds of paper from the stands.

Hebner, a third baseman who in the sixth inning committed the error that led to the only San Francisco run, thus brought the victory to Johnson, Manager Danny Murtaugh's last-minute pitching choice.

A self-proclaimed "dud" who had posted only nine victories during the regular season after being acquired from Kansas City, the 28-year-old Johnson was named to start after Murtaugh's original choice, Nelson Briles, reinjured a strained thigh while warming up.

Johnson went out and matched Marichal pitch for pitch through eight innings, allowing just five hits while striking out seven and walking three.

But when Vic Davalillo hit for Johnson to start the eighth, the score was still knotted 1-1 with Marichal having allowed just three hits-including Bob Robertson's fourth playoff homer.

Marichal, who won 18 games for the Giants during the regular season and pitched the pennant-clincher in NL West on the last day of the season, struck out Davalillo and got Dave Cash on a grounder to short. Then Hebner broke it up.

It brought quick redemption for both Johnson and Hebner.

Johnson had said prior to the opening of the playoff series that the 1971 season had been a total disappointment for him. "If you can't win 15 here," he said frankly, "You gotta be a dud. I'm proving myself a dud."

But he wasn't a dud in this one, and neither was Hebner, although he opened the door for the Giants' lone run in the sixth inning. Ken Henderson opened the inning with a single for the fourth hit off Johnson and Tito Fuentes followed with a bunt down the third-base line.

Hebner came in quickly to field the sacrifice but threw wildly to first and Henderson raced around to score.

The drama built later in the inning when, after Willie Mays was thrown out attempting to bunt, Willie McCovey was walked intentionally. Johnson then struck out Bonds on a 3-2 pitch but walked Dick Sietz on a 3-2 pitch leading the bases.

The count also went to 3-2 on Alan Gallagher but Johnson reached back and got him on a grounder to short.

The Giants threatened again in the eighth when Mays singled with one out and stole second. Bonds then walked on a 3-2 pitch one out later. And when the count went to 2-0 on Dietz, Coach Don Osborn came out to the mound for a conference.

Johnson immediately went back to work and got Dietz to hit into a force out.

At that stage, Murtaugh obviously thought it was best to pinch hit Johnson.

Dave Giusti then came on in the ninth and set the Giants down in order, leaving the Pirates only one victory shy of clinching their first National League pennant since 1960.

Tonight's Intramurals

		FOOTBALL		TUG-O-WAR
FIELD	TIME	TEAMS
1	6:00	Twenties VS. Cuties	1 6:30	APO VS. PSD
2		Mushrooms VS. Ducks position west cent.	2	TC VS. LCA
3		1 VS. 2	1 7:00	KS VS. PLP
4		3 VS. 4 position south cent.	2	BKP VS. TEP
5		1 VS. 3
6		3 VS. 4 position river
1	7:00	1 VS. 2
3		3 VS. 4 position east cent.
1	9:00	1 VS. 2
2		3 VS. 4

AMOROSO
The very name means love — where else should you buy your DIAMOND
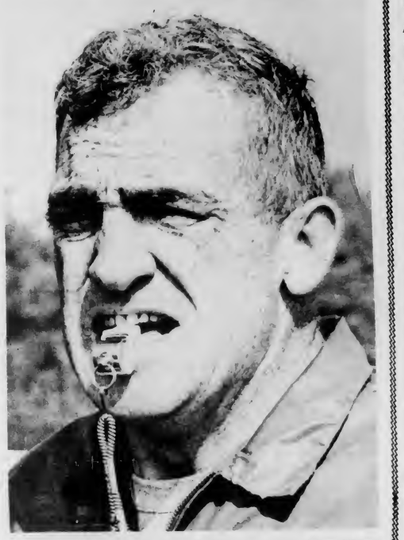
LOWEST PRICES ANYWHERE
centified appraisals
Call RICHARD AMOROSO 546-4300 anytime.



WATER BEDS SALE
Your Choice
KING, QUEEN, or DOUBLE SIZE MATTRESS -
5 yr. guarantee $24.99
with 1" Foam Insulating Pad
$29.99
A Head of Time
360 College St. Amherst
Rt. 9 Tel. 253-5394
Open Noon til 9

COMMUTER ASSEMBLY
SPACES AVAILABLE
Nomination sheets may be picked up
in front of RSO, 1st level, CC.
Must be in by 5 p.m. Fri. Oct. 8

The Computer Age Hits UMass Football

By EARLE BARROLL

Don't be surprised if in the near future robots take the field for the opening kickoff of a football game. Yes, the age of the computer has hit the gridiron and if you need any proof just ask Dick MacPherson and his coaching staff what they did over this past weekend in Philadelphia.

"BEEP, BEEP, BLAT"-Dick MacPherson's face shows dismay over a recent malfunction of his all purpose football computer caused by a busted backfield play in B.U.'s weekend game with Temple University.

Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Don't ask them if they toured the City of Brotherly Love...they'll tell you "no".

Don't ask them if they saw any daylight during their stay...they'll tell you "no" again.

But if you ask them if they prepared for the Boston University football game this coming Saturday...they'll tell you "yes".

And if you ask them if there was a computer involved...they'll tell you "yes" again.

MacPherson and his staff left for Philadelphia Saturday morning at 7 a.m., their mission: to scout B.U. against Temple that night, get two rolls of previous B.U. game films and to break these down for computer analysis.

The Redman braintrust arrived at Treadway Inn in Philly shortly after one and went right to Temple to pick up roll number one and start breaking it down.

Later in the afternoon coaches Pickett and Flood went to Valley Forge to pick up roll number two from the Citadel. When this came back to the Inn, it too was immediately broken down.

In the evening MacPherson and Pickett went to scout the Temple-B.U. game as the Yankee Conference allows for only two coaches to attend a game on a scouting mission.

After the game the coaches grouped again at the Inn and finished the films, the game report and had just enough time for a quick snack before hitting the sack for the 6 a.m. departure the next morning.

Upon returning to UMass on Sunday the film analysis was processed through a computer and by 7 p.m. Monday evening the entire analysis was on MacPherson's desk ready for the coaches to analyze themselves.

Philadelphia was all work for these men. "All our meals were brought to our rooms, we didn't even get to see the sun," MacPherson said on Tuesday.

Now, where does the computer analysis of the game actually start? Coach Pickett and Miss Biff Ebacher initiated the program this year. It calls for breaking down the film, play by play, and putting the findings on computer cards.

The computer back at the University has been programmed for every possible situation that can happen in a football game and after the cards are fed into the machine, it does its thing and gives back an unbelievable amount of information.

MacPherson had the computer sheet on his desk when I went to his office on Tuesday and what I saw was enough to make the most avid football fan choke.

Pages and pages of B.U., all analyzed by running plays, pass plays, fumbles, what they did on goal line plays, what they did in the critical zones.

Each game was separately analyzed and then all three were analyzed together so MacPherson would know just what B.U. did on play number 56 in each game or what happened in each game on a third and six situation.

The computer even went so far as to tell what the Terriors did between their goal line and their ten yard line, their ten yard line and their twenty, etc...

So now if you happen to go to Boston University on Saturday or happen to be walking by the sidelines during the next UMass home game and hear the coaches and players talking to each other in something that sounds like "beep, beep, beep", don't be alarmed...It's only the computer doing its thing on the gridiron.

Orioles Sweep Into Series

OAKLAND (AP)-Lanky Jim Palmer pitched the Baltimore Orioles into the World Series for the third consecutive season yesterday, beating Oakland 5-3 on a seven-hitter with the Robinson boys, Brooks and Frank, supplying the offensive punch.

Palmer, 10 days short of his 26th birthday, completed the Orioles' American League championship playoff sweep for the third straight season. He also hurled the clinchers in playoff sweeps against Minnesota in 1969 and 1970.

The Orioles, who have never lost a playoff game, took command when the Robinsons started connecting against Diego Segui and four Oakland relievers.

Baltimore had nicked Segui for a run in the first but it was a cheap price for the A's to pay after the veteran right-hander loaded the bases with none out on walks to Don Buford and Boog Powell sandwiched around a hit by Paul Blair. Frank Robinson struck out on three pitches but Ellie Henricks' long fly ball got the run home.

Reggie Jackson tied the score for the A's with a long home run in the third that set off a booming display of owner Charles O. Finley's fireworks behind the center field fence.

It was still 1-1 in the fifth when Buford opened with his second single. Blair bounced into a force out but Powell walked. The runners advanced on Frank Robinson's infield out, giving the Orioles men on second and third with two out.

Here Manager Dick Williams decided to play the percentages and ordered Segui, a right-hander, to walk the lefty-swinging Hendricks and pitch to Brooks Robinson, who swings from the right side.

The play didn't work. Robinson ripped Segui's first pitch for a single to center, scoring two runs and putting the Orioles in front to stay.

Sal Bando, captain of the A's narrowed the gap to one run with a sixth inning homer that set off the Finley fireworks again.

That was too close for the Birds and they padded their lead with two more runs in the seventh thanks to a double and some aggressive base running by Frank Robinson.

Powell opened the inning with a walk against reliever Rollie Fingers and then Robinson, hitless in the series so far and burdened by a 3-for-19 slump going into the game, smacked a line drive to left.

The ball landed perhaps two feet fair and banged up against the wall. As the 240-pound Powell chugged around third base, heading for home, Robinson rounded second. Powell slid home safely and Robinson pulled up at third on the play at the plate.

That finished Fingers and Darold Knowles relieved for the A's. With pinch hitter Andy Etchebarren at bat, Knowles uncorked a wild pitch that bounced perhaps 55 feet away from catcher Gene Tenace. Robinson broke for the plate and slid home safely with Baltimore's fifth run.

Jackson sent the fireworks man back to work again in the eighth with another booming home run and when Mike Epstein followed with a single, there was some hope for the A's. But Palmer got Bando to rap into a double play and then retired Angel Mangual on a bouncer.

In the ninth, Palmer finished with a flourish, striking out Tenance, Epstein and pinch hitter Curt Blefary to end it in a hurry. The frustration of the A's might have been best shown by the so-what reaction to two young fans who raced on the field with one out left and tore right back off without stirring a guard.

The victory was the 14th straight for Baltimore. The Orioles finished the regular season with an 11-game string of triumphs. That streak parallels the one the Orioles took into the 1970 World Series when they beat Cincinnati in five games to take the world championship.

Erving Scores 34 Against Gilmore

By MDC STAFF

Former UMass basketball great Julius Erving continues to amaze the basketball world with his brilliant performances in pre-season action.

Over the weekend against the Kentucky Colonels, Big Julie scored 34 points, grabbed 16 rebounds and outplayed 7'2" Artis Gilmore and 6'9" Dan Issel, both All-Americans and high priced draftees, in leading the Squires to a 124-123 victory.

After the game a Kentucky sports writer was quoted as saying, "He's the best prospect as a rookie we've seen in a long time."

The announcer for the Colonels was just as awed in commenting during the game, "You have to see him to believe him."

Against Detroit on Monday night Erving scored 20 points in a 128-123 loss to the Detroit Pistons.

To date the big guy has averaged close to 30 points and 13 rebounds a game in pre-season.

As one former sports editor of this paper put it recently, "We probably were looking at the best collegiate basketball player in the country over the last two years at UMass."

Jabbar Suffers Eye Injury

(AP) - Kareem Jabbar, Milwaukee's towering center who was a pain in the neck to the remaining teams in the National Basketball Association last season, now is suffering from a pain in the eye - and the Bucks hope that he can see his way clear again and lead them to a second straight league championship.

The 7-2 Jabbar, formerly known as Lew Alcindor, topped the league in scoring with a 31.7 average, was fourth in rebounds, second in field goal percentage and an overwhelming winner of the NBA's Most Valuable Player Award.

His awesome performance paced the Bucks to the Midwest Division championship the Western Conference title and their first league crown, in only their third year of existence. They climaxed their season with a four-game sweep over the injury-riddled Baltimore Bullets.

En route, Milwaukee had a record 20-game winning streak and became the first club to shoot over .500 from the field for an entire season.

This season, which begins Oct. 12, the Bucks will have the same lineup that carried them to the title last season.

Varsity M

The Varsity M Club will hold its weekly Redman Luncheon at 12:15 this afternoon at the Newman Center. Soccer coach Jack Berryman and cross country coach Ken O'Brien will be the featured speakers along with athletes from their teams.

There will also be an updated scouting report on the Boston University football team by the football staff.

As usual there will be a door prize, a ticket raffle for excellent food! All seats plus excellent fo

ONE BLUE DARTER-High scoring UMass forward, Lindo Alves, lets go with a lightening quick shot in recent UMass-B.C. game. On Saturday the Redmen booters return to action against UConn at [illegible] (MDC photo by Mac [illegible])

Harriers Drop Tri-Meet

The UMass cross country team ran into a roadblock yesterday afternoon at Franklin Park and dropped a tri-meet to Harvard University and Providence.

Doug O'Connell was the top UMass performer finishing fourth in an extremely good field of runners. Tom Derderian was the second Redman across the line in eighth place.

Harvard's Mike Koerner and John Quirk and P.C.'s Bill Speck all finished in front of O'Connell.

In the freshman race, UMass' Bill Gillin and Randy Thomas finished second and third in a closely contested frosh race.

For the entire story on the race see tomorrow's Collegian.

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather: We'll try sunny, again.

VOLUME XCIX, ISSUE 22 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS THURSDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1971

Senates Order Fee Investigation

By DON BISHOP

After many weeks of debate and investigation, it was decided by an unusual joint session of the Graduate and Undergraduate Student Senates, that sufficient evidence warrants the calling in of the Office of Emergency Preparedness. They will investigate the legality of the University's rent and fee increases.

In other major business, backing was given to the Ad Hoc Committee of Concern's final report to the Board of Trustees, and nominations were made, to be submitted to the Board of Trustees, to be used in the Board's selection of a temporary Chancellor.

Further business concluded by this joint session included the approval of a motion which would establish a joint Ad Hoc Search Committee for "seeking a (permanent) Chancellor for the University of Massachusetts at Amherst." Also the Senates appointed 5 members to be sent to the Board of Trustees meeting today, and they gave their support to the National Moratorium Days on October 13 and November 6 of this year.

Professor Bruce Morris, Chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee of Concern, presented that Committee's special report to the Senate. This report deals with the current budgetary and trust fund issue, and conveys the Committee's feelings. It will be presented to the Board of Trustees at their meeting today.

This report had earlier in the day received the support of the Faculty Senate and it was endorsed by the combined Student Senates as expected.

In their second business the Senates nominated 4 candidates to temporarily fill the post of departing Chancellor Tippo. The nominations will be considered at todays Board meeting. The Board will make the final appointment. The individuals nominated were administrators Randolph Bromery and Robert Gluckstern and faculty members Franklin Patterson and John Hanson.

In their final major business consideration, the Senates approved the sending of Attorney Howland's letter to the Office of Emergency Preparedness. The letter asks for a full O.E.P. investigation into the legality of the University's collection of rent and fee increases.

Mr. Howland and the Student Senate Fee Committee have been investigating the University's records of check deposits received before the wage and price deadline of August 17.

They feel that the number of checks delivered to The Amherst National Bank by the University before the deadline, does not represent the figure of 10% of student enrollment which the O.E.P. has established as being necessary for rent and fee increases to be legal under the freeze. Therefore Howland and the Rents Committee have decided that an investigation is in order.

Attorney Howland has prepared the letter to O.E.P. This letter was read before the Senates by him, and following this a motion was presented for joint approval for the sending of the letter.

Considerable debate followed this motion, with those opposed to the calling in of O.E.P. asking whether this action against the University would serve any useful purpose in the long run. Some senators felt that if the University was forced to refund the increase, the resultant deficit would eventually hurt the student body.

Those in favor of calling in the O.E.P. felt that the legality of the University's actions must once and for all be determined. These senators also held that if the University was made to refund the rent and fee increases, this action would force them to live on an "austerity" budget and thus serve a positive purpose.

In the final vote of 25 for, 10 against, and 2 abstentions, the motion to approve the sending of the letter to O.E.P. was passed.

Senate President Lee Sandwen (right) presided at the joint meetings of the graduate and undergraduate Student Senates last night. The poster is part of the Student Senate voter registration drive led by Senator John Stevens (MDC photos by Barbara Brecher)

OEP Letter Excerpts

Dear Mr. O'Connor:

Thank you for your responses to my original inquiry and the information therein. In accordance with the last paragraph of your letter, the Student Senate has asked for the facts and figures from the University Administration. Many hours of discussion, investigation and analysis of the records of the University have resulted in the enclosed publicly released statement by the Vice Chancellor for Financial Affairs.

...Turning then to the relevant Exhibit C, it is at once obvious that the University does not maintain a record system of dating and timing receipts of deposits for residence hall, dining commons or Campus Center accounts. Indeed its records are such that reconstruction of the date or time of receipt is impossible from University records. Apparently, checks received are processed prior to being deposited at the local bank for collection. The routine time required to process a check is not obvious nor has any cogent explanation of the process been given. At the time of the Vice Chancellor's public presentation the Head Cashier said that checks were received and as received were bundled into a vault for safekeeping. Allegedly, the subsequent processing procedure is done on a First In First Out basis. Accordingly, the first checks received are the first checks to be bank deposited. By Exhibit C we can see that the first deposit was made up on August 12 (deposited August 13) and contained variously 405, 355 and 851 or a total of 1611 checks. No logical explanation is offered as to why the University cashiers with an allegedly full vault, should have been handling only 1245 and 1204 checks on the next two deposit days and then recover sufficient energy to process 1684 checks on the eighteenth of August. One possibility is that the hindsight of reconstruction with attendant assumptions doesn't account for the actual situation on August 12, 16, 17, and 18 and that in fact, all checks received were processed by the close of the business day subsequent to receipt.

If we take the University bank deposit figures for the twelfth of August as the only reliable "pre-freeze" deposit figures because the bank's records certainly do authenticate receipts on that date, the following picture of deposits on hand emerges:

For Residence Halls: 3.4% of the students billed paid 3.4% of the fees.

For Dining Commons: 3.6% of the students billed paid 3.1% of the fees.

For Campus Center: 4.2% of the students billed paid 4.4% of the fees.

This assumes that the Office of Emergency Preparedness would reasonably require a reliable record of deposits received and in this case would be forced to resort to the bank records for "deposits" of adequate quality to constitute "confirmation".

If a more lenient view is taken, i.e. that the University in fact processed all checks received on the business day subsequent to their receipt, and again necessarily relying upon the bank's figures as the only satisfactory evidence of confirmation of deposit the following picture emerges from the first two bank deposits:

Continued on page 2

On The Inside:

● Faculty Senate Passes Report — See Page Three

● Rumor-News Analysis — See Page Two

Town Accepts Apartment Plan

By CHARLES BERKOW

The Town of Amherst voted last night to accept a modified version of a development plan submitted by Otto Paparazzo Associates. The action took place at a Town Meeting held in Amherst Regional Junior High School.

The Town voted in favor of a proposal by Selectwoman Nancy Eddy to commit the question of Town approval of the Paparazzo plan to the Amherst Planning Board and the Amherst Board of Appeals. The Boards are to criticize and review the developing Paparazzo plans, and give special merit to proposals about half the size of the original proposal of 2200 residential units to be built on 640 acres.

The need for more housing in Amherst, especially for moderate and low income people, was recognized by all who spoke at the meeting. Town Meeting Members noted that the population of Amherst has increased rapidly in the past several years, while the amount of housing has increased more slowly. The effect of this was to make the supply of housing considerably less than the demand, thus driving up rents, and keeping many low income families out of Amherst.

Many who spoke mentioned that they had visited other Paparazzo projects, and were impressed with them. The total planning aspect of the Paparazzo proposal had great appeal for the speakers at the meeting. The plan made considerations for the environmental aspect of the area, setting aside 30% of the land for open space.

"The continued growth of Amherst is inevitable," said Dana Snyder, and the rest of those present seemed to agree. The major complaint of those who spoke against the Paparazzo proposal, though, was that it would make Amherst grow too much. Snyder also said that the ratio of high to low income housing to be built under the Paparazzo plan was much too high.

Because they were concerned about the rate of growth of Amherst, the Town Meeting members authorized the Planning and Zoning Appeal Boards to give special merit to plans of Paparazzo associates which were about half the size of the original proposal.

The meeting last night was a continuation of the Special Town Meeting Monday night, which was adjourned after three and one half hours. Article 17 was to have been the first considered, but the Meeting decided to consider Article 25, the Paparazzo question, first.

At the time of the Collegian deadline, the Town was discussing various amendments to the Amherst Zoning map.

Paparazzo States Case

Mr. Otto Paparazzo, speaking for himself and his three associates, said today "we feel that the Amherst Zoning Board of Appeals' rejection of a Planned Unit Residential District for Amherst Fields has a profoundly negative effect on the future of Amherst."

We have, therefore, decided to ask for some evidence of greater public support from the town for this creative kind of development.

The misrepresentations by the press have led to great misunderstanding in the scope and time span of the project. The project is neither huge nor massive. Amherst Fields is proposed on an incremental basis of development commenserate only with the normal growth of the town of Amherst for the next nine years.

At issue, is 150 initial units of housing which have been designed in necessary relationship to the master planning of a much larger area. We have been condemned on the basis of the master plan. Paparazzo Associates are committed to work with the town on external and internal problems over the many years ahead.

The value of controlled rational planning, looking forward a decade, for the incremental development of a portion of the future growth of Amherst has been rejected in favor of scattered developments like past uncontrolled growth.

The concern of the Z.B.A. for traffic and schools is real, yet, it is precisely the concept of P.U.R.D. to provide less traffic trips per day than alternative developments. Amherst Fields, as a residential neighborhood with a commercial center, would benefit the town's tax base.

We are disappointed that the Z.B.A. has ignored the Town Planning Board's recommendation for a P.U.R.D. and the concepts of land use entailed.

Our choices are narrow. The choice on the part of the town is to express its feelings about planning and quality development.

Superior land use and housing are only possible when a developer has the long term assurance of making amenities and open space commenserate to the permitted size of his overall program.

We are withdrawing our Articles of rezoning from the Town Meeting and have withdrawn our definitive subdivision and application for 150 units from the Town Boards.

Unless we have greater support from the community, there is little use in proceeding.

Letter Excerpts

Continued from page one

For Residence Halls: 6.3% of the students billed paid 6.4% of the fees.

For Dining Commons: 6.8% of the students billed paid 5.9% of the fees.

For Campus Center: 7.2% of the students billed paid 7.5% of the fees.

Both of the foregoing types of analysis seem to me to be reasonable, logical and consistent with the rigors imposed by the freeze. It is consistent with freeze policy, which must surely be that to qualify for exemption a rigorous justification is required. The proposition advanced by the University: that because it sees good reason why it should have the money, we should be required to make a great many assumptions favorable to that end is philosophically and pragmatically inconsistent with the President's order. To accept the University view the following assumptions are required:

1. All checks dated August 11, 1971 were received at the University by August 14, 1971. But checks dated considerably in advance of August 11 were included in the August 19 deposit (August 18 on Exhibit C) yet theoretically should have been received first. In their First in First Out processing procedure, the inconsistency is readily apparent. The fact is the date on the check often bears no accurately reasonable relationship to the date it was either actually received or the date that the drawer of the check intended that it be received. Furthermore, the Uniform Commercial Code would certainly militate for the view that even deposit for collection in a bank does not constitute payment and hence one might take the view that a deposit could only be "confirmed" by payment by the payor bank, which would substantially nullify the University position altogether because that is about four business days after deposit.

2. The cashier's office processes checks on a First In First Out basis. If this were so the checks processed should have been so at approximately the same rate and not vary so disproportionately day by day. Furthermore, the last deposit by the University should not have included such a statistically greater number of checks dated on or before August 11 than the previous deposits if the theory were borne out.

3. The University position relies upon a reconstruction based upon the assumption that the deposit requirement may be viewed extremely loosely. In essence, it amounts to being defined as "that which I say I had in my pocket a week ago, now that you ask, although I haven't any proof". I submit that in the position we find ourselves with the University, the only reasonable place that we can look for deposits "that confirm" its position, is the bank deposits. The bank is an independent, technically disinterested, third party on whom we can reasonably rely.

Your kind attention to this matter will be greatly appreciated. I sincerely hope that a prompt resolution of these ver serious differences between the University and its students (including, necessarily, their parents) can be affected. The Student Senate and my office will be pleased to cooperate in every way possible.

Very truly yours,
Richard M. Howland

Red Cross Offers First Aid Courses

The Hampshire County Chapter of the American National Red Cross will offer courses in standard and advanced first aid at the Chapter House at 125 State Street, Northampton, this fall. The courses will be run in sequence.

Standard first aid will start today, and will meet on Tuesday and Thursday evenings thereafter. Meeting time will be 7:30 P.M. to 9:30 P.M. The advanced course will meet at the conclusion of the standard course. Anyone who already has standard and wants to take advanced should call the Red Cross office to find out when they should start.

News Analysis

Rumors Abound

By RICHARD C. HANSON

There are two more as yet unconfirmed rumors that add some confusion to the bumbled handling of resignations and information about why the resignations over the past five days since Chancellor Tippo's resignation was made public.

—Dr. Randolph W. Bromery is reportedly going to be recommended to the Trustees today as the Acting-Chancellor of UMass-Amherst.

—The Executive committee of the Board of Trustees had decided in a breakfast meeting on Monday to recommend a new Provost in the wake of what was thought to be Robert L. Gluckstern's resignation to the Chancellor Tippo.

"I believe the rumors about the Acting Chancellor are true but those about the acting provost are false," said Vice-Chancellor for Academic Affairs Robert L. Gluckstern, in a telephone interview last night.

President Wood had denied that there were plans to select a temporary replacement for the Chancellor at a press conference following his university-wide convocation speech Tuesday afternoon.

Rumors have it that the Executive Committee of the Board met early Monday morning and decided then to recommend to the full board today to appoint Dr. Bromery acting Chancellor and to appoint Dean of the Graduate School Mortimer Appley to the position of acting Provost.

Due to the fact that Provost Gluckstern has not resigned the Whitmore position, there is some speculation as to whether the abrupt silencing of rumor concerning the Appley appointment was due to a final realization of this fact, by some System's office personality.

One student observer noted that the Appley appointment would have been second in strategic mistakes only to the Clement Haynesworth affair. Faculty sources indicated that Dean Appley would not have been "popular" amongst the faculty.

The appointment of Bromery as acting Chancellor could be interpreted as taking the path of least resistance here on campus. Nobody around here would object to Bromery, who most observers feel will soon be moving up to higher positions anyway.

Obviously these reports can only be confirmed by actions at today's Trustee meeting in Lenox, but it seems that President Wood and the Board of Trustees have wasted no time in recouping from the loss of Dr. Tippo.

What makes for some concern is that amongst all the rumors there is not one that indicates anyone here on campus has been consulted in reference to the appointments of acting administrative officers. One might also note that President Wood might have mis-understood when asked whether there was any action being taken in order to select an acting Chancellor.

The indications are that today's Trustee meeting will have to be the focus point for all of the controversy and hopefully clarification that will ultimately spread from Chancellor Tippo's attempt to move back into the Botany lab.

Helping Out--This baby actually helped out at the joint session of the Graduate and Undergraduate Senate meeting last night at the Campus Center. Daughter of Veda Ross, who presides at the Graduate Senate meetings, she seemed to be having a fun time. (MDC photo by Barbara Brecher)

CRAFT FAIR
at Middlefield Fair Grounds
Oct. 9, Sat.
Featuring
All day
Clean Living
+
All day Fat Nite
+
All Area Craft People Flea Market
Rides - Games - Lots of Fun
TICKETS AT
White Light Book Store The Alley A Head of Time, 360 College
253-5394
$2.00 advance
$2.50 at gate

ASHFIELD
FALL FESTIVAL
OCT. 9 - 11
Town Hall, Ashfield, Rt. 116
Folk Concert
Craft Auction
Sun., 1 p.m. - on

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN are on the second floor of the Student Union on the University campus, zip code 01002. Phones are 545 2550 (news), 545 0344 (sports), and 549 1311 (editor).

Second class postage paid at Amherst, the DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes five times weekly Monday through Friday during the academic year except during vacation and exam periods, three or four times a week following a vacation or exam period or when a holiday falls within a week. Accepted for mailing under the authority of the act of March 8, 1879 as amended by the act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester, $10.00 per year.

Faculty Senate Passes Final Report

By BOB CALLAHAN

The Faculty Senate passed the final report of the Committee of Concern by a nearly unanimous vote yesterday after a long debate. They also established a joint Ad Hoc Search Committee for seeking a new chancellor.

Chairman of the Committee of Concern, Bruce Morris, presented the report at the special Faculty Senate Meeting. In opening the discussion, Morris said that in drawing up the report the Committee looked at what they considered to be the welfare of the University and it was not intended to get or save anybody.

Speaking about the situation of the past week, Dr. Morris stated that the Tippo affair is the case of two strong aggressive administrators. "The result of this is inevitably always going to be conflict until a line is drawn between the two administrators," he said.

In the ensuing discussion, several Senators made the fact known that they felt insulted because they had never been consulted on the issues and decisions which have taken place.

In response to this, it was stated by several of the faculty in attendance that "we can't passively ask for a voice." They recommended that the Senate take clear action to make their voices heard.

Several Senators at the meeting requested that the Faculty Senate call for a vote of confidence for Chancellor Oswald Tippo from the faculty on campus. The motion was defeated on the grounds that the vote of confidence wouldn't accomplish anything.

David Booth, president of the Faculty Senate explained that the Committee which drew up the report decided upon a joint statement from both students and faculty because it would carry more weight than separate statements.

Student Senate President Lee Sandwen added that he and the students on the committee agreed with the purpose of the document.

In the vote that followed, Chairman Morris and his Committee emerged victorious with 62 Senators in favor, 1 against and 1 abstaining.

Discussion in the second part of the 90 hour meeting, centered around the motion that the Senate establish a 16 member Ad Hoc Search Committee for seeking a chancellor to succeed Chancellor Tippo.

Sandwen told the group that Tippo told him on Tuesday he would probably be leaving office on Thursday.

The question that immediately arose was "Will the new chancellor be proposed and who will become the acting chancellor upon Tippo's leave?"

The Senate debated about whether or not an acting chancellor should be appointed, since the faculty has had no say in the matter.

A motion was introduced by an unidentified Senator asking the Board of Trustees to delay the resignation of Chancello Tippo until a search committee can make recommendations for the position of acting chancellor.

Opposing this motion were Dr. Seymour Shapiro and Dr. Ludtke, a committee member. It was felt by Shapiro that an acting chancellor should be immediately appointed and that a st rch committee should be started early to choose a chancellor.

Dr. Ludtke stated to the group that he believes that the Board of Trustees are acting wisely and he said that a temporary chancellor might be more effective during the search. He concluded by saying that any appointment made in a short period of time may be an unwise one.

The motion concerning delaying Tippo's resignation was then defeated.

Following this action, The Senate took up a vote to establish a Joint Ad Hoc Search Committee which was quickly passed and will be presented to the Trustees today along with the Statement of the Committee of Concern.

Classroom Break--This coed finds the program offered in the music room of the Campus Center soothing between classes during her busy week. See related story elsewhere in paper. (MDC photo by Barbara Brecher.)

Text: Committee Of Concern

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the text of the special report compiled by the Ad Hoc Committee of Concern in the Faculty Senate. The Faculty Senate voted yesterday to present the report to the Board of Trustees at its meeting this afternoon in Lenox. Seven faculty members and two students were on the committee, which made the recommendations "to lessen tension within the university system".)

"Recent events impel the student senates and the faculty senate to request that the Board of Trustees take the following actions to lessen tension within the university system. We believe that lack of a coherent and announced policy on these issues is at the root of recent difficulties, and that immediate action is necessary.

1. That the board set forth a clear demarcation of the functions of the central office and of the constituent units of the university, incorporating the maximum possible degree of autonomy for the units within the general policies developed by the Board of Trustees.

2. That the board reaffirm the principle, expressed at the outset of the expansion of the university beyond one campus, that improvement of the quality of programs in the newer units not be made at the expense of quality in the older units.

3. That the board clearly and carefully describe the budgetary process and establish and delineate the roles of all constituent units therein.

4. That the board establish a policy of full communication on all major issues to all elements of the system and that the senates and their committees be given full opportunity to present their views on all important matters at all stages of the decision-making process.

The senates on the campus, as representatives of the students and faculty, are particularly concerned with the budgetary process, which provides the life-blood of the institution. The budgetary process is one of our immediate concerns. A case in point is the disposition of non-state funds.

The magnitude of these funds and their impact on the programs they support on the Amherst campus make any substantial reallocation within the system a matter of grave concern. These funds have been critical to the development and support of innovative and qualitative programs essential to achieving excellence.

The faculty and students of the Amherst campus strongly urge you to enunciate clearly and unmistakably the principles by which non-state funds shall be allocated, and we urge the following for your consideration.

Non-state funds shall be allocated to that campus responsible for generating the funds, or for which gifts or grants of funds were clearly intended. We believe that Chancellor Tippo's six (6) points are totally consistent with this concept, outlined in his memo of July 26 to President Wood.

Changes in allocations shall be made with sufficient advance notice so that necessary changes in the programs which they support can be made in an orderly manner, and in consideration of the quality and priority of University programs.

Before adopting major changes in the allocation process, there shall be full consultation with all elements within the system, including the faculty and student senates.

In President Wood's presentation to our committee, he stated that his philosophy is that in times of crisis "when in doubt, involve more people; when in doubt give out more information." We agree with this concept except that it should be applied before a crisis developes. To this end it is urged that the administrations and senates explore ways and means of improving communication and consultation on all major issues."

Senate Debates Budgets

By HUGH OWENS

The Student Senate, coming to order later than usual last night due to the long joint meeting of the Graduate and Undergraduate Senate, was bogged down in debate over the amendments to the Budget Act.

Kevin Kulakowski submitted to the Senate his amendment by substitution to Article 4, Section 8 of the Budget Act. It was finally agreed that a two-thirds majority was needed to grant money and a two-thirds majority to reverse that decision.

At the time the COLLEGIAN went to press the Act as a whole was still being debated.

Earlier in the meeting the Senate voted favorably to appoint Nick Apostola as Chairman of Executive Affairs. Then the Student Senate, in conjunction with the Graduate Senate, moved to express their appreciation to Chancellor Oswald Tippo for the time and effort he has dedicated to the University.

Spectrum
The general interest magazine of University of Massachusetts
We are now accepting Contributions for the fall 1971 issue.
All contributions of fiction, non-fiction, poetry, art, and photography can be left at the spectum office or mailed to:
Spectrum
RSO No. 102
Campus Ctr.
U Mass.
all contributions should be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope

— SUNGLASSES —
Bausch & Lomb
American Optical
Sunvogues
Ray-Ban
Always Available at don call
Amherst's First Optician
56 Main St. Tel. 253-7002 Amherst

BLOCK THE CHOPPING
Continental Ciffure
If it has to do with hair, (men's or women's) Adam and his staff will do it perfectly.
The Chopping Block is located at 26 Main St. Amherst, second floor. Open 9:00 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Mondays thru Fridays; 9 to 5 Saturdays. For appointment call 253-9293 or 253-9271.
Adam and his staff are available evenings for free hair care classes and demonstrations for any men's or women's groups.

In The Nation And The World

Nixon Orders Temporary Strike End

WASHINGTON (AP) — Acting on President Nixon's orders, Justice Department lawyers Wednesday night sought court decrees ending at least temporarily the 98-day West Coast longshoremen's strike.

Similar requests for a court order to end the shorter dock workers' dispute in Chicago were expected to be filed later in the evening.

A U.S. District Court Judge in San Francisco was asked to order an immediate end to the West Coast walkout and send the 15,000 striking men back to work for an 80-day cooling-off period provided by the Taft-Hartley Law.

In the San Francisco suit, the administration raised the possibility of the permanent loss of U.S. export revenue because of the strike.

In an affidavit signed by Agriculture Secretary Clifford M. Hardin, the government said Japan, for one, is questioning the dependability of the United States as a supplier of agricultural commodities.

"In recent bilateral discussions with the Japanese, we learned that they are sending missions to other supply countires of the world to urge that they increase their output especially of grains so as to reduce Japan's dependence on the United States," the affidavit stated.

While ordering court action on the West Coast and Chicago dock strikes, President Nixon refrained from invoking the Taft-Hartley Law against a six-day-old strike of 45,000 dock workers on East Coast and Gulf Coast ports. Instead, he sent federal officials to New York in an urgent effort to get negotiations off dead center.

Court papers prepared for both suits echoed Nixon's assertion when he ordered the actions earlier Wednesday that the strikes, "if permitted to continue, will imperil the national health and safety."

Both suits ask the courts to require the unions and the companies they are striking to attempt to resolve their differences through good-faith collective bargaining during the 80-day cooling-off period.

Named in the West Coast suit were the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, AFL-CIO and 31 companies with whom they had contracts.

The Chicago suit named the International Longshoremen's Association, AFL-CIO; and the six firms against whom it is striking. The strike has shut down nine of 11 grain elevators in the port of Chicago, the suit said.

House Approves Tax Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) - Without even calling the roll, the House passed Wednesday a bill to cut business and individual taxes $15.4 billion over the next three years.

It was a victory for President Nixon. Even though the measure was modified to give individuals more and business less than he recommended, it remains a key part of his new economic program.

It was a defeat for powerful segments of organized labor. Union chiefs had staged a last-minute blitz against the measure, contending it still is a bonanza for business.

All individual taxpayers would benefit at least a little under the measure. Those at the poverty level and for some distance above it would receive significant tax cuts. Automobile buyers would save an average of $200 on new cars purchased.

Business would get a tax subsidy on new equipment purchased. This incentive to stimulate orders and employment and to make U.S. plants more competitive is a major administration objective.

Hoping to speed the measure to enactment by early November, the Senate Finance Committee opens hearings Thursday. However, strenuous efforts to reshape the tax relief are expected on the Senate floor.

Some of the effects the bill would have on individuals:

By next year, individuals with no more than $2,050 income or families or four with no more than $4,300 would have no income tax to pay.

A typical individual earning $3,500 would save $24 on this year's tax, $59 on next year's $51 on 1973 earnings. If he earned $15,000, his savings would be $7 this year, $13 next year, none thereafter.

A married couple with no dependents earning $7,500 would save $24 this year, $67 next year, $33 in 1973. But such a couple earning $15,000 would save $7, $13, and nothing in corresponding years.

For a family of four at $7,500 income the savings would be $28, $77, and $30.

For such a family at $15,000, the savings would be $22, $44, and nothing, and at $25,000 they would be $28, $56 and nothing.

A speedup of increased personal exemption, already to be staged in under present law, accounts for the bulge of savings in 1972.

According to over-all estimates, individual income taxes would be cut by about $2 billion this year, $5 billion in 1972 and $2.7 billion in 1973.

Business would have a slight tax increase this year--$350 million, but reductions of $2.75 billion in 1972, $1.27 billion in 1973 and more later.

For individuals, the bill would increase the personal exemption from $650 to $675 this year, and provide that a further increase to $750 take effect Jan. 1, instead of a year later.

The minimum standard deduction that helps low-income persons would be slightly increased this year by elimination of a phase-in provision, and would be raised next year from $1,000 to $1,300. The bill also would speed up to 1972 the 15 per cent standard deduction that would not, under present law, apply until 1973.

The 7 per cent excise tax on automobiles would be repealed, retroactively to Aug. 16, 1971, and the 10 per cent tax on trucks up to 10,000 pounds would be repealed effective Sept. 23, 1971

News In Brief

Clean Air

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency requested legal action Wednesday against Ford Motor Co., accusing the company of violating the Clean Air Act by shipping new cars to dealers before the cars received anti-pollution clearance.

Rebozo Land Deals

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. (AP) — President Nixon's close friend, Charles "Bebe" Rebozo, received favored treatment in the sale of Florida land to the federal government in 1968, the Long Island newspaper Newsday said Wednesday.

In one case, the newspaper said, Rebozo got a price closer to the appraised value than other sellers got for similar land.

Police Recover Vermeer

BRUSSELS (AP) — Police recovered a stolen masterpiece by the 17th century Flemish painter Jan Vermeer on Wednesday from the back room of a restaurant where a self-styled Robin Hood was accused of holding it for $4 million ransom.

Senate Approves Military Spending Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted overwhelmingly Wednesday to authorize $21 billion for military weapons and research by passing a bill that calls also for total U.S. withdrawal from Indochina within six months.

Passage of the big arms bill by an 82-4 vote came after the Senate blocked an effort to force a new presidential election in South Vietnam and set the stage for an effort to override President Nixon's delay of a federal pay raise.

The arms bill, already passed by the House in a slightly different form, goes back to that body before going to conference for resolution of the differences.

The nay votes were cast by four Democratic senators, J. W. Fulbright, Ark., Mike Mansfield, Montana, Gaylord Nelson, Wisconsin, and Mike Gravel, Alaska.

Earlier in the day the Senate rejected 60 to 25 an amendment by Sen. Joseph M. Montoya, D-N.M., threatening South Vietname with total U.S. withdrawal by Feb. 3 unless new presidential elections are held there.

The bill had been under debate for less than three weeks, the shortest time the arms measure has taken to pass the Senate since before Pentagon critics began mobilizing against it in 1969.

By a vote of 60 to 25, the Senate rejected the amendment by Sen. Joseph M. Montoya, D-N.M., to shorten the six-month deadline for U.S. withdrawal voted earlier if South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu fails to call a new election Feb. 3.

Montoya accused the United States of partial responsibility for Thieu's uncontested re-election last Sunday, asserting that "In the name of political expediency, America has openly assisted South Vietnam's President Thieu in stifling democracy."

Then, on a 44-38 tally, it rejected a move by Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., to block a provision in the bill that would break the United Nations embargo on trade with Rhodesia and permit U.S. imports of strategically important chrome ore.

The Nixon administration had backed Fulbright's effort, indicating through Senate leaders it wouldn't use the authority anyway.

Once more, the military procurement measure, which authorizes projects for which actual money will be voted in a later appropriations bill, survived the Senate with all major weapons systems getting authorizations approved by the usually pro-Pentagon Armed Services Committee.

Two floor amendments, however, promise to cause major difficulties when the hills goes to conference with the House.

One is an amendment by Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana calling for total U.S withdrawal from Indochina in six months, provided American prisoners are freed.

The second amendment headed for troubles is a proposal by Sen. Gordon Allott, R-Colo., to add $381 million in additional military pay increases for the lower enlisted grades to the $2.4 billion pay raise already enacted in the draft extension act.

Also, Federal Pay Raises Jan. 1

WASHINGTON (AP)-A 60-27 Senate vote Wednesday threatened to deal President Nixon a setback in his effort to fight inflation by delaying a federal pay raise for six months.

It wrote into a military-procurement bill an amendment under which government employes could get a pay raise on Jan. 1 despite Nixon's order delaying the congressionally approved boost until July 1.

However, the amendment provides that any federal raise could not exceed the general average of pay increases permitted for private employes under Phase II of the President's new economic program.

A 90-day wage-price freeze ordered by Nixon last August expires on Nov. 13. The President is to announce Thursday night the type of wage-price restraints to go into effect after that.

Sens. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., and Frank E. Moss, D-Utah, sponsors of the amendment adopted by the Senate, interpreted its effect differently.

Moss, author of the language finally approved, said it would prove meaningless unless the Senate follows though with a vote Thursday vetoing Nixon's postponement of the scheduled pay raise.

But Mathias said that if the amendment is accepted by the House, it will prevail over the President's executive order regardless of whether the Senate votes to disapprove the order.

The House already has upheld Nixon's order, defeating by a 207-174 vote on Monday a resolution to disapprove it.

The Senate has until midnight Thursday to act on a similar resolution that was reported out of its Post Office and Civil Service Committee earlier Wednesday by a 5-3 vote. The presidential order takes effect automatically at the midnight deadline unless one chamber of Congress act to block it before then.

SOMETHING TO TRADE
SOMETHING TO SELL
IMPORIUM
MAIN ST. AMHERST
for the best in new, used and antique clothing

TONITE AT
THE CHEQUERS
THE COLORADO ODYSSEY
9:30 til close tonight (Thursday)

School Lunch Plan Liberalized

WASHINGTON (AP)—Under congressional pressure, the Nixon administration upgraded Wednesday its school lunch plan for needy school children this year will be an average minimum of 45 cents a serving, a 10-cent boost from a 35-cent plan announced in August.

Officials said the liberalized plan will add $135 million to the school lunch program, raising 1971-72 expenditures to $750 million. Last year the total cost was $536 million.

The Senate voted last week to seek a 46-cent minimum package, with the extra penny going toward all school lunches. The 10-cent increase by the Agriculture Department all goes to the needy-child program, the same as sought by the Senate.

But Asst. Secretary of Agriculture Richard Lyng told a news conference the aid this year will go only toward helping children from families having incomes at or below federal poverty guideline-an annual income of $3,940 for a family of four.

Previously, the department has allowed school lunch money for needy children as long as they were from families certified as eligible from state and local authorities.

Lyng, under questioning, had no estimate on how much the new rule might save the government. He said, however, about 8 percent of the 7.3 million needy children served last school year were from families with incomes higher than federal cutoffs.

Lyng said the liberalized program is expected to reach a peak of 8 million needy children this school year.

Lyng said there is nothing in the new rule to prevent communities from paying themselves for meals to help children from higher-income families.

Caldor
Mini Photo Jamboree
Demonstrations and Special Sales!

Meet Barry Korb, Factory Demonstration Representative
Friday 5 P.M. to 10 P.M. Sat. 10 A.M. to 5 P.M.

Famous Minolta SRT 101 35mm Camera
Caldor Priced! 169.47
f 1.7 lens, Cds meter behind the lens 1/1000 second shutter. 2 year guarantee

Minolta Hi-Matic E Camera with Electronic Flash
After Sale 129.99 99.88
Cds meter, fast f 1.7 lens. Programmed shutter for best results. Another factory demonstration special!

Minolta Auto-Pak #550 Our Reg. 34.99 29.77
Only 24 Cameras

Top Brand Automatic Lenses for Minolta or Pentax/Praktica Cameras
28mm f2.8 Lens . . . 49.77
35mm f2.8 Lens . . . 44.77
135mm f2.8 Lens . . 49.77
200 f2.8 Lens 59.77
Automatic 90-230mm f4.5 Zoom Lens 99.77 Available in Pentax mt only

Agfa Iso Pack C Camera
After Sale 19.99 13.97
Bright finder, pop out features. Uses flash cubes and instant load film cartridges. Just 24

Agfachrome Color Film with Processing
35mm 20 Exp. 2.66
35mm 36 Exp. 3.66
126 20 Exp. 2.66

Meet Len Pressman, Factory Demonstration Representative
Friday 5 P.M. to 10 P.M. Sat. 10 A.M. to 5 P.M.

gaf Super 8 8 to 1 Zoom Movie Camera
After Sale 199.99 149.73
A Caldor exclusive!
CHARGE YOUR PURCHASES!
Super fast f/1.7 lens. Through the lens electric eye, back light switch. Slow normal and accelerated motion control. Electronic fade-in fade-out control

gaf Full Remote Slide Projector
After Sale 64.99 49.88
Forward or reverse focus by remote control. 500 watt blower cooled brilliance. Complete with 100 capacity slide tray.

gaf Instant Load Rangefinder Camera
After Sale 59.99 49.77
Rangefinder focusing. f2.8 lens. shutter speeds to 1/500. Flash cube holder built in. No. 726. Only 6

gaf Super 8 Zoom Movie Projector
After Sale 99.99 84.66
Slow motion automatic thread. Zoom lens. 500 watt brilliance. 400 foot capacity. forward and reverse

gaf Super 8 Color Film
50 foot Super 8 cartridge. Includes factory processing
After Sale 3.49 2.79

Agfatronic 160A Electronic Flash
After Sale 49.99 24.77
Rechargeable NiCad battery. 50 flashes to a charge. Operates on 110 or 220 volt power. Only 24

ATTENTION UNIVERSITY STUDENTS

STUDENT SPECIAL!
Bring this Ad with your I.D. Card and you will receive a valuable certificate that will entitle you to an additional $1 OFF our regular low prices, on your next roll of Kodak or GAF 35mm color slide, color prints, color movies or B/W film left for processing.
This coupon may be exchanged for one certificate only.
Processing by famous Berkey computerized labs.

Caldor
516 Winsted Road
Torrington, Conn.
Thurs. Oct. 7 #6584
SALE: FRI. and SAT.
Mon. thru Fri. 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.

WASHINGTON.--'INTIMIDATED'--CBS President Frank Stanton tells a Senate subcommittee today that Federal Communications Commission investigations of broadcasting media are intimidating news operations. The senators are looking into freedom of the press.

Coalition Meeting To Plan Moratorium

The Coalition for Peace and Justice is planning a Moratorium on October 13, which marks the beginning of a nationwide "Fall Offensive" designed to emphasize and act upon the problems of oppression, racism, and poverty here at home, and continuing American militarism abroad, particularly in Southeast Asia.

The Coalition, composed of a wide range of area groups including the People's Community Union, University Draft Counseling, PULP, the Amherst Voter Registration Coalition, the Committee on Poverty, Welfare Rights' Mothers, Young Workers' Liberation League, CLC, People's Peace Treaty, and the United Christian Foundation, will sponsor a series of events for the moratorium.

Workshops are being planned which will deal with such topics as racism and repression in the courts and prisons, the draft, poverty and in addition, students and faculty will be encouraged to promote discussion of these issues in the classroom, in observance of the moratorium. A mass meeting will conclude the day's activities, featuring a host of speakers.

The Coalition urges people to attend an open meeting to be held tonight at 9 P.M. in room 805 of the Campus Center to assist in planning workshops publicizing the moratorium in the area, and in their classrooms. Representatives from groups that are not already involved but wish to participate are also invited. Those interested, but unable to attend, may call 545-2661 for information.

Crookless Squash Creator Works On One Foot Cabbage

The people who developed the crookless squash are now working on a one-foot cabbage.

The crookless squash is the famed Waltham Butternut, which won the all-American Selection award when it was introduced in 1970. It is now being grown all over the country and as far away as Australia and New Zealand. It has no crook, more meat, better flavor and color, and gives growers an average of 28 per cent more marketable squash.

The name one-foot cabbage has nothing to do with locomotion. This is a new variety being bred to grow in one square foot of space. The typical field cabbage spreads out and needs a square yard of growing space. The new Waltham variety is smaller and grows up rather than out. It takes less space and fits better into the beds market gardeners now use.

Both are examples of research at the Waltham Suburban Experiment Station of UMass, formerly called the Waltham Field Station. The crookless squash and the one-foot cabbage are the work of Professor Robert E. Young, who this year completed four decades at Waltham. His work in selective plant breeding has produced over 40 improved varieties of vegetables and has made the name Waltham known wherever vegetables are grown in this country.

The Waltham mildew-resistant hybrid tomato, for example, helps keep Bay State greenhouse tomato growers competitive with those in the rest of the country. Waltham 29 broccoli has been the most important variety of freezing broccoli in the country for the past 15 years and the Waltham high color carrot is increasing in use nationally faster than any other carrot variety in the country. In fact it has made possible the 10,000 acre Florida carrot industry.

"In plant breeding you pick a characteristic you are looking for out of a certain variety and start working with it, no matter how many other characteristics you have to get rid of," Young explained. "If it's got one good characteristic you can get rid of the others by crossing it back as long as you need to."

The Waltham Butternut, for example, is a cross between an African squash and a New Hampshire butternut, the latter being a cross between a butternut and a Korean squash. "I got there by a back door approach," Young explained. First he got a squash that was crookless but that lacked flavor and color. Then he carefully bred the flavor and color back in. The whole process took 14 years.

Professor Young is now joing withother researchers at Waltham in a new selective breeding application-- developing varieties that resist air pollution damage.

"At the present time it is almost impossible to grow greenhouse tomatoes in eastern Massachusetts without seeing air pollution damage," explained Dr. J. A. Naegele, Waltham's director. "We are starting now to develop varieties that will be resistant to this and develop new genetic stocks that will have a higher threshold of response to air pollution than our current plants do."

Air pollution damage has been reported on spinach grown on Cape Cod. Squash, cucumbers, pumpkins and similar plants are also susceptible to air pollution effects. "If we are going to continue to grow these we will have to develop resistant varieties," Naegele said.

Art Show Set In No. Shore

The North Shore Art Association will sponsor an all day art exhibit on Oct. 16 at the North Shore Art Center in Peabody, Mass. The exhibit will be followed by an auction at 7 p.m.

Proceeds will be used to buy art supplies for occupational therapy at Danvers State Hospital. The state budget provides no money for these supplies.

For further information, call Bob Nicholas, 319 Webster at 545-7111. Any donations would be appreciated.

save this Ad

save save

STUDENTS-FACULTY

Before you spend your hard earned dollars call Discount Sales for unhearded of savings on:

- Panasonic TV, Radios — Stereo Components
- Color — B — W Television by RCA, Emerson, Panasonic
- Brand name Watches, Luggage — Shavers
- Diamonds of certified quality — Wedding Bands
- Small Electric Appliances, — Vacuum Cleaners
- Quality Brand name Mattresses — Box springs
- Any size refrigerator, 3 ft. or 24 ft. refr.-freez.
- RCA Console Stereo

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED
call
DISCOUNT SALES
Mon. thru Thursday
6:30 p.m. - 12:00 a.m.
549-3930

save save

Vehicle Inspection Ends October 15

Registrar of Motor Vehicles David J. Lucey issued an advance reminder to drivers that Massachusetts Compulsory Motor Vehicle Inspection ends October 15.

Official inspection includes: brakes, lights, registration plates, horn, tires, windshield, windshield wipers, steering system and ball joints, muffler and exhaust system, bumpers, fenders and external sheet metal, safety chains panels.

Repairs needed in any of these areas will be a cause for rejection.

WATER BEDS SALE
Your Choice
KING, QUEEN, or DOUBLE SIZE MATTRESS -
5 yr. guarantee $24.99
with 1" Foam Insulating Pad
$29.99
A Head of Time
360 College St. Amherst
Rt. 9 Tel. 253-5394
Open Noon til 9

Succulent Platters
At
Lip Smacking Prices
ALL
WB ATCO
ALLMAN BROTHERS
JOHNATHAN EDWARDS
JONI MITCHELL
GREATFUL DEAD
C 4.98 List 2.69
D 5.98 List 3.39
E 6.98 List 3.99
Sale Thru Sat. Oct. 9
THE LISTENING POST
25 So. Pleasant St., Amherst 186 Main St., Northampton

Josh McDowell makes a point in his lecture on "Midnight in History." He cites passages in the Bible to support his views on the second coming of Christ. (MDC photo by Hinckley)

"Midnight In History" Focus Of McDowell Lecture

By STEPHEN FINE

"I'm not going to talk about the end of the world," McDowell explained, "I'm here to discuss my own personal views of what all of us are concerned with in our generation: fear."

Josh McDowell lectured last night in the Campus Center Auditorium on "Midnight in History." The talk sponsored by the Campus Crusade for Christ centered around indications of Christ's second coming.

Primarily he talked about the relevancy of the prophecies in the bible to today. "I've spent 1,000 research hours to bring a capsule of prophecies written in the bible 2,000 years ago." He then went on to list 30 biblical clues, which he supported with present day factual events. Each backed his view of Christ's second coming.

"I believe in a 7 year countdown to the greatest event the world has ever seen," he explained. This countdown he said centers around man coming close to self-destruction. This self-destruction centers around the Middle East area, particularly Israel.

"This seven year countdown," McDowell maintained, "was predicted by Jesus. He said the world will suffer birth pains like woman in pregnancy. The key is the intense activity happening in the world."

He then listed the 30 predictions in the bible which were coming true today. "The first clue was May 15, 1948, the birth of Israel." He said, "The second clue will be it will become a burden to both friend and foe."

Each statement was supported by maps, figures, quotations and facts.

McDowell pointed out that man knew more about destruction than living and creating. He quoted David Lawrence of U.S. News and World Report who said, "We know more about war than peace, more about killing than living."

McDowell has spoken on more than 400 campuses in 35 countries. He recently returned from two years among students in Latin America. He will hold a rally by the Campus pond on "Basic Errors of Revolutionary Movements" and at night he will discuss, "Sex and the Single Person".

McDowell mentions events in the Middle East as events leading to the near self-destruction of man. He claims that modern man "knows more about destruction than living and creation". (MDC photo by Hinckley)

Small Turnout Delays SES Co-op

A small turnout of only about ten people, at last night's meeting of those interested in forming a Student's Educational Service cooperative, cast the future of the undertaking into some doubt, said George Cheah, present SES director. The turnout was disappointing and somewhat surprising to Cheah.

He said that many students had previously expressed interest in the idea of turning the now privately owned organization, into a student-run organization, for student benefit.

Also, he mentioned that although some people resent the idea of the organization run by one or two individuals, they apparently did not make themselves present to help form the cooperative.

One idea that was discussed in depth was a computerized book system which could possibly be implemented beginning next semester. Under this system, which Cheah said was very feasible from a technological standpoint, students would be able to register any books they wanted to sell for about fifty cents.

As part of the service, when a student wanted to buy any specific book from another student, he would receive a computer print-out locating all copies of the book on campus. Then the student could easily purchase the book from anyone on the list.

According to Cheah, this system should save each student anywhere from 20%-40% on books, as all middle men would be eliminated, books wouldn't always have to bought new, and virtually any book could easily be located. Eventually, this sytem could be extended to encompass all five colleges in the area, he added.

Another meeting will be held next Wednesday night to further clarify whether there exists enough interest on campus to make the cooperative a success, and if there does, to begin the organizational work.

Changes In Radio, TV Regulations Proposed

NEW YORK (AP)—Clay T. Whitehead, President Nixon's director of the Office of Telecommunications Policy, proposed Wednesday a sweeping revision of the laws regulating radio and television.

He proposed new regulations to end the chaos developing over access to television time and license renewals, and suggested that commercial radio be removed from some regulations.

In a speech before the International Radio & Television Society, Whitehead proposed:

—The elimination of the Fairness Doctrine and enactment by Congress of a statutory right of access.

—That license renewal process be changed to get the government out of programming.

—That the Federal Communications Commission recognize radio as a completely different medium from television and begin to remove it from regulation.

Whitehead said the framework of relationships between broadcasting, the government, and the public must be revised or it will result in continued chaos over renewing licenses and the fight over access to air time.

He warned, "The Fairness Doctrine and other access mechanisms are also getting out of hand. It is a quagmire of government program control and once we get into it we can only sink deeper ... The courts are on the way to making the broadcaster a government agent."

He said the courts are making the First Amendment "whatever the FCC decides it is."

Eskimo Lay Claim To Alaska N. Slope

WASHINGTON (AP)—Alaskan Eskimos have laid claim to the entire 76,000-square-mile North Slope of their state, including 413,000 acres of oil field already leased to private companies by the state government for almost $1 billion.

In a suit filed here Tuesday, the Arctic Slope Native Association asked the U.S. District Court to invalidate the state government's claim to North Slope land and the Interior Department's approval of the state land selection there.

"All leases, sales, conditional leases and conditional sales made under the authority of such tentative approvals are invalid," the suit said.

In addition to the $912 million oil companies paid the state for their North Slope leases, the companies have invested millions more in exploration and initial development.

Furthermore, a group of seven oil companies in partnership as the Alaska Pipeline Service Co. has been seeking Interior Department permission to build an 800-mile pipeline across Alaska at a cost of $2.5 billion to help bring North Slope oil to market.

If the Eskimos' claim to the land is upheld in court, the Alaska state government also would be jeopardized, for its annual budget now relies heavily on the money it received for the oil leases and its future plans anticipate rich royalties from North Slope production.

Alaska Gov. William A. Egan said Wednesday "there is no question in the state's mind that tentatively approved land is legally tantamount to final approval.

In Henderson Trial

Witness Not Allowed To Make Identification

FT. MEADE, MD. (AP)—A military judge ruled Wednesday that a key prosecution witness will not be permitted to make a courtroom identification of Col. Oran K. Henderson as the officer to whom he gave an eyewitness account of the My Lai massacre.

The judge at Henderson's court-martial, Col. Pete S. Wondolowsky, upheld a defense contention that the witness' identification was tainted and prejudiced by photos of Henderson the government showed him.

The witness, former Spec. 4 Lawrence M. Colburn, was among aviators who brought back from the My Lai operation reports about civilians being slaughtered by ground troops.

One charge against Henderson states the colonel lied to a Pentagon inquiry Feb. 17, 1970, when he said he was positive he had not received accounts of the massacre from either Colburn or Capt. Jerry R. Culverhouse, a helicopter pilot.

Culverhouse testified last month but was unable to identify Henderson as the officer to whom he related his story of My Lai on March 18, 1968, two days after the massacre.

Appearing outside the presence of the jury Sept. 20, Colburn, a helicopter door gunner on the operation, identified Henderson as the man he reported to at a combat fire base March 18.

Defense lawyers contended the only reason Colburn was able to remember Henderson was because of promptings from photos shown him by the government during proceedings leading up to Henderson's My Lai cover-up trial.

Earlier Wednesday, an Army prosecutor charged that Henderson concealed the massacre at My Lai because a proper investigation and report would have revealed "the failures of his command."

Henderson is charged with willfully conducting a faulty inquiry, with not informing higher-ups about actual or suspected war crimes and with subsequently lying twice to a Pentagon investigation.

Troops Clash Along Irish Border

BELFAST (AP)—British troops and Irish guerrillas fought a gun battle across the border between the Irish republic and the strife-torn province of Northern Ireland early Thursday, military headquarters said.

The gunfight broke out when a British infantry patrol spotted two men placing a package-like explosive-behind a customs post in Northern Ireland.

When challenged, the two ran for the border, the British army reported, at Middletown in County Armagh. The British troops chased them, were fired on from the republic and returned the fire, a spokesman said.

He reported no casualties.

However, in Belfast, a detective sergeant and a civilian were shot and seriously wounded by two guerrilla gunmen who police said attacked them.

The men were walking along a city street when their attacker opened fire from behind, spokesman said. The officer was hit in the back and the civilian in the stomach as he turned around, he added. The gunmen escaped by car.

Belfast was rocked by 10 explosions within 10 minutes Wednesday night. The British army said there were no known casualties.

BUY DIRECT AND SAVE!!
Why run all over town looking for pants, corduroys, or blue jeans when we have the areas largest and most complete selections - all at the lowest prices around. And we're just up the street...
the closest thing to you is
WEARHOUSE (wear-else?) Open Fri. till 9

THE IMPORT SHOP
Dresses from India
Wall Furnishing's
Pipes and Incense
Wall Hangings and Bedspreads
64 Green St. Northampton

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF — Richard C. Hanson
MANAGING EDITOR — David D. Williams
BUSINESS MANAGER — James Gold
EXECUTIVE EDITOR — Barry J. Rubenstein
NEWS EDITOR — Anne C. Stadnicki
SPORTS EDITOR — Earle T. Barroll

PHOTO EDITOR — Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR — Robert Nesti

TODAY'S STAFF

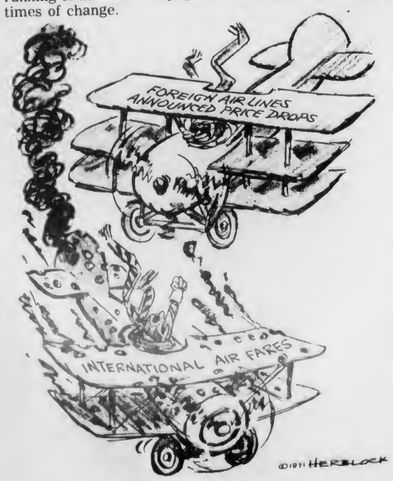
ISSUE EDITOR — Jim Gold
NEWS STAFF — Ethel Harris, Jeannette Martineau
SPORTS — Dan Kamal, Earle Barroll, Roberta Brewer
EDITORIAL — Ann Gurnett
DARKROOM — Rich Hinckley, Gib Fullerton, Barbara Brecher
AD LAYOUT — Jim Gold

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administration read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.
Unsigned editorials represent the views of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, and letters represent the personal views of the writers.

Off The Record

The absence of solid, quotable materials has plagued reporters ever since news leaked to the Springfield Union last Friday afternoon, bringing attention to Chancellor Tippo's resignation.

Clearly Dr. Tippo never intended to let the news snowball on a sometimes misleading and erroneous path as newspapers speculated and guessed what was really behind the sudden departure of most of UMass-Amherst's top administrators. Nor does it seem possible that President Wood wanted to give imprecise figures and data Tuesday in his convocation speech, which one knowledgable observer noted "could not be traced back to reality."



Both Wood and Tippo have placed a great deal of personal emphasis on the figures and amounts of money involved in the financial end of the conflict-Wood playing it down and Tippo pointing out its importance in services lost at the Amherst Campus.

President Wood has emphasized that what he is embarking upon is the building of a strong system, where the needs of each campus will be taken care of by effective budgeting. In his zeal to get established he has tried to expand his offices after the Governor chopped out appropriations for such an expansion from the budget, by taking the necessary funds from the Amherst campus.

President Wood might have been well advised to expand his offices only when the Governor and the legislature saw fit to expand his offices. One campus would not have been hurt in an effort to help the whole.

By operating the way he has, President Wood will end up fighting with instead of for the individual campuses.

More thought should be given by the Trustees to limiting the growth of the President's office to a rate which is supported by legislative appropriations. The Trustees might also be well advised to maintain the concerned and active posture they have always shown in the overall running of the University, particularly in these uncertain times of change.

"Curse You, Lufthansa!"

An Issue Of Non-Issues

Reprinted from the Greenfield Recorder, 10/6/71
By ALVIN F. OICKLE

AMHERST-While it might be stretching it to say Chancellor Oswald Tippo's resignation is fast becoming a "non-issue" at the University of Massachusetts campus, it appears that the campus community is fast losing interest.

A generally silent audicnce of about 800 sat for nearly an hour Tuesday and heard UMass Pres. Robert C. Wood read a seven-page explanation of "systems financing", the issue over which the popular Dr. Tippo submitted his resignation last Friday.

Tippo, a UMass graduate who had been provost prior to his appointment as campus head 19 months ago, resigned effective Sept. 1, 1972, or sooner if trustees wish.

Dr. Wood sounded yesterday like a man who will wish it for sooner. Asked at a post-convocation news conference if he had plans to name an acting chancellor, Wood said: "I have no plans for such action before the trustees' meeting."

Trustees will meet at Lenox Thursday to act on Dr. Tippo's resignation. In his letter, he asked for a semester's sabbatical leave and to resume his teaching of botany. He has tenure.

Wood, according to strong rumor around the campus, will ask the trustees to accept Tippo's resignation immediately and to permit him to name an acting chancellor. He told the student-faculty gathering yesterday he expects a committee including students will search for a new campus head.

THE TUESDAY GATHERING in the Student Union Ballroom listened without reaction to most of the Wood speech and the half-dozen questions. One questioner suggested Dr. Wood could "give us assurance" if he would define where the president's policy making activity ends and the chancellor's operations authority begin.

Dr. Wood, smiling and his voice calm, stuck pretty much to an explanation of how funding works. Dr. Tippo is reportedly upset because some funds he believes belong on the Amherst campus are being allocated to the Boston and Worcester campuses.

While Wood did not deny this, he said UMass-Amherst is getting "its fair share". In response to a question about agricultural funds, for example, he pointed out that Extension Service work is much heavier in the urban areas of Boston than it is in the rural Western Massachusetts areas.

Reporters from several newspapers, radio and television stations gathered for a 20-minute news conference at which Dr. Wood went over much of the same material in more detail. He had met Monday with faculty committees and deans to discuss the issues.

CHANCELLOR TIPPO, meanwhile, was keeping his pledge to stay out of it all. He has been talking with the editor-in-chief of the Collegian, the campus daily newspaper, and has been quoted as dispensing his usual good humor: "I've been househunting" (he occupies a state-owned building) and "I may grow a moustache". He is trying to make clear that he leaves without grudges and looks forward to returning to the classroom.

There has been no open action on the campus to get the chancellor to change his mind about resigning, as there was in 1969 when, as provost, he threatened to quit.

It appears that the campus community recognizes that Tippo's resignation is, as Wood and others have at least indirectly described it, one of the adjustments necessary toward building a system of campuses under the one university.

Tippo indicated that he is just plain too tired, after 30 years as an administrator, to take on the fight he considers necessary to maintain Amherst's position as No. 1 in the university system.

(Editor's Note-Alvin Oickle is managing editor of the Greenfield Recorder and is the technical advisor of the Daily Collegian).

A Little Bit Of Everything

By NATHAN GORENSTEIN

At about three the weather started to build up. The clouds lowered down over the campus, seemingly caught between the mountains that surround our valley; building up in thick ruffles, sweeping over Southwest to the north, massive, glowing red in parts from the sun still shining above them, rolling, tumbling.

The wind picked up, leaves flying wildly, hair blinding people as they walked on to nowhere. The temperature dropped as the sky darkened. Students stopped and looked, gazing up, feeling the wind against them. It was weather to make you want to smile and laugh quietly to yourself, weather that made you want to see where that wind came from. Then the rain. Large drops, briefly - A prelude to the evening.

The sky cleared soon as the campus went to dinner; cool with a clear bright sky. In Southwest a band started playing outside of where the Little Hatch used to be.

A crowd gathered slowly as people finished supper. The sun started to set, lighting the sunbursts on the side of the Commons. Soon they were dancing, happy, perhaps, looking for and finding a release. The music wasn't that good. You could say it didn't matter, but who can help but wonder if we are so desperate that we can be pleased easily.

It was a good fall day, the best so far this year.

*****

This is a strange campus. (If you don't know it already. The freshmen look young as hell. For the first few weeks you could pick them out of any crowd. They'll all be going home this weekend, without having had haircuts for six weeks and will probably be greeted by their mothers with some variation of "Oh! John, Mike, Fred, Dave, etc..... "

The juke box in the Hatch became Spanish modern at a nickel extra per play (was that after the price freeze?)

Someone waved and said hello and a friend commented, "If someone you don't know says hello to you here you think it's a mistake." Even the dope seems bad this year.

*****

I met a person this summer, in the middle of the Californian desert, waiting for a ride. We had gotten dropped off in Ludlow by three kids jumping bail until they ran out of gas. (Don't ever go to Ludlow, - three gas stations, a restaurant, 12 messed up houses and one state trooper.) He was a very strange guy. An ex-sailor, speed freak (he always kept his shirt sleeve rolled down) street person, scag dealer and so on. We thumbed together for two days, finally splitting up at 10:30 at night in some city in New Mexico under a street light. He said a lot of things in those two days but what sticks is a line he quoted by the Who, "I hope we don't get fooled again."

The Cat In The Hat Is Coming!

'TAKE IT OFF! TAKE IT ALL OFF!!'

Letters To The Editor

So You Want To Be President

To the Editor:

The American capitalist class exercises its rule through a combination of force and deception. That the two-party system provides all the differences in political perspective that offers voters a choice in determining their future is a myth- but a crippling one nonetheless. And, despite the inevitable breakdown in the two-party mechanics, there is no doubt that in 1972 the American voters will again select one of two figures that is at least acceptable to the minority interests in the country.

Our society requires a complete break with Capitalism- it is on this platform that the Socialist Workers Party has run a presidential candidate since 1948. Our 1972 candidates, Linda Jenness and Andrew Pulley are currently on national tours leading the largest Socialist campaign since Eugene V. Debs ran for office in 1920.

The SWP campaign is conducted within the mass movements that are the centers of the deepening social discontent of students, oppressed nationalities, women and gays. Jenness and Pulley were the only candidates to speak out against Nixon's Wage freeze as a blatant attack on the living standards of the working class. Both point out that the way to end inflation is to end the war immediately rather than doubly increase the burden of the American worker.

The SWP calls for an end to the draft, a hundred percent tax on all war profits. We unconditionally support the massive actions against the war in fifteen major cities on November 6th throughout the country.

Jenness and Pulley unconditionally support the right of all oppressed nationalities to self-determination and call for Black, Chicano, and Puerto Rican control of their own communities. The SWP also supports the struggle of gay women and men against the medieval laws on sexual conduct and other forms of harassment by the state which forces them into the position of second-class citizens.

All of the existing mass movements find in their solution the need for a radical reorientation of this society. The right of a tiny minority to hold the national wealth as private property must be abolished through the nationalization of the basic industry and the banks. This process must be accomplished democratically-and that is what Jenness and Pulley are fighting for.

Chapters of the Young Socialist For Jenness and Pulley (YSJP) are being established on campuses and High Schools throughout the country. These committees provide the means by which previously uninformed voters can learn of an alternative to Democratic and Republican deceit. The UMass Young Socialists for Jenness and Pulley will hold its first meeting on Thursday, October 7th in room 911 at 8:00 P.M. in the Campus Center. John Hawkins, former SWP candidate for Mayor of Cleveland and a national co-coordinator of the Young Socialists for Jenness and Pulley, will be the main speaker at that meeting.

Bernie Lougee

Equally Unfair

To the Editor:

As I read the article dealing with the Draft which appeared in the Collegian yesterday, I came to the conclusion that what is needed is a complete revocation of all draft deferments instead of the omission of one or two, here and there. Before you dub me the all-time war monger on the UMass campus, permit me to elaborate just a bit.

It seems to me patently absurd that a group of people in this country, such as college students, who will derive the greatest benefit from this country feels it should be exempt from the draft while we poor people have to fight. Because of the economic and social status of my family, three of my brothers and I got nailed by the military (the only reason my other three brothers got away is that none are of draft age). In my neighborhood in Boston this type of treatment by the draft board is a common, and somewhat expected, occurence. If any group of people should receive deferments it would have to be the victims of poverty and discrimination for they have fewer reasons to fight and less to gain by fighting.

Because all manner of deferments exist, businessmen, politicians, and our "fearless warriors" in the Pentagon keep right on acting in their irresponsible way, after all, their sons or daughters aren't going to get chewed-up over there. They might have second thoughts about letting the war continue even one more day if their kids were in Nam busy trying to keep from getting bumped-off in the war.

Don't get me wrong. I'm not in any way in favor of a draft system, be it by lottery or otherwise. All I'm trying to get across is if anybody is subject to the draft then everybody should be in on the fun. For this reason I applaud whenever deferments are eliminated. If we can't have it nice, we can at least have it equally unfair.

Gerald Quarles

Lord Almighty

To the Editor:

A black, slick-downed, balding, round head sat on top of the once muscular, now expanding, body of the representative from the land's "lord".

Longish, full, light-brown hair, thin, elongated beard, round bloated face (an apparent effect of their physician's attempts at treatment), and a carved cane, characterized the "counselor" of their laws, whom the village dwellers had requested attend the meeting.

The two faced each other about fifteen feet apart. The land's "lord's" representative kept his head down toward the ground while leaning on a commonly used type of mechanized transport. A crowd of close to one hundred of the village dwellers surrounded the two. The law counselor and the "lord's" representative made it clear to the dwellers that though their requests were understandable they (ambiguity intended) were illegitimate according to the laws of the land's organizational system. The counselor, at one point even went so far as to explain, "The Laws were, unfortunately, made by the land's "lords". The dwellers, most of them uncontaminated by the misused logic of their land's "lords" since they were still very young, laughed in disbelieving acceptance.

One slightly older dweller, though still young in relation to the land's "lords", and obviously less educated than most of the younger dwellers, shouted, "Well, the law is made by the people and we are the people". The younger, more educated dwellers smiled at him in sympathy, for if their education had taught them nothing else it had taught them that the law was not made by the people. In fact no one really seemed to know for sure who were making the laws! There seemed to be some kind of vague notion prevalent that the laws had been handed down through the centuries from one set of the land's "lords" to another being somewhat changed along the chain so as to stay in tune with the minor changes of their organizational system.

At the conclusion of the gathering the dwellers slowly dispersed. Having been successfully disunited by the representative of the "lords" and the sincere compassion of the "counselor" of the laws, they slowly retreated to their individual dwellings, where they drew up their individual complaints, to be submitted to their land's "lord", despite their past experience that the "lords" would not respond significantly to their individual requests and despite their understanding that there was nothing they could do disunited.

Conclusion; Radical Readjustment Necessary (RRN)
Recommendation; Intergalactic Intervention (II)

Geoffrey Levine

Editorial Points

The Cat in the Hat always comes back. Rumor has it that he's in transit right now. Just have a little faith.

*****

Rumor has it that Professor Tippo's first Botany lecture will center on the evils of lettuce.

*****

How much good would a Wood chuck chuck if a Wood chuck would chuck Wood.

*****

We'll take the Orioles over Pittsburgh mainly on the assumption that Baltimore has the stronger wings (that's baseball talk).

*****

If no newsmen are allowed to accompany the President to China, then who's going to keep score?

*****

Not since Franklin Roosevelt's packing scheme has a President been in a position to court so much trouble.

*****

It has been rumored that President Wood is interested in finding a quicker way to get from Boston to Amherst. Perhaps a runway out by the stadium would be a good idea.

*****

It has been speculated that the real reason for Chancellor Tippo's resignation was that he was very upset by the turnout of freshmen at his home for the picnic a few weeks back and he hopes to get even by forcing them to attend his somewhat rusty Botany lectures. from here, it looks like a draw.

*****

Some people feel that the Amherst administration will be involved in a game of musical chairs with Wood directing the music. And considering his old job with the MBTA, he might make a good conductor.

*****

The Board of Trustees should not be as bored as usual. Or as boring.

Setting A Good Example

To The Editor:

Congratulations to the Collegian on superior coverage of the Tippo resignation and related matters, in the Oct. 4 and 5 issues. The thoroughness you and your staff have shown are an example for the rest of us.

Michael J. deSherbinin
Editor, Amherst Record

The Sky Tonight

The sky tonight was like a wind-blown sail.
The clouds were billowed full with angels' breath.
The hidden stars peered now and then, and wailed
Like seagulls, gliding softly without rest.

The empty sea: so empty, yet so full;
The shallow sea: so shallow, yet so deep;
The boundless sky, yet boundary to the gull;
The empty, shallow, starfilled sky does seem to weep.

Pleasant pangs of life now swell my breast,
And permeate my unrelenting soul...
'Til prophesies no longer lay to rest
My parodies of God's unending whole.

The sky tonight's a parchment just unrolled,
Inscribed in gold, and lined in silver lace;
The piteous palsy of my life unfolds -
The priceless prism of permanency has face.

The shredded sail whips smartly in the wind;
The stars more often sparkle from its midst.
Sweet Histories at last can now begin, as Those clouds of truth unveil their stars of myth.

Confused and sad, now, here I am at last -
Impiousness, at best, personified;
Never looking up to read the past,
I'll never know which star among them lied.
What once you clung so dearly to now blues the sky above,
And what was once blue sky to you is now a blue you, Love.

— T. David Barrett —
May1969

A Vietnamese Solution To A Vietnamese Problem

—Nixon Administration officials on the Thieu "re-election"

Vatican City.-View of the Sistina Chapel with the gigantic frescoes of Michelangelo as the Pope Paul VI opens the third World Synod of Bishops, here today. (See Story on Page Thirteen)

With Protocol, Turkey Gets Agnew

ANKARA, Turkey (AP)-Turkey will receive Spiro T. Agnew next week in accordance with protocol, but likely with little else.

The U.S. vice president is coming here for two days "at his own request," a Foreign Ministry spokesman has emphasized. Agnew will be en route to Iranian celebrations, and on his way home plans to visit Greece, land of his forebears.

Turkey and Greece are partners in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, but their suspicion of each other is centuries old. They are in recurring dispute over how the people of Cyprus, of Turkish and Greek descent, can get along together.

Turkish officials seem to believe Agnew decided to visit Turkey because he was determined to visit Greece-that if he visited Greece alone he would be subject to charges of favoritism.

Agnew has drawn unfriendly criticism in the Turkish press ever since he became President Nixon's running mate. In some Turkish eyes, his Greek-American background is not his only drawback. The vice president is known here as a conservative, outspoken for law and order.

In Turkey, Prime Minister Nihat Erim seeks to repair his government's relations with moderate left and liberal intellectuals. These elements are restive with martial law in 11 provinces, a crackdown on the far left which has put hundreds in jail, and recent changes in the constitution giving the executive branch more control over parliament, the universities and other institutions.

Erim heads what is described as a reform government dominated by nonpolitical technicians. He is backed up by commanders of the armed forces, who toppled the conservative government of Suleyman Demirel last March.

Well informed sources say Erim will have only the contact with Agnew that is required by protocol.

The Agnew visit comes at a time when a low-profile U.S. policy toward Turkey seems to have stopped a worsening of relations that began six or seven years ago.

Aside from brief announcements, the Turkish press so far has ignored the prospective Agnew visit. Normally such a visit would attract wide interest, with articles pro and con.

A political crisis also may have an effect on Agnew's visit. The Justice party, Turkey's largest, announced Wednesday its five ministers are pulling out of Erim's Cabinet.

Without this party, the government cannot preserve the semblance of parliamentary democracy. The danger is it will withdraw its support in parliament. The generals then might take complete control.

Rec. Dept. Holds Retreat

The Recreation Department held its second annual retreat this week-end. Staff and students convened at a conservation camp on Otter Lake in New Hampshire.

The program was designed to give students and faculty a chance to express their views on department affairs and policy. Several alumni were present to share their ideas and field experiences.

Viets Drive Near Cambodia

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnamese troops began mopping up sweeps along the Cambodian border Wednesday behind a North Vietnamese withdrawal.

The North Vietnamese encountered apparently were rearguard elements covering the withdrawal of the main forces from 10 days of heavy fighting on both sides of the border in a region 60 to 90 miles northwest of Saigon.

South Vietnamese paratroopers reported killing 48 North Vietnamese in a series of small skirmishes, but otherwise fighting on the frontier diminished.

The North Vietnamese were reported to have withdrawn to the north and east to former sanctuary areas in eastern Cambodia.

U.S. B52 bombers mounted six more bombing strikes in the border region, trying to catch the withdrawing North Vietnamese in northern Tay Ninh Province two to three miles from the Cambodian

The U.S. Command said targets of the half-dozen strato-fortresses were suspected enemy troop locations and bunker complexes.

U.S. headquarters said B52 bombers also renewed their raids on North Vietnamese positions in Cambodia.

Elsewhere across South Vietnam, no major fighting was reported.

Military sources disclosed that one of the last two full American Army divisions in Vietnam will be disbanded by Dec. 1 and that the second will be partially withdrawn by the end of the year.

The sources said the American Division is scheduled to be broken up during the next two months with two of its three brigades deactivated and the third to become an independent unit.

The dismantling of the 20,000-man division will help fulfill much of the withdrawal schedule to reduce U.S. troop strength in Vietnam to 184,000 men by Dec. 1. Current strength is 212,500 men.

The other division is the 101st Airborne, also with 20,000 men. Most of its units are expected to be withdrawn or ticketed for early withdrawal by Jan. 1.

The U.S. Command announced the termination of a "gray alert" imposed on all American troops before and after the South Vietnamese presidential election last Sunday.

The alert confined U.S. troops to their bases or barracks except on essential business.

Learn to Drive
AMHERST AUTO SCHOOL
34 Main Street
256-6066

BUY YOUR PEWTER
in all shapes & sizes
from
BAKER-WINN
JEWELERS
"everyone's favorite jeweler"
31 S. Pleasant St. - Amherst

Excellent
Financial Assistance
for Student Nurses
a Representative of the U.S. Army will be at the ROTC Bldg. from 4 Oct. - 8 Oct. 71
No obligation - come and see us.

DEERFIELD
Drive-In Theatre
Route 5 & 10
South Deerfield, Mass.
Tel. 665-8746
FRI. SAT. SUN.
diary of a mad housewife
a frank perry film starring richard benjamin
frank langella
carrie snodgress
A UNIVERSAL PICTURE - TECHNICOLOR
ALSO
ELLIOTT GOULD
IN A DAVID L. WOLPER Production
"I LOVE MY WIFE!"
A UNIVERSAL PICTURE TECHNICOLOR R
Showtime 7:30
Feature First Sun.

NOW..YOUR CHOICE OF 5
Showcase
Rt. 5 - W. Spfld.
Cinema 1-2-3-4-5
733-5131
MORE NEW SHOWS!
MORE NEW LOUNGER SEATS!
MORE NEW PARKING!!
MATINEES DAILY...POPULAR PRICES
Adults $1.50 Mon thru Fri Nites
1 Summer of '42 (R)
2 Let's Scare Jessica to Death (GP)
3 The Devils (X)
4 Walkabout (GP)
5 Fortune and Men's Eyes (R)
ACRES FREE PARKING
ROCKER LOUNGERS
CHARGE YOUR TICKETS

LORIN HOLLANDER "An Awesome Pianist"
Tues. & Wed., Oct. 12-13
Bowker Aud. - 8 p.m.
Tickets available: Fine Arts council Ticket Office, 125 Herter Hall. Tel. 545-0202. Reserved seats $1 UM undergrads, $2 full-time students, $3 UM faculty/staff, $3.50 general public.
Presented by the UMass Fine Arts Council

Music Soothes Between Classes

"Music hath charms to sooth the savage beast."
W. Congreve

If some afternoon when you have 65 minutes until your next class, and you haven't read the assignment for it, and you've left your book in your room, and you'll never make it there and back on time, and you really do feel beastly; don't worry about it! Relax, sink back in a big soft chair and drift off into nothingness with the music from 2001.

All this can be easily accomplished by a visit to the Music Room located off the lobby in the Campus Center. The room is operated under the direction of Thad Debrowski of the Media Services office. It has the capability of playing eight stereo tapes simultaneously through the 28 listening-stations scattered throughout the room. Though these sometime prove incapable of handling large turnouts, if you don't mind a half hour wait you'll get your request.

Dabrowski said there were many problems setting up the room, which opened last May. The original design called for mono operation. However Dabrowski said that the "current student culture requires stereo." He therefore contracted Goodfriends Associates of New Jersey to design the layout and equipment of the room.

The equipment was supplied by Demambro Electronics of Boston.

The present music library maintained in the room contains approximately 200 selections ranging from the classics to current rock.

Dabrowski said his office will supply tapes for the library as the demand for them requires. Requests for new tapes may be made by anyone by using the suggestion box located in the room.

A recent MDC Editorial Point noted that there were only 28 listening stations for the entire student body. In reference to this Dabrowski said that because of the design features of the room expanding the present capabilities would be extremely expensive. He noted that because his budget is drawn from the Campus Center Tax he does not feel that it is in the best interest of the students to expand at this time.

He added that with a little bit of planning students can overcome the limited facilities of the room. He suggested that people plan to use the room during the dinner hours (5-7 P.M.) when there is usually no waiting list. He also suggested that students call the room at 545-0022 to check the list before they leave their rooms.

So, the next time you don't have an urge for studying, remember the CC Music Room. You've already bought your ticket.

KANSAS CITY-FEELING THIS HIGH--Chaimer Hicks, 17 Kansas City, swings from a tree in Penn Valley Park at a family picnic celebrating the return of a half-brother, James Creed, from military service in Vietnam. The angle from the hillside park suggests Hicks' happiness has him swinging over the Kansas City skyline, including some of the cities tallest buildings.

Statler Foundation Presents Speakers

Robert W. Lee, head of the Management Consulting Division of the New York firm of Peat, Marwick and Mitchell, will give the second lecture in the Statler Lecture Series at UMass today.

His topic is "The Economics of Tourist Destination Development." The lecture is sponsored by the UMass department of hotel, restaurant and travel administration and supported by the Statler Foundation.

Other Statler Lectures and speakers are as follows: Oct. 21--"The Roadside Restaurant," Edwain S. Weber Jr., president, A and W. International, Santa Monica, Cal.; Nov. 4--"The International Chain," Robert Huyot, chairman, Intercontinental Hotels, New York City; Nov. 11--"Hotel Administration," Vernon Herndon, senior vice president, Hilton Hotels Corporation, Chicago; and Nov. 18--"Labor Relations in the Hotel Industry," Edwin B. Dean, executive director, Southern Florida Hotel Association, Miami Beach, Florida.

Each of the lecturers will appear once a year over a three-year period, thus enabling him to explore in considerable depth his subject matter and the developments that occur in the particular area. They are also available for discussions with students and faculty during their stay at the University.

WMUA

TONIGHT ON 91.1 FM:

7:00 p.m. EVENING NEWS - a full half hour of comprehensive news from WMUA NEWS, the area's largest broadcast news department. With feeds from United Press International, Associated Press, and UPI World Audio Network. Original reporting of area news is emphasized.

7:30 p.m. - 8:00 p.m. Sports - a half hour discussion with Marty Kelley and Kent Best. Tonights guests: Bill Maxwell, Steve Schubert, and Bob Cabrelli.

8:00 p.m. 9:00 p.m. CYCLEBREAKER - this unique program takes an unusual look at all kinds of events and happenings. Tonight's program focuses on a tape of the complete press conference held by UMass President Wood and a commentary on the state of the university.

9:00 p.m. - 10:00 p.m. MARK'S BLUES - an hour of blues.

11:00 p.m. - NEWS - 30 minutes

11:30 p.m. - 3:00 a.m. RICK MORTON with progressive music.

Sea Changes

"The History of Late Pleistocene and Holocene Sea Level Changes in Bermuda and the Bahamas" is the topic for a speech by Dr. Conrad Neumann of the University of Miami Institute of Marine and Atmospheric Science. He will deliver his lecture today at 10:10 in Rm. 161 Morill, at special invitation of the Costal Research Center of the Geology Department.

THIS WEEK
Sweet Charity's
presents
Cape Cod's
Favorite
UNION JACKS
Dig Springield's finest heavy music dance hall for real people.
Dungarees always welcome
ID's Required
1270 Memorial Ave.
Directly across from Eastern States Expo.

THE COLLEGE PLAN FOR THE COLLEGE MAN
CollegeMaster
Fidelity Union Life Insurance Company
21 Pray St., Amherst

Seats still open in the
Commuter Assembly
Nomination papers may be picked up in front of RSO, 1st level, CC.
Due back by 5 p.m., Fri., Oct. 8.

CAMPUS II
7:15
9:15
JENNIFER O'NEILL
GARY GRIMES
In everyone's life there's a
'SUMMER OF '42'
Maid In Sweden
X
CAMPUS III
screens 7 & 9
No One Under 18

Campus Cinemas
256-6411
Located Right on Route 9
in the Zayre's Shopping Center
Mon. Night! Ladies $1.00
CAMPUS I
JANE fonda
DONALD sutherland
One Man Is Missing... Two Call
klute
Girls Lie Dead.
7:00
9:00

Among the characters award-winning, Irish Siobhan McKenna performs is Mrs. Tancred from Sean O'Casey's "Juno and the Paycock". Miss McKenna brings her program entitled HERE ARE LADIES to Bowker Auditorium tonight (Thur. Oct. 7th) at 8:00 P.M.

McKenna Visit- Art Encounter

The UMass Fine Arts Council announced today that the distinguished Irish Actress, Siobhan McKenna, will offer a lecture-demonstration today at 3:30 p.m. in the Studio Theatre South College, as part of her one-day visit to the University's Amherst campus. Miss McKenna will appear in "Here Are Ladies" later that evening in Bowker Auditorium which is expected to be a sold-out performance.

This special lecture/demonstration is part of a year-round "Encounter with the Arts" series which is an adjunct to the 50-event Fine Arts" Council series at the University. Admittance to the "Encounter with the Arts" is open without charge to all UMass undergraduates with ID's. Others must have a ticket to the evening performance. Remaining tickets to Miss McKenna' performance may be obtained by contacting the Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall or at Bowker Auditorium one hour before the 8 p.m. curtain. A telephone reaching both box offices is 545-0202.

Nixon To Outline Phase 2 Program

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon will outline the details of his Phase 2 economic program in a live radio-television broadcast at 7:30 p.m. EDT Thursday.

Announcing this Wednesday, the White House said the President will go on the air from his office and will finish his talk within half an hour.

Nixon thus will beat by more than a week the mid-October deadline he set some time ago for laying out the program that will replace the current 90-day wage-price-rent freeze.

The one big question remaining on the eve of his broadcast was: How much if any will wages and prices be allowed to rise when the freeze ends Nov. 13.

Government sources reported that the Cost of Living Council, the agency Nixon set up to administer the wage-price freeze, appears destined to be the chief policymaking unit in the post-freeze program.

However, these sources said Nixon could change his mind overnight about continuing the council, a 10-member group of top government officials headed by Secretary of the Treasury John B. Connally.

A Senate committee voted unanimously Wednesday to give federal employes a pay raise of up to 6 per cent on Jan. 1 if Nixon's new rules permit private industry to raise salaries after Nov. 13.

Sen. Hiram L. Fong, R—Hawaii, a cosponsor, said the committee's bill provides that if Nixon continues the freeze on the pay of private employes beyond Nov. 13, or if their raises are limited to 3 or 4 per cent, then federal employes would be under the same restriction. Fong said the purpose is to give equal treatment to government and nongovernment workers.

The Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee coupled its approval of this bill with a resolution, which it adopted 5 to 3, countermanding Nixon's previous order deferring a 6 per cent federal pay raise from Jan. 1 to next July 1.

Senate action on the resolution was expected shortly, but the companion bill may be put aside until later.

The House brushed aside mounting labor opposition and passed by voice vote a three-year program of tax cuts totaling $15.4 billion for business and individuals.

The action came despite a stepped-up campaign against the bill by labor union leaders who contended it is a bonanza for big business.

The measure goes to the Senate where the union leaders will have another chance to try to revise it.

Pilots Compete In Air Derby

Dr. Sue Stidham of 17 Shumway St., a private pilot with instrument and basic ground instructor ratings and an Assistant Professor at UMass will compete with 20 other pilots on Saturday Oct. 9 in the Third Annual New England Air Derby at Pittsfield, Massachusetts.

Flying as Dr. Stidham's co-pilot will be Alexandra Taylor (Mrs. Joseph H.) of 7 Moss Lane, a private pilot and mother of two. The lady will compete in a Cherokee 180.

Dr. Stidham (Mrs. Howard D.) is a member of the Western N.E. Chapter of the Ninety-Nines, Inc., of the Western Mass Aviation Assoc., the Collegiate Flying Club, the Appalachian Mountain Club and numerous scientific societies. She learned to fly in 1970.

Mrs. Taylor is also a Ninety-Nine, a member of the Collegiate Flying Club; of the Pioneer Flying Club #133 of Turner's Falls and Amherst Women's Liberation.

Dr. Stidham and Mrs. Taylor flew as a team in the 1971 All Women New England Air Race, placing 8th.

The New England Air Derby is a 300 mile round-robin proficiency race which challenges basic flying skills. Trophies will be awarded to the top five pilots and co-pilots, and ribbons to the top ten. Other activities will include flour bombing and spot landing contests.

Gala Cocktail Party

Following the UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS vs. BOSTON UNIVERSITY football game.

- Saturday, Oct. 9, 1971 -

- Immediately after the game

- Boston City Club -

(969 Commonwealth Ave.)

$1.00 donation to cover the entertainment costs.

Beer 50¢ Mixed Drinx 90¢

See You All After the Game.

Greater Boston Alumni Club

We're a FLY-BY-NIGHT OPERATION

Especially when it comes to delivering jeans. For fast delivery of LANDLUBBER JEANS in Amherst, call us at 253-9706 anytime from 9: 30 - 5: 30 daily. We will deliver your pants that night. Try us!

WEARHOUSE (wear else?) Open Fri. till 9

STUDENT SENATE ELECTIONS

will be held Today, Oct. 7

Dorm Residents: respective Dorms 6-9 p.m.

Sororities - Fraternities and Commuters:
in front of the University Store 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.

ID'S REQUIRED

CHICAGO——ROY WILKINS HONORED——Roy Wilkins, left, head of the NAACP, is presented with the Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Award in Chicago Wednesday night. The presentation, a part of Black Expo currently being held at the International Amphitheatre, was attended by David McKee, second from left, entertainer Ossie Davis, behind plaque, and the Rev. Jessie L. Jackson, national director of Operation Breadbasket, right.

Use Of Hamlin House As Hotel Proposed

Hamlin House, a former men's dormitory presently in use as a transient dorm, has been proposed to be used as a hotel, according to Don Witkowski of the Campus Center.

First priority will be given to displaced students who have already paid their residence hall bill. Further priorities will go to guests of students, visiting student groups and visiting professors, and organized conferences.

Occupancy prices will be three dollars per day for a double room and $3.50 per day for a single.

Linen will be supplied at a rate of $.75 per person per week for sheets and towels, $1.00 per week for blanket and pillow, and $1.75 per week for sheets, pillow, blanket and towels.

The lobby desk will be open for purposes of security and convenience from 2 p.m. until 8:00 a.m. Monday through Friday, and 24 hrs. on Saturday and Sunday.

If the proposal is accepted, the dormitory will continue to operate as a hotel until January 31, 1972.

For further information, contact Don Witkoski at 549-6000.

Malcolm X Foundation Rep To Speak On Re-Education

Representatives from the Malcolm X Foundation, of which Malik El Hakim is affiliated, will speak on "Re-Education" on Friday, October 8, 1971, at 7 p.m. & 11 p.m. at the Black Cultural Center.

"Don't miss this happening for it will help us come to grips with what universities and we can add, even the whole educational system is spokesman.

"We know it is a long weekend but why not start it off right; you can always party on Saturday and of course after the talk you can get down for the rest of the night," he said.

"Let's not be so fast to go home, but rather let us actively support the New African House with our presence at its functions," he concluded.

Pope Paul Predicts Synod To Produce No Radical Novelties

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Paul VI, proclaiming the Roman Catholic Church "tenaciously conservative," said Wednesday the World Synod of Bishops would produce no radical "novelties."

But the Vatican acknowledged officially for the first time that some synod bishops may seek the power to ordain married men as priests in their nations.

The pontiff spoke for nearly an hour in his first appearance since a cold forced him to suspend public activities Sunday. He addressed a crowd of 30,000 in St. Peter's Basilica for his weekly audience, his hoarse voice growing fainter at the end.

The 74-year-old Pope looked in good condition, however.

He attacked "some doctrinal factions"-apparently extremist lobbies-which he said had put pressure on the synod to have their views adopted.

"Christianity cannot change its fundamental characteristics," the Pope said.

Later Bishop Enrico Bartoletti, an Italian, told a news conference that a number of synod members were likely to ask Pope Paul to allow married men of mature age to become priests.

Bishop Bartoletti, who spoke on behalf of the synod secretariat, described this as the "only opening" in the celibacy ruling. Pope Paul said last year he was prepared to consider this, although reluctantly.

The 209-member synod, now in its sixth day of work, has so far voiced overwhelming support for Pope Paul's ruling that priests cannot marry. Priesthood and social justice are the two topics on the synod's agenda.

AUTO INSURANCE

ALL CARS — ALL DRIVERS
BUDGET PAYMENTS

CYCLES — SCOOTERS

Tekoa Insurance Agency

160 Pleasant St. Northampton 586-2742

10 Broad St. Westfield 562-3604

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

Must sell immed. 69 Fairlane 500 conv blue/black/top, V8 auto PS 1, new ww tires, 32000 mi. First reasonable offer. Call 586-3665. tf10-8

1967 MGB-GT, special, overdrive, wirewheels, new clutch, snow tires. Good condition. 584-2700 ext. 257 after 7 p.m. tf10-7

62 Austin Cooper with cooper s engine. $850. Call 549-1567. tf10-7

1969 Nova 6 cyl., new exhaust, and cooling system, 2 studded snow tires, $1300 or best offer. Days 545-2319, nights 586-3616, ask for Jim. tf10-8

1968 Austin Healey Sprite, convertible $1400 or best offer. Needs some body work. Come to Butterfield House and ask for Ned. tf10-8

VW Bug 1967, tan, exc. cond., R & H cheap. Call Jan 545-0152 or 256-6868. tf10-11

1969 Ply Prunner 1 spd. $1700. Michael 546-5293. tf10-7

1967 VW Bug $700. Michael 546-5293. tf10-7

1966 Mustang, 6 cyld., std., excel condition. $550. 546-9626 evenings. tf10-7

1967 Volkswagon, blue, 98,000 miles, 3 new tires, new batteries, excellent running condition. $400.00 or best offer. Call 665-3652. tf10-7

Antique VW Bus, 1971 engine. Engine still on warranty, new clutch, new muffler, heater wide oval tires. Must sell, best offer, call Greg 5-8786. tf10-8

Excellent buy VW squareback '65 very good condition, radio reasonable mileage, $950, 665-3191 after six. tf10-8

67 Mustang, 8 cyl., auto. P/S new front tires snow tires, ex.-cond. $1050/B.O. 71 Pinto 4 sp on rd, 4 mos. $1600/lke nvr P's mts 253-5723. tf10-8

1968 Nova 6 cyl., new exhaust, & cooling system, 2 studded snowtires, $1,200 or best offer. Days 545-2319, nights 586-3616 ask for Jim. tf10-13

1971 Buick Opel wagon red AM-FM, 18000 mi., excellent condition, asking 2395 will talk. Call 863-8806 after 6 p.m. tf10-8

70 MGB exc. running cond. Must sell. 259-8193. tf10-29

1968 Falcon wagon, 6 cyl, auto. trans., excellent cond., $1200, 59 Squire Village, after 1 p.m. tf10-13

62 Dodge Lancer, runs well, 2 good snow tires, $95. Call 545-2418 evenings. tf 10-8

Ten year old Peugeot, std. Michelin rd ply tires, rebuilt engine, good cond., $250 or best offer. Call Keith 253-2215 after 9:00 p.m. tf 10-14

For sale: 69 Ford Custom 4 dr sedan, 6 cyl. 89K's; Harmony Folk Guitar $50.; Royal manual typewriter $25. Call Chris 283-7389 eves. 10-13

1961 VW bus, new brks., ex. mech. gd. running cond. priced low - some body rot. $150. Call Ron 549-0150. tf 10-12

MOTORCYCLES FOR SALE

Must sell Honda CB 350, Reading West, 1969 excellent shape, 13000 mi. $450. Call Steve 549-6609. tf10-8

1971 Harley Davidson Sprint 350, excellent condition, 1200 miles, must sell Call Bill between 1-6 p.m., 584-7349. tf10-7

Honda 350 Scrambler, clean, recent tune-up. $550 call Bob 546-9786. tf10-7

1971 Penton 125cc, the fastest woods bike - 21 hp $750. Also 1971 Hodaka 100 cc Trail Bike $300, Call Jerry 253-3740 tf 10-8

FOR SALE

New tire 6.50 x 13, $10. Canoe $140. 586-1076. tf10-8

Seasoned Firewood. Sale and delivery. Call 665-3031. tf10-20

Records & tapes discount prices. Most new albums in stock. Come to 242 Gorman or call 546-6470 ask for John. tf10-8

Brown suede pants, skirts, skins, top quality, wholesale. Pants $27, skirts $9.49, skins $5. Stop by to look Jon-124 Cladborne 5-2630 leave number if not in. tf10-14

Ten year old Peugot, rebuilt engine. Best offer, call Keith 253-2215 before 10 a.m. or after 10 p.m. tf10-12

Brand new 8 track stereo tapes - $3- latest hits incl. Superstar, Stewart. Send for free list. 13 Longview St., Spfld., Mass. 01109. tf10-12

Hofner bass guitar with case, exc. cond., $175 or best offer. Contact Bob 549-1190. tf10-8

8 track stereo tapes-Who, Stones, Tull, etc.-$2.95. Allman Bros.- 4-Waistreet, etc.- $3.95 Call 546-8034.

Watches-now all sizes $19.95! Factory warranty. Also, frames, liners & pads in stock. Call Mark at 546-3456. tf10-12

Bumper sticker - your words printed on 3 x 12" red or green sticker for $1, copies .25. The Snide Co., Route 1, Box 93 Blaine, Wash. 98230. tf10-18

Fur coat full length, ex. cond. Best offer. Also new ski parka. Call 6-6120 between 5:30 and 7:00. tf10-8

Kenwood 1100 AM-FM tuner BSR 510X turntable Zcott x15 3 way loudspeakers system retailed at 470 will sell 260. Call nites 546-7111. tf10-12

Guitars. Acoustic, Electric, Classical. New and used, also: strings and accessories. Macramed straps. All was below. Call 546-7672. tf10-7

1970 Dunebuggy. Met-flake blue glass body on 68 chassis. 1600, complete including heater, 33000 miles. Call Pete 446, Gorman 546-6518. tf10-8

TO GIVE AWAY - watches, jewelry, radios, unusual gift, and novelty items - all 50% off and more. Call S. N. Brown, 665-1175. tf10-13

Snow tires 165-11 semperit radial mounted on MG-B disc wheels $50. Call 549-0067. tf10-8

We undersell all. Any and all top name appliances, stereos, radios, refrigerators, anything. Call Larry 6-5096 or come to 350 Canoe. tf10-13

Large raccoon coat, excellent condition, $50. Call 549-2866. tf 10-8

SCM Typewriter, Agfa 35 mm camera. Sonrlco cassette tape recorder, Accordion 120 base. Call 549-6821. tf10-8

1963 VW engine, rebuilt, new fuel pump and generator, $90.; 1962 VW engine; needs rings, valves $25. Call 665-3480 eve. tf10-12

ROOMMATES WANTED

Keep your feet warm in the coming "Ice Age" in shoes from THE SNOW BIN (In the Alley - off Main St.) - Amherst. 10-7

Spiritually minded person to share a large furnished room in Amherst Center. $35 a month. Call Kent at 253-9968 after 7. tf10-7

Route - wanted male to share apt., No. Hatfld. 12 mi. fm. emps. furnished $65/month. contact Fred, Milne Po Box 1 No. Hatfld. Tel. 247-5919. tf10-7

HELP WANTED

Need Monday's Earn $25 or more per week? Work your own hours at your convenience! Call Barry or Dave, 1-on-5-30, 546-6663. tf10-8

Ambitious people wanted to sell jewelry on campus-no experience necessary high commissions - send name, address and tel. no. to Richards, 1181 Main St., Springfield, Mass. tf10-8

Earn $100 or more part time, excellent opportunity for an ecology minded person 413-323-4127. tf10-13

Need money? Earn $25 or more a week! Work your own hours at your convenience. Call Barry or Dave 1 p.m. - 5:30 p.m. 546-6663. tf10-13

RIDE WANTED

Ride wanted every morning to Springfield Will pay. Call 367-4871 collect. tf10-12

WANTED

Driver wanted S. Deerfield to U.M. 1 trip per week, good pay. Phone 5-6011 or 549-3761 tf10-7

PERSONAL

Free young female cat long hair, clean. Call 1-323-7565. tf10-11

Melville Basement invites James Basement and 4th floor to a party Friday night at 8. tf10-31

Lost call 5-2162. Gold Wittnauer watch in area of Orchard. Sentimental value reward. tf10-8

For better commuter representation Mark Dwarick for Senator tf10-7

To Betherido - the one who really does it - Happy Birthday!! The Roller Skate kid & Irma 10-7

To I., in Patterson - are you free homecoming weekend? W.A.V. 10-7

The 3rd floor invites the 8th floor to a Cheeseburger Party Sunday morning at 2:30 a.m. 10-7

Want to meet w/m bisexuals or gays for friendship or whatever, really need to find someone to relate with Write Box 310, N. Amherst. tf 10-

If you stole my Child Psych Book please return to Lost & Found, maybe we can share it. I loaned for it and I'm broke. I don't want to flunk - I.C.T. 10-7

LECTURE NOTES

Lecture notes are now available in room 308 in the Student Union Lobby for all sections of Anthro 101, Botany 101, Econ., 125 and 126, Ecology 101, Geo. 100 and 150, Hist 151, Human Dev. 270, Micro 130, Phil. 105, Psych. 101, 262, 263, 270, 280, 301, and 302, Soc. 101, 200, 101 and 135, one section of Hist. 150 and Psych 325 also in. tf10-7

ENTERTAINMENT WANTED

Every Wednesday night at the English Pub-Do your own thing! Shore vocal master PA system available! Call Jerry, 549-1200 or Mark, 256-8370. tf10-8

SERVICES

Amherst Audio services. Stereo components, tape decks for home or car. 197 No. Pleasant St. 256-8133. tf5-12

RIDE WANTED

Ride needed to and/or from Gardner, 3 days a week. Hours are flexible please. If you commute call 632-0217. tf10-8

Ride needed daily from Easthampton to U Mass. Will share expenses. Please call 527-6085. tf10-8

Draft Counselor's Corner

If Dropping Deferment, Take Safety Precaution

By GILBERT J. SALK

Well, folks, the number is out. You all probably saw or heard that if your number is over 125 you won't be drafted. You can probably count on this, but it is wise to take a few precautions.

First, if you received your number in this year's lottery (drawn August, 1971), you cannot be in this year's eligibility pool. You must wait until next year, at the earliest. So it doesn't make any difference what number they call this year. To clarify, only those born before January 1, 1952 can enter the eligibility pool this year and be safe from the draft. Be sure your friends know about this.

Okay. Let's deal now with those born in 1951 or before, who may be included in this year's eligibility pool. The first bit of advice is to be patient. Hold on to your student deferment until after Thanksgiving. This will enable you to retain your protection in case anything unexpected (like, say, we invade Canada) happens. After Thanksgiving, if the numbers stay the same, as they should, then give up your deferment.

To do this, simply write to your friendly local. Your letter should read roughly as follows. "Dear Sirs. I wish to give up my student deferment and be reclassified 1-A effective immediately. Peace. John Q. Students. SS# ''#$%!& - $.'' Using your SS number is optional, but it's a nice touch.

Be sure to make a copy of the letter to keep for yourself. Take the letter to the post office and tell the clerk that you want to send it Certified Mail (not registered) Return Receipt Requested. This will cost you fifty cents American. When your board gets the letter, they will have to sign for it, and the post office will send the receipt back to you. Staple it to your copy of the letter and file it in a safe place. (By the way, this procedure should be followed with all of your correspondence with your board. In this way, you have proof of what they receive and when they receive it.)

You are effectively reclassified 1-A on the date the board gets the letter, whether they get around to actually reclassifying you or not. As long as you have a 1-A on Dec. 31, 1971, you have served your eligibility year. If your number has not been reached by the December call, you are safe from the draft.

There is a prevelent myth which must be dispelled. You do not have to be eligible for an entire year. One day will do it, as long as that day is December 31.

I assume that most of you can't believe that it's all that simple, but rest assured that it is. There are no tricks. Just wait until the call for December is out, and if your number has not been reached, mail that letter. Do not visit your board in person and tell them that you want to drop your deferment. You won't have any proof that you submitted your request, and draft board clerks don't have the authority to reclassify you.

If you have any questions about this or other aspects of the draft, visit the Draft Counseling Services office in 923 Campus Center. Trained counselors there will be glad to help you. Or stop by the DCS info table in the lobby of the CC on Tuesday and Friday mornings.

PEACE.

—Notices—

VIET NAM VETERANS AGAINST THE WAR

Organizational meeting all Vets invited. Supporters welcome. 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Rm. 804 808 CC.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF UNIVERSITY WOMEN:

Conn. Valley Branch: Meeting at Eliot House, Mt. Holyoke College, S. Hadley on Oct. 14 at 7:30 p.m. Topic: United Nations Day. Speaker: Mr. John Lewine, U.N. member (USA)

ASTRONOMY CLUB:

General meeting, 7:30 punch & cookies in 111 Hasbrouck, 8 p.m. Guest speaker: Dr. William Irvine; 9 p.m. observing session at observatory. New members welcome. Come down and find out what we're all about.

BRIDGE CLUB:

There will be duplicate bridge played tonight at 7 p.m. in Rm. 169 CC.

COMMITTEE ON POVERTY:

Important meeting Thurs. at 7 p.m. 801CC. All members are urged to attend.

CEQ:

Anyone interested in helping on the Ecology Action workshop on Saturday (taking registrations, helping with arrangements, etc.) show up either at 8 a.m. at Memorial Hall or anytim during the day.

COALITION FOR PEACE AND JUSTICE

Emergency mass meeting to BUILD actions for Oct. 13 Moratorium 7 p.m. in the 9th floor CC. Please come, tell others. Tonight, Thursday.

RABTREE HOUSE

Ha Ha, Herman' tonight at 10 p.m. in Rec Room.

GSS

GSS meeting 6:30 rooms 805 809 CC.

PAN AFRICAN STUDENTS

Are all invited to a picnic to Western Mass. Transportation, food and drinks will be provided. Will meet on 12 noon Sunday at Campus Center Bus Station.

PARKING COMMITTEE

Anyone interested in joining an all student parking committee to examine improvements for the campus parking situation, contact Elliot Silverstein at A8886, or Bob Chaiter at 586-

RECREATION SOCIETY

All interested Rec Majors: There will be a meeting of the Recreation Society Wednesday, Oct. 13 at 7:30 in Rm. 165 169 Come.

SCROLLS

Important meeting tonight at 6 p.m. in Rm. 811 815 CC. Call an officer if you can't attend.

SIGMA ALPHA MU FILM SERIES:

"Yellow Submarine" in color; animated Beatles film with shorts. Saturday night, Oct. 16, Mahar Aud: 6, 8, 10, 12 midnite. Come early.

SKI PATROL

There will be a meeting tonight for all old and new members of the ski patrol at 6:30 in Rm. 165. Attendance is mandatory.

STUDENT HOMOPHILE LEAGUE:

Weekly meeting Thursday night at 7 p.m. in Rm. 917 CC. Bring your questions about venereal disease. For information call 545-0154 or come to SHL office: SU413E.

STUDENT SENATE STUDENT MATTERS COMMITTEE:

Tonight's scheduled meeting will be cancelled due to elections. Next meeting is next Thursday night, 8 p.m. Rm. 175 CC.

THE WILDLIFE SOCIETY

Meeting Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in Rm. 305 Holdsworth. Elections and discussion on "Are Wildlifers too interested in Game Species?"

LOST:

One red and white tie along the sidewalk on N. Pleasant St., between School of Education and parking lot #4 at 3 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 5. Would whoever picked it up please return it to Newton Clark, School of Ed., it was a gift and I'll catch hell if I can't find it. Thank you.

There are two things in life that I cherish: my pocketbook and a picture. I lost my pocketbook (brown, handmade leather) Monday. Please return it to me. Sandy, 312 Dwight House.

A pair of black rim glasses. Possibly lost Sun. (10/3) around Hampden Dining Commons. Contact Don (69702). 3 keys on the path between the SU and Hasbrouck, early Monday morning. Call 69889.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

"Astrology is assured of recognition from psychology without further restriction because astrology represents the summation of all psychological knowledge of antiquity." Carl Jung

ARIES (March 21-April 19): What appeared a certainty now is surrounded by cloud of doubt. Best to stick with the familiar. Don't wander too far afield. Key is to do what you know: leave speculation to others.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Fresh approach is necessary. You have been taking too much for granted. Realize this and act accordingly. Applies especially to money affairs. Take stock, inventory. Protect valuables.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Cycle high, but it is necessary to protect image. Means be aware of public relations. Some have reasons to be concerning your ultimate goal. Be wary about affixing signature to agreement / contract.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Much that occurs happens behind scenes. You are given task assignment from afar. Special call message could send you on errand. Unique alternatives be versatile. Use recent social contacts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be aware of tendency to overindulge. Accent on hopes, wishes, reactions from friends. Some expectations fall away. You are presented with opportunity. Your only real obstacle now is self-unbinded fear.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Keep track of loan transactions which could affect properly unfavorably. Open lines of communication. Study fine print. Older individual may be misguided: know this and respond accordingly.

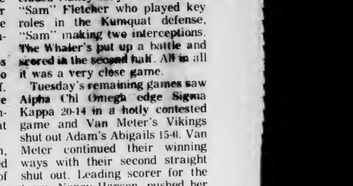
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Low-key should become order: don't rush, push or be impatient. Imponderables dominate. Your role now should be that of diplomat, peacemaker. Co-worker acts in eccentric manner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Financial resources need attention. Avoid risking cash on speculative venture. Heed inner voice. Those who profess to be experts may, in fact, be doubt filled. Realize this, respond accordingly.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Time to put forth full effort, all or nothing. Halfway measures will not suffice. Accent on separating fact from fancy. Don't nag. Your mate, partner, close associate is now ultra sensitive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be discreet. Don't tell all you know. Be careful about appointments, keep them, especially medical, dental. Pace yourself. Avoid extremes. Applies to working, recreation. Keep on even keel.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Romance is featured, creative juices are activated. Welcome new contacts, challenges. Adhere to individual style. Decide for yourself. Avoid committee thinking. Dance to your own tune.



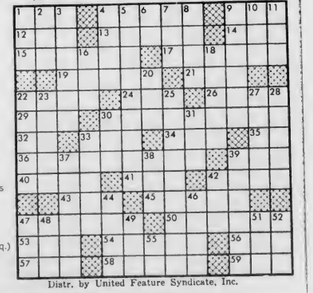
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): One close to home base has something of value to impart. Be receptive. Keep open mind to unorthodox concepts. You gain if willing to change some of your ways. Strive for greater flexibility.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are analytical, seek justice, are capable of supporting underdog projects, and emerging victorious. You are the opposite in ordinary. You can be gently, But, when cause is right, you can fight. You may have yearning this year. Married or single you are being tested, and many are seeing a new you.

Copyright 1971, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle



ACROSS

1 Devoured
4 Developed
9 Rodent
12 Cushion
13 Eagle's nest
14 The self
15 Tests
17 Marine snail
19 Spoor
21 Tierra del Fuegan Indian
22 Jog
24 Speck
26 Suffix denoting action
29 Ventilate
30 State of being uncommunicative
32 Symbol for tantalum
33 Storage compartment
34 Deface
35 Babylonian deity
36 Draw to 39 Equality
40 Unusual
41 Dine
42 Sea eagles
43 Grain
45 Article of furniture
47 Avoids
50 Whipped
53 Hit lightly
54 Vapid
56 Prefix: three
57 Man's nickname
58 Domesticates
59 Still

DOWN

1 Likely
2 Sailor (colloq.)
3 Newspaper executive
4 Festive
5 Domicile
6 Conjunction
7 Intellect
8 Roman tyrant
9 Keep
10 Time gone by
11 Measure of weight
16 Skill
18 Bury
20 Parcel of land
22 Turkic tribesman
23 Lasso
25 Train schedule
27 Body of water
28 Approaches
30 Inlet
31 Uncouth person
33 Baker's product
37 Body of entertainers
38 Make lace
39 Comely
42 Guido's high note
44 Trial
46 Insects
47 Greek letter
48 Experimental room (colloq.)
49 Music: as written
51 Before
52 Insect egg
55 Part of "to be"

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Commentary...

Ten Wasted Years Hurt Present Pats

By STEVE GERSHMAN

New England Patriots fans were brought back to their senses in the past two weeks. After winning their opening game, the Patriots have reverted back to their old selves.

Excited fans were thinking championship after the opening victory over Oakland, but it seems they forgot fast. Just last season the Pats opened the season similarly with a stunning victory over Miami. When the smoke cleared at the end of the season, the Pats stood last with a 2-12 record, the worst ever. The pattern is the same this year so far.

A close look at this year's roster reveals a similarity to last year's group. Among the few changes are starters Roland Moss, Randy Vataha, Halver Hagen, Steve Kiner and first draft choice Jim Plunkett.

These are fine young players, but a few good rookies can not change a team drastically. Although quarterback Plunkett is going to be super, he is still a rookie and so lacks the vital experience to lead the offense consistently. Many fans think of Jim as a savior, but only last year rookie Terry Bradshaw of Pittsburgh got the same treatment and didn't produce effectively.

The Patriots suffer from inconsistency and above all a lack of solid depth. Many feel that man for man the Pats starting team can compare with almost any team in the league. But behind the starters there is a wide disparity of talent. Due to an injury jinx the Patriots rarely have a healthy starting team.

Defensively, they have played with injury after injury to key personnel. All-star cornerback Darryl Johnson is out for most of the season and the entire defensive backfield has missed the past two games. Their replacements have been picked apart constantly and so the defense folded.

As a result, the offense was always behind and in a hole. The offense has great potential, but with a rookie quarterback and two rookie receivers, Vataha and Moss, it is inconsistent. The running attack has been suspect and this, coupled with early defects has put too much pressure on the rookie Plunkett.

This all goes to prove how valuable the draft is and a few additions in a year or two cannot build a sudden winner. The Patriots are now suffering from past mistakes in the draft. They continually wasted vital choices on such immortals as Joe Bellino and Dennis Byrd.

First year General Manager Upton Bell has done a super job in picking up players and draft choices, but it will take more than a year or two to make up for ten years of waste.

This team is young, talented and has a great future. They are only a few players away from being a contender. They should win a few games this year and even look great at times, but don't expect miracles; a championship is still a few drafts and years experience away.

Reverse Action Highlights Powder Puff Football

Last Thursday action saw Alpha Chi Omega down Pi Beta Phi in Women's intramural action. The game was never a contest as Vicki Christi set the pace with the opening touchdown run following a reverse in the backfield.

Jean Hannigan quickly showed some of her talents as she scored twice on touchdown passes to push the half-time score to 20-0. Lexi Klein, who led all scorers with fifteen points added two conversions in the first half before scoring twice herself in the second half. With the score 33-0, Pi Phi received a consulation touchdown to end the game 33-6.

Alpha Chi showed a very strong defense with interceptions by Sue Stewart and Trisha Moravec. Spearheading the defense was Paula MacDonald who made tags all over the field. Susan Stewart highlighted the game with a 25 yard run the wrong way!

In Monday night's action, the Mushrooms continued to dominate the Independent League as they defeated the Crampton Cuties 36-0. The Mushrooms have yet to be scored on in league competition.

Leading the scoring for the Mushrooms was Chris Cronin and Vicki Pagel with 12 points each, followed by Cheryl McCarthy with eight and Nancy Lindbergh and Nancy Nealon with two each. The Mushrooms, a well-balanced and well-organized team could go all the way and become the first women's Intramural Powder Puff Football Campus Champions.

The Cuties should be commended as they played nearly the entire game with only six players due to a knee injury to one of their stalwarts.

Also playing Monday night, the Roaring Twenties roared over Dickinson 20-6. Here again, Dickinson was only able to field six players, to their disadvantage, but even so managed to score their first touchdown of the season--who knows what they could have done with a full team!

Leading the scoring for the Twenties was D. Gurski with eight points and C. Muldoon and K. Higgins with six apiece.

In Tuesday night's action GSS came up with its second victory in a close battle with Chi Omega. GSS got on the scoreboard first with a halfback option play as Diane Janvier scored both the TD and the extra point. GSS scored again on a series of both running and passing plays. Diane Janvier capped the drive with the TD while Sandy Morin scored the point after. Chi Omega scored near the end of the half, leaving the score at 14-6.

The only score in the second half took place when GSS was in a third and 27 situation. Quarterback Marcia Parks called for a repeat of the previous play and sent halfback Windy Gileson through the line for the TD. GSS again used the halfback option with Diane Janvier throwing to Marcia Parks in the end zone for the two point conversion.

The final score of the game was 22-6. Both defenses played well to limit the scoring in the second half. Outstanding players for GSS were Mary Malaspina, Monica Lennartz, Phyllis Rosenthal and Pat Moynihan.

In other Tuesday night action, the Kumquats of Grayson defeated the Melville Whalers by a score of 12-6. The Kumquats offense was led by their quarterback Janis DiPietro. Other offensive players included the center Diane Clark, the ends Carla "Jill" Hunt and Karen Sarkesian (who scored all 12 points for the Kumquats), blockers Joan Reilly and Shelley Reid and the running back Arlene Breau.

BACKFIELD IN MOTION-There are no cream puffs in powder puff football...just ask any of these darlings of the midway. The hips fly, the legs drive, the boys go wild and it all adds up to the biggest thing to hit Intramurals in years.

The defense held the line against a hard pushing Whaler offense. Other members of the team included Nancy Majors and Arlene "Sam" Fletcher who played key roles in the Kumquat defense. "Sam" making two interceptions. The Whaler's put up a battle and scored in the second half. All in all it was a very close game.

Tuesday's remaining games saw Alpha Chi Omega edge Sigma Kappa 20-14 in a hotly contested game and Van Meter's Vikings shut out Adam's Abigails 15-0. Van Meter continued their winning ways with their second straight shut out. Leading scorer for the team, Nancy Hansen, pushed her total points to 14 with eight points in the game. Pat Rogan also contributed seven points. Quarterback Chris Hammond was three for four for a 75% average on the evening.

UMass Rugby Club Hosts "Rugger Fest" Saturday

By BILL GORCZYCA

Heads will roll this Saturday afternoon when the UMass Rugby Club hosts its first annual "Rugger Fest" at the athletic fields west of Boyden Gymnasium. A large crowd is expected to see the local ruggers vie for supremacy against XVS from Williams College, Amherst College, Albany Medical School, and the Springfield Rugby Club.

Each club will play at least two games in the tourney which is set up in a round robin format. Amherst College will start the festivities at 10 A.M. when they take on the Springfield R.C. in the first match of the day. UMass will make its initial appearance at 11 A.M. as it kicks off against a strong side from Williams College. The local team is also slated for a second match against Albany Medical School at 2 P.M.

The UMass Ruggers presently have a 1-1 record, having beaten URI 24-0 and losing a close decision to Beacon Hill 11-6. They will be significantly weakened for the tourney due to the absence of standouts Billy Kesgen, Jim Clapper, Rick Ross, and Doug Knapp. However, victory will not be far from their reach if forwards Mike Reynolds, Brian Curry and Bob Piepul continue their hard-hitting ways. The return of speedster Steve McElroy and former Notre Dame Mike Joyce should also make up for any absences in the backfield.

Also scheduled for Saturday is a number of games for the understudies of the teams entered in the tournament. The UMass "B" squad promises to make a good showing after coming off a strong losing effort against a more experienced and much larger Beacon Hill side. Led by the high stepping of Rich Vogel and Pete Herrman, the B's have displayed an ability to score from any position on the field. A strong set of forwards will also deal out their share of lumps and bruises this Saturday with their characteristic hard-nosed play.

Rugby is a sport which combines aspects of soccer, lacrosse, and American football. The UMass Rugby Club is open to all members of the University: undergraduate, graduate and faculty. It is a unique organization as it offers everyone a chance to participate in a unusual and interesting sport at an intercollegiate level. Practices are held at 4:30 P.M. on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of each week at the Boyden athletic fields.

Britain's Jacklin Ails As Picadilly Golf Opens

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Britain's Tony Jacklin, bedded by a stomach ailment hopes to shoot for a first prize of $20,400 in the Picadilly World Match Play Championship starting today.

The 27-year-old former U.S. Open champion was stricken yesterday morning.

Jacklin, scheduled to play Gary Player of South Africa in the first round, said on the telephone by his sick bed last night, "The way I've been today I certainly could not have played golf.

"I am feeling a bit better tonight. The doctors say I will feel weal tomorrow even if the temperature goes down. But it will take a lot to keep me out of this tournament."

In other first round matches, Jack Nicklaus of the United States, th defending champion, faces Liang Hugan Lu of Taiwan, Charles Coody, U.S. Masters champion, plays Neil Coles of Britain and Arnold Palmer o the U.S. is paired against New Zealand left-hander Bob Charles.

If Jacklin can't make it, Peter Oosterhuis, British Ryder Cup star, wil substitute.

Palmer, facing his first tournament since helping the United States t retain the Ryder Cup last month, finished with three straight birdies for six under par 68 in a practice round.

In conjunction with FraternityRush
the Interfraternity Council and Campus Pizza
presents

"GREEK" GRINDER WEEK

Any Grinder on the Menu worth 75¢ for only 50¢

"Go Greek" with Campus Pizza
RT. 9, HADLEY
586-3880
Orders To Go

Visit with the Greeks this week.

Oct. 4, 5, 6, 7 1971
worth 25¢ OFF on any 75¢ Grinder
or 1 FREE PIZZA with every 4 ordered
with this coupon
at CAMPUS PIZZA

UMass Harriers Bow In Tri-Meet

By JAY NESTOR

Harvard again proved its cross country superiority, Tuesday, as the Crimson severely whipped Providence College and the UMass harriers on the 5.5 mile Franklin Park course. The Redmen came out of the meet on the short end, but they also gave evidence to the contention that they can be a strong running unit, capable of putting it all together.

The general feeling was that UMass would be lucky if they escaped with their skin from this meet. However, this was just not the case as the Redmen gave the Providence Friars as good run for the money. Coach Ken O'Brien commented, "The defeat to Providence is not as bad as the score indicates. Providence beat us man to man; it only being a question of their first man beating our first and so on down the line."

As Crimson sophomore sensation Rick Rojas missed this meet, the Harvard Captain, Mike Koerner, took up the slack and dominated the race. He beat Friar Bill Speck to the line by twenty five seconds which is quite a margin seeing that Speck is the 1970 New England runner-up.

John Quirk grabbed third for the Crimson, but he was nearly overhauled by the first UMass finisher, sophomore Doug O'Connell. O'Connell started slow but turned it on during the last half of the race to earn his final position. Rick Smith of PC fought out the race with O'Connell and followed him to the line to garner fifth position.

The next Redman finisher was Tom Derderian in eighth place. Derderian is slowly progressing and should hit top form by the peak of the season. Amazing Peter Crisci was the third man for UMass in eleventh place. Following Crisci was Paul Segersten with an impressive fourth man finish for his first race of the season. Don Dunsky rounded off the Redmen scoring in the sixteenth place. Tom Swain, John Nestor, and Mike McCusker completed the UMass backup behind Dunsky.

The final score stood at Harvard 29, Providence 41, and UMass 51. Coach O'Brien was pleased with the effort of his team saying, "Overall I think that we are strong but our major problem is learning to adjust to the early pace."

Harvard was overpowering as was expected, and the Friars characteristically sprinted out for the early pace. The Redmen would have stood a good chance at beating Providence if they had effectively countered the early strategy.

O'Connell showed admirable maturity in this race with his fourth place finish to three superb harriers. O'Connell is rapidly progressing to the level of one of the most formidable Yankee Conference threats.

Veterans Rick Barry and Tom Swain are steadily progressing toward last season's form and should be ready by mid-season.

The Redmen have tasted virtually the toughest competition in New England during their first two meets. The going from here in won't be as rough for the remainder of the season as the team seems capable of copeing with future competition. The Huskies of UConn are Saturday's target here at the UMass course. The Redmen are toned up and should be ready.

The freshmen harriers just missed squeaking by Harvard as a strong Providence team dominated Tuesday's tri-meet. Providence boasts one of the best freshman teams in the region, depth-wise.

Jim Keefe of Harvard emerged victorious, but not by any sizable margin as promising Redman Bill Gillin came on strong in the last half mile. A Friar inched in between Gillin and Randy Thomas, who ran another fine race, capping fourth place.

Devon Croft, Paul Albini, and Bruce MacLean finished the Redmen scoring with eleventh, twelfth, and sixteenth places respectively. The team split was fifty-five seconds and Coach O'Brien expressed the opinion that there is definite room for improvement.

The final score was Providence 35, Harvard 48, and UMass barely missing with 49 points.

Berryman, MacPherson Head Varsity M Slate

By DAN KAMAL

Quite a variety of sports were represented at the fourth weekly Varsity M Club Luncheon yesterday.

First of all, soccer Coach Joe Berryman gave a factual report on the season his team has had so far. The booters are 2-0-1 on the year, with the tie coming last Friday night against Boston University on BU's astroturf. Berryman cited the artificial playing surface as a contributing factor to the trouble his team had against the Terrriers.

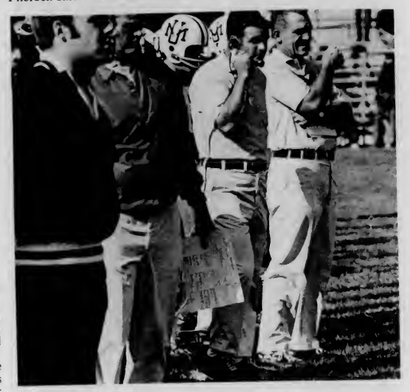
"It was like playing on a carpet; the ball had hardly any resistance on the astroturf. Therefore, it caused many passes to run long." The youthful coach continued that there was some exciting competition coming up in the future for the booters. He also mentioned that UMass is rated number six in New England behind Brown, Harvard, Springfield, Williams and Wesleyan.

Lindo Alves of the soccer team was the next to speak. He stated that this year's team is more or less a culmination of the UMass soccer trend in recent years to go to shorter passing, more ball-control type of game.

Augie Calheno, also of the soccer team, talked a bit about the Redman emphasis on defense and also about the amount of depth on the team. "Now the second team can give the first team a good game."

Baseball was the next sport to be represented as Assistant Sports Information Director Dick Bresciani presented the annual Dennis DellaPiana Award, which goes to a senior exemplifying courage, ambition, and determination, to Redman pitching star of the last three years, Jack Bernardo. DellaPiana was a former great who was fatally stricken by an illness in his senior year in 1966. Bresciani called DellaPiana "one of the finest young men he has ever been associated with at the University."

Freshman football coach Bill Maxwell had the floor next and praised the balanced attack his team displayed in scoring an impressive 32-19 win over Boston University. He specifically mentioned defensive lineman Ed McElhany, offensive tackle Brad Calnan, running back Richie Herman, and quarterback Fred Kelliher.



Head Coach Dick MacPherson then got up, and before he started talking about BU he set one thing straight. Promising quarterback Tom Rohan is suffering from an irregular heartbeat, the cause of which is baffling doctors. His doctors are hoping it is a thyroid condition so that they will be able to treat it with medicine. MacPherson said that he has received many unpleasant phone calls regarding Rohan and wanted to set the record straight.

Then the affable coach talked about his next opponent. MacPherson cited the fact that although the Terriers have scored 68 points in three games, they are winless. They have been defeated by Colgate, Temple, and The Citadel. What has happened to what was supposed to be the best BU team that Coach Larry Naviaux has had according to MacPherson? The UMass coach feels that it could be "growing pains" brought about by Naviaux's new, more open-style offensive attack.

MacPherson noted a 97-yard TD run by The Citadel's fullback on a third-and-eight situation as the type of thing that has been happening to BU. He then added, "If anyone saw the Dartmouth game, then you know how it can happen."

The first-year coach then talked about how many of his players are from the Boston area, and therefore traveling to Boston to play was that much more meaningful.

In conclusion, MacPherson mentioned that his team will probably be at its best physically since the intrasquad game last September 8th. He listed Paul Metallo as his only doubtful starter, excluding of course those players out for the season with injuries. "I was awfully glad we didn't have to play last week. Many people will play Saturday that couldn't have played last Saturday. As far as our performance, we expect to be smoother on offense, and better on defense.

REDMAN BRAINTRUST: Head Coach Dick MacPherson, and assistants Bob Pickett and Bob Harris (first second and third from right) survey the action against Dartmouth. They hope it will be different Saturday versus BU. (Photo by Barbara Brecher)

Pirates Beat SF; Now Face O's

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates clinched their first National League pennant since 1960 yesterday, hammering San Francisco into submission 9-5 with a four-run explosion in the sixth inning built on Roberto Clemente's tie-breaking single and Al Oliver's three-run homer.

But as much as Clemente and Oliver were responsible for the Pirates' triumph in the fourth game of the NL playoff series, they had to share the spotlight in the marathon struggle with relievers Bruce Kison and Dave Giusti.

Kison, a stringbean 6-foot-4, 170-pounder who last year pitched the title clincher for Waterbury in the Eastern League, and the veteran Giusti shut down the Giants' attack with two-hit relief over the final seven innings.

That, as much as anything was the big difference in the marathon 3-hour, 5-minute struggle, replete with 21 hits, that sends the Pirates into the World Series against the American League champion Orioles at Baltimore Saturday.

The score was tied 5-5 when the Pirates came to bat in the sixth, the tie having existed since the second inning when Rich Hebner's three-run homer got Pittsburgh even after the Giants had moved ahead on home runs by Chris Speier and Willie McCovey.

The Pirates got started when second baseman Dave Cash singled with one out. Cash moved to second as Hebner grounded out and then the reliable Clemente stroked an 0-1 pitch to center off San Francisco starter Gaylord Perry that put Pittsburgh ahead 6-5.

At that point, Giants' Manager Charlie Fox lifted Perry and replaced him with Jerry Johnson, the first of two strategic moves that backfired against the Giants for he was to be the victim of Oliver's wrapup homer.

Johnson's second pitch to Stargell got by catcher Dick Dietz for a passed ball that enabled Clemente to race to second. With the count 1-1 on Stargell, Fox ordered the slugging outfielder intentionally walked despite the fact he was hitless in 14 previous trips.

That brought up Oliver, who crossed up the strategy by crashing a 2-1 pitch into the right field stands while cowbells clinked and shredded paper rained down from a deliriously happy crowd of 35,487 in Three Rivers Stadium.

PITTSBURGH, Giants-Pirates

With Kison pitching smoothly-he had allowed only one hit since taking over for starter Steve Blass after the second inning - it appeared to be over. But when McCovey singled and Bobby Bonds walked with two out in the seventh, Manager Danny Murtaugh took out his young reliever and called for Giusti, the ace of his bullpen.

Giusti got out of the jam by striking out Dietz and did not allow a hit the rest of the way as he posted his third save in the four-game series that left the Giants bridesmaids once again.

The Giants, who finished second in the NL West six of the last seven years before winning it this season on the final day, seemed to be in good shape as they came to Pittsburgh with a 1-1 tie in the series and Juan Marichal and Perry set to pitch.

Kiah Serving "Goose-eggs"

By WILLIAM KILLION

John "Spud" Kiah, tobacco chewing goalie of the UMass soccer team, recorded the third shutout of the regular season for UMass last Friday night with a 0-0 tie with B.U. Kiah's excellent defensive plays kept UMass in the game and helped preserve a tie.

Kiah has also held opposing teams scoreless in four out of five pre-season scrimmage games, giving him seven shutouts in eight games.

The Junior is the only goalie on the UMass soccer team this year. Last year he played as the backup goalie for both the soccer and hockey teams, but saw limited action.

Sports Recruitment Meeting Tuesday 7 p.m. In Collegian Office

Intramural's

FIELD	TIME	FOOTBALL TEAMS			TUG-O-WAR
2	6:00	PBI vs. TS	1	8:00	1 vs. 2
3		Burners vs. Civ. Eng	2		3 vs. 4
4		Education vs. Congos			position-mountain
5		Government vs. Orbitals	6		1 vs. 2
6			1	9:00	3 vs. 4
1	7:00	Trojans vs. Johnson	5		position north cent.
2		Lions vs. Goals	6		1 vs. 2
		position-spartan			3 vs. 4
		1 vs. 2	1	7:00	TUG-O-WAR
3		3 vs. 4	2		Lemons vs. Trojans
4		position-trojan	1	7:15	Terrors vs. Heifers
		1 vs. 2	1	7:30	Staytees vs. Pipers
5		3 vs. 4	2		Dutchmen vs. 3M's
6		position-athenian	1	7:45	Mousekeleers vs. Civ. Eng.
			2		Stouts vs. Bx
					Munchkins vs. Browns

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather
Take a rest, folks. It's been a tough week for us all.

VOLUME XCIX, ISSUE 23 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS FRIDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1971

Trustee's To Vote On Search Committee

By ANNE STADNICKI

The Board of Trustees is expected to vote today on the composition of a search committee for a permanent Chancellor for the UMass Amherst campus. According to reliable sources, the committee proposed will not be made up in accordance with the motion passed earlier this week by the combined student and faculty senates on this campus.

In a closed session that followed the Board of Trustees meeting in Lenox yesterday, the Executive Committee of the Trustees discussed the Faculty and Student Senate proposal and came up with an alternative.

Membership of the search committee would include six undergraduate students, six faculty members, and two graduate students, all from the Amherst campus; also two trustees, one member of the Dean's Council and one alumnus, if the entire Board approves of the motion at the 9:15 meeting this morning.

The motion passed by the joint Student and Faculty senates earlier this week provided for a sixteen member Joint Ad Hoc Search Committee with six faculty members, two graduate students, six undergraduate students, and two members of the staff. Total membership of the committee was to be drawn from the Amherst campus of UMass.

The Trustees' main objection to the Student and Faculty Senates' resolution was the exclusion of trustee members from the search committee, according to our source. It was reported that the trustees felt the choosing of a new Chancellor was an issue for the total University community, which they said includes trustees and alumni, in addition to Amherst representatives.

Veda Ross, President of the Graduate Student Senate, said in an interview last night that the issue centers on the interpretation of the Chancellor's position. She said that the students and faculty had resolved to form the search committee the way they did because they thought the Chancellor was an official of the Amherst campus.

That the trustees might consider the Chancellor an officer of the University system, and select him in the University, is another interpretation, Mrs. Ross said.

The significance of the student and faculty resolution is three fold, according to Larry Ladd, Student Senate Vice President, who represented that body at the Trustee's meeting. The motion allows for:

—A campus wide search committee, - a membership which is half composed by students, and - the nomination of one candidate at a time to the trustees.

The trustees objected because they could only veto or approve the nominee, according to Larry Ladd. He said that the trustees want a choice so that they can compare qualifications.

If the Executive Committee motion passes, as is the custom at Board meetings, the search committee established will be required to recommend at least five persons for Chancellor. The trustees will select from among them after interviews.

Ladd and Mrs. Ross said that the student-faculty resolution was passed to close the credibility gap between Amherst and the Boston office. If the executive motion is passed by the Board, it will do nothing for the already low morale of the senates, they said, but the ruling would not be rejected by the groups.

Dr. Randolph W. Bromery

Bromery Accepted As Acting Chancellor

By ROBERT C. BROOKES

The UMass Board of Trustees unanimously accepted Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Randolph W. Bromery as the new Acting Chancellor in a meeting held yesterday in Lenox, Mass. Dr. Bromery replaced Chancellor Oswald Tippo, who resigned last Friday.

In other business, the Board voted in favor of granting a liquor permit to the Blue Wall Cafeteria, and approved the transfer of the Student Union Building to the University Building Authority.

The only debate arose from Student Senate President Lee Sandwen who said that before the selection, the board should have first consulted with the Faculty Senate and the Undergraduate and Graduate Student Senates.

Sandwen said that Bromery was one of the four candidates for Acting Chancellor that the joint senates had approved Wednesday, but it would have been more in order if the campus had been consulted in the appointment.

President Robert C. Wood said that in order for the Faculty and Student Senates to participate in the selection of the permanent Chancellor, a detailed proposal would have had to have been approved by the Executive Committee of the Trustees which met on Monday. Wood hopes that Sandwen's suggestion "can be followed," if the case should ever rise again.

In accepting the appointment, Bromery said he would "strongly represent the faculty and students to the President and trustees."

He remarked that although UMass is the best State University in the country, it still suffers from a communication gap. However, he doesn't foresee any communication problem between Wood and himself.

In a press conference afterwards, Bromery said that he hadn't spent any more rewarding years than the last four years with Chancellor Tippo.

He said that UMass must strive for quality and depth in both undergraduates and graduate levels.

Furthermore, Bromery said that he will try to represent student concerns in a broad way and that he needs help from the student body to express their needs. Like Tippo, Bromery plans to "keep his office door open."

Before accepting Bromery, the Board accepted Tippo's resignation effective immediately and approved his request for a one semester sabbaticalleave.

(Continued on Page 3)

BROMERY TAKES OVER-Dr. Randolph W. Bromery was named Acting Chancellor yesterday by the Board of Trustees. Bromery's appointment takes effect immediately, as does Chancellor Tippo's resignation, which the Board accepted. The Board also heard Prof. Burroughs of the Faculty Senate read a resolution concerning a search committee for a new chancellor. The Board will presumably act on this matter at this morning's meeting. (Photos by Gib Fullerton)

UMass Frats - 98.6°

By ED SLOAN

"Our 15 fraternities are 'holding their own'," according to Greek area coordinator Paul Stevens. The Collegian had asked him how healthy the fraternity system is at UMass.

"Last year, fraternities reached their bottom. In the spring of 1970, four fraternity houses closed for various reasons. One closed because it was loosely run and had poor financial management. Another fraternity had a fire in its house and could not gain enough financial support to re-establish itself. A third had its national charter revoked and a fourth closed for what so far are still unknown reasons."

But, Stevens added, "Since then, two houses have come back and we expect by the end of the year to have another fraternity on campus."

The liberal, open-housing policies employed by dormitories could create conflict and havoc for the fraternity, Stevens said. However, fraternities today, according to the coordinator should no longer be considered in the conservative stereotype that people outside the system have of it. "Fraternity living is a communal type of arrangement," Stevens emphasized. "It is a small group of individuals who have willingly come together to live amongst themselves and have created their own government, their own budget, their own program of activities and service projects."

But what of fraternity "exclusiveness"? Although Stevens admitted he did not know the selectivity procedures for each fraternity, he said there are no more "blackballing" techniques practiced. "Those were techniques which grew up during World War II and lasted through the 50s and into the early 60s. Today, fraternity members are willing to accept the guy for what he is and because they like him as an individual. If his background is different from theirs, perhaps they can learn more from him than from someone of similar talent and backgrounds," he said.

Stevens feels in this respect that every member of a fraternity can contribute in his own ways for the benefit of the fraternity at large.

Concerning the possibility of a rise in membership in the fraternity structure, Stevens cited a survey taken of this years Freshman Class. Fifty-eight of those who answered what they felt to be a "collegian" philosophy was corresponded to what "fraternity" philosophy is (as opposed to a vocational or intellectual philosophy).

"I don't say 58% of the freshmen will enter fraternities, but 58% could become involved," Stevens said.

Feature

CCEBS To Graduate 50 In June

By ALAN WRIGHT

In June, 1972, the University of Massachusetts will tentatively be awarding undergraduate degrees to over fifty black men and women which is more than the total number of blacks that have graduated since the University was founded in 1867. Many of these students would never have had a chance to achieve a diploma which has traditionally been the white man's key to success) without the help of "the Committee for the Collegiate Education of Black Students" known as CCEBS.

CCEBS was formed in 1967 by a group of black faculty and staff to increase the number of black students at the University and provide these students with academic and economic assistance. In 1968 the pilot program began with the admission of 125 freshmen. Recruitment has now grown to the point where, with the admission of 150 freshmen this fall, CCEBS has over 500 students.

The committee cooperates with the University but retains an autonomous structure. Allowances have to be made when accepting minority youth potential because many of the candidates come from poor school systems that don't adequately prepare them for college. CCEBS students are primarily drawn from the urban ghettoes of Massachusetts cities. For admission to CCEBS, not so much stress is placed on customary educational measurements such as college boards or superior transcripts, but rather class rank, high school attendance, recommendations, activities, work experience and interviews are considered important in selecting students.

"We want students who will survive," says Dr. Lawrence Johnson, associate dean of the School of Business Administration and director of CCEBS. "Our program offers a second chance for the deprived by giving them the opportunity to go to school and maybe go back to help others in their community." Many talented minority youth do not apply for college because it was too expensive, they thought they wouldn't be admitted, their high school educational experiences were bad, or they had been led to believe that they couldn't succeed in an academic environment or be accepted in a professional career. This is tragic--because achievement of college education helps an individual to break out of a poverty cycle.

The CCEBS program attempts to help students adapt to college life through several student services; financial aid, special skills, tutoring, and academic, career and personal counseling. Dr. Johnson believes that CCEBS is a success. "We've had aches and pains, of course, and with more and more students coming into the program, it has been difficult to give as much money to as many students as we would like to; some CCEBS students have to take out loans, but if they can make it academically, we'll help them financially as much as we can." (It is interesting to note that this includes other minority groups besides Blacks, such as American Indians, Orientals, Spanish speaking people, etc. who are aided by an expanded CCEBS program).

The UMass CCEBS program has been a success as 16 graduates (transfers or accelerated students who school or have obtained good jobs. It is true that many Blacks at UMass haven't been able to graduate in the prescribed four straight years but it is also true that a higher percentage of it's forthcoming first class will graduate in the standard four years than the rest of the university. Most importantly, though, CCEBS students are making it, despite the fact that they are learning amidst the surroundings of a white culture. Hopefully, the Blacks who graduate from UMass will be able to practically apply their experience and knowledge gained to improve themselves and their race.

Oxford Seminar Planned

For the 7th consecutive summer the English Department announces plans for the Oxford Summer Seminar at Trinity College, Oxford. Eleven courses are planned in English and English and art, and one sociology course in urban problems, a departure for the program. Graduates and undergraduates may apply as most courses are tutorial or small enough to be taught in very small sections. Inclusive cost is $875 (over and back, London two nights, tickets to plays, room and board at Trinity for six weeks) but there is free time for travel before and after the six-week study period at Trinity: June 19 to June 30, and August 13 to August 25th.

Peter Pascarelli, former editor of The Collegian, writes about the 1971 session:

"The most important thing is that whatever the program itself has to offer and there is quite a bit, and whatever Europe, England, Oxford have to offer, the fact is that the responsibility for success or failure of the program for an individual rests pretty much with that student. Despite the beautiful trappings, the European backdrop, the cross-section of classmates from all over the U.S., ultimately you must depend upon yourself in the situation to exact from it what you desire...

"The program offers much. First it is a painless round-trip flight to Europe. Most of all it is the opportunity to live and study at Oxford for six weeks. Trinity College where the program resides is simply a beautiful place. The rooms which are all suites are spacious, comfortable, and mostly singles. The Trinity staff, grounds, library, chapel, gardens, etc., are all at your constant disposal. The accommodations will be far superior to any American college dorm or apartment. But you are in Oxford to take a course. It is fairly certain you will find it stimulating and rewarding. The Oxford dons that teach you are extremely interesting, friendly and accessible. Sometimes there seems a bemused attitude from them towards the crazy Americans, but it is drawn from their learning from American students just as you will learn from English teaching methods and attitudes. The course work is fairly heavy with much reading involved, a great deal of which you can and should do before getting to Europe. The course work is like an upper level course at an American institution and will vary from course to course. Most of the courses are supplemented by outside activities, e.g., plays at Stratford for the Shakespeare groups, trips to experimental theatres for the modern drama course, etc. The rest is up to you."

Founder and present director of the Seminar is Ernest Hofer, Associate Head of English, Bartlett 160. Details of courses and applications are now available there to the UMass campus first--then the five colleges, then the outside world. This year applicants will be accepted as soon as their applications are complete, if they are qualified. "But don't be shy about the word 'Oxford,'" Dr. Hofer says. "We're looking for students with approximately a B average in English or in almost any major who think a time abroad would be helpful to them academically and fun for them socially. Our best students have been surprised how much their thinking has been changed by their six-week stint, the ease of getting to know their teachers. Oxford is a friendly place."

Enrollment cannot exceed 110; no applications can be accepted after February 15, 1972.

This chapel is unique among the 32 colleges in the Oxford college system. UMass students will study at this particular college during the summer. (Photo by Dr. Hofer)

Correction

The address for Caldor's as reported in yesterday's Collegian was printed incorrectly. The address should read North King St., Northampton, instead of 516 Winstead Rd. Torrington, Conn

Room To Move
Drop-In Center
5-0400, 5-0401

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN are on the second floor of the Student Union on the University campus, zip code 01002. Phones are 545-2550 (news), 545-0344 (sports), and 549-1311 (editor).

Second class postage paid at Amherst, the DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes five times weekly Monday through Friday during the academic year except during vacation and exam periods, three or four times a week following a vacation or exam period or when a holiday falls within a week. Accepted for mailing under the authority of the act of March 8, 1879 as amended by the act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester, $10.00 per year.

News Analysis

What Ho Wood?

By DAVID WILLIAMS

If the Board of Trustees passes its Executive Committee motion concerning the structure of the Ad Hoc Committee to find a new chancellor, it will be setting a dangerous precedent.

Amherst campus sentiments will predictably be against this motion, which fundamentally alters the physical and philosophical structures of the resolution adopted by the Faculty, Student and Grad Student Senates Wednesday.

This joint resolution, passed unanimously by all three Senates, establishes an Ad Hoc Search Committee consisting of 6 faculty members, 6 undergraduate students, 2 graduate students and 2 members of the staff. It was presented to the Board of Trustees yesterday in Lenox by the Faculty Senate delegate, Prof. Joseph Burroughs.

The Board decided to go into executive session at the close of the regular meeting, consider the resolution, and act on it during another open Board meeting this morning at 9:30.

After having considered the resolution, the Executive Committee will recommend to the Board today that the measure be adopted, but with the following changes: 2 members of the Board of Trustees, one alumnus and one member of the Dean's Council will join the 16 positions provided for by the joint resolution from the Amherst Senates.

These minor additions will clearly have a significant impact on even the most basic aims of any Search Committee. But something perhaps more fundamental is at stake.

The mutated Search Committee organized by the Board of Trustees will necessarily have to be sensitive to the opinions of those added few members who don't view the Amherst campus as home. This runs straight against those who feel the Amherst campus is, and should be, an entity unto itself; perhaps not self-sustaining, but at least self-perpetuating. But the administrator's utopia Robert Wood has been leading up to apparently has no room for this sort of self-autonomy on such an important, campus-wide level. Wood has envisioned the University of Massachusetts as a three-campus system, with all campuses being given equal priority on certain, well defined levels. Physical plant expansion is an example of one of these priorities. Boston and Worcester obviously lag behind Amherst in this regard. It is impossible for anyone at all deeply committed to the Amherst campus to regard Boston and Worcester as any kind of "threat" to the Amherst campus' rather smug reputation as a sprawling, urban campus. But educators will educate wherever they are gathered, and this is what Wood is placing his money on. It would relatively easy to build Columbia Point and Worcester to within an inch of their lives and sit back feeling satisfied. And we must face it, on the surface it is easy to equate excellence in one area with an imagined excellence in another. No doubt many of Amherst's admirers come and go and look at the pretty buildings, never bothering to assess the quality of what goes on inside those buildings.

To give the devil his due, Robert Wood is concerned with what goes on inside the Amherst campus' pretty buildings. Unfortunately, in his desire to construct, literally, a three-campus University, he has shown in his recent actions his profound disability to understand on a mere one-campus level.

The Amherst campus earned its reputation for academic excellence long before Robert Wood came on the scene. Wood the Administrator admits that the way to get control of the three-campus University, is to centralize the budgets, take all the money to Boston. Then he can slowly bring the three campuses together into a single University.

But to do this he must have the money. And to educate and experiment, the individual campuses must have some control. Somewhere along the line something's gotta give. Either Wood will have his three-campus system, led by a strange breed of academic eunuch, or the campuses will have some kind of self-autonomy.

Robert Wood said yesterday that he does not want his chancellors to be 'yes men'. He has, so far, had the backing of the Board of Trustees as he attempts to put his dream University together. It is obvious for the moment that they will continue to support him. The Trustees would now sneak two of their number onto a committee which is looking for a leader for its campus.

What better way to insure a warm and friendly reception every time you come to Amherst?

CEQ To Host River Workshop

The Coalition for Environmental Quality (CEQ—the student eco group) will host an Ecology Action Workshop with the theme "Defending the Ecology of the Connecticut River Basin" on Saturday October 9 from 9-3:30 in Memorial Hall on campus.

Co-sponsors for this event are: the Connecticut River Ecology Action Corp. of Amherst & Hadley, E.A.R.T.H. of Longmeadow, the New England Chapter of the Sierra Club, the Millers River Watershed Council, Inc. of Athol, the Massachusetts unit of the Friends of the Earth, Connecticut Action Now, Inc. of New Haven Connecticut, and the Springfield Ecology Council of the Springfield High Schools.

Dr. Ward S. Motts
Geologist
U. of Mass., Amherst

Registration (free) will be from 9 am on. At 9:30 a.m. William Endicott will give a "Report from Congressmen Bowland's Office". He is Boland's Administrative Assistant. At 9:35, Dr. Lincoln Brower of Amherst College will give an "Orientation to the Connecticut River Basin". Dr. Ward Motts of the UMass Geology Dept. will present "Geologic and Hydrologic Criteria for Land Use Policy in the Connecticut River Basin", at 10:45. At 11:05 Robert McIntosh, who is the Chief of Flood Plain Management Services of the Army Corp. of Engineers will speak on "Flood Plain Management and Zoning in the Basin."

12 to 12:45 will be lunch, and people are asked to bring a basket lunch so that maximum interaction can take place while they eat their lunch there. There will be free coffee.

At 12:45, Prof. Harry Siebert of Hartford University will talk on "Environmental Impact of Highway Construction." Following him, John F. Hurley and Robert J. Gagnon of the Massachusetts Department of Public Works will jointly present "Procedure for Environmental Review of Proposed Highway Projects". At 1:45 Dr. Jane Van Zandt Brower of Mount Holyoke College will elaborate "Criteria for Position Papers, Environmental Impact Studies and Statements". From 2:55 to 3:30 there will be a general round-up of further Basin problems. Everyone is invited to any or all of the program.

John F. Hurley
Asst. to Chief Engr.,
Mass. Dept. of Pub. Works

Bromery Named Chancellor

(Continued from Page 1)

The Board expressed its deep appreciation to Tippo and said that he earned the "respect and affection of Faculty and Students." After his sabbatical, Dr. Tippo will remain as a professor of botany.

In further action, the Board approved of the move to extend the facilities on the Top of the Campus to the locality of the Blue Room in the Campus Center.

The Board said that alcoholic beverages would be served to those students over 21 and that those students under 21 will be separated by a barrior where liquor will not be sold.

In reference to the newly approved alcoholic facility, which is similar to a Rathskeller, one trustee said it would afford greater communication between faculty and student.

The Board approved the transfer by the purchase of the Student Union Building from the University Building Association to the University Building Authority in other business. The deal will be closed on October 14th.

The Board also approved the working for the Infirmary Addition at an anticipated construction bid of $1,254,000.

Treasurer Johnson reported the gift of 14 acres of land containing a house at Fraternity-Sorority Park. An additional 8 acres are retained for future expansion of the University housing program.

Register To Vote
October 14
Campus Center Concourse

NOW...YOUR CHOICE OF 5!
Showcase
Rt. 5 - W. Spfld.
Cinema 1-2-3-4-5
733-5131
MORE NEW SHOWS!
MORE NEW LOUNGER SEATS!
MORE NEW PARKING!
MATINEES DAILY... POPULAR PRICES
Adults $1.50 Mon thru Fri Matts
1 Summer of '42 (R)
2 Let's Scare Jessica to Death (GP)
3 The Devils (X)
4 Walkabout (GP)
5 Fortune and Men's Eyes (R)
ACRES FREE PARKING
ROCKER LOUNGERS
CHARGE YOUR TICKETS

BUY YOUR PEWTER
in all shapes & sizes
from BAKER-WINN
JEWELERS
"everyone's favorite jeweler"
31 S. Pleasant St. - Amherst

WE ALL LIVE IN A "YELLOW SUBMARINE"
JOIN US!
SAT., OCT. 16 IN MAHAR
HOMECOMING WEEKEND...

We're a
FLY-BY-NIGHT OPERATION
Especially when it comes to delivering jeans. For fast delivery of LANDLUBBER JEANS in Amherst, call us at 253-9706 anytime from 9:30 - 5:30 daily. We will deliver your pants that night. Try us!
WEARHOUSE (wear else?) Open Fri. till 9

COMMUTERS NEED ATTENTION, TOO
Get it in the
COMMUTER ASSEMBLY
Nomination Sheets for Openings available - outside RSO, 1st level, C.C.
Due - by 5 p.m., Fri., Oct. 8

In The Nation And The World

Nixon To Set Up Wage, Price Boards

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon announced machinery Thursday night for administering wage-price restraints that he hopes will hold the annual rate of inflation to 2 to 3 per cent by the end of next year.

Nixon fixed no specific wage or price standards. He turned over that politically sensitive issue to two newly created quasi-independent bodies whose major decisions will be subject to governmental veto.

In an address prepared for a nationwide radio and television audience, the President unveiled plans for an economic stabilization program to go into effect Nov. 14 after expiration of the current wage-price freeze.

He did not specifically mention the administration's overall objective of reaching an annual inflation rate of 2 to 3 per cent by the end of 1972.

However, the White House made available a "background paper" that cited such an objective, as measured by monthly living cost statistics, and said continued reduction of the rate would be the goal thereafter.

"This interim goal for the end of 1972," said the document, "would be an inflation rate about half of the rate that prevailed in 1971 before the freeze."

Key features of Nixon's post-freeze program include:

—Appointment of a 15-member Pay Board, giving equal representation to management, labor and the public that will set wage guidelines and, if it so decides, prohibit, reduce or defer pay hikes it deems inconsistent with its standards.

—Establishment of a Price Commission of seven public members to administer price and rent restraints it will formulate.

—A presidential request for standby authority which Nixon said he does not plan to use to regulate dividends and interest rates.

—A request that Congress extend the Economic Stabilization Act of 1970 the legal basis for the entire Nixon program for one year beyond its scheduled expiration next April 30.

As of now, the stabilization which were excluded from the measures will remain in force indefinitely.

THE PRESIDENT

The White House refused to provide even an approximate guideline for permissible wage settlements; an official said the Pay Board will have to provide "standards or guidelines" before Phase 2 begins on Nov. 14.

However, some economists estimate that wage increases of up to 5 to 6 percent a year would meet the President's goal of holding inflation down to 2 or 3 per cent a year.

The only exception to price curbs will be raw agricultural products, current freeze.

The existing Cost of Living Council will have authority to veto or revise standards recommended by the board and the Price Commission.

It will have no power to intervene, however, in individual to take full effect when Phase 2 begins.

cases such as review of a specific wage or price boost that will come before the commission or the board.

Violators of the stabilization program would be liable to a maximum fine of $5,000 for each infraction, the same as under the present freeze. In addition, the government could seek federal court injunctions against specific wage or price hikes which could bring additional penalties if not obeyed.

The president's speech left unsettled the crucial question whether previously contracted wage increases will be permitted

These were pay boosts previously negotiated in some cases, the second-year or third-year stepups of major bargaining settlements which were to have taken effect after Aug. 15 but were blocked by the freeze.

A White House official said the decision will be up to the tripartite Pay Board to deal with such cases.

However, it was made clear that the rules will not permit retroactive payment of postponed pay boosts.

Wage and price standards will be applied most rigorously to businesses and labor unions which, although not yet specified, were described as being of critical importance for the control of inflation.

In these instances, the new board or commission must be notified in advance of proposed wage or price increases and will be given full power to approve, reject or defer them. There will be no appeal from these decisions.

Some other economic units, again not specified, will be required to file prompt reports on prices, costs, profits and wages. The board or commission will review these and may order action if it feels they do not meet the standards.

For the great bulk of businesses, however, enforcement will depend on less frequent reporting, spot checks and the investigation of complaints.

To administer the program, 360 local service and compliance centers will be established in offices of the Internal Revenue Service. The staffing of the centers will require an estimated 3,000 people, most of them borrowed from ITS but some from other agencies.

Nixon also announced he was appointing a Committee on Interest and Dividends to be headed by Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. This group will administer a continuation of a present voluntary program of restraint in interest rates and corporate dividends.

Also, Nixon is setting up a Committee on the Health Services Industry which will advise the Cost of Living Council on application of price standards in the medical and hospital fields.

Nixon was firm in opposition to regulation of profits except for what he termed "windfall" profits.

He said: "When wages and other costs are held down, even though prices are also held down, circumstances could arise in some cases that might generate exorbitant profits.

Earth's Little Brother

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP)—A pint-sized "quasimoon" only a mile in diameter is linked to the earth and the moon in a kind of "triplet system," Nobel Prize-winning physicist Hannes Alfven said Thursday.

It travels to within 9.3 million miles of earth in eight-year cycles, Alfven said. Its next close visit is expected in August 1972.

"It is part of the matter of this region. It belongs to the earth-moon system because it is gravitationally coupled."

The new little brother of earth was actually discovered in 1964 by Dr. Samuel Herrick, professor of astronomy at the University of California at Los Angeles, and was named Toro. But, Alfven said its tie in with the earth-moon system has just been determined after computer studies by two of his colleagues: W. H. Ip, like Alfven a professor at UC San Diego, and Dr. Nils Colbort of the University of Stockholm.

Alfven discovered the so-called Alfven Waves, the electromagnetic waves which travel through ionized gas. He was awarded the Nobel Prize in physics jointly with a Frenchman last fall. He lives several months here and several months in Stockholm.

In Alfven's view, the planets of earth's solar system were formed from swirling dust clouds and debris left over when the sun was created from a cloud of gas. Toro may be a planet which didn't quite make it, he said in an interview-an asteroid that was simply left over from the process that created the earth and the moon, or whose orbit has degraded since it was captured by earth.

The studies by Ip and Colbort show that Toro circles the sun five times every six years, said Alfven. This orbit brings it into the gravitational field of earth, which circles the sun eight times in eight years.

If Toto comes too close to earth on one pass, Alfven said, earth's gravity so alters the tiny planet's orbit that it forces it farther away on the next pass.

"It's as if the earth is playing tennis with itself and using Toro as the tennis ball," Alfven said.

There is almost no chance of a collision for at least 180 years and possibly as long as 1,000 years, the scientist said, adding: "In our lifetime and our children's, we are safe."

BLACK MAGIC
at
The Pub
SATURDAY NITE
9:30 - 12:30 only 50¢

AUTO INSURANCE
ALL CARS — ALL DRIVERS
BUDGET PAYMENTS
CYCLES — SCOOTERS
Tekoa Insurance Agency
160 Pleasant St. Northampton 586-2742
10 Broad St. Westfield 562-3604

MAKE IT A POINT
TO CHECKOUT
THE SHOE-BIN
in the alley
(off Main St.)
Open Fri. til 9

INDEX
Whether you liked the '71 Index or not, you are invited to attend the Recruitment Meeting
for the '72 Index.
Yearbooks will never be the same, and your ideas are needed.
Tuesday, October 12 7:30
904-908 CAMPUS CENTER

Senate Kills Raise For Fed. Employees

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate backed by a 51-32 vote Thursday President Nixon's six-month postponement of a federal pay raise as part of his anti-inflation efforts.

The vote was the first in the Senate on any phase of Nixon's new economic policy. The President won another major victory in Congress Wednesday when the House approved tax cuts he urged to spur the economy.

The twin triumphs were scored just ahead of Nixon's radio-television broadcast announcing the wage-price restraints he will put into effect after the expiration of the 90-day freeze he ordered in August.

In the Senate fight over the pay raise issue, pleas to support the President's anti-inflation moves won out over arguments that federal employes were being treated unfairly.

But by a 60-27 vote Wednesday, the Senate went on record as favoring pay raises for government employes comparable to those permitted in private industry under the second phase of Nixon's economic program.

Under legislation Congress passed last year, federal employes were due to get a raise of about 6 per cent on Jan. 1. The President ordered this delayed for six months.

Either the Senate or the House could have overturned his order by adopting a resolution of disapproval before midnight Thursday. The House rejected such a resolution last Monday by a 207-174 vote and the Senate followed suit Thursday.

One argument raised against the resolution was that the Senate's action in voting to permit government pay raises up to the average permitted in the private sector under Phase 2 of Nixon's program would not stand up.

The Senate voted for this as an amendment to the military procurement bill.

More Troops To N. Ireland

LONDON (AP) — The British government agreed Thursday night to beef up its battle to crush terrorism in Northern Ireland and announced that three more battalions of troops will be dispatched to Belfast immediately.

The decision was in answer to an appeal by Northern Ireland's prime minister, Brian Faulkner, in a marathon 6-1/2 hour meeting with Prime Minister Edward Heath and his key ministers.

Faulkner, beaming to newsmen on leaving No. 10 Downing Street after the exhausting talks, appeared delighted with the results.

"This is one of the most satisfactory meetings with the British government that I have ever had and I have had quite a few.

"We made great progress."

But a joint statement issued after the meeting made no mention of Faulkner's request to Heath to sanction the formation of civilian unarmed vigilante groups throughout Northern Ireland to help in the fight against the outlawed Irish Republican Army-IRA.

The statement said the additional troops-numbering about 1,500 men-will permit the British army commander in Ulster, Gen. Sir Harry Tuzo, to tighten his control of the 260-mile, largely unmarked border with the Republic of Ireland to the south.

The Belfast and London governments claim that IRA terrorists are receiving sanctuary in the south and that most of their weapons came from there.

The three extra battalions will bring the number of British troops on duty in Northern Ireland to nearly 14,000.

Heath and Faulkner said in their joint statement that the extra troops "will be at the practical disposal" of Tuzo "to be used as he thinks fit, but their arrival will enable him, among other things, to strengthen control of the border and to follow up more rapidly the action against terrorists."

The two prime ministers also agreed on greater efforts to step up recruiting for the Ulster defense regiment, the locally recruited national guard,and named a British government minister to supervise this.

The tough new British action was sparked by the growing wave of terrorism, bomb throwing and slaying of civilians and British troops.

Terrorism has cost the lives of 116 persons, including 26 troops, since August 1969.

Bomb explosions in September numbered 152 in the province against only 101 in August. There were 10 in Belfast Wednesday night alone and three up to nightfall Thursday.

One went off near an army post in central Belfast, another in the suburbs and a third during a machine gun attack on a police post in Roden St., Belfast.

B52's Back At Work Throughout S.E. Asia

SAIGON (AP) — About 30 U.S. B52 bombers flew in from their Thailand bases Thursday in three-plane formations and pounded enemy positions in South Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos.

Four the the Stratofortress raids, the U.S. Command said, were concentrated along the South Vietnam-Cambodian border in a region where North Vietnamese troops were believed still pulling back after 10 days of frontier fighting.

In all, 900 tons of bombs were dropped on targets in Cambodia, South Vietnam and Laos.

On the ground, combat action was limited to patrol skirmishes and shelling attacks.

U.S. artillery pumped shells into North Vietnamese positions in the southern half of the demilitarized zone but no fighting was reported along South Vietnam's northern tier, now being lashed by storms.

The northern provinces were buffeted by winds and rain from the outer edge of Typhoon Elaine, last reported 300 miles east of Da Nang and packing winds in her center of 115 miles an hour.

U.S. 7th Fleet ships off the Vietnamese coast were busy evading the full force of Elaine, now heading northward toward the coast of Red China.

The aircraft carrier Midway, which moved out of the Gulf of Tonkin on Wednesday, still was able to launch its usual bomber strikes against the Ho Chi Minh trail in Laos, a Navy spokesman reported.

In its weekly casualty summary, the U.S. Command reported a drop in American combat deaths last week but a rise in the number of wounded.

The command said 21 U.S. troops were killed and 117 were wounded in the seven days up to Saturday midnight, compared with 29 killed and 47 wounded the previous week. The command reported 16 Americans died of noncombat causes such as illness and accidents last week, an increase of 10 over the week before.

South Vietnamese headquarters said 305 government troops were killed last week.

The Defense Department released these reconnaissance photos in Washington today saying they show before- and-after the bombing of a North Vietnamese automatic weapons position atop a hill in Laos. The position, circled in top photo, defended a key road on the Ho Chi Minh trail and was struck, leaving a crater, by a 3,000-pound bomb from an Air Force F4 Phantom. The Pentagon did not say when the action took place.

Crack Down On Travel Money

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has blown the whistle on government scientists who collect travel expenses for research luxury vacation sites.

HEW Secretary Elliot L. Richardson said the "real or apparent financial windfalls" must end. He ordered an investigation to determine whether the traveling researchers should repay some of the expenses collected.

At stake for Dr. Edward F. MacNichol Jr., director of the National Institute of Neurological Diseases and Stroke, is $4,000 in travel expenses for the past three summers.

The Associated Press disclosed last week that MacNichol conducts research and runs his $116.6-million agency for two months each year from a summer home on Cape Cod, while drawing $25 a day in government travel expenses.

Hoover Upset Over NET Show

NEW YORK (AP) — FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover has referred to the Justice Department the matter of a withdrawn television segment in which three men claimed the FBI encouraged them to involve radicals in bombing incidents.

Hoover said in a letter to National Educational Television-NET-which produced the 10-minute segment, that, "On the basis of information available to the Bureau, each of the charges is totally and absolutely false in each and every particular."

Hartford Gunn, Jr., president of Public Broadcasting Service-PBS-which distributes programs to 211 television stations across the country, withdrew the segment as part of "The Great American Dream Machine" on Wednesday night.

"More documentation was needed," Gunn said in Washington. "Further, we felt the issue was oversimplified."

Learn to Drive
AMHERST AUTO SCHOOL
34 Main Street
256-6066

BUY DIRECT AND SAVE!!
Why run all over town looking for pants, corduroys, or blue jeans when we have the areas largest and most complete selections - all at the lowest prices around. And we're just up the street...
the closest thing to you is
WEARHOUSE (wear-else?) Open Fri. till 9

Gala Cocktail Party
Following the UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS vs. BOSTON UNIVERSITY football game.
- Saturday, Oct. 9, 1971 -
- Immediately after the game
- Boston City Club -
(969 Commonwealth Ave.)
$1.00 donation to cover the entertainment costs.
Beer 50¢ Mixed Drinx 90¢
See You All After the Game.
Greater Boston Alumni Club

ASHFIELD FALL FESTIVAL
OCT. 9 - 11
Town Hall, Ashfield, Rt. 116
Folk Concert
Craft Auction
Sun., 1 p.m. - on

Come Visit Us
FOWLER Jewelers OF AMHERST
WATCHES - JEWELRY
EXPERT REPAIRS
U.M. MUGS
drop by 65 N. Pleasant St.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF — Richard C. Hanson
MANAGING EDITOR — David D. Williams
BUSINESS MANAGER — James Gold
EXECUTIVE EDITOR — Barry J. Rubenstein
NEWS EDITOR — Anne C. Stadnicki
SPORTS EDITOR — Earle T. Barroll

PHOTO EDITOR — Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR — Robert Nesti

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR — Nathan Gorenstein
NEWS STAFF — Bob Nesti, Stephen Fine
SPORTS — Earle Barroll
DARKROOM — Barbara Brecher, Steve Schmidt
EDITORIAL — Ann Gurnett
AD LAYOUT — Bill Manburg

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administration read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.
Unsigned editorials represent the views of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, and letters represent the personal views of the writers.

An Act of Faith

Rarely does the campus community unite itself on any one issue. It seems inevitable that whenever one group favors a proposal, another opposes it. It is for this reason that the proposal for the formation of a search committee to find a new chancellor is so unusual.

The proposal itself, which was negotiated between the faculty, grad and undergraduate Senates and passed almost unanimously in joint session of these groups, formulates a committee to include sixteen members of the campus community, exactly half of which would be students. Also, it established a procedure whereby the committee, named the Joint Ad Hoc Search Committee, instead of providing the Board of Trustees with a list of acceptable candidates, would nominate one candidate at a time for the Board's action.

This proposal was introduced to the Executive Committee of the Board at yesterday's meeting to a greeting which ran the gamut from skepticism to outright antagonsim. According to one observer, Trustee Pumphrett commented that it was "the most ridiculous proposal ever to come before the Board of Trustees."

The Board's main objection centers around the procedural aspects of nomination of candidates included in the proposal. In effect, the Search Committee proposal reduces the Board's power to that of the veto and many Trustees, as may be expected, resent this role.

However, let us look more closely at what is being done here. First of all, it has been Board policy, according to the so-called Morris Report, to select "major administrative officers" in this way. However, it appears that the Board does not consider the chancellor a "major administrative officer". We question this interpretation.

More importantly, though, is what the proposal actually accomplishes. In effect, the Board is allowed to choose the candidate in an order dictated by the committee instead of making the choice from a list of possible alternatives. Under the new proposal, it is the people most concerned with the decision, the campus community , which determines who is the best candidate, although the Board retains the final say. We feel this is entirely justified. After all, shouldn't a person who will govern an area be chosen by the people whom he will govern?

The exact make-up of the committee may be open to some debate, and it would not seem totally unreasonable to include alumni and Board members to the Committee, in a rational proportion. The key issue, though, is that the campus community be allowed to have the dominant position in selecting Tippo's successor so that the credibility of the University system, as far as Amherst is concerned, is not totally destroyed.

Whether the Trustees truly have the integrity to grant the legitimacy of the Search proposal in view of their own 'apparent' loss of power will in a long way go towards determining the success of the next chancellor.

There Will Be

No MDC

On Monday

Art Buchwald

Goodbye, Senators

WASHINGTON--The Washington Senators baseball team, after playing in the Capital for 71 years, has left for Texas. The elation in Dallas and Fort Worth over this turn of events can only be ascribed to the fact that no one in that part of the country has ever seen the Senators play.

The reason for the exodus was poor attendance, which Mr. Robert Short, the owner of the team, said was costing him a fortune. What worries people here is that the Senators may be the first of many institutions that might decide to pull out.

Perhaps in the next few years we will be reading the following press releases:

WASHINGTON, D.C.—House Speaker Carl Albert announced today that he was moving Congress to Fort Wayne, Ind., at the end of the season. "The Washington fans just don't seem to want to support Congress," Albert said at a press conference. "At our last night session we had only five people in the gallery and our cafeteria has been running a deficit for two years. Fort Wayne is very excited about having a major branch of the U.S. government in its town, and we're looking forward to playing there for many years to come."

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The British Embassy has just made it official. It is moving from Washington, D.C., to Palm Beach, Fla. A spokesman for the embassy said the decision was made reluctantly by the ambassador but the turnouts at the Queen's birthday party reception had been so poor that he had no choice. "It's obvious to us that Washington doesn't want a British Embassy, despite all the talk," the spokesman said. "We've had offers from all over the country to move our team and we've decided on Palm Beach because they've guaranteed a full turnout for every one of our receptions."

LAS VEGAS, Nev.—Mayor Byron Lovemaster has just confirmed that Las Vegas has finalized a deal to bring the U.S. Supreme Court to Las Vegas. The mayor told Hank Greenspun of the Las Vegas Sun that he considers the Supreme Court one of the best tourist attractions in the country, as it will bring in lawyers and defendants from all over the land.

"We sent a delegation to Washington, and we think we made the best presentation. Miami and San Juan, P.R., both made bids for the court, but we won out when we promised to build an all-weather Supreme Court building with Astroturf in each of the justices' chambers. We can get 50,000 people in the new court building at one time."

(Chief Justice Burger confirmed Mayor Lovemaster's announcement. "We're going to miss Washington," he said on the Today Show. "But while most people here said they were behind the Supreme Court, they wouldn't come out for our decision. Las Vegas sounds like a great Supreme Court town.")

WASHINGTON, D.C.—A blue-ribbon delegation consisting of lawyer Edward Bennett Williams, Mayor Walter Washington and City Council Chairman Gilbert Hahn paid a visit to President Nixon this morning in a last-minute effort to persuade him not to move the White House to Lincoln, Neb. Mr. Nixon said he had no choice. The people in Washington did not appreciate a President in their town, and he blamed criticism by the news media for the lack of support for the present Administration. Mr. Nixon said:

"It's always a tragedy when a city loses a White House, but there are other things that have to be taken into consideration. Nebraska has the No. 1 football team in the country, and I believe a President of the United States should always be in the town with the No. 1 team."

News Analysis

Nixon and The Economy

By ELLIOT EISENBERG

One day they are going to look back to the first (and who knows but only) term of President Richard Nixon, and they are going to mark a turning point in the history of the American and the world economy. The events which are now taking shape, the programs which the President last night and last month described are going to rank in significance with the first days of the New Deal, the establishment of the Marshall plan and the Kennedy experiments with Keynesian economics.

If it is true about President Kennedy, as Seymour Harris writes in the Economics of the Kennedy Years, that John Kennedy was able to grow intellectually in his comprehension of economics, it has to be even more true of Richard Nixon. While Kennedy's conversion to Keynesian economics was in the end only timid - how important was the proposal to increase demand and employment by cutting taxes in comparison to the freezing of wages and prices and the cutting loose of the dollar's ties to gold? — it seems that Nixon had even further to go toward accepting the recommendations of his economists. Starting his career as the darling of the Republican Right, taking his apprenticeship under Eisenhower who kept his hands off the economy, Nixon showed himself to be the new man he so wanted us to believe he is during the last campaign.

He seems to have mastered the politician's art of culling the best from each school of economists. From the conservatives, led by Milton Friedman of Chicago, he has adopted the policy of letting the dollar float against gold and other currencies. This is essentially devaluing the dollar and it is ordinarily very difficult to bring off politically and without offending our allies. From the liberals he has taken into his program what every laissez faire, right-wing man most fears: controls on the level of wages and prices. He has done so while appealing again and again to the patriotism of Americans, and while the Left seems to have given him up for lost, most of the country seems to have united behind him.

His program is so important because of the changed state of the world economy. As Treasury Secretary Connolly has said again and again the world is not as it was when the existing financial order was established in 1946. It's structure has changed. The nations that now are relative manufacturing powers were in different shape in the shambles of the war. Neither is the world any longer so dependent on the U.S. dollar for its store of liquidity. The current system has allowed some currencies to become overpriced while other (i.e., the yen) became underpriced, causing trade balances to be artificially affected. Changing the value of the dollar and forcing change (revaluation) in some of the undervalued currencies is what the President was referring to when he declared that "we are for free trade, but it must be fair trade." The financial order which was established to cope with post-World War II conditions is disappearing and what they are now negotiating will very possibly define the terms of world trade for decades to come.

In the same way, the United States is not the same country it was when it was ycunger. Its structure has changed. The President's freeze on wages and prices and his establishment of review boards reflect the fact that market forces no longer work as well as they once did when the economy was smaller and less complicated.

Finally Nixon seems to have unlearned his training under Eisenhower: no longer the silent by-stander he has now grasped the initiative. In a time which may very possibly, as he said last night, leave its mark on the next century, at last we have a leader in the White House.

'IT'S BEAUTIFUL — AND HOW DO WE USE IT WITHOUT ALSO BLOWING OURSELVES OFF THE MAP..?'

'I KNOW, I KNOW . . . YOU LOVE ME!'

Editorial Points

UMass is a real gas! If you don't believe it, take a close look at the pipe that feeds the "fire" which gives the Colonial Lounge that "homey" feeling.

***

It hardly seems possible, but students are more apathetic this year. Even the stereos in Southwest aren't as loud as they used to be.

***

The American revolution's start was the responsibility of a drunkard. Impossible, you say? Well, Paul Revere got blind drunk on Medford Rum before he started his midnight ride. The British didn't stop him because they thought no self respecting freedom fighter would appear in public in an inebriated state. I'd say it was high time to start a William Dawes fan club.

***

Did you notice that the toaster in the Concrete Coffee Pot is a dining commons cast off? Next thing you know they'll be using stamped stainless steel cutlery at the Top of the Campus.

***

If you happen to be a Trustee of the University of Massachusetts and you are reading the Friday edition of this newspaper before your 9:30 A.M. meeting...just pass it off as one more example of man's ingenuity and drive (it's a long way from Ware to Lenox.)

***

If civil war were to break out in the UMass system, Amherst would have the advantage...We could hold the system's Treasurer and Secretary hostage. (The old "an army marches on its stomach" ethic would probably be disproved by dining commons at Amherst and President Wood could starve us out.)

***

Letters To The Editor

Another Public Service (?)

On September 10th I most innocently wandered into the "Alpha Phi Omega & Gamma Sigma Sigma" used book exchange located in the Berkshire Room of the Student Union. I had a stack of books from last semester under my arm as I intended on exchanging them for some badly needed coin. I went in under the misunderstanding that I would immediately receive payment for my books, but soon discovered that I was to establish a selling price and put them on sale in their care. After a certain length of time I was to come in with my receipts and collect the money taken in on whatever books were sold. The girl (Pam, as she indicated on the upper corner of my receipts) working there said I should come in in three weeks. I scribbled my initials and other information on some 7 receipts amounting to over seventeen dollars, said thanks and left.

During the next two weeks there were many moments when I felt like collecting my money, but decided it best to wait the three weeks for it was most likely easier for them to honor all your receipts at once and possibly not all my books had been sold yet.

It was Sunday, September 26th, and being in rough financial shape I thought of money. It then popped into my mind that the third week began tomorrow and most of my books had probably been sold by that convenient service club, "Alpha Phi Omega & Gamma Sigma Sigma", advertised in our Daily Collegian. I searched frantically for the receipts and found them on a nearby shelf. Relieved, I gave them a glance and proceeded to flip out. I noticed on the lower portion of each receipt:

"Book or Money Returned Only Upon Presentation of this Receipt.
I Accept the Price Indicated and I Relinquish My Right to Book If I do not Appear by 9/24/71."
No Exceptions Will Be Made to Above Rules
No Service Charge For Unsold Books

Firstly I cursed Pam whoever she is, then I cursed myself for being stupid and blindly listening to her and finally I hopefully decided that it only concerned my right to books and not to money. That was foolish. After all, it is a Service Club, and that is my seventeen dollars, it isn't as though it is unaccounted for. They were most likely closed on the weekends and therefore I am only one day late.

Needless to say I went down Monday and found it deserted. With usual hassle I ran around the Campus Center and left a message explaining my situation in the Clubs' mail box. I contacted the chairman by phone and she told me there were many people in my position and that a meeting would be held Thursday with the other chairman to decide if we would be given our money or not. Friday came and she was nowhere to be found. I left a note for I was gone for the weekend and reached her Monday. The answer was no. I was told that my money was in their account already and that I was being held to my contract.

The Service Club is indeed doing their students a service. Yes, I did sign a receipt. Yes, I was foolish in not reading it for all it was worth-I know better now. But Damn, that seventeen dollars of mine is sitting in their account until they find some use for it. They have not obligated themselves into turning the money over for a need within sight. It is my money for no one can account for it but me. I thank you "Alpha Phi Omega & Gamma Sigma Sigma" for your understanding and your proper business management. We need more Student Service Clubs like yours at UMass to uphold an American Tradition.

Rube

The American Way

To the Editor:

The lecture/test system is undoubtedly a largely sterile form of education; indeed it is not education at all. It would more properly be described as vocational training or indoctrination, the antithesis of education. (Lectures were once accurately described as a process whereby information is transferred from the notebook of the instructor to the notebook of the student without passing through the head of either.) But it is rather surprising to see it described in the recent Collegian article on S.E.S. as a problem or efforts to solve the problem as "controversial".

The "problem" of the lecture/test system was solved almost 50 years ago at the University of Chicago, St. John's College, and somewhat later, I believe at Reed and Antioch Colleges (with appropriate bows to certain Athenians of two millenia earlier). At Chicago, for example, Chancellor Robert Hutchins and Philosopher Mortimer Adler established a system of dialogues between students and instructors in small informal groups. (Large lectures were held, curriculum and bibliography were prepared; the use of either was optional, as was attendance at the discussion or dialogue sections.) The effort was aimed at examining the fundamental issues of each subject matter and ultimately, the relationship between the various subject matter. It was, and remains, the classical approach to a liberal education. The compiling of bodies of data was incidental; what was primary was a grasp of the broad implications of the scope of human knowledge.

Whether such a philosophy of education would have any relevance today at UMass is questionable. A casual brush with this huge "educational factory" does not leave one with the impression that it is essentially concerned with education at all. Rather it seems geared, as are all American multiversities, to grinding out suitable components to advance the objectives of our corporate society and the "American Way of Life (?)".

Dr. Bischoff is probably correct in being skeptical that S.E.S.'s "instant intelligence" or packaged lecture notes are the answer. Indeed, the Cheah approach merely seems to re-inforce and further the objective of the lecture/indoctrination system. By making it more efficient, George Cheah seems to ensure perpetuation. No where does there appear any evidence that the underlying implications of the system have been examined.

What can be done? That of course is up to the students and the faculty. Discussions of copyright laws misses the point entirely. Is the university really the private preserve of a relative handful of academic stockholders, zealously guarding their perogatives, or is it a center of learning (broadly defined) and a community of scholars (again, broadly considered, so as to include students on all levels)?

If the student's objective is merely to get a union card to gain access to the "good life" circa 1975 --- American Express, Pan Am and the comdominium--then by all means buy S.E.S. or any other tool that will further that objective. If, however, the student's purposes go deeper and broader, then he had better start rapping with his mates and figure out just what the heli is really going on.

George Balloy

Good God

To the Editor:

I met a man on the platform with Father Quigley who declared that God is beyond space, and time, and substance, and "is unknowable"--- and that "the Devine force is incomprehensible to man". This same man declared that his basic religious beliefs are "unnegotiable". I suddenly got a revelation. This man must be God himself!

I met a man who spoke logically of unity in diversity and diversity in unity --- a beautiful thought wherein one can conceive of each individual, though different from every other individual, having some attributes useful to himself and especially to society. But almost in the same breath he declared that all men, and women, are equal --- an obvious biological falsehood.

I met a man who believes in the unity of man but believes that each individual is free to contribute or not to contribute to the progress of man as he pleases - -- a concept contrary to all management principles (as Dr. Wood and Dr. Tippo would agree). Maybe that is why the School of Ed. is in the condition it is in.

On second thought I don't really think I met God. I think I met a very confused man.

Dr. John F. Hanson

Sitting Alone At Night

I sit alone watching a small candle ebbing shadows. Every object comes alive
under the furtive licks watching me
and my stomach's protests become animal groans;
each sound strained together into a constant hum which slowly builds and becomes my mind. Trying to shake it loose I speak a few soft words but they fall empty cushioned on the wooden floor. Over and over I remind myself:
nothing is the matter but I never listen.

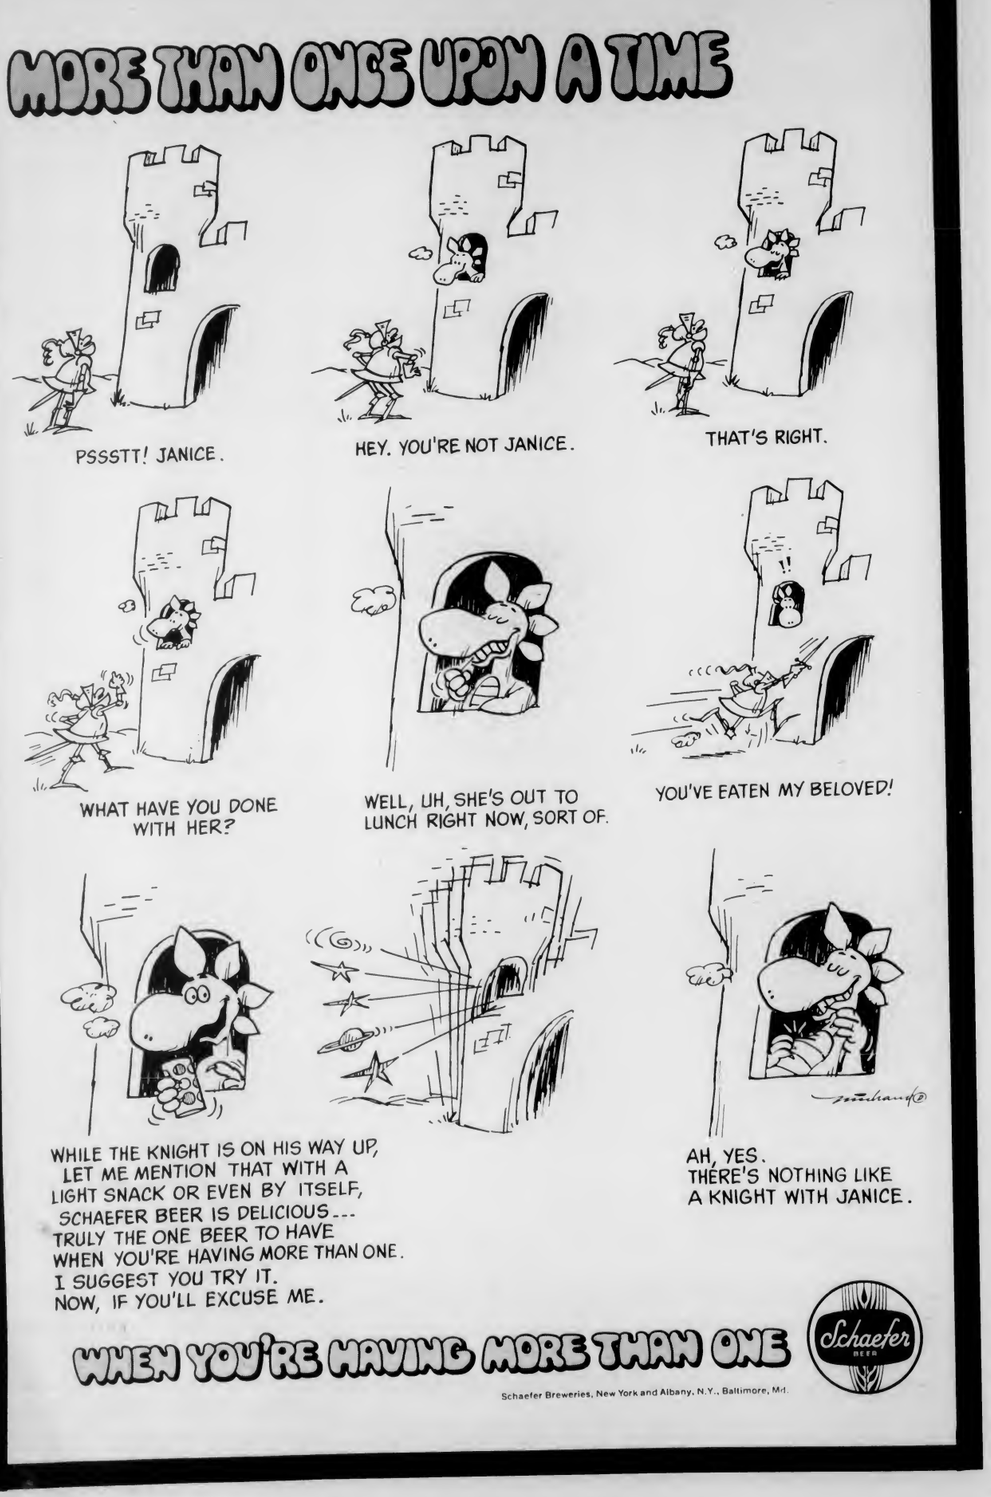
Lee E. Bishoff

Smoke In Your Eyes



To the Editor:

The Coalition for Environmental Quality wishes to clarify some misleading impressions created by the article about the "Amherst Fields" in the September 30th Collegian. The drainage and tax problems discussed in the article are in a Paparazzo development, Heritage Village, in Southbury, Connecticut, rather than in Amherst as the Collegian's editing of CEQ's statement suggests. Also, CEQ did not "lead" the fight against the Fields. Instead, we followed the lead of the Amherst Growth Study Committee and other concerned citizens in calling for study and careful assessment of Amherst's needs.

Elisa K. Campbell

"We Wouldn't Want Him To Feel Any Sudden Shock"

Muskie Gathers Support

WASHINGTON (AP) Sen. Edmund S. Muskie got a major boost in his undeclared campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination Thursday as Missouri's governor and two senators joined in endorsing him as the man most likely to defeat President Nixon.

Sens. Stuart Symington and Thomas F. Eagleton, and Gov. Warren E. Hearnes said they are "confident that Sen. Muskie will unite the Democratic party, and are certain in our own minds that he can and will defeat President Nixon."

Missouri Democrats will cast 73 votes at the Democratic National Convention, and while the state's three top officeholders did not claim they can deliver that support they said Muskie "is the choice of an overwhelming majority of the people of out state."

All three said they will do whatever Muskie asks to help him win the nomination.

"Whenever I'm for a candidate, I'll do anything within reason that he asks me to do," said Hearnes, who would like the vice presidential spot on a Muskie ticket.

"I believe enough in Sen. Muskie that if he's elected president, I would be happy to serve him in any capacity," Hearnes said.

Symington and Eagleton were the first senators to publicly declare their support for an entry in the crowded 1972 Democratic field.

"We got together and said 'It looks like we're all for Muskie. Why not let the world know?'" said Eagleton.

"The early endorsements mean a lot more to you politically than an endorsement the night before the convention," said Hearnes.

Eagleton said the three Missouri leaders hope their endorsement will lead to more, from other party figures, in the weeks and months ahead.

"Somebody has to be first; somebody has to break the ice," Eagleton said. "We said to ourselves 'Why not be first, and why not have some others come along with us?'"

Muskie returned from a campaign engagement in New York and planned to confer with his three newly announced supporters.

What will they talk about?

"Well, we do expect to be thanked," said Symington.

Symington, who 11 years ago had presidential aspirations of his own, said he hopes the endorsement, and others, will help narrow the field of candidates in 1972.

He said too many candidates could divide the party.

Hearnes said he believes a majority of the 29 Democratic governors now favor Muskie, and Symington said the Maine senator has substantial, if unannounced, support in the Senate.

In their joint endorsement statement, the three men said they believe Muski is the best qualified of the possible 1972 candidates "in terms of demonstrated competence, experience, breadth of support, and ability to restore public confidence.

"Today we believe he alone can command the support of all groups within the Democratic Party," they said. "And we must be unified to win."

Wholesale Prices Down President Takes Credit

WASHINGTON (AP)-Wholesale prices dropped last month for the first time in nearly a year and White House economists called it good news that could be credited to President Nixon's economic policy.

"I think we can be quite reassured" that Nixon's policy is working, said Chairman Paul McCracken of the President's Council of Economic Advisers of the three-tenths of one per cent price decline.

"The report on September wholesale price : was good news for all of us," said Arnold Weber, staff director of Nixon's Cost of Living Council that administers the wage-price freeze.

The report covered the first full month of the freeze that went into effect Aug. 16 and expires Nov. 13.

It was issued a few hours before Nixon was due to go on radio and television and outline the second phase of his anti-inflation program.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics said the drop in average wholesale prices of food, industrial raw materials and manfactured goods was figured at four-tenths of one per cent on a seasonally adjusted basis, largest decline on that basis in five years.

The decline brought the Wholesale Price Index down to 114.5, meaning it cost wholesalers $114.50 on the average last month for wholesale goods worth $100 in the base period four years ago. The index was 3.2 per cent above a year ago.

The price drop was due largely to a 1.4 per cent drop in food prices, including raw farm products that are not covered by the freeze, and in part to imported goods which are subject to Nixon's temporary 10 per cent tax surcharge, the bureau said.

Industrial prices, which most economists view as a more significant indicator of permanent price movements than the frequently fluctuating food prices, dropped one-tenth of one per cent for the first decline in more than three years.

Most of the industrial price decline was due to a one per cent drop for motor vehicles as manufacturers granted larger rebates to dealers to clean out stacks of 1971 cars and trucks, officials said.

Judy Carroll, a hostess at the Philadelphia Zoo, hasn't had an uninterrupted night's sleep in more than two months. Reason is that she has to get up once every hour to feed Sidney, now five months old, a tiny kangaroo forced out of his mother's pouch and left to die back in July. Evicted nearly three months too soon, Sidney was given little chance to survive. Judy took the kangaroo home, fitted out a laundry basket with an electric heating pad. She feeds Sidney every hour with a doll-sized nursing bottle. Sidney now is coming along well.

Excellent
Financial Assistance for Student Nurses
a Representative of the U.S. Army will be at the ROTC Bldg. from 4 Oct. - 8 Oct. 71
No obligation - come and see us.

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

Must sell immed. 69 Fairlane 500 conv. blue/black/top, V-8 auto PS-1, new ww tires, 32000 mi. First reasonable offer. Call 586-3665. tf10-8

1969 Nova 6 cyl., new exhaust, and cooling system, 2 studded snow tires, $1300 or best offer. Days 545-2119, nights 586-3618, ask for Jim. tf10-8

1968 Austin Healey Sprite, convertible $600 or best offer. Needs some body work. Come to Butterfield House and ask for Ned. tf10-8

VW Bug 1967, tan, exc. cond., R & H cheap. Call Jan 545-0152 or 256-6868. tf10-11

Antique VW Bus, 1971 engine. Engine still on warranty, new clutch, new muffler, heater wide oval tires. Must sell, best offer, call Greg 5-8786. tf10-8

Excellent buy VW squareback '65 very good condition, radio reasonable mileage, $950. 665-3191 after six. tf10-8

1971 Buick Opel wagon red AM-FM, 18000 mi., excellent condition, asking 2295 will talk. Call 862-8086 after 6 p.m. tf10-8

67 Mustang, 8 cyl., auto, P/S new front tires snow tires, ex.-cond. $1050/B.O. 71 Pinto 4 sp on rd, 4 mos. $1600/the ovr Pymts 253-5223. tf10-8

1969 Nova 6 cyl., new exhaust, & cooling system, 2 studded snowtires, $1,300 or best offer. Days 545-2119, nights 586-3616 ask for Jim. tf10-13

70 MGB exc. running cond. Must sell. 219-8193. tf10-29

1968 Falcon wagon, 6 cyl, auto. trans., excellent cond., $1300, 58 Squire Village, after 4 p.m. tf10-13

62 Dodge Lancer, runs well, 2 good snow tires, $95. Call 545-2418 evenings. tf 10-8

Ten year old Peugeot, std. Michelin rd ply tires, rebuilt eng., good cond., $250 or best offer. Call Keith 253-2215 after 9:00 p.m. tf 10-14

For sale: 69 Ford Custom 4 dr sedan, 6 cyl. $995.; Harmony Folk Guitar $50.; Royal manual typewriter $25. Call Chris 293-7389 eves. 10-13

1961 VW bus, new brks, ex. mech. gd. running cond, priced low - some body rot. Call Ron 549-0450. tf 10-12

65 Austin, 850 wagon, 68 MG 1100 c.c. engine, good condition, $350 or best offer. Also 20 Rambler, 4 door, 6 cyl., auto., $95 or best offer. 967-3827. tf10-11

1966 VW Camper, Blaupunkt radio, new brakes, has heat rad. Best offer over $800. 545-2903. tf10-11

Ford 61 wag., needs some repairs, best offer, 665-2896. tf10-13

1961 Corvair, good rebuilt spyder turbo charged motor, no transmission, will sell parts or in entirety. Best offer. Call 549-0036. tf10-13

MOTORCYCLES FOR SALE

Must sell Honda CB 250, Reading West, 1969 excellent shape, 13000 mi. $450. Call Steve 549-6689. tf10-8

1971 Penton 125cc, the fastest woods bike - 21 hp $550. Also 1971 Hodaka 100 cc Trail Bike $300. Call Jerry 253-3740 tf 10-8

1971 Harley Davidson Sprint 350, excellent condition, 1200 miles, must sell. Call Bill between 1-6 p.m. 584-7319. tf10-12

FOR SALE

New tire 6.50 x 13, $10. Canoe $140. 586-1076. tf10-8

Seasoned Firewood. Sale and delivery. Call 665-3031. tf10-20

Records & tapes discount prices. Most new albums in stock. Come to 242 Gorman or call 546-6470 ask for John. tf10-8

Brown suede pants, skirts, skins, top quality, wholesale. Pants $27, skirts $9.40, skins $5. Stop by to look Jon-424 Cladborne 5-2640 leave number if not in. tf10-14

AM/FM/FM Stereo Radio-Cassette Player/ Recorder $170. Call Paul at 256-8967 after 6. tf10-13

2 Criterion speakers, 2 mos. old, were $100, will sac. for $60. Call Bruce 546-9801. tf10-12

TO GIVE AWAY-Watches, Jewelry, radios, unusual gift and novelty items-at 50% off and more-call S.N. Brown, 665-1145. tf10-11

Ten year old Peugot, rebuilt engine. Best offer, call Keith 253-2215 before 10 a.m. or after 10 p.m. tf10-12

Brand new 8 track stereo tapes - $3- latest hits incl. Superstar, Stewart. Send for free list, 43 Longview St., Spfld., Mass. 01108. tf10-12

Hofner bass guitar with case, exc. cond., $175 or best offer. Contact Bob 549-1190. tf10-8

Waterbeds-now all sizes $19.95! Factory warranty. Also, frames, liners & pads in stock. Call Mark at 546-5450. tf10-12

Bumper sticker - your words printed on 3 x 12" red or green sticker for $1, copies .25. The Snide Co., Route 1, Box 93 Blaine, Wash. 98230. tf10-18

Fur coat full length, ex. cond. Best offer. Also new ski parka. Call 6-6120 between 5:30 and 7:00. tf10-8

Kenwood 1100 AM-FM tuner BSR 510X turntable Scott 415 2 way loudspeakers system retailed at 470 will sell 360. Call nites 546-7111. tf10-12

1970 Dunebuggy. Met-flake blue glass body on GK chassis 100%, complete including heater, 33000 miles. Call Pete 546, Gorman 546-6548. tf10-8

TO GIVE AWAY - watches, jewelry, radios, unusual gift, and novelty items - at 50%, off and more. Call S. N. Brown, 665-1145. tf10-13

Snow tires 165-14 semperit radial mounted on MCB disc wheels $50. Call 549-6087. tf10-8

We undersell all. Any and all top name appliances, stereos, radios, refrigerators, anything. Call Larry 6-5090 or come to 25a Conce. tf10-13

Large raccoon coat, excellent condition, $50. Call 549-3908. tf 10-8

SCM Typewriter, Asfo 35 mm camera, Norelco cassette tape recorder, Accordion 120 Bass. Call 549-6824. tf 10-8

1961 VW engine; rebuilt, new fuel pump and generator, $90.; 1962 VW engine; needs rings, valves $25. Call 665-3400 eve. tf10-12

HELP WANTED

Need Monday? Earn $25 or more per week? Work your own hours at your convenience! Call Barry or Dave, 4:00-5:30, 546-6063. tf10-8

Ambitious people wanted to sell jewelry on campus-no experience necessary-high commissions -send name, address and tel. no. to Richards, 1161 Main St., Springfield, Mass. tf10-8

Earn $100 or more part time, excellent opportunity for an ecology minded person. 413-323-4427. tf10-13

Need money? Earn $25 or more a week! Work your own hours at your convenience. Call Barry or Dave 4 p.m. - 5:30 p.m. 546-6063. tf10-13

RIDE RIDE WANTED

Ride needed for 2 guys to N.Y.C. or N.J., Oct. 8. Call 8-1156 or 6-1151. Will pay all expenses. 10-8

Ride wanted every morning to Springfield. Will pay. Call 592-4871 collect. tf10-12

WANTED WANTED

Needed: any old comic books. They will be used to teach English to South American kids. Please call David 549-6113 thanx! 10-8

PERSON PERSONAL

DC is DS (Definitely Stud). 10-8

Happy Birthday my beautiful Libran lover. Your Aquarius. 10-8

Free young female cat long hair, clean. Call 1-323-7505. tf10-11

Melville Basement invites James Basement and 4th floor to a party Friday night at 8. tf10-31

Want to meet w/m bisexuals or gays for friendship or whatever, really need to find someone to relate with. Write Box 310, S.Amherst. tf 10-8

LOST LOST

Book. Incl. all notes, accidently stolen in NW Corner Copper Kettle. Please return where taken Weds. 10-8

Lost call 5-2162. Gold Wittnauer watch in area of Orchard. Sentimental value reward. tf10-8

RIDE WANTED

Ride needed to and/or from Gardner, 3 days a week. Hours are flexible please, if you commute call 632-0317. tf10-8

Ride needed daily from Easthampton to U Mass. Will share expenses. Please call 527-4089. tf10-8

SERVICES

Amherst Audio services. Stereo components, tape decks for home or car. 197 No. Pleasant St. 256-8133. tf5-12

TY TYPING

Typing -theses, dissertations, etc. Fast, accurate; have Greek alphabet, math & chem. symbols. Call 253-3001. tf10-10

TI TO TRADE

To trade: 1959 Klunker automobile for a bicycle in good condition. Call 586-3300. tf10-13

ENTERTAINMENT

WE ALL LIVE IN A "YELLOW SUBMARINE." JOIN US SAT. EVENING, OCT. 16, 8, 10, and 12: MAHAR AUD. IT'S THE BEATLES AND IT'S IN COLORS (SEE YOU THERE!) 10-8

ENTERTAINMENT WANTED

Every Wednesday night at the English Pub-Do your own thing! Share vocal master PA system available! Call Jerry, 549-1200 or Mark, 256-8370. tf10-8

Notices

AD HOC COMMITTEE ON MENTAL HEALTH:
One (1) undergraduate is still needed for this Faculty Student committee reviewing policies and improvement of campus mental ...lth services. Contact John Hogan, se..ate office (5-0341).

AHEA:
Members. Now that you've joined, be involved in planning and publicity. Hope to see you Wed., Oct. 13, 7 p.m. in Skinner Lounge.

ASTRONOMY CLUB:
Tonight: Open house at UMass observatory from sunset to 1 a.m. An excellent opportunity to take a study break and find out about the astronomy club. If cloudy it will be held Saturday evening.

BELCHERTOWN VOLUNTEERS:
The bus for the Belchertown State School will be leaving Whitmore on Saturday at 12:45 p.m. Volunteers are urgently needed to escort residents to a fair in Belchertown Center. All are welcome.

CHINESE STUDENT ASSOCIATION:
Picnic. Mt. Tom Reservoir, Sunday 1 to 5 p.m. Free snacks. For rides, please contact John Hsing 549-1716, Whittak Huang 549-6285. If rain, meet at CC 804-808.

CHRISTIANS:
Bus leaving for Florence Cong. Church at 8:35 across from the Newman Center; 8:37 at bus waiting station on N. Pleasant opp. Morrill; 8:40 at corner of N. Pleasant and Eastman Lane; and 8:45 at Emerson.

COMMUTER ASSEMBLY:
Nomination sheets are still available outside the RSO offices on the 1st level of CC. Must be in by 5 p.m. today.

CEQ:
Ecology action workshop with them: "Defending the Ecology of the Connecticut River Basin" will be held all day Saturday. Everyone welcome 9 a.m.-3:30 p.m. at Memorial Hall.

ENVIRONMENTAL LIVING-LEARNING:
One (1) undergraduate is still needed for this Faculty-Student committee concerning the influence and improvement of the University environment. Contact John Hogan, Senate Office (5-0341).

FREE U.
Open Theatre Workshop: Sundays, 2 p.m. in Rm. 174 CC or thereabouts.

HILLEL:
Services for Simchat Torah Monday night at 7 p.m. in Hillel Center, Rm. 420 SU.
Friday evening services tonight at 7:30 in Hillel office.

HUMAN SUBJECTS:
One (1) undergraduate is still needed for this Faculty-Student committee concerning the individual students' development within the campus community. Contact John Hogan, Senate Office (5-0341.).

INTERNATIONAL FOLK DANCING:
Folk dancing tonight, 8 p.m. to midnight at Davis Center, Smith College. Beginners, spectators and everyone else welcomed.

MARRIED STUDENTS' HOUSING:
One (1) undergraduate is still needed for this Faculty-Student committee concerning all aspects of married students' housing. Contact John Hogan, Senate office (5-0341).

ORCHARD HILL:
Mirkwood is seeking talent for its coffee house on Oct. 16. If you're interested in playing, call Jim 6-6577 or Joey, 6-6681.

ROOM TO MOVE:
Fat and Cricket Hill, Boogie, Student Union Ballroom, Sunday 8-12 p.m., dig it.

SEARCH COMMITTEE FOR DIRECTOR OF SECURITY:
Three (3) undergraduates are still needed for this Faculty-Student committee formed for hiring a new head of campus security. Contact John Hogan, Senate office (5-0341).

LOST:
3 keys on the path between the SU-Hasbrouk, early Monday morning. Call 6-9889.
Ceramic tools wrapped in red cloth on Wed. Please call Tom at 549-0628 if you find them, or my career is finished.
Brown suede pocketbook containing important papers and pair of glasses. Please leave in lost & found dept. of CC or call Marian 6-8337.
A pair of black rim glasses. Possibly lost Sunday around Hampden Dining Commons. If found please contact Don 6-9202.

ENGAGEMENTS:
Susan Linneman, '72, 1304 JQA to Harvey Beeman, '72, 424 Hills No.
Terry S. Karas, '73, Coolidge to David J. Levin, '72, Univ. of Vermont.
Diane Janvier, '73, 302 Coolidge to George Gage, '71.

Changes Needed In Medical Ed.

NEW YORK (AP)—A new study calls for drastic changes in medical education to produce an army of physicians, with emphasis on "healer-teacher" doctors helping people to stay well.

A crisis in medical education must be overcome because "the American people have determined that health care is a right, not a privilege," says the author, Dr. John Schoff Millis. And, further, the federal government has promised health care "to growing numbers of our citizens," he writes in the report to the National Fund for Medical Education.

Citing a need for at least 50,000 more physicians than are in practice now, Millis adds "what we need in physicians today, in addition to mastery of the science of healing, is the art of becoming emotionally involved with patients" through qualities of compassion and understanding.

He urges training of more black, Indian and Spanish-speaking physicians, a reduction in the years-but not the quality-of training for doctors, and establishment of a Commission on Medical Education, a nongovernmental body, coordinating all medical education.

Millis is president of the National Fund for Medical Education, which commissioned his study entitled, "A Rational Public Policy for Medical Education and Its Financing," and is chancellor emeritus of Case Western Reserve University.

Recommendations for change are always controversial, but "without change, medical education is certain to face crisis after crisis in the years ahead," says Dr. Theodore G. Klumpp, board chairman of the national fund, in a foreward to the Millis book.

"We have not educated and trained physicians, nurses, dentists and all other health professionals in sufficient numbers, quality or diversity to deliver the services we have guaranteed to our people," Millis writes.

"In fact, at the very time we have created more demand for health services, we have allowed our schools of medicine and dentistry to slip to the verge of financial bankruptcy."

Bimbi Serebrakian, '73, Kappa Kappa Gamma to Joe McConnell, '72, Theta Chi.
Denise Dorgan, '72, Alpha Chi '72, Puffton Village.
Leslie Rand, '72, Puffton Village to Alvin Huberman, '72 Puffton Village.

PINNINGS:
Emilie Sikora, '73, 302A Crampton to Thomas F. Harrington III, USA , Illinois.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

Scorpio strives to ensure benefits. Scorpio protects assets, keeps secrets, can be envious of progress of others. Yet, natives of this sign do want fair competition. Scorpio is confident that if the game is not rigged, it can be won. Sagittarians stimulate the money prospects of Scorpio. In turn, Scorpio is good for Libra when it comes to finances. Scorpio harmonizes with Cancer, Pisces, Virgo and Capricorn. Some famous persons born under Scorpio include Mike Nichols, Jim Bishop and Indira Gandhi.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Ideas need more development. Relatives may not now agree with your basic concepts. Key is to be original without stepping on too many toes. Leo individual is apt to figure prominently. Delay journey.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Aim high; work with material at hand. What appears opposition may merely be healthy challenge. What appears far away may be closer than you think. Reorganize priorities. Find out what you really need.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Added responsibility due. Co-operation gained from mate, business associate. Be flexible. Sense of humor is ally. Don't take too seriously words from one who is gloomy. Look beyond the immediate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Check for loopholes. The more thorough you are, the better the result. Give attention to one temporarily handicapped. Put up with minor inconvenience for greater good. You will understand.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be ready for change, possible travel, a variety of experiences. Some friends may resort to heavy handed methods. Don't be discouraged by one who sings blues. Be optimistic. There is good reason.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't engage in senseless dispute with one in position of authority. Soft sell approach now is constructive. Taurus and Libra individuals figure prominently. You can gain if diplomatic.

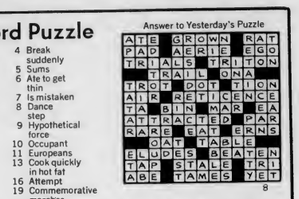
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): See in light of reality. Overcome tendency toward self-deception. Relative surprises with generous gesture. However, there may be hidden motive. Be perceptive. Don't sell yourself short. Be factual.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't play games with your security. Get commitments, promises in writing. Leave nothing to chance. Well-meaning associates, good wishes will not suffice. Get the facts. Keynote accomplishment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be willing to change your mind. Stress creative thinking. Take long-range view. Don't be in too much of a hurry. Finish what you start. What appears opposition turns in your favor.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may be reluctant to try something new. Key is to move ahead. Look to future instead of brooding about past. Accent is on health, certain restrictions. Keep diet, health resolutions.

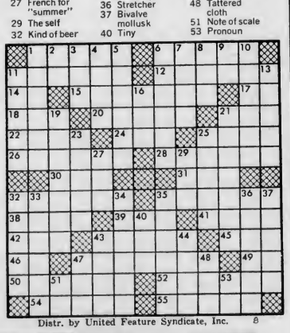
AQUARIUS (Jan 20-Feb. 18): You face reality in connection with children, affairs of heart. You are concerned with what others think, feel, how they react. Key, however, is to be sure you personally are on right track.



PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Build on solid base. Opportunity is available. But you first must straighten out some details. Don't be afraid to use alternative method. Sagittarius individual can aid. Be receptive.

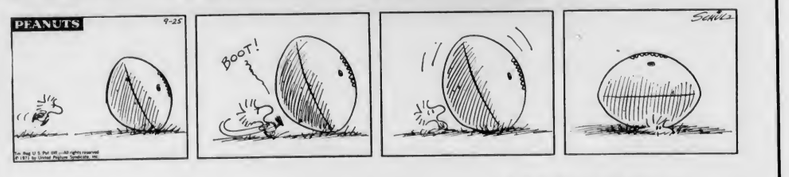
IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you will gain deserved recognition. You know what to do and, in upcoming months, you will be at right place at right time. New contacts will be beneficial. If single, marriage is in picture.

Copyright 1971, Gen. Fea. Corp.



Crossword Puzzle

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle



ACROSS
1 Smallest number
6 Railroad station
11 Kind of mask
12 Turkish decrees
14 Alternating current (abbr.)
15 Shreds
17 A continent (abbr.)
18 Short sleep
20 Separates
21 Greek letter
22 Greenland settlement
24 Caustic substance
25 Dispatched
26 Set
28 Strike out
30 In music, high
31 Ship channel
32 Dippers
35 Hostelries
38 Imitates
39 Female sheep
41 Ireland
42 Aeriform fluid
43 Caprice
45 Music: as written
46 Teutonic deity
47 Welcomer
49 Note of scale
50 Fixed amount
52 Glossy paint
54 Scorch
55 Pirate flag

DOWN
1 Situate
2 Printer's measure
3 River island
4 Break suddenly
5 Sums
6 Ale to get thin
7 Is mistaken
8 Dance step
9 Hypothetical force
10 Occupant
11 Europeans
13 Cook quickly in hot fat
16 Attempt
19 Commemorative marches
21 Seesaws
23 Mounds
25 Writing tablet
27 French for "summer"
29 The self
32 Kind of beer
33 Three-banded armadillos
34 Calm
35 Device for warming
36 Stretcher
37 Bivalve mollusk
40 Tiny
43 Toad
44 Gambling game
47 Alcoholic beverage
48 Tattered cloth
51 Note of scale
53 Pronoun

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

TOP LP's LOWEST PRICES 50% OFF

Stop overpaying for the records you buy. Guaranteed factory-fresh records by original artists on original labels at unbelievably low prices. We are not a record club. There is no obligation of any kind. Fast shipment of all orders.

CUT HERE

Superstar Records, Inc. Dept. 208
210 E. 23 St., New York, N.Y. 10010
Please check boxes for selections.

		Our Price	List
☐ 1	Who/Who's Next	2.99	5.98
☐ 2	Carole King/Tapestry	2.99	5.98
☐ 3	Moody Blues/Every Good Boy	2.99	5.98
☐ 4	Paul & Linda McCartney/Ram	2.99	5.98
☐ 5	Rod Stewart/Every Picture Tells a Story	2.99	5.98
☐ 6	Black Sabbath/Master of Reality	2.99	5.98
☐ 7	John Lennon/Imagine	2.99	5.98
☐ 8	Jefferson Airplane/Bark	2.99	5.98
☐ 9	Jesus Christ Superstar (2 LPs)	5.99	11.98
☐ 10	James Gang/Live In Concert	2.99	5.98
☐ 11	Beach Boys/Surf's Up	3.49	6.98
☐ 12	Poco/From the Inside	2.99	5.98
☐ 13	Grateful Dead (2 LP's)	4.99	9.98
☐ 14	10 Years After/Space In Time	2.99	5.98
☐ 15	The Band/Cahoots	2.99	5.98

Add 50¢ post., hdlg., insur., for 1st LP and 25¢ for each additional LP. NY residents add sales tax. Enclosed is $ ... cash, check, M.O. (no COD)

Name .....
Address .....
City ..... State ..... Zip

Gladchuk Winner Disproves Fraternity Domination

By MARK VOGLER

Take it from Eric Krohn, 1971's Chet Gladchuk Award winner. You don't have to be from a frat house to rank among the cream of the crop in intramurals.

Although most IM participants here at the university are in the opinion that many of the good athletes flock to the fraternities where sports activity is supposedly supreme, Krohn claims the Residence Hall and Independent divisions are still stocked with plenty enough talent to identify themselves as worthy competition.

A guiding force of the Kennedy Panthers toward their ultimate goal--a Dorm Division crown, he was the talk of JFK, being dubbed outstanding Residence Hall athletic chairman in the process. But Krohn also figured as the top nominee for the Chester S. "Chet" Gladchuk Memorial Award thus completing the mythical triple crown of UMass Intramurals. And so he established living proof that there's no great gap of competition in the circles of intramurals.

The second presentation of the award, which originated last year with Phi Sigma Delta's Tony Lauria notching the honors, is emblematic of the university's annual outstanding intramural athlete. The criterion used for the election process involves the measures of character, leadership ability, team success, and participation interest as well as consistent skill.

Chet Gladchuk, who has been honored for his invaluable work within the intramural program, first made his mark in the sports world with the Boston College football club that attracted much attention in its prime years of "39" and "40". In the latter campaign he received All-American acclaim as the Eagles soared to an unbeaten 11-0 season, including a Sugar Bowl victory over Tennessee.

After an illustrious collegiate career Gladchuk advanced into the pro ranks for the New York Giants where he earned All-Pro recognition as an offensive center in the mid "40s". Upon his retirement from the National Football League, the "Gentile Giant" came to UMass and served as an assistant grid mentor for 12 years.

In 1964 he was appointed intramural director. It was in this area that he was most noted for his many contributions to UMass, and also credited with tremendous expansion of the program. Assistant intramural director Peter Graham labels Gladchuk "a prime instigator in developing what we consider an outstanding intramural program here at the university".

Graham, also an alumnus of UMass ('64), spoke very highly of the former B.C. great, stating. "Coach Gladchuk probably was one of the finest coaches and gentlemen that I had the privilege as a student and athlete to have been associated with."

Gladchuk assumed the role of Assistant Athletic Director shortly before his death in 1968.

Unlike Lauria, Krohn definitely lacks the outstanding athletic background that one might expect of him. In his younger years at Millis High he captained both basketball and baseball while also competing in track and golf. But he himself said: "I was never a big-to-do star. I was just an average performer."

At UMass his love for sports dwindled as he failed to make the breakthrough in varsity sports over the course of his freshman year. But as a sophomore he reacquired his enthusiasm for competition after being selected athletic chairman for the Kennedy Panthers. He participated in seven sports and assisted his dorm mates in securing a campus championship in softball and a residence hall hoop title.

The last year Krohn rewrote the intramural record for participation, competing in 15 of the 18 possible sports. The honors stacked high during the 1970-71 season. The Panthers were Dorm titlists in Badmitton, softball, volleyball, and handball accompanied by a campus first in bowling.

Eric stepped down from his post of athletic chairman this year, but not without setting a milestone for his returning buddies. The Kennedy Panthers have gone Independent this year and have adopted "Mousekateers" as their nickname. Their big ambition, is of course, to win big in another division. Krohn contrived the whole idea.

His reasons for slightly playing down intramurals this year revolve around his attitude brought on by age and possibly the fact that he has already hit the top of the deck. But one of the prime reasons why he's not as active now is connected with his intentions to attend grad school. Krohn currently boasts a 2.8 cum and hopes to graduate with a 3.0. He's 21 and is majoring in recreation.

When asked what receiving the Gladchuk Award meant to Krohn, the upper classman replied: "I think that winning this award for me was like giving it to everybody in the dorm, for I actually wouldn't be that good without them."

And as far as the Dorm title? "It's been a goal ever since I've been here. It was like a tradition to be the top residence hall on campus. We happened to be coming around when the IM program started hitting its peak, and I just happened to be athletic chairman when we finally put it together."

"I'd like to thank all the participants of the Panthers and the ones that graduated earlier because they're the ones who actually established the winning tradition of this dorm."

Krohn didn't hesitate to give the IM program a plug: "It's one of the best in the East. It covers a lot of different sports which give many a chance to participate. It's deversive, it's got everything you need; the competitive aspect and leisure time."

With maturity, Krohn has gradually shifted his philosophy of sport: "When I was younger I thought winning was the important thing. But as I got older I began to appreciate just playing. Too many people get emotionally involved in the sports they play, putting too big an emphasis on success. And I think this sort of detracts from what is gained from athletic competition."

Frosh Gridders Open At Home Sunday Against BC Frosh

By BILL BALLOU

Nothing succeeds like success and coach Bill Maxwell's freshman football squad enjoyed plenty of it last week against Boston University. This Sunday at Alumni Stadium Maxwell hopes to use the same balanced attack that did the job on BU against Boston College's freshman Eagles.

Coming off an impressive triumph over the Terriers, the Redmen are in good physical shape with none of the crew that handled BU so well suffering injury.

The Eagles enter this game as an unknown quantity in competition, this being their first game of the season. However, Boston College has one mf the leading football programs in the East and you can be assured that they're going to be a tough customer.

The Redmen, fresh from the big win over BU in their opener, must guard against the mental letdown that so often hits a football team after a good performance. BC, on the other hand, is sure to be up for this one and ready to go from the opening kick-off. With football a game that puts so much emphasis on mental as well as physical preparedness, neither team can afford any kind of mental letdown.

One area the freshman squad must be sure it has operating at full efficiency is its defense against the run. For Boston College's ground game features the leading back in the last year's Massachusetts high school system, Mike Esposito. Esposito scored more points than anyone else in the state and if the Redmen hope to have any success in stopping the overall BC attack, then they are going to have to stop Esposito.

UMass got effective work last week from both its defensive line and its linebacking corps, who just kept hitting all game long and finally left the Terrier offense bruised, battered, and beaten. Ed McAleney chased the BU quarterback practically into Cambridge on several occasions and the entire linebacking corps left a few BU runners dazed more than once. The way to stop a good ground game is to out hit the offense and the Redmen did it last week. If they can do it again then they will be a long way toward making they're record 2-0.

The freshmen looked real good in winning against BU last week on the road. They're at home this week and the competition is going to be tough and talented. The game promises to be a dilly. It's this Sunday afternoon at 1:30 down at Alumni Stadium.

Angels Release Phillips And Four Coaches

ANAHEIM (AP)—Manager Lefty Phillips and his four coaches were dismissed Thursday by the California Angels.

Gene Autry, board chairman of the American League team, and Bob Reynolds, president, issued a statement saying the contracts of the five would not be renewed.

Phillips was offered a job in the Angels' player personnel and scouting department but did not say whether he will accept the offer.

There was no hint from management when a new manager would be named.

The coaches are Rocky Bridges, Carl Koenig, Pete Reiser and Norm Sherry.

The announcement had been forecast for weeks after a year of turmoil highlighted by the celebrated Alex Johnson case.

Phillips, a former Los Angeles Dodger scout and coach, succeeded Bill Rigney May 27, 1969. In his nearly three years with California, his teams won 221 games and lost 225. The Angels finished third in the American League West in 1969 and 1970 and fourth this past season.

"We believe Lefty is an excellent baseball man but there came the time when changes had to be made," said a joint statement from Autry and Reynolds. "We felt the position of the club in the standings indicates such a change is in order."

Johnson, traded Tuesday to the Cleveland Indians, was suspended without pay after a series of disputes with both Phillips and General Manager Dick Walsh. An arbitration board ordered his pay restored.

The 52-year-old Phillips played minor league ball but his pitching career ended after an arm injury. He served for 15 years under the Dodger manager, Walter Alston, as scout and coach.

Weaver Names McNally In World Series Opener

BALTIMORE (AP)-Manager Earl Weaver of the Baltimore Orioles named left-handed Dave McNally Thursday to start the first game of the World Series against the Pittsburgh Pirates on Saturday.

Weaver said he would follow with Jim Palmer and Mike Cuellar as he set up a left-right-left rotation of 20-game winners which would allow for flexibility to adjust during the remainder of the best-of-7 series.

"If the left-handers are successful," Weaver said. "I can use them in five of seven games if necessary. If not, I can use right-handers in four games."

Right-hander Pat Dobson, another 20-game winner, will be in the bullpen for the first two games and could start game No. 4-depending on how McNally fares in the opener.

"Pat is my ace of trumps," Weaver said. "If we get an early lead and the starter shows he can't hold it, we could bring in Dobson and it would be just like he started the game."

"With four 20-game winners, I can save a lot of ways," Weaver said. "I probably won't decide until the third game what we'll do with Dobson the rest of the way. He's the most adaptable, that's why I can use him in relief."

Weaver said he decided to use left-handers in two of the first three games against the Pirates after conferring with scouts Jim Russo and Walter Youse.

"Pittsburgh has a balanced attack from either side of the plate," Weaver said, "but there seemed to be more reasons for pitching a left hander."

The Oriole manager conceded there was more margin for error because of having four 20-game winners, but added: "We can recover from any errors, too.

Weaver indicated the hitting of Pittsburgh left-handers Richie Hebner and Al Oliver in the National League playoffs may have had some influence on his decision in using two left-handed pitchers early.

"Those two guys didn't look bad," Weaver said. "If they're platooned, Pittsburgh loses some of its RBI power."

Weaver said the Pirates "hit for a higher average than us, but we can hit the ball out of the park as much as they can."

First baseman Boog Powell missed Thursday's workout while having X-rays taken of his ailing right hand. X-rays proved negative but doctors said Powell had torn fibers in the back of the hand.

Powell suffered a hair line fracture of the right wrist in midseason, was struck on the hand by a pitch late in the season and also hurt the hand while sliding in the first game of the American League playoffs.

Weaver said his fourth 20-game winner, Pat Dobson, will be in the bullpen when the Series opens but could be his starter in Game No. 4.

Despite the odds favoring the Orioles to win their third World Series in six years with a team many consider as good as any ever put together, the Pirates were relying on an estimate by veteran second baseman Bill Mazeroski that the current Pittsburgh team is better than the 1960 world champions.

RUSSELLS PACKAGE STORE
HAPPY HOUR Headquarters
18 Main St.
Amherst
253-5441

MEN ONLY
If your thinking of a diamond for that special chick -
Don't until you see me.
Tremendous savings on any size diamond in any shape and setting. I have no overhead and will pass these savings onto you. Call Mon.-Thur. 6:30 to midnight. Satisfaction Guaranteed
549-3930

Redmen Battle Terriers

By DAN KAMAL

Tomorrow will go a long way in determining the UMass 1971 football success. The team absorbed a resounding 31-7 defeat at the hands of Dartmouth University and whether it can bounce back both physically and psychologically is a big question that will be answered starting at 1:30 against Boston University at Nickerson Field.

The first thing one does when talking to Head Coach Dick MacPherson is ask for an injury report. The only player who will not dress for the game, besides those who will be out for the season, is linemen Bill Hale. Hale, who along with Steve Schubert and Paul Metallo will undergo a knee operation at the season's end, is in "too much pain" according to MacPherson.

Metallo will dress but will be hobbled, and Schubert is expected to be able to go at full tilt. A sound Schubert does a lot for the Redman offense, and MacPherson will utilize his speed with a flock of sprint-out and roll-out pass plays to the fleet split end.

MacPherson likes the attitude of his team going into this one. Most of the players live within a 25-mile radius of Boston, so this lends impetus to an already intense rivalry.

In view of the Dartmouth rout, does the Redman coach plan anything radically different in his BU game plan? Nope. "We've got nothing really different planned; however, we will cut down a bit and go more basic."

Again MacPherson emphasized that the week's layoff has helped his club considerably and mentioned that the Redmen will probably be at their healthiest since early in September. Running backs Mike Sawyer, Angie DiNardo, and Jim Mahaney will be available to spell Timmy Berra and Dick Cronin who have done the bulk of the running.

Even with the return of Schubert, Sawyer, DiNardo, and Mahaney, the offense must get a solid game from sophomore quarterback Piel Pennington to generate any consistency. Pennington, in MacPherson's words, "has really been humming the ball the last two weeks."

Asked if he were worried about playing on the astroturf, the coach turned philosopher and answered, "It's like life, you can't worry about things you can't do anything about." The only way the Redmen can prepare for the artificial playing surface is to don the special shoes that BU officials provide to visiting teams.

What about the Terriers? They are 0-3 on the season and have given up 105 points while scoring 68. MacPherson claims that the points-against stastistic is misleading because "often times the offense doesn't carry its load, and the defense is caught in a hole."

Pat Diamond, the Terriers' fleet running back, and the strong throwing arm of quarterback Bill Poole make BU a constant threat on offense. Power-runner Mike Fields complements the style of Diamond very well and is a great blocker.

So....the talent is there, the rivalry is there, the potential for a great game is there, and the question is there. Check Nickerson Field for the final answer tomorrow.

STAMPEDING SOPHOMORE-Halfback Tim Berra will lead the UMass ground attack tomorrow against Boston University. To date, the sophomore star has churned up considerable yardage in each of the two Redman games including this long jaunt against Dartmouth. (MDC photo by Carl Nash)

Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Metawampe's Picks

Ah yes, mores the pitty, the Great One is back after brushing off the cobwebs of a two week vacation out on the reservation. And why not, after so blundering week after week on the ridiculousness of this crazy college season I just felt like sitting back in my teepee and looking to the great white clouds in the west to see if anybody up there knew what went wrong with the brain that once bedazzled even the great forefathers of my great nation. And now I shall make the spirited comeback like the wounded renegade alone in the desert trying to make it back to those he loves. Shall I pick the winners? Well, does a chicken have lips? Can Julius Erving dunk? Does the whimsical wizard from the west give me the powers of perception over you mortal beings? Let us see, R.B.

UMASS 24, BOSTON UNIVERSITY 17

Terriors return home after three on the road,
Their offense is potent, their defense like holes;
Mac's first trip to Boston will be a success,
As Navieaux's chargers fall to Kappa Sig's best.

* * * *

BOSTON COLLEGE 31, VILLANOVA 20

The Wildcats call this one a must,
Yuckica's Eagles call it "a win or bust",
But if B.C. should lose I'll definitely belch,
And then order for the heights, Rachel Welch.

* * * *

COLUMBIA 14, HARVARD 10

Princeton's Tigers were once a mighty bunch,
Until along came Columbia to give them the crunch;
The Crimson say they're psyched and ready for this game,
But I'll give the nod to Columbia to crunch them the same.

* * * *

MICHIGAN 28, MICHIGAN STATE 7

Duffy's boys gave Ara a scare,
But the Wolverines have a mighty glare;
Michigan senses that number one spot,
So good old Duffy will loose by a lot.

* * * *

TEXAS 21, OKLAHOMA 10

Sooners are hungry for this "Panhandle" clash,
But Royal's Loghorns have a winning rash;
The Texas machine will continue to roll,
On its way to Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl.

* * * *

WASHINGTON 35, STANDFORD 28

Plunkett is gone and the Indians are still tough,
But they'll find another Indian a bit too rough;
His name is Sixkiller, he'll pass them blind,
Anyway, how could I pick against my own kind.

* * * *

CORNELL 38, PRINCETON 21

Not even I could miss this one,
The Lions are no match for the NCAA's top gun;
Marinaro's runs will make the Tigers' skin ruffle,
As he does his version of the "Gridiron Shuffle".

THE GREAT ONE

WMUA

Tomorrow the UMass football team travels to Boston University to do battle with the Terriers. For all the action tune in to WMUA, 91.1 fm, on your radio for all the action with Ken Best calling the action and Marty Kelley on color. Broadcast time is 12:30 with Redman Warm-up.

Booters Away At Pesky UConn

By DAWNA ROSENBERG

Two slots down went the Redmen soccer team in the New England ratings this past week, as a result of their scoreless tie with B.U. last Friday. Thus tomorrow UMass will be a little something to prove as they resume action at 10:00 a.m. against the Huskies of UConn at Storrs, Conn.

Despite the fact that UConn is 0-2 in Conference play, and 1-5 overall, their competition has been of outstanding quality. In four of their five losses they were one goal away from a tie, two of those contests being inter-conference games. There was their season opener with Vermont, which ended in Vermont's favor by 3-2, and then last Saturday at Storrs the Wildcats of New Hampshire managed a 2-1 victory over the hosts.

The two other one goal losses were to none other than Wesleyan and Williams, the fourth and fifth ranked teams in New England. These two teams moved up in the ratings when UMass dropped from four to six, as both teams squeezed by the Huskies 1-0, Williams having the benefit of a penalty kick which won it for them.

Thus UConn has a ballclub to be menaced with, and with an outstanding goalie, the UMass offense could have their problems. Jon Demeter is the UConn goalkeeper, and he is known to consistently throw, as opposed to kick, the ball out of his defensive area. Demeter's throws go over midfield practically every time, and his goal-tending prowess earned him the selection of goalie on the first all Yankee Conference team of last week.

In addition to a seven day rest, the Redman soccer squad also had the benefit of a first-hand scouting report by Coach Berryman. Last Saturday, when UNH knocked off UConn 2-1, Berryman was there, taking notes on both clubs as they are both Yankee Conference clubs and future opponents.

When scouting a soccer team, Berryman likes to get the feel of a team, and get to know who the strongest players are on the other team, so that the Redman attack can be directed elsewhere.

Also noticed are the players with good speed and good kicking ability, as all of these variables can be adjusted for in preparation for the contest. The corner kick alignment is another important facet of a scouting report, and finally, knowing the men to whom the goalie throws the ball most frequently can be of great value.

All of these findings come in handy when planning an attack, but unlike many other sports, the diagnosing of an opponents offense and defense is not quite that important, as soccer is more of a free-lance type of game.

What Berryman saw in the way of personnel were three line men who look to give Goalie Kiah the most trouble. Led by Raul Barriga, their captain, the Huskie scoring chores are also handled by Loua Borisjuk and Ron Fedus. Tony Braziano, a fullback who comes up on corner kicks, is also likely to be a menace to the Redmen defense.

Still recovering from last week's game are the injured, the cut and the bruised Redmen. Paul Slack, with a pulled groin muscle, was able to make practice yesterday and will hopefully be at his starting center fullback position tomorrow. Tom Coburn, with a leg injury, leaves his availability up in the air, as numerous players suffering the effect of that astroturf field these past few days, will be ready to go tomorrow.

One player who has been recovering rapidly is Steve Blanchette, who one week ago found out that his ankle might be broken, but is now running well and in good shape for the morning battle at UConn.

One new face for the Redmen will be that of Munir Kahwagy, a junior college transfer. Kahwagy is just rounding into shape, and at the forward position has displayed a great deal of talent.

As both teams go into their third Yankee Conference game, neither will be impressing the other with their offensive prowess. In UConn's other two contests, they defeated Bridgeport 2-1 and lost to Long Island 4-1, as the Huskies have scored five goals in their six games, while yielding 12 over than span.

Harriers Host Huskies

By MDC Staff

You better get to the Orchard early tomorrow morning. There's going to be a real barnburner for your viewing when the harriers of UConn come to due battle with the UMass cross country team at 11 a.m.

Over the years these two teams have been one-two in track and cross country and there's no brotherly love when they get together. It's all out all the way and this can be expected tomorrow.

Both squads are young, yet building in power. UConn's top runner is Peter Bortolotti, a sophomore, who ran varsity last season for the Huskies in the championship meets in cross country and throughout the regular track season.

He'll have a fine compliment of runners with which to challenge the Redmen over their most difficult and treacherous cross country course featuring the two mile stretch in the Orchard.

Doug O'Connell will lead the way for the Redmen. To date he has been nothing short than superb in getting a third against Northeastern and St. Johns last Saturday and a strong fourth in the tri-meet with Harvard and Providence on Tuesday.

O'Connell, like Bortolotti, is a sophomore and ran against the top UConn harrier as a freshman on both the frosh and varsity level and came out on top on all occasions which could prove to make things even a little bit more interesting for the top spot tomorrow.

O'Connell also has a good supporting cast in Tom Derderian and Peter Crisci who finished well up in the standings in Tuesday's race and also ran well last Saturday over the UMass course.

It can be assumed that both squads will be hungry for this one. Being a league encounter it will give some sort of indication as to the chances of a repeat for the defending Conference champions from UMass or bolster the aspirations of the challenging Huskies.

There will be a JV race to lead off the program at 11 with the varsity to follow.

Don't miss it. It should make for an exciting, and interesting morning at the Orchard.

Poor Richard's

"Sure, sure it's good for business. Why, I can push 50 cases a week through this little store. Fifty cases, can you believe it?"

Where The Beer-Belly Reigns Supreme

By DAVID WILLIAMS

Oh, the blessed relief! To be away from gas stations and chilly air-conditioned drugstores, teletype machines and rubber cement and dummy sheets; this was all I desired for a while. I turned my work-weary bones southward to where the ocean breezes waft in and bathe you in contentment. I went to the Cape for a week or so.

This should hardly startle anyone. After all, who hasn't ever gone to the Cape for a week or so? But nobody ever likes to feel like a tourist, renting a cottage for two weeks and spending all your time on the beach turning your skin to leather. I have an excuse though. I've been going to the Cape for years. I have relatives on the Cape. I know the Cape. When I go to the Cape, I know which are the best miniature golf courses. It's practically my second home for God's sake. Of course, I haven't spent more than a total of three weeks east of the Canal since I turned fifteen, but that's no matter. It's my spiritual home.

Needless to say, then, I was shocked to find Coast Guard beach overrun with those foul mouthed vermin who call themselves surfers.

Now, I call them vermin, but anyone who spends as much time in the water as they do could hardly have bugs. All day, at least when the tides are right, they sit on their boards, bobbing up and down, waiting for a good wave to catch for a short ride. A very short ride. I was disgusted just looking at them.

"Look at them," I muttered. "These aren't waves. If you're going to waste your time surfing you might as well waste it on a big wave instead of these little things."

"Shhh." My young friend, who was lying on the blanket I was sitting on, lifted her head and said, "Be quiet. All you ever do is complain."

"Can I help that," I spluttered. "All you have to do is look at these idiots and you can see what I mean."

I looked back out to sea to see if they were all behaving as foolishly as I knew they would be. They were, all except one. While everyone else was busy pulling blocks of wax out of their wet-suits and waxing their boards so they wouldn't fall off, one of the idiots was lying on his upside-down board using the skeg for a head-rest.

Continued on Page 2A

Our Boys In Budville (cont)

"Now look. See that guy? See what I mean about what jerks they are?" I demanded.

She prepped herself up on her elbows and squinted in the direction I was pointing.

"Oooh, it's Jackie," she said.

"You mean you know that fool?" I asked.

"Yes." Standing up she began to wave to him and shout at him to come on in. He rolled sideways off the board, flipped it over, crawled on, and paddledhis way to shore.

"How come he was lying on it like that?" I asked.

"He just likes to go out in the water and fool around," she replied.

"I thought you had your license taken away if you didn't ride at least four out of every six waves," I said.

Before she could answer, Jackie was up to us, dropping his board in thesand with a thud and sprinkling us with water.

"Jackie," she said excitedly, "take David down so he can meet the guys."

"You'll pay for this," I growled. But I got up and went down to where a bunch of wet-suit clad goliaths were huddled around a beer cooler.

"Haw, haw, here's Jackie," guffawed the biggest and lewdest looking of the bunch.

"Shut up, Elmer," said Jackie good-naturedly, "and give us a beer."

"Haw, haw," laughed Elmer. "Catch. Who's this guy?"

"A friend of mine," said Jackie. "He thinks you guys are crazy."

I winced. No. I almost passed out. Everyone in the group turned their eyes to me and waited. The temperature was 90 degrees but I could feel myself get even hotter. I sipped a little out of the can and mumbled something incoherent.

"Haw, haw. what was that, man?" asked Elmer.

"Nothing, nothing," I stammered. "It's just that I..."

"C'mon man, speak up. I can't hear you. I work in an airport," said Elmer.

"Well, wait a minute and I'll tell you," I blurted.

Ah, Surfer! The very mention of your name conjures up such memories: Juicy Brucie and Beach Blanket Bingo Bonanza; Jan and Dean and the little old lady from Pasadena; the Beach Boys and Surfer Girl. All memories that are better left hidden, perhaps stifled, for who now longs for the good old days, those days of leisure when the shape of the curl was the only thing to trouble the mind's bliss? Surely, not I. I seek my relaxation in calmer waters, safer waters, warmer waters. Still, if you feel you must pour your body into a clinging rubber skin, take your stick and dive headlong into the heartstopping waters of Mother Ocean, then far be it from me to stop you. I will go as far as to indulge you and stay out of the way of you and your Death Wish, for you are crazy.

And so I told them. And so you can probably imagine what happened next. Remember when you were eight years old and it seemed like the only thing kids ever said to you was "Why don't you try it then, smarty-pants?" Well, this time it was "wise-ass" or something, but the effect was the same.

It was really hot that day and I was standing around arguing with all these guys who had wet suits on. I was tired, the sun was getting to me. I started to squint my eyes because they hurt. My tongue was loose, flopping around, saying things that shocked even me. Things far away on the beach began to shimmer and dance. I could see the heat waves rising off the scorching sands. I turned back to the little group. Who was this person in the black rubber jacket and what did he want from me? Why was he telling me I had a big mouth? And what was that shiny curved thing he kept pointing at as he yelled? I could feel the bottom of my stomach sink and I didn't know why. Two guys grabbed me and forced me into a rubber skin and zipped me in. I stood in dumbfounded wonder on the beach, wondering what had happned to my skin. Someone tucked a surfboard under my arm, pointed me at the ocean and pushed. I stumbled like a drunken man down to the water's edge. The icy water hit my feet and I snapped alert. I turned around. There they were. Up on the beach, standing, with their arms folded across their chests. I gulped. Surfing? Now, wait just a minute. Jan and Dean, Doheny Beach, Surfer Joe, a little deuce doupe and all that? Visions of hodaddies swam in my head. I'd never even seen a surfboard outside of a Jordan Marsh sports department and now I was being told to take that stick and ride it. The mere thought made me giddy. From somewhere up on the beach I could hear voices telling me to ride that wild surf. I turned and looked at the ocean. Two to three foot swells and a mild offshore breeze. Water temperature--somewhere between totally numbing and mildly paralyzing.

The author

I gave the final yanks to each of my new skin's five zippers. I picked up that wax-covered wonder that I was supposed to master, swallowed my pride, gritted my teeth, and let the waves rush over my head.

An eternity of cold and froth passed. The ocean surged and I was tumbled down, down, to an azure world of rippling sands. A giant hand lifted me back to the thinner half of our blue and green world and new life surged through my veins.

Then I was sucked under again and again. I was an unwilling visitor to an alien land. Finally the waves threw me onto my home, the dry land, and I rose up on my wobbly legs.

"...He was broad at the shoulder and narrow at the waist." Too bad shit floats.

They were still standing there, mysterious black figures. I looked at them yearningly, begging for release from this ordeal.

They began to laugh and nod at me and poke each other with their elbows. I understood that my torture would continue.

Throwing the board in front of me, I plunged out through the waves to the middle of the sandbar. I was determined to catch the next promising wave and ride it to shore. A glassy swell was coming up behind me quickly and quietly. I began to paddle with my weary arms to catch it. It bore down on me and caught me up. Instantly I was heaved towards the beach, the wave carrying me low, in its belly, and surging up around my head and shoulders. It began to break and I was pitched forward into the white froth (soup, for the intitiated). The skeg on the bottom of the board dragged in the sand and I rolled off the board into the shallow water.

Well, now that hadn't been so bad. I turned the board around and headed back out for another wave. The surf was so intense that day I spent the entire afternoon out there on my stick. The tide began to come in, ruining the surfing, so I called it a day and went to shore.

My chick was standing waiting for me with a towel.

"Hey, baby," I said. "See me catch that last wave. That thing was really heavy. I was really getting into this surfing."

"What did you say?" she asked.

"I said I was really getting my head into this surfing."

"That's what I thought I heard," she replied, flipping the towel at me and starting off up the beach.

"Hey, baby," I called, "What's hasseling you anyway?"

She began to run. In a moment she disappeared up the stairs to the parking lot. I could hear her red beetle start and she roared off, leaving me alone on the beach.

Not quite alone. I looked down to where my torturers had been huddled. They were drinking beer. Man, those red and white cans looked good. One of them held a can up in my direction. That was all I needed. Picking up the board, I walked down the beach to where the guys were standing and drinking. A beer can found its way into my hand and I stood there, just letting that delicious gold liquid pour down my throat.

Elmer came swaggering over and slapped me on the back.

"Hey, man. That wasn't so bad now, was it?" he said.

"It was pretty cool, man," I agreed.

"Haw, haw, how'd you like to go to a party with us tonight, man?" he asked.

"That's cool," I said, "where is it?"

"Over at this girl Susan's house," he said, "Haw, haw. Have another beer."

The party was in full swing when Elmer and I pulled up in his Mach I.

"Balls," he said. "Lookit all these cars. That place must be mobbed inside."

"What do you care, man," I said. "That just means there's more chance we can scoop something."

Elmer was fiddling with a can of Bud that wouldn't open.

"Yeah, I suppose you're right. Shit. Cut myself on the ring."

"Stick your finger in your mouth," I advised, "Bleeding will stop quicker."

The room fell silent asElmer walked through the door with his finger in his mouth.

"Whyyfr's Susan?" he mumbled.

A guy with glasses and long brown hair looked up from the book he was reading in a chair in the corner. It was Jackie.

"Can't hear you man, you got your finger in your mouth," he said.

Elmer looked puzzled. He looked down at his mouth. Cross-eyed with his finger in his mouth he looked like a gorilla in desperate need of a banana.

"Oh, yeah."

His face brightened.

"Where's Susan?" he asked again.

"She went to the packy," replied the man with the book, "She'll be back in a while."

Elmer and I retired to the kitchen and the noise resumed. From out of one of the bedrooms came the sound of Mick Jagger being played with a metal rake. Everyone in the living room was sitting with his feet on something, footstools, coffee tables, the tv, everywhere there were feet at knee level. The kitchen was lined with people drinking beer and wine and at the table a toothy girl was trying to roll a joint.

I stood watching with itchy fingers. She was doing a bad job but something warned me to keep still and just wait for it to come around the table. By the time I got it it was loose at the end, wet and falling apart. Wetting my finger I pasted it back together and took a big toke. It was pretty good stuff. Twice around the table and it was finished. Teeth threw the roach in the ashtry. I stood leaning on the stove. The unsmoked roach disturbed me, some good snorts were left in that thing, but I couldn't speak. The roach was soon covered over with cigarette ashes and forgotten.

Continued on Next Page

Meanwhile, Back At The Packy...

The guy next to me edged me with his elbow.

"Here," he said.

Another joint.

Twice around the table and everyone got to bury the roach again. Soon the ashtry was full of ashes, roaches, and beer can tops. I was still propped against the stove, no longer able to think or move.

But for some reason I liked leaning against that stove. For one thing, it was the only thing between me and gravity, and another, it was nice and warm because Elmer had just heated a TV dinner because he was hungry. Now he was eating it while I watched and thought about getting sick. Big hunks of rubbery chicken, smeared all over with mushy green peas were slowly, inexorably disappearing into Elmer's mouth and being chewed to gruel. Elmer devoured the meal mechanically, and when he finished, pushed the tin plate away and burped.

The belching roused me out of my fascination stupor. I saw the same Elmer in a different light. Before he had been an illusion of a person, intangible, giving only a hint at what lay beneath the surface. His burp made everything change. It was as if the lights in the room had become brighter, more penetrating. There was Elmer sitting hunched over the cold glutinous remains of a fried chicken dinner, cigarette in his hand, eyes all red-rimmed from the grass, and I could feel what it was like to be Elmer. Elmer had suddenly taken form before my eyes, his burp had transmitted to me some indefinable nuance of what Elmer was and what it was like to be Elmer.

I didn't like the feeling. As I stood there and watched him smoke and joke with the other people at the table the feeling began to fade and I breathed easier. All of a sudden the front door banged opened and in charged Susan, drunk.

"Woweee," she shrieked. "Am I ever shitfaced! Me and Eldridge went to every bar between here and Orleans and got served in every one of them."

She began to dance around the house, flicking ashes on everyone's legs and leaving various articles of clothing in different rooms. Finally she stood almost naked before us all. She tilted her head back and let out a blood-curdling scream. Then, grabbing ahold of a bleary eyed, shaggy-looking guy, whom I took to be the mysterious Eldridge, she disappeared into a bedroom, closed and locked the door.

All of a sudden the front door banged open and in charged Susan drunk.

"Wowee" she shrieked. "Am I ever shitfaced!"

Dead silence ensued. My God, I thought, what manner of girl is that?

As if in answer, Jack in the corner with the book said quietly and respectfully, "Well, there's Susan."

I walked over to where he was sitting and said, "What's that supposed to mean?"

"Just that," he replied. "Susan got home, came in the house, ran around taking off her clothes and flicking cigarette ashes on everyone's legs, screamed, grabbed what's his name and disappeared into the bedroom. It's nothing new."

I was incredulous. "You mean she does this every night?"

"Well, just about. Some nights there aren't parties here but most nights there are," he explained.

"Tell me more," I said.

"Well, you see, these guys all have jobs where they don't have to work every day of the week so they spend a lot of time at the beach surfing. When it gets too dark to do that they come over here to drink all night. Then tomorrow they do the whole thing over again."

"You mean. just like this. every night?"

He nodded. "Just like this."

While we were talking a fight broke out in the kitchen. Elmer and someone else we couldn't see were up and trading punches. The idea caught on and one of the onlookers turned and smacked his neighbor. He hit back and the riot was on. They began to turn over tables and chairs, throw beer cans through the windows and wreck the house.

I made a beeline for the door. Once outside I began to walk away from the neighborhood as fast as I could. There was no moon and the roads were very dark. Scrub pines hung low over me as I walked along, half expecting a Black Rider to step out of the gloom and whisk me off to some horrible place. That wouldn't be any worse then being back there, I thought. What's the house going to look like in the morning? What's Elmer going to look like in the morning?

Headlights came up quickly behind me in the darkness. An engine growled quietly a few yards away. The car crept forward slowly, like a stalking animal. The hairs on the back of my neck began to rise slowly. Elmer I thought. The car crept forward a little more, its engine purring in the dark. It snarled as the driver stabbed the accelerator. Maybe he'll give me a ride home anyway, I thought, and stepped out into the middle of the road. The headlights hit me and a split second later the driver pushed the gas to the floor. The gentle throbbing of the engine turned instantly to a screaming shattering howl. The rear tires spun madly, spattering gravel all over the bushes. The car leapt forward, right at me.

I snapped. "Elmer! Elmer!" Choking with fright I dove wildly off to my right. The car zoomed by, showering me with gravel as it passed. My heart pounded for several minutes. The blood rushing in my ears sounded like a rain swollen river rushing over boulders. I lay there until I caught my breath, then got up and quickly but cautiously made my way out to the main road and went home. I didn't see Elmer at all.

The outside light was on when I got to the cottage. Good, I thought, she's home.

She was. She was standing at the sink washing the dishes. I stood outside on the steps watching her for a few minutes, then I opened the door and walked in.

She turned around and saw me.

"Well, have you recovered yet?" she asked.

"What do you mean?" I said.

"Like, you know what I mean, man. Don't hassle me," she said.

I grinned embarrassedly. Oh yeah, that. Yes, I think I'm all better now."

"My goodness, you were strange for a while," she said. "There was something I had to tell you, though. Now, what was it? I think I forgot it. Ooh, I know. Jackie called. He wants to go surfing with you tomorrow. What are you laughing for?"

Eastern Mountain Sports, Inc.

SPECIALISTS IN QUALITY LIGHT WEIGHT
BACKPACKING AND MOUNTAINEERING EQUIPMENT

INTRODUCTORY X-country ski special oct. 8-16

4000 Pair EMS Touring & X-Country Skis

	This Year's Approximate 1971-72 Suggested List Prices on Comparable Items.	SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY PRICE
EMS Asnes, light touring, Ligno	$39.00	$26.95
EMS 5000 light touring, Ligno	$41.00	$31.95
EMS 7000, superlight touring, Ligno	$44.00	$32.95
EMS 10000, Balsa	$47.00	$33.95
Ski Boots	$26.00	$22.95
Ski Boots	$28.50	$21.95

All bindings will be mounted (later) free of charge on skis purchased during the sale.

Rt. 9, Amherst - Hadley Line Amherst Mass. 01002 413-253-9504

An Expression Of Black Spirit

TAKE TWO

A Story From Crestdale

By Nathaniel W. Hayden

On March 27, 1984, I read an article in the Amsterdam News, a black-owned and operated newspaper in New York City, about the need for black people to buy stock in the Black American New Communities Organization (B.A.N.C.O.). The article described in detail what the aims of the Corporation were and how it expected to achieve its goals. The most important thing about it was that the corporation wanted to establish a black middle and upper class community. The idea of developing independent black communities was not very alluring at first, but became so later.

I became much more receptive to what I will call the Crestdale Concept due to several adverse experiences I had with realtors when I was considering buying a home in Westchester County, New York. At first, I was shown homes located in all black sections. I didn't mind the fact that the areas were all-black. The thing that perturbed me was that I would have had to pay several thousand dollars more than I would if I were white. I discovered this when I spoke to a resident of one of the communities we visited. The resident said:

> I happened to know the white family that previously owned the house that I live in. I told them that it sounded as if I was getting a good deal when the realtor siad the house would cost $58,000 in all. Ray, the previous owner said that the realtor had told him that he was going to sell it for $52,000, but changed his mind when my wife and I said we liked the place. Since the house was by far the best offer we were given, I grudgingly accepted the $6,000 additional charge. If you have any alternative, I would recommend that you not pay the head tax.

I decided to go elsewhere. In the other black neighborhoods we went to, I was informed of the inadequate services the residents had to contend with. When several sections of New Rochelle became predominantly black, police protection dropped sharply. Since New Rochelle black residents are in several pockets of the city instead of one large area, they were unable to amass enough strength to demand more police protection.

I then decided to try the "first black in the neighborhood route" because I believed that by doing so, I would be guaranteed good services. A couple of weeks before we were scheduled to move into Spring Valley, my wife Lydia and I discussed the possible psychologically adverse effects the move might have on our son David. My wife asked what she should say when and if David is shunned and called a nigger by his classmates or playmates. She said:

> Don, I know that sheltering him from reality, the reality of being black can do more harm than good, but I want us to be able to explain it to him when we decide, not when a snotty little white boy comes along and says he doesn't like the way Dave looks.

That statement hit me hard. I decided that we would stay in our apartment on the Upper West Side of Manhattan until the construction of Crestdale was completed. Like many of the other current residents of Crestdale, when I remained in what I called our hole in Manhattan, I saved every extra penny to buy Crestdale Bonds.

Crestdale Bonds were extremely important when Crestdale was completed. The Corporation made it clear that only redeemed Crestdale Bonds would be accepted as a down payment on homes, co-op apartments, or citizens rights in Crestdale. This virtually assured having an all-black community because the bonds were sold in black communities only. When several whites charged that they were being discriminated against because their cash was not accepted as a down payment, the Supreme Court became involved. It decided the following:

> A corporation may specify what it will accept as legal tender. The Black American New Communities Organization does not stipulate that the bonds which are accepted as legal tender by said corporation are to be restricted. Therefore, we find no evidence to support the plaintiff's claim that discrimination has taken place ...

By the time a large number of whites became interested in buying homes in Crestdale, the sale of the bonds had ceased. Reason: All available housing had been filled. When there is more housing available, the bonds will again be sold in black areas. I would agree with the charge that Crestdale exists as an all-black community due to the fact that the founders took advantage of a cute loophole in the housing laws, but I'm not sorry that they did.

The City of Crestdale is a part of an independent county of New York. This came about because of a little payoff before construction started. The state legislature and the county that the area was originally a part of agreed to let it become independent because they thought it was a folly doomed for failure. It is amazing how quickly attitudes change when money is offered.

The name of "the area" is DuBois County. It includes the following cities: Crestdale, East Crestdale, South Crestdale, Upper Crestdale, Crestdale Groves, New Nairobi Oriental and New Nairobi Occidental. The first decade of DuBois County's existence was very unpleasant. The first section, Crestdale Groves, contained only expensive estates. The second, Crestdale, is the one I live in. it wasn't much better, It contained and still contains only private expensive homes, although not as expensive as those in "The Groves". These two towns were "window dressing", there is no doubt about that. These were the first ones built in order to get more support from the established blacks. In retrospect, it seems as if it was a necessary evil except when one considers the extreme competitiveness of our schools and the fact that everyone tried to outdo his neighbor by putting up garish ornaments on his lawn and the like.

There was a change for the better when South Crestdale and West Crestdale opened. Most of the people in "South" and "West" came to DuBois County directly from the ghettoes of New York City, Boston and Philadelphia, to name a few. They live in low income apartments (South Crestdale) and prefabricated low cost homes (West Crestdale). Suddenly, to maintain DuBois County's image as "the place where you can find several of the best black communities in the nation", the people of Crestdale and Crestdale Groves did as much as they could to help the newcomers to adjust to their new way of life. "South" and "West" residents became the county's sanitationmen, domestics, teachers, hospital workers, bus drivers, firemen, policemen, postmen, janitors and other jobs of that ilk. As the communities got larger, so did the job options of the newcomers. When office buildings started to open, the newcomers also became office messengers, deliveryman, clerical workers, social workers and construction workers. Due to these efforts, the county's unemployment rate is an astonishingly low 1.2%. In view of this, it is hard to imagine B.A.N.C.O. apologizing for building the high-income areas first. If low income housing had been built first, it would have been a waste because there wouldn't have been any jobs for its' residents.

Hundreds of businesses moved to the DuBois County area in order to escape the exorbitant corporation taxes in New York City, to take advantage of the development of Rosemont, the satellite city of Albany, and also to siphon off some of the funds of the nouveau-riche blacks of Crestdale and Crestdale Groves.

During the first decade, Crestdale and Crestdale Groves were severely criticized for our economic discrimination and social stratification. However, the fact that we have welcomed large numbers of poor blacks was not commented on. This was one instance in which the old adage "good news is no news" was definitely appropriate. One may ask if our only motivation for welcoming our poor brothers and sisters was to maintain an image. The answer is no. We did it because many of us once lived in Harlem, Bedford-Stuyvesant, Roxbury, the North End of Philadelphia and the Central Ward of Newark. We knew that as more and more buildings were abandoned by landlords, condemned and demolished, there would be fewer and fewer apartments and homes available that our people could move into for a decent price. We were certain that these abandoned areas would not be replaced, because we recognized the fact that middle-class white Americans are now following in the footsteps of the pioneers; after a home in the ghetto has served its function in other words filled their pockets with money, it is abandoned. Everyone remembers of course that when our great pioneers moved westward, they often left where they had settled because they had made their settlement area unlivable. One might argue that only the dregs of society, the drug addicts, winos and the like are being abandoned in the ghettoes. Yes, it is true that blacks are entering colleges and universities in larger numbers than our percentage in the population warrants. However, people have a tendency to ignore the fact that 20% of blacks are still below the poverty level. People ignore the fact that millions of whites still live in the desolate hills of Appalachia.

The residents of Crestdale have decided that these people should not be discarded like empty beer cans. Despite cries from a small number of residents that our property values would plunge, Crestdale and Crestdale Groves have established low income communities virtually next door. Don't misunderstand me. We're getting as much out of the deal as the poor people are. As I mentioned earlier, they are employed in most of the service jobs in the county and the federal and state government have given generous subsidies to ease the burden.

Most residents now live in an active, realistic manner instead of a stilted one. I say this again and again because it was of critical importance in the development of our stability. To emphasize this point, I have cited the following statement by Harlan Hayden in an article entitled "Notes From Yale: 1996":

> I think the main (reason) for the creation of these communities was to be in the position to say to whites, "See, we can do it too." They are very much like the Jewish ghettoes on Long Island or outside of Boston. The only major difference I can see is that instead of going to the Catskills during the summer, our parents go to several resorts which have sprung up recently near the Adirondacks. (MDC April 2, 1971)

In the same article, he also says:

> Instead of bridge and mah-jongg, our mothers play the "Keep the Kids in the (Black) Cultural Center Game."

This was indeed how we lived in what some residents call "the good old days". Ha, ha. The good old days. To many people, the good old days were the days when blacks, Puerto Ricans and "others" knew their place and when the well-to-do kept their distance in sheltered halcyon dales where the maid was the only contact with "them". Since very few knew many of "them" the following stereotypes resulted:

They all carry knives and razor blades (simply because most crimes take place in ghetto areas).

They don't take care of their health (because they say they don't have enough money to do so).

They should pull themselves up by their bookstraps (even though they've never had any).

They throw garbage out into the streets (merely because it hasn't been collected in a month).

They cause property values to drop (because the sight of them moving in scares so many people into selling their homes at a 20 to 30% discount).

They do not encourage their children to do well in school (especially when the student is told that he cannot enter the academic course of study because his IQ is not over 110).

They are racists (because they have the nerve to be proud of their racial heritage).

They are separatists (even though I can't remember when we were ever together).

I'm glad we decided not to play the game that many middle and upper class blacks have played heretofore. Very often in the past one would hear:

> Oh yes, they're terrible but we are different.
> We don't do the heinous things that they do.
> We're just like you.
>
> TIMES HAVE CHANGED
> THE PEOPLE HAVE GOT IT TOGETHER
> MORE POWER TO THE PEOPLE
> (WILL IT STILL BE JUST A SLOGAN?)

This story was brought to you by Mr. Donald Kingsley, a computer programming analyst who lives with his wife, Lydia (a librarian) and his son David (a student at Crestdale High School) from their home at 15 Concord Lane in Crestdale, N.Y. Mr. Kingsley got his B.S. in computer systems analysis at Hamilton College. If there are any comments you would like to make or questions you would like to ask write:

A STORY FROM CRESTDALE
C/O NATHANIEL W. HAYDEN
BOX 519
HAMPSHIRE COLLEGE
AMHERST, MA. 01002

CRAFT FAIR

at

Middlefield Fair Grounds

Oct. 9, Sat.

Featuring

All day Clean Living +
All day Fat + Nite

All Area Craft People Flea Market
Rides - Games - Lots of Fun

TICKETS AT
White Light Book Store The Alley A Head of Time, 360 College

253-5394

$2.00 advance
$2.50 at gate

Book»

The Greening of America Reconsidered

By ED JANUSZ

The Con III Controversy: The Critics Look at the Greening of America edited by Philip Nobile (Pocket Books)

"My present feeling is that nothing of any distinction has been written about my book."--Charles Reich

The most interesting impression I had about the 41 essays that Philip Nobile has collected about Charles Reich's book is that most of the contributors wrote around, past, and through The Greening of America and ended up saying more about their own philosophies than about Reich's, keeping their own ideas about what the Youth Revolution is and about how to cope with it--in fact, being completely unchanged and unmoved by Greening.

The essays, of course, are of varying quality. Three or four are excellent, a somewhat larger number are useless. Ralph Gleason of Rolling Stone called Greening a "most important book," ostensibly because Reich thinks the kids and their music are where it's at: Gleason ignored the rest of the book. Tom Hayden and a few others don't seem to know how to cope with a book that claims that a revolution can be nonpolitical. This tendency to let preconceived notions stand goes so far as to include factual errors. For example, the article by Samuel McCracken, otherwise possibly the best of the bunch - for - critical analysis of Greening, is thus marred: he refers to Reich's "iterated rejection of technological substitutions" and his "unqualified endorsement of LSD," neither of which are quite true.

It was Reich's attitude towards technology that raised the most dust of any of his ideas. This is understandable, for while damning across the board the "corporate state" that runs our society, he lauds the use of technology in giving people more free time to develop their human potentials.

The burden of proof is on him. John Kenneth Galbraith puts it the best: "Houses, plumbing, hospitals, schools and universities, policemen, the pill, some clothes will still be necessary." While rightly deploring the "Consciousness II" life style, Reich ignores the fact that life on earth has always created a lot of worker ants in every society since Egypt, and that by necessitating more growth of cities, complex factory techniques and more jobs nobody wants to do, the Industrial Revolution seems to have compounded the problem thus far. Perhaps the socialists have a few remedies for modern America's failure to take care of its victims; Reich has none.

Reich's ecstatic vision of the wave of the future left most everybody quite cold. For every variation on the Woodstock theme that Reich could muster, there are many answers: Charlie Manson, Altamount, Diana Oughton, Leary's Algiers ravings, Bernardine Dohrn, Isle Vista trucked out ad nauseum. Only Gleason seemed untroubled by the fact that Reich was obviously writing as an outsider, making blanket generalities about an alternate culture that could more aptly be described as a fragmented antistraight culture, and that his opinions on clothes and rock music come near to benign idiocy.

Blacks are also ignored, both in Greening of America (Reich acknowledges that yes, America is racist, but Blacks are peripheral to the Greening) and in The Con III Controversy; there is no mention, except in passing references, of whether anybody things that a Consciousness III revolution can effectively reverse 200 years of oppression and do it quickly.

Consciousness Three, or the Youth Revolution. America's answer to the Red Guard who will somehow save our nation from our own worst habits, are seen in Washington demonstration.

The paperback edition of The Greening of America is blurbed by a number of letters from Consciousness II: "Thank you, Mr. Reich, for showing us where it's at." Still, Greening seems to come across as a relevant version of Love Story or Valley of the Dolls. At its best, it could have given the older generation a new vocabulary by which they could have understood the counter-culture a little better, but Reich's golly-gee attitude seems to have diminished even that angle--at least in the eyes of these critics represented in Con III. Outside of that, the analysis of society has some good writing mixed in with a lot of cliches. Many of the essayists in Con III brushed off the book in fewer than two pages (Reich's colleagues at Yale were especially facetious), and the response was appropriately cool-to-lukewarm to a book that, though well organized and fairly well written, is for the most part a vacuum of original thought. Pick out what you like in The Greening of America and like it; but, if the book intrigues you, The Con III Controversy will help a lot, for, even beyond the handful of really fine essays, it catalogues the responses to the counter-culture in an even better way than Reich himself has organized the movement's response to society.

Films

Losey-Pinter's "'Accident" Not To Be Missed

ACCIDENT, a film starring Dirk Bogarde, Stanley Baker and Jacqueline Sassard. Co-starring Michael York and Vivien Merchant. Screenplay by Harold Pinter. Music by John Dankworth. Produced by Joseph Losey and Norman Priggen. Directed by Joseph Losey.

By ELLIOT EISENBERG

Accident is overpowering from the first excruciating moments when the screech of rubber and collapse of metal interrupt the peaceful quiet of Stephen's evening. An Oxford don (Dirk Bogarde), he runs from his house to find in the wreckage two of his students. On their way to see him had been William (Michael York), the fair-haired young aristocrat, and his fiancee Anna (Jacqueline Sassard), an arrestingly beautiful Austrian. Seeing William dead and Anna in shock, Stephen helps her from the liquor-soaked car and calls the police. With Anna in one of the upper rooms, he tells the investigators nothing of her, only that he had been expecting William. Satisfied with his answers, they leave and Stephen climbs the stairs to Anna.

Before him on the bed is the woman who has captured the affection of his student, his friend (Stanley Baker) and himself. In a series of flashbacks, his desire for Anna, his envy of his friend, Charley, and his exasperation with an expectant wife and a thoroughly middle class and bookish existance develop with chilling suspense.

Individual performances are impressive. Stanley Baker as the brash and outspoken Charley who takes what he wants, from women to food from another's plate, is a pleasure to watch. Charley is the outgoing and popular don, a success on television as well as in the University; he is everything that Stephen aches to be. Jacqueline Sassard is devastating as Anna; she speaks little and says much with her face and smile. Only twenty-two at the filming, she is completely in control of her features.

Dirk Bogarde is absolutely terrific as Stephen. Docile with his wife, attentive to his children, yearning in his quiet way for Anna, he has all the moves. His hand almost taking hers, his plans almost succeeding in overtaking Charley with television and Anna, Bogarde relays the emptiness he finds at catching up to his friend.

Smaller roles are also well-played. Ann Fairbanks as Charley's wife Harold Pinter as a television producer's man, even Brian Phelan and Terence Rigby as the interviewing policemen bring a high level of competence to their performances.

Accident is the product of a well-acquainted group of craftsmen. Pinter, Losey and Bogarde previously collaberated in making The Servant, an award-winning film. Vivien Merchant, who received a Best Supporting Actress nomination toward an Academy Award for her role in Alphie, is Pinter's wife.

Joseph Losey has been a premed student, a newspaperman, critic and stage manager. He has written, produced and directed for radio (in its heyday), television, the theater and films. His King and Country and Village of the Damned have received various awards.

Harold Pinter is best known as author of the play The Homecoming. The Broadway production, which won a Tony for Best Play in 1966, starred his wife, Miss Merchant.

The expertise that they have assembled shows everywhere. The camerawork is artistry, the music simple yet effective. Accident was the British entry to the 1967 Cannes Festival and won two awards for Best Picture. It is well worth seeing.

THIS WEEK
Sweet Charity's
presents
Cape Cod's
Favorite
UNION JACKS

Dig Springield's finest heavy music dance hall for real people.

Dungarees always welcome
ID's Required
1270 Memorial Ave.
Directly across from Eastern States Expo.

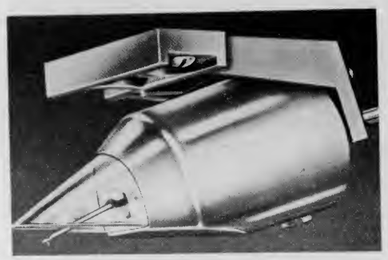
CAMPUS II
7:15
9:15
JENNIFER O'NEILL
GARY GRIMES
In everyone's life there's a
'SUMMER OF '42'

Maid In Sweden
X
CAMPUS III
screens 7 & 9
No One Under 18

Campus Cinemas
256-6611
Located Right on Route 9 in the Zayre's Shopping Center
Mon. Night! Ladies $1.00

CAMPUS I
JANE fonda
DONALD sutherland
klute
One Man Is Missing... Two Call
Girls Lie Dead.
7:00
9:00

Basic Audio



Lesson Two: Cartridges

tracked by FRANK JOHNSON

In this issue we will begin our task at hand and explain the theory and operation of transducers. By definition, a transducer is a device that converts acoustical or mechanical energy into electrical energy. It is a term that we will use for phono cartridges, tape heads, and microphones: all of these devices work to generate a small electric current that is the first link in the chain of a hi-fi system.

To cover the subject completely and objectively, I will confine this issue to a discussion of phono cartridges. Earlier, we pointed out some of the shortcomings in the Dynaflex record system. The object of this column is to point out possible shortcomings in a phono cartridge, and what to look for when buying one, vis-a-vis desireable design features.

When we say "cartridge", we mean more than simply the needle which travels in the record groove and converts the groove "wiggles" or modulations into tiny electrical currents. A cartridge is actually a small generator, which consists of: 1.) the stylus, or needle, mounted on a small, movable pole called the shank; 2.) the stylus assembly, including the shank, the rubber mounting holding the shank in place, and the plastic holder that fits the stylus into the cartridge body itself 3.) which contains the coils and magnets needed for inductional current generation, and 4.) the terminal pins, from where the current ultimately flows. In a stereo cartridge, they number 4, and consist of two "hot" pins for the left and right channel, and 2 separate ground pins. Because the current generated by the cartridge is an alternating one, responding to the sine waves of sound, it must be grounded. In certain systems, the two ground channels can be commonly connected in a 3-wire system, but such arrangements are rare.

"When we say 'cartridge', we mean more than simply the needle which travels in the record groove and converts the groove 'wiggles' or modulations into tiny electrical currents."

The prime function of a phono cartridge is to exact an accurate duplication of the information in record grooves. All phono cartridges do this by applying a specific pressure, known as the tracking or tracing force, onto the grooves by means of the stylus. The stylus will move in accordance to the groove modulations; the greater and more pronounced these modulations are, the more current will be generated. Therefore, a cartridge must conform to certain design specifications, so as to effect an accurate rendition of what is on the record.

The tracking force is usually specified over a certain range, which will depend on the quality of the tone arm (the playing arm of the turntable or record player, which holds the cartridge and traces it over the record) and to what sort of purpose the cartridge will be subjected. The minimum and maximum value of the tracking force will be expressed in grams, or fractions of it, though the maximum will obviously be of a greater value (1 gram= 1/28.8 oz.). Better phono cartridges reduce the tracking force so as not to deform or wear out the record grooves. In general, the lower the force, the better, though only better-quality cartridges are able to trace a record at an ideally low pressure.

When the cartridge is operated within its specified tracking force range, it will exhibit several factors which we want to know about. One of these is compliance, which indicates how much the stylus shank will move at a specified force. Compliance is measured with respect to centimeters (1 in. = 2.54 cm.) and dynes, the physicist's measure of force. It is expressed in centimeters moved per unit dyne; for example, a typical cartridge specification might read: 20 x 10 1/1,000,000 cm./dyne. 10 1/1,000,000 is obviously a very low figure, but this is simply a way of relating force to the level at which the stylus will play a record. Higher compliance (over 20, and increasing to about 50 x 10 1/1,000,000 cm./dyne) suggests that the cartridge will be able to cover a wife range of groove modulations. Recently, this measurement has come under criticism, because sometimes a very highly-compliant cartridge actually collapses under its own weight. One manufacturer has coined the phrase "trackability" to indicate the ability to trace well and stay in the groove, and frequently this is a more meaningful specification than compliance. It is however not yet an industry standard.

Over the audio range, the cartridge must be able to extract information that is relatively constant in value, neither exceeding or decreasing in response to what is on the record. The ability to cover the audio range is known as frequency response, which, as we will see later, applies to almost every component. It will indicate over what range the cartridge will function, and ideally should cover a range of 20-20,000 cycles or better.

But the most important consideration to keep in mind is that frequency response by itself is virtually meaningless. We may use the analogy of a speedometer on a car that reads up to 140 mph. Theoretically, a car might be capable of this speed, but its engine might explode or else the car might be blown off the road by wind force. The speedometer thereby acts as wishful thinking, and serves only as an ornamentation, in cars not built to travel at that speed. Concurrently, a phono cartridge that purports a "20-20,000 Hz." response does not necessarily have to cover all frequencies within this range at the same level. At 20 cycles it may not produce any current at all, even though the stylus may move. A manufacturer is free to state that the cartridge may indeed respond at 20 cycles, but he doesn't have to specify what quality this response may make. So a frequency response must specify a response over a constant range. Ideally, a cartridge will reproduce all these frequencies at an unchanging level, but it is very difficult to design this perfection in a cartridge. So better manufacturers specify a range with a ±db range. The decibel rise or dropoff will indicate whether or not the frequency response of the cartridge is a smooth one. Always look for it, because you will want to know whether a cartridge will tend to peak or rise at certain frequencies, creating irregular response that is annoying or unwanted.

Next time we will go into cartridge types, which you are bound to encounter in your purchases.

The Program Council And How It Was

By PAT SUPRENANT

Scheduling of popular programs which appeal to as many people as possible and that utilize the Campus Center in the production of them are the primary objectives of the Program Council. The Council, an arm of the Student Union Government Board, receives a budget of $58,000 from the SUG Board to achieve this.

The basic structure of the Council is that of an Executive Committee composed of a president, secretary, treasurer, and several sub-committees which are headed by a chairman.

The Executive Committee, elected by the entire Council at the end of the year effective in April for the following year, has as some of its duties the drafting of the budget for the organization and to work closely with RSO procedures. The present members of the Executive Committee are; president, Howie Bresener, secretary, John Cardile and treasurer, Russel Vierra.

There are approximately forty members of the Program Council. Membership is unlimited and open to all students both undergraduates and graduates, and faculty members of UMass Amherst. An application must be filled out by all perspective members and approved by the Executive Committee. Members may join one committee exclusively or several.

Responsibility for the selection of the movies shown on Thursday and Sunday, under the sponsorship of the Program Council, lies with the Movie Committee. These movies are generally chosen a semester in advance and selected on the basis of the most current and appealing films available at reasonable prices. Recommendations for films may be made by any student to the committee chairman. Other functions which the committee performs are the special films shown during finals week and an occasional special showing such as "Woodstock".

Funds for the acquisition of art objects periodically displayed in the Campus Center or in the Student Union Art Gallery are allocated to the Art Committee. The murals presently on display in the Campus Center are a direct product of the committee's endeavor to humanize the Campus Center. Members of the committee also co-ordinate all art exhibits, transit showings and any other program that may occur during the year. It has in the past sponsored the Roten Ferdinand Galleries which display prints for sale in the Campus Center twice during the year.

The Public Relations Committee of the Program Council has as their main purpose the duty of maintaining contact with the university community on all activities which the Council sponsors. They achieve this through the monthly publication of an activities calendar. Members work in conjunction with the calendar office of the university and through their discretion place on it any event happening on campus which they feel is of popular interest.

Public relations with national or regional Campus Center organizations are maintained through this committee. Members are selected to attend the Association of College Union-International and the National Entertainment Conference. At these conferences the programing aspects and problems which arise as a result are discussed. Supervision of any publication of the Program Council and the maintenance of a scrapbook of all Program events fall under the auspices of the committee.

The production of the play "You're A Good Man Charlie Brown" on campus was a result of the efforts of the Special Events Committee. It also lays claim to the special service projects, the Christmas events, the subscription to magazines for students use in the Reading Room and various distinguished visiting lecturers. Plans are now being drawn up for a number of lectures to be held during the coming year. Recommendations can be made to the committee chairman on this matter.

All dances, concerts, coffee houses and the very recent monthly night club are the sole responsibility of the Social Events Committee.

The bowling team, chess team and the bridge club were formed under the sponsorship of the Recreation Committee and are allocated funds through it. The periodic bridal fairs are the specific function of the Bridal Committee.

The next meeting of the entire Program Council will be held on October 11, 1971 in Room 163 in the Campus Center.

DEERFIELD
Drive-In Theatre
Route 5 & 10
South Deerfield, Mass.
Tel. 665-8746
FRI. SAT. SUN.
diary of a mad housewife
a frank perry film starring richard benjamin
frank langella
carrie snodgress
A UNIVERSAL PICTURE - TECHNICOLOR
ALSO
ELLIOTT GOULD
IN A DAVID L. WOLPER Production
"I LOVE MY WIFE!"
A UNIVERSAL PICTURE. TECHNICOLOR
Showtime 7:30
Feature First Sun.

WATER BEDS SALE
Your Choice
KING, QUEEN, or DOUBLE SIZE MATTRESS -
5 yr. guarantee with 1" Foam Insulating Pad $24.99
$29.99
A Head of Time
360 College St. Amherst
Rt. 9 Tel. 253-5394
Open Noon til 9

THE IMPORT SHOP
Dresses from India
Wall Furnishing's
Pipes and Incense
Wall Hangings and Bedspreads
64 Green St. Northampton

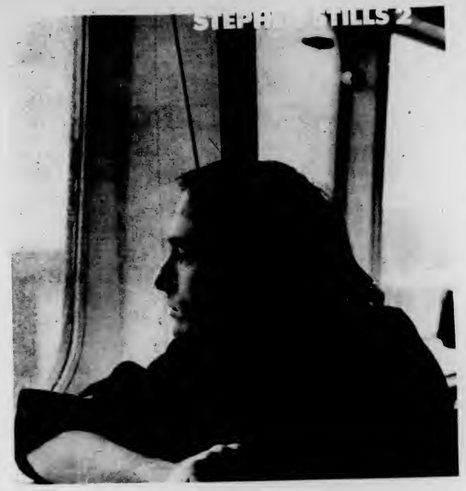
Albums

By JIM LAVRAKAS

A record review Stephen Stills II, Atlantic

Every work of art is autobiographical. The difference between each respective work is the amount of personality that is packed into it. Stephen Still's second album is his second self-portrait; it gives the second (and, hopefully, not the last) detailed insight into one of the better known rock music makers. In this second album he has gotten rid of the stage fright of his first attempt at a record all his own. Stephen Stills one was an impressive communal effort; Stephen Stills II is an unveiling of a deep and sensitive personality with just a little help from his close friends.

Stills conducts and arranges, as well as writes, everything that comes off of this album. His actual guitar picking is incredibly smooth and varied. The Memphis Horns (Otis Reading's old horn section) back him up on several songs. Once again Eric Clapton plays guitar along side of Stills. David Crosby lends his voice. Of course, on percussion and bass, respectively, are his long-time cohorts Dallas Taylor and Calvin Samuels.



What Stills has done with these artists and his talents is to turn out an album with a variety of sounds. As in his first album, Stills concentrates very heavily on the sound of his music and the beat of the music. But he has done a lot more with this album. Several of the songs on this album are commentaries on things that Stills feels to be important issues; he shows his opinions on American society--including politicians, prejudice, poverty, apathy. He constantly asks what people are going to do about these things. Stills is a sensitive, passive man who knows how to, rather, has learned how to, observe and understand people. "Ecology Song" is a combination of his best. He makes his point directly and honestly, his arrangement of the Memphis Horns rivals the arrangement of the wind instruments in his earlier "Cherokee".

Stills also knows how to relate the kinds of experiences--love, growing up, understanding oneself--that form an individuals attitude to things around him. The search for peace of mind, and the search for the harmony of people living together in society are the themes in his songs "Word Game", "Relaxing Town", and "Singing Call".

At the end of the album Stills takes a nostalgic look back at his younger years (Buffalo Springfield time). He has rearranged "Bluebird"; entitled "Bluebird Revisited", with the addition of a tragic love poem (hindsight?) at the start of the song, he has transformed "Bluebird" into a kind of musical "Lovesong of J. Alfred Prufrock".

Stephen Stills II is a collection of observations made by an older and wiser Stephen Stills. His album is a commentary and a warning. It is a piece of him. Sit down and see what he has to say. Stills has been through a lot of stopping to listen and appreciate this sincere autobiographical work will be a learning experience.

from "Open Secret"

The Grateful Dead Live Again

By STEVE FELD

GRATEFUL DEAD (Warner Bros. Records)

CHAPTER ONE — RIPOFF

Whenever I buy a live album I get a bad taste in my mouth. I feel like I'm being cheated. Somehow, the idea of a group, recording their concerts and selling it hints to me of foul play, positively Fourth Street. The group gets off too easy. There is no extra work involved with the group, except the choosing of the material, which is meager. It's like the ultimate ripoff. Even rock stars can be capitalistic.

I have thought that the creation of a work of art is, at its best, analigious to the raising of a child. In the case of a recording, the musicians work with it, play with it, become a part of it. It developes from infancy, goes through its trials and tribulations, and changes accordingly. The high points are surely elating, while the perserverance must seem unbearable during the stagnant times. But with the growing of the album is the growing of the musicians and that's where everybody benefits.

I'm not saying that live records are bad, only that they are second rate. Sure, there have been several great live records, but when robbed of the visual impact of the show itself, they are a fraction of what has taken place. The fidelity is always inferior, also. When a group releases a concert record they do not progress. A band's worth is always judged by their studio recordings.

I see as a solution the record companies instituting a policy whereby a person, if he so desires, can order live albums directly from them, eliminating the middle-man. They'd cost a buck (or whatever is the minimal fee to cover costs). This plan is similar to the Warner Bros. sampler albums. It would be a step forward for the serious record buyer and serve as excellent publicity for both the group and the label.

CHAPTER TWO— RISING OF THE DEAD

The making of "Workingman's Dead" was an economic necessity for Grateful Dead. They were up to their proverbial necks in debts and their audience response was something less than spectacular. With "Live Dead" they won the adulation of rock critics far and wide, but, for the most part, they were still unknown. But, as we know, "Workingman's" caught on-it was a good album. "Uncle John's Band" was as good in 1969 as it is today. Its harmonies were a refreshing change from its previous Acid-rock music. And "Casey Jones" had to be the song of that summer. So the Dead had a devoted following of millions and became what they still are today-one of the best groups in America.

Jerry Garcia, leader of the group, excels in every aspect of rock music. He is one of the best guitarists in the business. The notes just seem to flow when he plays, creating an incredibly beautiful sound. His voice is pleasantly soulful and he writes original and creative songs. Phil Lesh and Bob Weir, though both were beginning to show signs of wear. Half of the songs on "Beauty" left me feeling indifferent. Now, the C&W has been carried too far. Is this the same Dead of "The Electric Kool-Aid Acid Test"? Or are they becoming old men, growing old gracefully?

There are some highlights on Side 1. The opener, "Bertha" is good as a show's starter. It is light and loose with a catchy tune with pleasant harmonies. "Big Railroad Blues" however, is like a thousand other songs. The side ends with "Playing In The Band" a song not unlike "Sugar Magnolia" with its jerky rhythms.

Side 3 has, as its high point, Pigpen doing the vocals on "Big Boss Man". It is in this respect he reminds me of Ringo on The Beatles' albums. His vocals are comparatively few, but always emerge as something special. "Me & My Uncle" a John Phillips' song is nice, but again, what is the point? And it seems like old Chuck Berry tunes are coming around again. Only their version of "Johnny B. Goode" can't compare with the Rolling Stones' covers of his stuff.

Again, in Side 4 their choice of material comes up for questioning. There is a 9 minute "Not Fade Away". Are the Dead trying to become the American Rolling Stones? I hope not. They still do their own material best, as is the case with most musicians today. "Wharf Rat" is a Garcia-Hunter composition, and its the best of the album. Unlike Lesh, Garcia's voice can stand up after a number of songs. And "Wharf Rat" is all Garcia. The set closes on a good note with "Goin' Down The Road Feeling Bad".

CHAPTER FOUR DEAD—END

Regardless of itself, this album is going to sell. And if Grateful Dead weren't rich before this, they most likely will be now. Then, hopefully, they'll go back in the studio and really show us where it's at. Cause this ain't it.

Weekend

Continued from page 8A

John Schlesinger's adaptation of James Leo Herlihy's novel about a male hustler, Joe Buck, who comes to New York, finds the streets aren't paved of gold, and befriends a crippled bum, Rico Rizzo. They have perhaps the most Platonic and oblique homosexual relationship ever filmed. The film has style and maturity, yet suffers from an overt sentimentality. The grittiness of New York is well portrayed. The acting is sheer perfection: Jon Voight made a legendary film debut, Dustin Hoffman proved the diversity of his talent wasn't just hearsay, and supporting performances by Sarah Miles, Brenda Vacarro, and John McGiver all glow in the memory. The film won oscars for Best Picture, Screenplay, and Director as well as the New York Film Critics Award in 1969.

Summer Of '42 (Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield; Campus Cinemas, Hadley)

This nostalgiac ode is quickly becoming this year's Love Story in terms of popularity. How a boy becomes a man, with a little help from Jennifer O'Neill, is seen in this rose-colored look at a young man's sexual awareness set one summer in Maine. Director Robert Mulligan has accomplished the rather difficult job of sustaining the same emotional tone throughout, and the results are pleasant enough.

Walkabout (Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield)

Is it a pseudo anthropolgic study, or a legitimate, rewarding commentary on the circumstantial mergings of two cultures? Your answer may determine whether or not this film seems charming or not. It's about two young people, brother and sister, who become members of an Aborigine tribe in the Australian wasteland.

ACADEMY
AT THE GATES OF THE COLLEGE
Northampton, Mass. — 584-8435
WED. THUR. FRI. SAT.
"The Hellstron Chronicle" 9:10
Plus
Harold Pinter's
British Screen Play
"Accident" 7:00
with Dirk Bogard
SUN. MON. TUE.
Walter Matthau
"A New Leaf" 9:05
Plus
Liza Minnelli
"Sterile Cuckoo" 7:00
Use The Masonic Street Parking Lot - Just Across the Street

EVERY WEDNESDAY,
STAMPEDE NIGHT
starting October 13, some of the far west will come to New England...
Our Cowgirls, in western garb, armed with water pistols filled with Vodka, will serve your custom sliced western steer beef by the ounce. 45¢ per ounce for prime sirloin, 70¢ per ounce for fillet mignon, and 35¢ per ounce for a rib of broiled beef.
Keep our Friday night buffet in mind.
The Lord Jeffery
30 Boltwood Ave. AMHERST, MASS. 253-2576
RAOUL DIETRICH, INNKEEPER

Weekend

By BOB NESTI

Music

Lorin Hollander

Pianist Lorin Hollander will be featured in two recitals in Bowker Auditorium, Stockbridge Hall, at the UMass Amherst, Oct. 12-13 at 8 p.m. These events mark the opening of the Fine Arts Council celebrity Series. Tuesday, Oct. 12, Mr. Hollander will perform Schubert's "Sonata in G, Opus 78," Ravel's "Gaspard de la Nuit" and his own "Impulse." The following evening, Mr. Hollander will do Schubert's "Sonata No. 7." Reserved series tickets and single tickets are now available from the Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall, 545-0202. Remaining tickets for both concerts will be available at Bowker Auditorium one hour before the concert. Performances will begin at 8 p.m.

Frank Zappa And The Mothers Of Invention

Frank Zappa, rock music's omnipotent master, mixes bits of Stravinsky, and Edgar Varese with blotches of Chuck Berry and The Ronnettes this Saturday night at Smith. Zappa and the New Mothers (made up of a number of cast-off Turtles) may perform the rock oratorio they performed at their recorded Fillmore East concert this past June, anything they would do, though, would be incredible. Saturday evening at 8, John M. Greene Hall, Smith. ($)

Films

Accident (Academy of Music, Northampton)

This 1969 film was the last collaboration between director Joseph Losey and screenwriter Harold Pinter before their now current successful The Go-Between. For a more detailed account, see the review elsewhere in this section.

All's Quiet On The Western Front (Saturday, Merrill Science Center, Amherst College, 7:30 and 10)

The First World War from the German soldier's standpoint was the subject of the classic Erich Maria Remarque anti-war novel and this monumental film. Much of this may seem dated (it was made in 1930), yet it still remains a historic film of the first magnitude. Oscars went to director Lewis Milestone and to the picture; featuring Lew Ayres, Louis Wolheim, and Slim Summerville. featuring Lew Ayres, Louis Wolheim, and Slim Summerville.

Bob And Carol And Ted And Alice (Saturday, Sage Hall, Smith College, 7:30 and 9:30)

Esalen-type encounter groups, wife swapping, and the entire Southern California subculture all come under attack in this finely wrought satire. The brilliant script, which won an Oscar and a New York Film Critic's Award, is very, very funny. Natalie Wood and Robert Culp have the leads, but are outshone by the often hilarious Elliot Gould and Dyan Cannon.

Lorin Hollander, one of the finest young pianists now making concert tours, is seen here rehearsing a scene from an hour long public television special about him. Hollander will be featured in two concerts at Bowker on October 12 and 13. Contact the Fine Arts Council 545-0202 for further details.

Broadway Melody (Friday, Merrill Science Center, Amherst College, 7:30 and 10)

The first major Hollywood musical film and the one which set the pace and feel for the Busby Berkeley-Ruby Keller tap dancing orgies which followed. A must for any follower of the American Musical form. It is something of a silly backstage farce with music and dance interludes and managed to win the 1929 Oscar for Best Picture. Featuring Anita Page, Charles King and Bessie Love (who is currently featured as the bitchy telephone operator in the new John Schlesinger film, Sunday, Bloody, Sunday.)

The Devils (Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield)

Ken Russell's study of depravity is just that: depraved in essential areas that would make this adventurous historical spectacle work. Russell's mark as a director is apparent, for better or for worse, in scenes which best resemble mildly lurid DeSade. Oliver Reed plays a priest who falls victim to Cardinal Richilieu's master plan to unify Seventeenth Century France. Vanessa Redgrave as a completely loony nun who has sexual fantasies right out of D. W. Griffith and is the Mother Superior to the oddest group of ladies filmed since Marat Sade.

Fortune And Men's Eyes (Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield)

What Hollywood does to off-Broadway plays is a crime. A sham of a movie and an offensive one at that, for more details (if you care) see review elsewhere in this section.

Freaks (Sunday, Merrill Science Center, Amherst College, 7:30 and 10)

Tod Browning's infamous 1932 horror film is both fascinating and horrifying. It gained notoriety because of a thirty-year ban against showing the film in this country. It tells the story of how a brazen hussy attempts to victimize a group of sideshow performers. The plot is at first thin with much emphasis on atmosphere, and its humor is the kind which makes you wonder who's chiding whom. Still, after the general premise is established, the film has some masterful touches and finally has the effect of a nightmare.

The Last Run

The Hellstrom Chronicle (Academy of Music, Northampton)

An enthralling semi-documentary which expounds the theory that insects will outlive and overrun man. This terrifying vision is negated somewhat by the rather mawkish and corny screenplay and the performance of Lawrence Pressman as the film's guide. Sit back though, and enjoy the fascinating photography of insects which borders on the incredible.

Klute (Campus Cinemas, Hadley)

Jane Fonda gives the finest performance of her career as a high class call girl being terrorized by a perverted murderer. Donald Sutherland plays Klute, a midwestern detective who helps track down the murderer. The script is taut and evokes memory of the best of Hitchcock; unfortunately the direction, by Alan J. Paluka, is overly stylized and too melodramatic for the film to be exceptional. Still well worth seeing for Fonda's performance and its excellent evocation of New York's freaky millieu.

The Last Run (Amherst Cinema, Amherst)

An ex-gangster, retired in Spain, takes on one more job to prove he's still got the stuff. Longtime Hollywood director Richard Fleisher blends good action and fine scenery plus another excellent George C. Scott characterization and redeems the general corniness the film seems to be burdened with.

with.

Last Year At Marienbad (Tuesday, Thompson 104, 8 and 9:50)

Director Alain Resnais and screenwriter Alain Robb-Grillet collaborated on this New Wave egigmatic classic, which, when released in 1961, was hailed by most critics as a masterpiece, although most really didn't know why. It may be an elaborate put-on,-judge for yourself; at any rate it's a must for any film cultist and the kind of film which leads true cinema devotees to write six page letters as to its meaning to their favorite critic or obscure film journal. It has three main characters and it's the audience's job to figure out what exactly is the nature of their relationships. Set in a huge, baroque hotel, the film is an engrossing tapestry of beautiful still shots which may or may not mean anything. Featuring Delphine Seyrig, who recently attempted a comeback as the beautiful, six hundred year old vampire in Daughters Of Darkness.

Let's Scare Jessica To Death (Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield)

A low-budget horror film about a somewhat disturbed woman's real or imagined encounter with the supernatural. The attempt at psychological nuisance is boring and it is hardly frightening. It's cheap mimicry of Shirley Jackson, with a cast assembled mostly from television headed by Zohra Lampert, late of "Dark Shadows", and Kevin O'Conner.

The Devils

Walkabout

Maid In Sweden (Campus Cinemas, Hadley)

Another X-rated spectacular from Sweden; seeing it amounts to a rather sophisticated and relatively expensive way of getting your rocks off.

Midnight Cowboy (Thursday, SU Ballroom, 7 and 9:30)

Continued on Page 7A

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather: Variable cloudiness, windy and cooler. Temperature in the 60's.

VOLUME XCIX, ISSUE 24 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS TUESDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1971

Bromery To Decide Between State Or UMass Post This Week

Dr.RandolphW. Bromery, who is now acting Chancellor, is seen here with his children at a recent football game. Dr. Bromery was appointed to the position last Thursday filling the position left vacant by former Chancellor Oswald Tippo.

By MDC STAFF

Acting Chancellor Randolph Bromery will decide whether he will consider becoming the Secretary of Education in Massachusetts or devote himself to the University in Amherst in the next "two or three days".

"I feel that I have to let the Lt. Governor (Donald Dwight) know my intentions", said Bromery, who was named Acting Chancellor last Thursday by the Trustees.

Local newspapers reported Saturday that Dr. Bromery was one of the top four candidates for the newly created position of State Secretary of Education. Lt. Governor Donald Dwight made the announcement in public for the first time in the wake of Chancellor Tippo's resignation.

It was learned that Dr. Bromery had been under consideration for at least two months and has met with the Governor and Lt. Governor several times, about the position which would pay $35,000 and give Dr. Bromery responsibility for all stages of education in Massachusetts, including the University.

Whether or not Dr. Bromery would accept the Secretary's position will not be made public "unless the Lt. Governor decides to let it out", said Bromery in an interview yesterday afternoon.

The former Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs said that his four year stay at UMass had made him deeply interested in the University.

"I've really gotten hung-up with it" said Bromery, unabashedly adding that the decision to remain as Acting Chancellor or to give strong consideration of the Secretary's position will be made on the basis of "what is good for the University and not what suits me personally."

Dr. Bromery felt that there was much he could do as Secretary of Education, particularly in the area of centralizing budgets and reorganizing the many state involvements in education.

Dr. Bromery said that if he does remain as Acting Chancellor he will be just that; doing the job of the Chancellor. Even though he is a strong candidate of the permanent position, and is reportedly the "Trustees choice", Bromery has acknowledged that the position is "only short term" and that in the end he "might just be looking for a job," even though he seems to have a surplus of prospects at present.

Asked what would be different about his Chancellorship, Bromery replied that "I believe in delegating authority to the lowest possible level."

"The major portion of my time will be spent representing the Amherst campus to the President's office" said Bromery, emphasizing that he would "depend a lot on the three Vice-Chancellors" for running the campus.

Bromery said that an acting Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs would be named before Wednesday. Though he would not divulge any names, Bromery said that he does "have someone in mind."

Bromery Eyed For State Post

Lt. Gov. Donald R. Dwight said Friday that the newly appointed acting chancellor of the UMass-Amherst, Randolph W. Bromery is one of four prime candidates for state secretary of education.

Dwight said he hoped Gov. Sargent would make an appointment within two weeks. He declined to name the other three candidates.

Bromery said he had not been offered the state job. He said he had talked to the Governor's representatives about it, but did not know he was a prime candidate.

"The way it is now, my primary concern is being acting chancellor," he said.

If the state job were offered, Bromery said he would make a decision at that time.

Robert J. McCartney of Amherst secretary of the Board of Trustees, said Friday he was surprised to learn Bromery is being considered for the secretary's job.

McCartney said the subject was not mentioned at a two-day board meeting in Lenox, either at the regular or executive sessions.

"In the game of speculation, if he accepts any other post, it is obvious we will have to find another acting chancellor," he said.

Joseph P. Healey, board chairman, and Kenneth W. Johnson, board treasurer, were not available for comment last night.

Yesterday, trustees named an 18-member search committee to seek five candidates for chancellor. Bromery said he would submit his name to the committee if asked, but would not do so on his own initiative.

He said he would accept the chancellorship if the university trustees were to offer it.

The search committee, according to a university spokesman, will include six faculty members selected by the Faculty Senate, six undergraduate students appointed by the Student Senate, two graduate students appointed by the Graduate Student Senate and a Dean to be named by the Dean's Council.

Also on the committee will be an alumnus appointed by the Alumni Board of Directors and two trustees to be named by the Board of Trustees.

No time limit was set by the board, the spokesman said.

The secretary of education will have authority over all elementary, secondary and higher education programs in the state, including the university.

Dwight defined the job as "being the governor's man in the education field."

The state commissioner of education, now Neil V. Sullivan, and president of the university, now Dr. Robert C. Wood, presumably would report to the secretary.

On The Inside:

- Homecoming Details — See page three
- Agnew In Turkey — See page four
- Project 14? — See page three
- Redman Butchered — See page twelve

Dr. Bromery: A Biography

The new acting chancellor, Dr. Randolph William Bromery, was born January 18, 1926, in Cumberland, Maryland. He has a wife Cecile and five children.

Bromery attended the University of Michigan and graduated from Howard University where he obtained his B.S. in Math and Physics.

Subsequently, he earned his degree in Geology, Geophysics and a master of Science at American University. At Johns Hopkins University he earned his PhD. in Geography and Oceanography.

In 1948, until his arrival at UMass, he travelled all over the world with the U.S. Geological Survey as a Geophysicist, and was made Project Chief in many of the expeditions.

In 1967, he came to UMass as pro Assistant Professor of Geophysics. He was made Professor of Geophysics and became Chairman of the Department of Geophysics in 1968.

In 1970, he was made Vice-Chancellor of Student Affairs, and is currently Acting Chancellor of the Amherst Campus.

He has written a number of publications and lectures on occasion.

Randolph W. Bromery

If you are interested in submitting a longish piece of fiction for publication in the Collegian's new Friday supplement "Poor Richard's", see either Dave Williams or Bob Nesti at the Collegian office. Also if you are interested in writing reviews or features come to the office and speak with either Bob or Dave.

BOLLES SHOE STORE

HAS A COMPLETE SELECTION OF BOOTS & SHOES

FOR MODERN MEN & WOMEN

8 Main St., Amherst

We honor Bank Americard and Master Charge

OPEN DAILY 9-5:30/FRI TILL 9 PM

I.D. Photos

Taken Sept. 7,
Graduate Resitration

are now available
in 109 Hampshire House

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN are on the second floor of the Student Union on the University campus. zip code 01002. Phones are 545-2550 (news), 545-0344 (sports), and 549-1311 (editor).

Second class postage paid at Amherst, the DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes five times weekly Monday through Friday during the academic year except during vacation and exam periods, three or four times a week following a vacation or exam period or when a holiday falls within a week. Accepted for mailing under the authority of the act of March 3, 1879 as amended by the act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 (two semester, $11.00 per year.

Trustees Form Search Committee

As was expected, the Board of Trustees Friday approved its executive committee motion establishing an Ad Hoc Committee to find a new chancellor.

The committee will include six faculty members picked by the Faculty Senate, six undergraduates picked by the Student Senate, two graduate students picked by the Graduate Senate, and a dean to be named by the Dean's Council.

Also on the committee will be an alumnus appointed by the Alumni Board of Directors and two Trustees to be named by the Board.

No time limit for the committee's work was imposed by the Board in establishing the committee. The committee is to recommend no fewer than five names and no more than fifteen to the Board, which will make the final decision.

Selectmen Pick Legislation

By STEPHEN FINE

This past weekend UMass hosted the Massachusetts Selectmens Association 43rd Annual State-Wide Town Meeting Program, in the Campus Center Auditorium. The purpose of the meeting was for the selectmen to vote on articles that will be put before the legislature.

According to Gerry Whitlock, the meeting chairman, "It was a state-wide town meeting where the selectmen vote on town bills to be proposed before the state legislature. These bills will have to be lobbied in Boston for passage."

Whitlock feels state-wide town meeting for selectmen is only an enlarged version of a New England town meeting. "The people in towns vote on what articles they want to be put before the legislature and then we vote on it here."

The meeting had as speakers UMass President Robert C. Wood and Lt. Governor Dwight.

The Economy

Unions Meet On Phase Two

WASHINGTON (AP)-Despite a Republican senator's peacemaking move, the nation's top labor leaders held their counsel Monday on the eve of a meeting that could make or break President Nixon's post-freeze economic program.

The Executive Council of the 13-million-member AFL-CIO and the heads of the two largest independent unions, the Teamsters and the United Auto Workers, will meet Tuesday to decide whether to participate in the Phase 2 economic plan.

A spokesman for the AFL-CIO said there had been no efforts by administration officials to contact federation President George Meany to patch up a dispute over how the post-freeze program will operate.

At the White House, spokesmen said Nixon worked in his office at the nearby Executive Office Building, but refused to say on what. The President scheduled a Cabinet meeting for Tuesday afternoon.

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., sent telegrams to Meany and other top union officials Sunday, trying to resolve their reported doubts on whether the Cost of Living Council would have veto power over wage decisions that would be made by a newly created tripartite Pay Board.

Javits said labor's participation "is critically necessary" if the post-freeze program is to operate effectively.

The White House has said that the Pay Board, as well as a seven member Price Commission, would be semi-autonomous bodies. While their individual pay and price decisions would be final, the Cost of Living Council could step in if the wage-price criteria they developed got out of line with the administration's goals.

Meany, who has been critical of the wage-price freeze, has urged an autonomous Pay Board.

As the labor leaders pondered their decision, consumer advocate Ralph Nader, who was excluded from White House consumer consultations on Phase 2, told a Senate subcommittee Nixon's post-freeze program undermines the Constitution.

"Any strict constructionist judge wouldn't take any more than 14 minutes to dispose of these programs on a constitutional basis," Nader said. "This all wraps up as a rape that makes the executive expansion under the New Deal look like a picnic."

Sen. Lee Metcalf, D-Mont., said he may push for congressional monitoring of the work of the Pay Board and Price Commission.

Blasting Beware

Blasting for the big ditch will continue daily through October 13 in the Orchard area from the Pond to E. Pleasant Street. Pedestrians, cyclists, and horseback riders are asked to keep clear of the area.

MDC Classifieds

EVERY WEDNESDAY,
STAMPEDE NIGHT
starting October 13, some of the far west will come to New England...
Our Cowgirls, in western garb, armed with water pistols filled with Vodka, will serve your custom sliced western steer beef by the ounce.--45¢ per ounce for prime sirloin, 70¢ per ounce for fillet mignon, and 35¢ per ounce for a rib of broiled beef.
Keep our Friday night buffet in mind.
The Lord Jeffery
30 Boltwood Ave. AMHERST, MASS. 253-2576
RAOUL DIETRICH, INNKEEPER

LORIN HOLLANDER "An Awesome Pianist"

Tues. & Wed., Oct. 12-13
Bowker Aud. - 8 p.m.

Tickets available: Fine Arts council Ticket Office, 125 Herter Hall. Tel. 545-0202. Reserved seats $1 UM undergrads, $2 full-time students, $3 UM faculty/staff, $3.50 general public.

Presented by the UMass Fine Arts Council

Student Housing

Project 14 Comes To A Complete Halt

By ROBERT MEDEIROS

Project 14, a housing project that was to be completed in the fall of '72, has raised enough controversy and questioning concerning its feasibility, among the administration and the students, to cause a complete halt to the project for the present time.

The Administration plans to take at least two months to make a thorough reevaluation of the project. The results of this inquiry could set a precedent for the future expansion of housing on campus. Project 14 was to be built in the area of Fraternity and Sorority Park.

A statement issued to the Collegian on Wednesday by the Vice-Chancellor for Administration Services, Thomas B. Campion, summed up the viewpoint of the Administration.

"Many unforeseen delays in Project 14 have occurred, so we have decided to use the opportunity to review the entire subject of single student housing (capacity 600 students), originally planned for the fall of '72," he said.

Chet Richardson, who is a member of the Student Senate Rent and Fees Committee, and who specializes in housing, said that Project 14 would be too expensive, and that it would not be "rational to build it." Richardson feels that the debt service charge which covers such things as the interest and bonding of the dorms would be too expensive for the student to afford.

The debt service charge is standard for all dorms in the University. The debt service charge is constructed in order that all dorms will be self-liquidating. What has happened as seen with the Southwest complex, and recently with the Sylvan complex is that there have been substantial increases in building costs which are directly reflected in the debt service charge. One of the major questions facing the Administration is whether the debt service charge covering Project 14 will be too expensive for the student to afford.

Mike West, coordinator for all five residential areas, had said in an earlier MDC interview that it may be getting too expensive to build campus housing which the student can afford.

Another aspect of Project 14 is whether the students want to live in dorms in the first place. Robert Chiller, the chairman of Rent and Fees committee, said that the students want to live in "apartment type housing, and don't want to live in dorms."

Jack Littlefield, Director of Planning, said that the Project 14 dorms will offer a new innovation in dorm living.

"The single room dorms will give students a new option in their living habits if they wish to live on campus," said Littlefield. He added that the new dorms will emphasize student control in the formulation of dorm policy.

"In fact the dorms were built without a Head of Residence to serve this purpose," Littlefield said.

The delay of Project 14 was made with a minimum of problems. It was at first feared that the dorms would have to be completed by the fall of '72 in order to meet the influx of students, or face the consequences of tripling. The growth of the University was reduced from 1500 to 860 students which allowed the delay of construction of Project 14 for further study.

An added sidelight of Project 14 has been the role of the Student Senate in exerting pressure in the area of Administrative housing policy. The Student Senate is working to secure the right to make final approval on all Administrative decisions concerning campus housing.

The tractor in the foreground is idle and will be for at least two months as the Administration makes a thorough revaluation of Project 14, a University housing project which was projected to be completed in the fall of 1972.

Yes Virginia, There Will Be A Homecoming

By SHELLEY LAUZON

For those who haven't heard the rumors, there is a Homecoming, and, believe it or not, it happens to be next weekend, October 15-17.

Activities will start on Friday, when "The Reivers", a film sponsored by the Newman Club, will be shown in the Student Union Ballroom at 4, 6:30, 9, and 11 p.m. Admission is 50 cents.

A float parade, sponsored by the Greek system on campus, will begin at 7 p.m.,in the Haigus Mall. From there, it will proceed down Massachusetts Avenue to Lincoln Avenue, turn onto Amity Street to North Pleasant Street, and ending back at the mall.

Sigma Alpha Mu tops off the evening with a concert featuring "Featherbed", back from Winter Carni, and the James Montgomery Blues Band. There will be only one show, 8:30 - 12:30, in the Campus Center Auditorium. Admission is $2.00.

On Saturday is the football game between the University of Massachusetts and the University of Rhode Island at Alumni Stadium, starting at 1 p.m.

"Yellow Submarine", sponsored by Sigma Alpha Mu, will be shown in Mahar Auditorium at 6, 8, and 10 p.m. Admission is 75 cents.

Butterfield House brings to the UMass campus "Beacon Street Union" and "Rush" at 8:00 p.m. This concert will be held in the Student Union Ballroom, with admission set at $1.25.

Rounding out Saturday's schedule of events will be a nightclub, sponsored by the Program Council, to be held in the Campus Center Auditorium at 8 p.m. Three groups, to be announced at a later date, will provide "mixed bag" music to please just about everyone. Food and drink (liquor for those over 21) will be served, and admission is a "reasonable" 50 cents.

Homecoming weekend ends Sunday with the showing of Fellini's "Satyricon". Sponsored by the Program Council, the film will be shown at 7 and 9:30 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. Admission is the usual 50 cents.

The Revellers, a service organization, will be helping at these various programs during the weekend.

Due to the events at the Cage last fall, no big concerts have been scheduled this year. However, the various groups on campus working on Homecoming have tried to present programs with appeal for everyone.

TOP LP's LOWEST PRICES 50% OFF

Stop overpaying for the records you buy. Guaranteed factory-fresh records by original artists on original labels at unbelievably low prices. We are not a record club. There is no obligation of any kind. Fast shipment of all orders.

CUT HERE

Superstar Records, Inc. Dept. 208
210 E. 23 St., New York, N.Y. 10010
Please check boxes for selections

		Our Price	List
☐ 1	Who/Who's Next	2.99	6.98
☐ 2	Carole King/Tapestry	2.99	6.98
☐ 3	Moody Blues/Every Good Boy	2.99	6.98
☐ 4	Paul & Linda McCartney/Ram	2.99	6.98
☐ 5	Rod Stewart/Every Picture Tells a Story	2.99	6.98
☐ 6	Black Sabbath/Master of Reality	2.99	6.98
☐ 7	John Lennon/Imagine	2.99	6.98
☐ 8	Jefferson Airplane/Bark	2.99	6.98
☐ 9	Jesus Christ Superstar (2 LPs)	5.99	11.98
☐ 10	James Gang/Live-In Concert	2.99	6.98
☐ 11	Beach Boys/Surf's Up	2.49	4.49
☐ 12	Poco/From the Inside	2.99	6.98
☐ 13	Grateful Dead (2 LP's)	4.99	6.98
☐ 14	10 Years After/Space In Time	2.99	6.98
☐ 15	The Band/Cahoots	2.99	6.98

Add 50¢ post., hdlg., insur., for 1st LP and 35¢ for each additional LP. NY residents add sales tax. Enclosed is $_____ cash, check, M.O. (no COD)

Name .....
Address .....
City ..... State ..... Zip .....

WMUA 91.1FM

COMMUTER ASSEMBLY ELECTIONS
(in front of the University Store)
9 a.m. - 5 p.m.,
Thurs., Oct. 14
ID's Required for Voting

MDC Classifieds Pay

Learn to Drive
AMHERST AUTO SCHOOL
34 Main Street
256-6066
save this Ad

save save

STUDENTS-FACULTY

Before you spend your hard earned dollars call Discount Sales for unhearded of savings on:

- Panasonic TV, Radios — Stereo Components
- Color — B — W Television by RCA, Emerson, Panasonic
- Brand name Watches, Luggage — Shavers
- Diamonds of certified quality — Wedding Bands
- Small Electric Appliances, — Vacuum Cleaners
- Quality Brand name Mattresses — Box springs
- Any size refrigerator, 3 ft. or 24 ft. refr.-freez.
- RCA Console Stereo

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED
call
DISCOUNT SALES
Mon. thru Thursday
6:30 p.m. - 12:00 a.m.
save 549-3930 save

INDEX

Whether you liked the '71 Index or not, you are invited to attend the

Recruitment Meeting

for the '72 Index.

Yearbooks will never be the same, and your ideas are needed.

Tuesday, October 12 7:30

904-908 CAMPUS CENTER

Dr. Bromery: A Biography

The new acting chancellor, Dr. Randolph William Bromery, was born January 18, 1926, in Cumberland, Maryland. He has a wife Cecile and five children.

Bromery attended the University of Michigan and graduated from Howard University where he obtained his B.S. in Math and Physics.

Subsequently, he earned his degree in Geology, Geophysics and a master of Science at American University. At Johns Hopkins University he earned his PhD. in Geography and Oceanography.

In 1948, until his arrival at UMass, he travelled all over the world with the U.S. Geological Survey as a Geophysicist, and was made Project Chief in many of the expeditions.

In 1967, he came to UMass as pro Assistant Professor of Geophysics. He was made Professor of Geophysics and became Chairman of the Department of Geophysics in 1968.

In 1970, he was made Vice-Chancellor of Student Affairs, and is currently Acting Chancellor of the Amherst Campus.

He has written a number of publications and lectures on occasion.

Randolph W. Bromery

If you are interested in submitting a longish piece of fiction for publication in the Collegian's new Friday supplement "Poor Richard's", see either Dave Williams or Bob Nesti at the Collegian office. Also if you are interested in writing reviews or features come to the office and speak with either Bob or Dave.

BOLLES SHOE STORE
HAS A COMPLETE SELECTION OF BOOTS & SHOES

FOR MODERN MEN & WOMEN
8 Main St., Amherst
We honor Bank Americard and Master Charge
OPEN DAILY 9-5:30/FRI TILL 9 PM

I.D. Photos
Taken Sept. 7,
Graduate Resitration
are now available
in 109 Hampshire House

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN are on the second floor of the Student Union on the University campus. zip code 01002 Phones are 545-2550 (news), 545-0344 (sports), and 549-1311 (editor)

Second class postage paid at Amherst, the DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes five times weekly Monday through Friday during the academic year except during vacation and exam periods, three or four times a week following a vacation or exam period or when a holiday falls within a week. Accepted for mailing under the authority of the act of March 3, 1879 as amended by the act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester, $10.00 per year.

Trustees Form Search Committee

As was expected, the Board of Trustees Friday approved its executive committee motion establishing an Ad Hoc Committee to find a new chancellor.

The committee will include six faculty members picked by the Faculty Senate, six undergraduates picked by the Student Senate, two graduate students picked by the Graduate Senate, and a dean to be named by the Dean's Council.

Also on the committee will be an alumnus appointed by the Alumni Board of Directors and two Trustees to be named by the Board.

No time limit for the committee's work was imposed by the Board in establishing the committee. The committee is to recommend no fewer than five names and no more than fifteen to the Board, which will make the final decision.

Selectmen Pick Legislation

By STEPHEN FINE

This past weekend UMass hosted the Massachusetts Selectmens Association 43rd Annual State-Wide Town Meeting Program, in the Campus Center Auditorium. The purpose of the meeting was for the selectmen to vote on articles that will be put before the legislature.

According to Gerry Whitlock, the meeting chairman, "It was a state-wide town meeting where the selectmen vote on town bills to be proposed before the state legislature. These bills will have to be lobbied in Boston for passage."

Whitlock feels state-wide town meeting for selectmen is only an enlarged version of a New England town meeting. "The people in towns vote on what articles they want to be put before the legislature and then we vote on it here."

The meeting had as speakers UMass President Robert C. Wood and Lt. Governor Dwight.

The Economy

Unions Meet On Phase Two

WASHINGTON (AP)-Despite a Republican senator's peacemaking move, the nation's top labor leaders held their counsel Monday on the eve of a meeting that could make or break President Nixon's post-freeze economic program.

The Executive Council of the 13-million-member AFL-CIO and the heads of the two largest independent unions, the Teamsters and the United Auto Workers, will meet Tuesday to decide whether to participate in the Phase 2 economic plan.

A spokesman for the AFL-CIO said there had been no efforts by administration officials to contact federation President George Meany to patch up a dispute over how the post-freeze program will operate.

At the White House, spokesmen said Nixon worked in his office at the nearby Executive Office Building, but refused to say on what. The President scheduled a Cabinet meeting for Tuesday afternoon.

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., sent telegrams to Meany and other top union officials Sunday, trying to resolve their reported doubts on whether the Cost of Living Council would have veto power over wage decisions that would be made by a newly created tripartite Pay Board.

Javits said labor's participation "is critically necessary" if the post-freeze program is to operate effectively.

The White House has said that the Pay Board, as well as a seven member Price Commission, would be semi-autonomous bodies. While their individual pay and price decisions would be final, the Cost of Living Council could step in if the wage-price criteria they developed got out of line with the administration's goals.

Meany, who has been critical of the wage-price freeze, has urged an autonomous Pay Board.

As the labor leaders pondered their decision, consumer advocate Ralph Nader, who was excluded from White House consumer consultations on Phase 2, told a Senate subcommittee Nixon's post-freeze program undermines the Constitution.

"Any strict constructionist judge wouldn't take any more than 14 minutes to dispose of these programs on a constitutional basis," Nader said. "This all wraps up as a rape that makes the executive expansion under the New Deal look like a picnic."

Sen. Lee Metcalf, D-Mont., said he may push for congressional monitoring of the work of the Pay Board and Price Commission.

Blasting Beware

Blasting for the big ditch will continue daily through October 13 in the Orchard area from the Pond to E. Pleasant Street. Pedestrians, cyclists, and horseback riders are asked to keep clear of the area.

MDC Classifieds

EVERY WEDNESDAY,
STAMPEDE NIGHT
starting October 13, some of the far west will come to New England...
Our Cowgirls, in western garb, armed with water pistols filled with Vodka, will serve your custom sliced western steer beef by the ounce.--45¢ per ounce for prime sirloin, 70¢ per ounce for fillet mignon, and 35¢ per ounce for a rib of broiled beef.
Keep our Friday night buffet in mind.
The Lord Jeffery
30 Boltwood Ave. AMHERST, MASS. 253-2576
RAOUL DIETRICH, INNKEEPER

LORIN HOLLANDER "An Awesome Pianist"
Tues. & Wed., Oct. 12-13
Bowker Aud. - 8 p.m.
Tickets available: Fine Arts council Ticket Office, 175 Herter Hall. Tel. 545-0202. Reserved seats $1 UM undergrads, $2 full-time students, $3 UM faculty/staff, $3.50 general public.

Presented by the UMass Fine Arts Council

Student Housing

Project 14 Comes To A Complete Halt

By ROBERT MEDEIROS

Project 14, a housing project that was to be completed in the fall of '72, has raised enough controversy and questioning concerning its feasibility, among the administration and the students, to cause a complete halt to the project for the present time.

The Administration plans to take at least two months to make a thorough reevaluation of the project. The results of this inquiry could set a precedent for the future expansion of housing on campus. Project 14 was to be built in the area of Fraternity and Sorority Park.

A statement issued to the Collegian on Wednesday by the Vice-Chancellor for Administration Services, Thomas B. Campion, summed up the viewpoint of the Administration.

"Many unforeseen delays in Project 14 have occurred, so we have decided to use the opportunity to review the entire subject of single student housing (capacity 600 students), originally planned for the fall of '72," he said.

Chet Richardson, who is a member of the Student Senate Rent and Fees Committee, and who specializes in housing, said that Project 14 would be too expensive, and that it would not be "rational to build it." Richardson feels that the debt service charge which covers such things as the interest and bonding of the dorms would be too expensive for the student to afford.

The debt service charge is standard for all dorms in the University. The debt service charge is constructed in order that all dorms will be self-liquidating. What has happened as seen with the Southwest complex, and recently with the Sylvan complex is that there have been substantial increases in building costs which are directly reflected in the debt service charge. One of the major questions facing the Administration is whether the debt service charge covering Project 14 will be too expensive for the student to afford.

Mike West, coordinator for all five residential areas, had said in an earlier MDC interview that it may be getting too expensive to build campus housing which the student can afford.

Another aspect of Project 14 is whether the students want to live in dorms in the first place. Robert Chiller, the chairman of Rent and Fees committee, said that the students want to live in "apartment type housing, and don't want to live in dorms."

Jack Littlefield, Director of Planning, said that the Project 14 dorms will offer a new innovation in dorm living.

"The single room dorms will give students a new option in their living habits if they wish to live on campus," said Littlefield. He added that the new dorms will emphasize student control in the formulation of dorm policy.

"In fact the dorms were built without a Head of Residence to serve this purpose," Littlefield said.

The delay of Project 14 was made with a minimum of problems. It was at first feared that the dorms would have to be completed by the fall of '72 in order to meet the influx of students, or face the consequences of tripling. The growth of the University was reduced from 1500 to 860 students which allowed the delay of construction of Project 14 for further study.

An added sidelight of Project 14 has been the role of the Student Senate in exerting pressure in the area of Administrative housing policy. The Student Senate is working to secure the right to make final approval on all Administrative decisions concerning campus housing.

The tractor in the foreground is idle and will be for at least two months as the Administration makes a thorough revaluation of Project 14, a University housing project which was projected to be completed in the fall of 1972.

Yes Virginia, There Will Be A Homecoming

By SHELLEY LAUZON

For those who haven't heard the rumors, there is a Homecoming, and, believe it or not, it happens to be next weekend, October 15-17.

Activities will start on Friday, when "The Reivers", a film sponsored by the Newman Club, will be shown in the Student Union Ballroom at 4, 6:30, 9, and 11 p.m. Admission is 50 cents.

A float parade, sponsored by the Greek system on campus, will begin at 7 p.m., in the Haigus Mall. From there, it will proceed down Massachusetts Avenue to Lincoln Avenue, turn onto Amity Street to North Pleasant Street, and ending back at the mall.

Sigma Alpha Mu tops off the evening with a concert featuring "Featherbed", back from Winter Carni, and the James Montgomery Blues Band. There will be only one show, 8:30 - 12:30, in the Campus Center Auditorium. Admission is $2.00.

On Saturday is the football game between the University of Massachusetts and the University of Rhode Island at Alumni Stadium, starting at 1 p.m.

"Yellow Submarine", sponsored by Sigma Alpha Mu, will be shown in Mahar Auditorium at 6, 8, and 10 p.m. Admission is 75 cents.

Butterfield House brings to the UMass campus "Beacon Street Union" and "Rush" at 8:00 p.m. This concert will be held in the Student Union Ballroom, with admission set at $1.25.

Rounding out Saturday's schedule of events will be a nightclub, sponsored by the Program Council, to be held in the Campus Center Auditorium at 8 p.m. Three groups, to be announced at a later date, will provide "mixed bag" music to please just about everyone. Food and drink (liquor for those over 21) will be served, and admission is a "reasonable" 50 cents.

Homecoming weekend ends Sunday with the showing of Fellini's "Satyricon". Sponsored by the Program Council, the film will be shown at 7 and 9:30 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. Admission is the usual 50 cents.

The Revellers, a service organization, will be helping at these various programs during the weekend.

Due to the events at the Cage last fall, no big concerts have been scheduled this year. However, the various groups on campus working on Homecoming have tried to present programs with appeal for everyone.

TOP LP's LOWEST PRICES 50% OFF
Stop overpaying for the records you buy. Guaranteed factory-fresh records by original artists on original labels at unbelievably low prices. We are not a record club. There is no obligation of any kind. Fast shipment of all orders.
CUT HERE
Superstar Records, Inc. Dept. 208
210 E. 23 St., New York, N.Y. 10010
Please check boxes for selections

		Our Price	List
☐ 1	Who/Who's Next	2.99	5.98
☐ 2	Carole King/Tapestry	2.99	5.98
☐ 3	Moody Blues//Every Good Boy	2.99	5.98
☐ 4	Paul & Linda McCartney/Ram	2.99	5.98
☐ 5	Rod Stewart/Every Picture Tells a Story	2.99	5.98
☐ 6	Black Sabbath/Master of Reality	2.99	5.98
☐ 7	John Lennon/Imagine	2.99	5.98
☐ 8	Jefferson Airplane/Bark	2.99	5.98
☐ 9	Jesus Christ Superstar (2 LPs)	5.99	11.98
☐ 10	James Gang/Live-in Concert	2.99	5.98
☐ 11	Beach Boys/Surf's Up	2.49	4.98
☐ 12	Poco/From the Inside	2.99	5.98
☐ 13	Grateful Dead (2 Lp's)	4.98	8.98
☐ 14	10 Years After/Space in Time	2.99	5.98
☐ 15	The Band/Cahoots	2.99	5.98

Add 50¢ post., hdlg., insur., for 1st LP and 35¢ for each additional LP. NY residents add sales tax. Enclosed is $_____ cash, check, M.O. (no COD)
Name .....
Address .....
City ..... State ..... Zip .....

WMUA 91.1FM

COMMUTER ASSEMBLY ELECTIONS
(in front of the University Store)
9 a.m. - 5 p.m.,
Thurs., Oct. 14
ID's Required for Voting

MDC Classifieds Pay

Learn to Drive
AMHERST AUTO SCHOOL
34 Main Street
256-6066
save this Ad

save save
STUDENTS-FACULTY
Before you spend your hard earned dollars call Discount Sales for unhearded of savings on:
- Panasonic TV, Radios — Stereo Components
- Color — B — W Television by RCA, Emerson, Panasonic
- Brand name Watches, Luggage — Shavers
- Diamonds of certified quality — Wedding Bands
- Small Electric Appliances, — Vacuum Cleaners
- Quality Brand name Mattresses — Box springs
- Any size refrigerator, 3 ft. or 24 ft. refr.-freez.
- RCA Console Stereo

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED
call
DISCOUNT SALES
Mon. thru Thursday
6:30 p.m. - 12:00 a.m.
549-3930
save save

INDEX
Whether you liked the '71 Index or not, you are invited to attend the Recruitment Meeting
for the '72 Index.
Yearbooks will never be the same, and your ideas are needed.
Tuesday, October 12 7:30
904-908 CAMPUS CENTER

In The Nation And The World

Agnew Bombed Out In Turkey

ANKARA (AP) — Bombs hurled at two American targets marked the beginning Monday of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's 13-day mission to Turkey, Iran and Greece. The bombs exploded in Istanbul, 220 miles northwest of here, a few hours before Agnew's plane landed.

The Vice President

U.S. officials in Istanbul said an attempt was made to throw a bomb over the fence of the U.S. Consulate General grounds, but the device fell short and exploded, causing the no damage. The second bomb blew up the car of Kenton Keith, a U.S. cultural attache. The car was parked in front of his home.

The Consulate was closed for Columbus Day. Turkey's martial law government ordered the nation's press to print no stories of the explosions.

Agnew said in an arrival statement that the U.S. commitment to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization-of which Turkey is a member-"Stands on a foundation of bedrock."

Agnew was met at the airport by Premier Nihat Erim. They rode the 20 miles into the city along a highway cleared of other traffic and lined by clusters of Turks.

Agnew told Erim that "the link our two countries have shared in NATO for more than a decade remains vital, not only to our mutual security but also to the peace of the world."

On the flight from Washington, the vice president voiced opposition to any congressional ban on military aid to Greece, the last and longest stop on his current trip.

He said Congress would be "impairing and impeding" a foreign policy geared to U.S. security by voting for such a ban.

Agnew is to spend two days conferring with Erim and other officials of the Turkish coalition government, which faces a possible crisis over conservative resistance to political reform moves the premier advocates.

The vice president flies Wednesday to Iran to represent the United States at the 2,500th anniversary celebration of the Persian monarchy. He begins his Greek visit, "returning to the country of my ancestors," on Saturday.

Agnew told newsmen on the plane that Greece was a very important NATO member and Congress should not "make it more difficult for us to provide the proper amount" of military assistance.

"The opinion in the United States that looks with disfavor on the Greek government generally looks with great disfavor on me," he added.

U.S. military aid to Greece was suspended after the 196 military coup that brought the regime of Premier George Papadopoulos to power. The Nixon administration restored the aid 13 months ago.

The House of Representatives has voted to renew the ban unless President Nixon certifies that overriding U.S. security requirements justify military aid, and the Senate Foreign Relations committee is virtually certain to recommend similar Senate action.

Bush Expresses Concern Over Taiwan

(AP) — A U.S. spokesman said Monday Ambassador George Bush shares the concern expressed by a group of U.S. senators that the expulsion of Nationalist China may have an adverse effect on American support for the United Nations.

The spokesman made his comment after Sen. James L. Buckley, C-R, N.Y., told Bush the expulsion should lead to "a dramatic reduction" in U.S. financial contributions to the world organization.

Buckley is one of a group of 21 senators who joined two weeks ago in a statement to this effect. Another of the group, Sen. Robert Taft, R-Ohio, is scheduled to call on Bush Tuesday morning to stress the same point.

The U.S. spokesman said Bush welcomes an airing of these views, but he rejected the idea that they were "threats" intended to influence the outcome of the U.N. China debate which begins next Monday.

Asked whether other countries had expressed concern about references to possible cuts in U.S. contributions, he replied: "Not to my knowledge."

Buckley told newsmen, after his visit with Bush, that the timing of his talks was aimed at altering U.N. members to America's mood on the China issue. He said mail received by his group showed that "three quarters of the American people" agree with the idea of reducing U.S. contributions in the event Taiwan is expelled.

Asked whether Bush shares Buckley's views on possible financial cuts, the spokesman said: "I think he does. I should say he shares his concern."

In the General Assembly's round of policy declarations, delegates continued to deal briefly with the China controversy without spelling out in many cases just how they will vote on the rival resolutions which will be debated next week.

News In Brief

WASHINGTON (AP) - Labor Union leaders meet Tuesday in a conference that could make or break President Nixon's Phase 2 program to curb inflation.

The Nixon administration seeks a compromise on the school-lunch program which one official says is threatening to become a nationalized meal service for all children regardless of need.

* * *

INDOCHINA

The release of a North Vietnamese prisoner of war raises cautious hopes for the freeing by the enemy of more American prisoners.

* * *

INTERNATIONAL

President Sadat of Egypt hustles to Moscow to decide, with the Kremlin's help, on a response to a new U.S. Middle East peace proposal.

* * *

Iran is abuzz with excited court chatter and delicious name-dropping as the big 2,500th birthday bash for the Persian Empire nears.

* * *

A couple of anti-American bomb blasts in Istanbul precede Vice President Agnew's arrival in Ankara.

* * *

NATIONAL

Los Angeles area docks remain in a dispute over 11 workers despite a court order temporarily ending the West Coast longshoremen's strike. Meanwhile, East and some Gulf ports remain shut down and the soft coal strike continues.

* * *

MEDICINE

A report to an American Public Health Association meeting says girls are more likely to develop tendencies to heart disease than boys are if their fathers have it.

* * *

INTERESTED IN THE STUDY OF LAW?

A representative of the Washington University School of Law (St. Louis) will be on campus Oct. 18, 1971 from 1:00 - 5:00 p.m. to talk to students planning to enter law school upon graduation, or thinking about it.

Make appointments at the Career Planning and Placement Office, 239 Whitmore.

The most Meaningful Semester you'll ever spend... could be the one on World Campus Afloat

Sailing Feb. 1972 to Africa and the Orient

Through a transfer format, more than 5,000 students from 450 campuses have participated for a semester in this unique program in international education.

WCA will broaden your horizons, literally and figuratively . . . and give you a better chance to make it—meaningfully—in this changing world. You'll study at sea with an experienced cosmopolitan faculty, and then during port stops you'll study the world itself. You'll discover that no matter how foreign and far-away, you have a lot in common with people of other lands.

WCA isn't as expensive as you might think; we've done our best to bring it within reach of most college students. Write today for free details.

TEACHERS: Summer travel with credit for teachers and administrators.

Write Today to: Chapman College, Box CC26, Orange, California 92666

AUTO INSURANCE

ALL CARS — ALL DRIVERS
BUDGET PAYMENTS
CYCLES — SCOOTERS

Tekoa Insurance Agency

160 Pleasant St. Northampton 586-2742

10 Broad St. Westfield 562-3604

An Evening of Authentic Country Music

25¢ BLUE GRASS 25¢
NITE
TUESDAYS
at the BLUEWALL CAFETARIA CC with Don Stover
and the White Oak Mountain Boys
(as the only act, Stover's Band will play all evening)
8:30 - 1:00

JOHN F. McMANUS
of the
JOHN BIRCH SOCIETY
"Conspiracy Above Communism"
Thompson Hall - 102
Tuesday, October 12, 1971, 8:15 p.m.
Reception in Colonial Lounge after lecture
dvp
Distinguished Visitors Program

CEQ

Nader-Type Service Group Formed

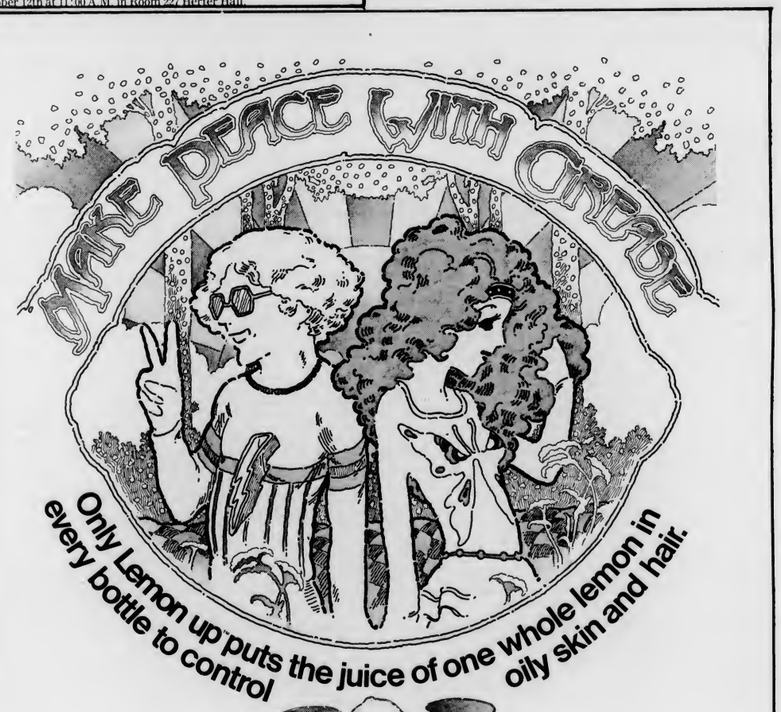
About 50 UMass students have formed a Nadar-type Public Interest Research Group (PIRG) for Western Massachusetts at the UMass campus. Ed Voci, a former Student Senator, described the general background for this type of organization last week at a meeting in the Campus Center. It would be student funded (non-profit), and student run in the public interest.

The original suggestion was made by the Connecticut Valley Committee (C.V.C.) which had received $25,000 from Rockefeller to use for the benefit for the residents of the Connecticut Valley. C.V.C. has pledged about $12,000 to set up a P.I.R.G. in Western Massachusetts. After P.I.R.G. is in operation, C.V.C. will discontinue support. They have hired two people as organizers, one of which was at Wednesday's meeting.

A subsequent meeting will be held at 7 p.m. tomorrow in the Campus Center (check the Collegian for the place) to form the UMass working group.

The general feeling seems among group members to be that the Proposal from Minnesota P.I.R.G., would be adopted. Colleges and Universities in Minnesota and Oregon have all ready formed similar groups and are operating now to investigate, publicize, and act on problems they deem important to their states. Since Western Massachusetts seems to be a natural cohesive entity, C.V.C. has suggested this area form a PIRG. However, again, the choice of area will be up to the delegates on Monday.

The established state groups have operated thus: A petition is circulated asking that a refundable fee be charged each student (say $2/semester), the proceeds (after refunds) are then turned over to a non-profit corporation formed and run by the students. The students elect from among themselves a Board of Directors which decides on problems to be dealt with. Then, with the aid of hired professionals, student task forces (like Nadar's Raiders) are formed to investigate and report on that problem. The report is published, or used as a basis for introducing legislation, or instituting a law suit to alleviate the problem.



Other PIRG's have found it possible to get students credit for the work they do on the task forces. It may even be possible for a student to spend full time on such a task force as an independent study project.

Lorin Hollander Arrives On Campus

Lorin Hollander, the dynamic young pianist arrived on campus late last night to begin a three day visit to UMass. Mr. Hollander is the guest of the Fine Arts Council and will perform two recitals in Bowker Auditorium. This evening at 8, Mr. Hollander will perform Schubert's Sonata in G, Gaspard De La Nuit by Maurice Ravel and one of his own compositions, "Impuise". Tomorrow evening, Wednesday, October 13th, Mr. Hollander will perform an entirely different program including Schubert's Sonata in B Flat, Opus Posth.; Three Gnossiennes by Erik Satie; Pavane for a Dead Princess by Maurice Ravel and Sonata No. 7 by Sergie Prokofiev.

Reserved single tickets to either program are priced at $1 to UMass undergrads; $2 to other full-time students; $3 to UMass faculty/staff and $3.50 to the general public. Full ticket information may be obtained by contacting the Fine Arts Council, 125 Herter Hall or at Bowker Auditorium one hour before each of the recitals. Tel. 545-0202.

Lorin Hollander is expected to be special guest at an informal meeting of music majors and faculty this morning, Tuesday, October 12th at 11:00 A.M. in Room 227 Herter Hall.

That's the difference between just a little lemon fragrance Lemon Up and products with or extract. That's why Lemon Up Shampoo makes hair shiny clean. That's why Lemon Up Facial Cleanser is far better than soap. And that's why Lemon Up Anti-Blemish Lotion with hexachlorophene is your best defense against oil-troubled skin.

TICKETS: 125 HERTER HALL. TEL. 545-0202

CLAUDE KIPNIS MIME THEATRE

THUR., OCT. 21 8:00 P.M. BOWKER AUD.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF — Richard C. Hanson
MANAGING EDITOR — David D. Williams
BUSINESS MANAGER — James Gold
EXECUTIVE EDITOR — Barry J. Rubenstein
NEWS EDITOR — Anne C. Sladnicki
SPORTS EDITOR — Earle T. Barroll

PHOTO EDITOR — Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR — Robert Nesti

TODAY'S STAFF

NEWS STAFF — Bob Nesti
SPORTS — Earle Barroll, Dan Kamal
EDITORIAL — Barry Rubenstein
DARKROOM — Alan Chapman, Carl Nash
AD LAYOUT — Terry Wanczyk

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administration read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the views of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, and letters represent the personal views of the writers.

Cut Classes?

Student Mobe is organizing another teach-in? What for? Over the last couple of years almost everybody has come to hate the war and want to see it ended. It's not like the old days, '67 or '68, when teach-ins were needed to change people's minds about the war.

No, it certainly isn't like the old days. Over the years, people from all walks of life have had their minds changed about the war and have joined together in an active antiwar movement that has relentlessly demanded immediate and total withdrawal. Despite the lies of administration after administration, despite the inaction (cowardice?) of Congress, and any number of cheap promises and petty concessions, that antiwar movement has refused to be ignored, co-opted, or crushed, and has in fact grown. How?

To begin with, we get a lot of help from Richard Nixon. The invasions of Cambodia and Laos were evidence, clear to everyone, of his plans for "widening down" the war. Four previous administrations chimed in with the revelations of the Pentagon Papers. And Thieu's recent one man election ("A victory of democracy") gave the finishing touches to the political system that the U.S. government has nurtured, protected, and wishes to perpetuate in South Vietnam. These occurences have not gone unnoticed by the American people, but rather, have served to awaken the anger of more millions at the cynicism, deceit, and brutality with which that foreign policy has been pursued. Many of these people will be in the streets for the first time demonstrating for immediate withdrawal on November 6. More will be there with your help.

What do you know about the wage freeze? Did you know that there were wage freezes during World War II and the Korean war? Do you understand war related inflation? Mike Best of the Economics Dept will be at the teach-in to explain these phenomena.

Dave Scondras, an associate of Noam Chomsky, and an expert on Southeast Asian history in his own right, has followed the course of the war very closely for the last five years. He has some things to say that are worth listening to.

And of course, we'll be showing the CBS documentary The Selling of the Pentagon, which a Congressional subcommittee found so informative that last summer they asked Frank Stanton of CBS to stop by Washington and talk about it.

There is something important to be learned by everyone at this antiwar teach-in, and something very important to be done afterwards. It has long been apparent that students alone could not force an end to the war. But with masses of working people demonstrating for immediate withdrawal, we can. For the first time in the antiwar movement's history here at UMass, we've been able to get the cooperation of the Greenfield United Electrical workers union (UE) local 274 for leafletting there on October 13. This is a fantastic opportunity, but we'll need your help to make the most of it.

A large number of people labor under illusions concerning such things as whether or not the war is over, what the wage freeze means, and whether there is an interrelationship of the two. You can dispel those illusions. Distribute leaflets on Wednesday concerning a different analysis of the wage freeze, the war, and about massive demonstrations for immediate withdrawal in 16 cities across the country, including Boston, on November 6. Take what you learn on Oct. 13 to Amherst center, to UMass construction sites, to Zayre's shopping center, and to Greenfield.

Cut classes? That's exactly what we're asking you to do. Because so many of our friends are dead.

Tom Moriarty
Co-chairperson
UMass SMC
10/11/71

Richard C. Hanson

Bromery's Dilemma

Dr. Tippo bowed out of the Whitmore inferno with as little commotion as he could manage. Now with the horse race Acting Chancellor Bromery is finding himself in just off the post, one thing is clear; a new era is quickly taking hold. Only the final results are lacking.

Chancellor Bromery finds himself in one of the most difficult positions that great success juxtaposes. For the past several weeks the 45-year old geophysicist has been aware of his place near the top of Governor Sargent's list for State Secretary of Education. He has given the office much thought and feels he could accomplish much in the newly created post. If he hadn't just been named acting Chancellor for UMass, Randolph W. Bromery might not have hesitated to accept a cabinet post. Now, with a good shot at the permanent Chancellorship, he is going to have to make some hard and fast decisions for himself and, in his estimation more importantly for the University.

Neither the state position nor the Chancellorship are in Bromery's pocket. The Governor hasn't asked him yet and the search committee is hardly off the ground. The real decisions to be made are agonizingly out of his reach.

Over the telephone in a brief interview, Dr. Bromery seemed to be fully aware of the implications of his own decisions and will make up his mind this week on whether to remain available for the Secretary's position or to cater to his deep-set loyalties to the campus. His decision will be made, in his own believable words, "on the basis of what is best for the University."

If Bromery does decide to remove himself from the Governor's list the campus is going to see a change in campus administration that won't be appreciated until one achieves as little distance from the Tippo administration. "I believe in delegating authority to the lowest level possible," says Bromery. "The major part of my time will be spent representing the Amherst campus to the President."

Bromery won't be as interested in the everyday affairs of the campus, as Dr. Tippo was. There will be more reliance on Vice-Chancellors. One could visualize the position of Provost becoming as strong as in the Lederle days, when Dr. Tippo himself wielded great reforming power.

Bromery has known Wood for many years. He knows the ropes well enough to be an effective Chancellor.

The other possibility absolutely enraptures those on campus who don't care for President Wood. Dr. Bromery as Secretary of Education would serve in many ways as Wood's boss.

The next few days will decide many things for UMass-Amherst, no matter which way the Bromery bounces.

Don Glickstein

The Collegian Reporter

The room slowly filled until it was crowded with more than fifty persons.

Jim (he displays a name tag) wears a blue sweater, has eyebrow length bangs, smokes a cigarette, and carries a leather tote bag. He is the only swishy one.

Harry, with his short hair, black tie shoes, and yellow tee shirt which highlights his belly, is about forty. If a businessman was gay, I would never suspect it was Harry.

Judy is a purple freak--slacks, sweater, belt. She is blonde, and it certainly is too bad she is a Lesbian; she would have made a great date.

I recognize John because he is a professor I know. He smiles warmly at me as if I should not be nervous, I am among friends. I return a grin, but suspect that every smile has a motive, every gesture is a symbol.

Joan is chairing the meeting of the Student Homophile League.

"First, I'd like to ask if there are any objections to a reporter, Don Glickstein, attending this meeting?"

Some chuckling, some nods, and then an ice-breaking, half-serious voice: "No, he's cute." The group laughs, I smile, and hope that I'm doing the right thing.

Fifteen minutes before, I had chickened out "infiltrating" S.H.L. by pretending I was gay. Every straight male demonstrates his insecurity by proclaiming, "No fag here!" and I had covered myself by announcing myself as The Collegian Reporter.

"The Gay Men's Collective needs money for rent", Joan says. "There will be a party once a week to help pay the bills. If you're interested in alternative life styles...

"We have many requests for people to talk to classes. In the immediate future, there's a 'Women and their Bodies' class up in Butterfield and a Psych 101 discussion group Monday night. There'll probably be the typical questions about our 'deviance'."

Laughter

"Anyone interested in forming a consciousness raising group should find five or six other people, and set a time and place to meet. Consciousness raising for the new members, is a way to get our heads together by talking about our mutual problems.

"Next week, we'll have someone from the Infirmary here to talk about VD and how it applies to us. Later in the month, Room to Move will be here. We'll be able to exchange information about how a gay person or one with strong homosexual tendencies freaks out on a bum trip."

Now, a get-to-know-people game. Should I sit on the sidelines and watch or...What the hell. No one normal will see me. We hold hands and form a giant circle. Craig leads one end of our chain in and through other parts, forming a giant people pretzel. Bob must now untangle us without breaking our hands.

My left arm is strained, because we are crowded together and pulling and in the middle of a knot.

I feel inconspicuous and accepted, until:

"Look at where the straight number is!" Shut up, big punk mouth, I think, while the laughter subsides.

Eventually, we are untangled and return to our chairs.

The next game is a complicated one called "kill and wink". I don't quite understand it, and I don't think I can hack being winked at by a homosexual, and others are sitting out this one, so I stay where I am.

Hal walks in. If he were not built like a football player, he would look like Shirley Chishom.

I feel a lot less self-conscious. Everyone is friendly, and I sense that they look at me a bit more positively and with less suspicion.

A final game. We are to find someone we don't know and for 10 minutes apiece, close our eyes and be led around. Bill walks up to me and my eyes are now shut. Considerately, he does not lead me to the Concourse, with all its public. We talk.

He tells me that homosexuality is a matter of preference, not a result of loneliness or society's pressures. Remembering that stacked gay girl, I think I might be persuaded.

Now I am leading Bill.

A redneck-looking character, probably from the Campus Center staff I fantasize, wanders around and stares. Geesus, I hope he doesn't think I'm gay.

We return to the meeting room. The redneck sits next to me and scowls. If he's here to look at the "freaks", maybe I'd better tell him I'm the Collegian Reporter and express my tolerance toward gay people.

"Are you in S.H.L.?" I ask suspiciously.

"Yes", he says.

Nice going, Don. Now he probably doesn't trust you.

Trust, fear.

When you're the straight number in a gay world, you start getting paranoid. When you're the straight number in a gay world, you appreciate a hell of a lot of tolerance.

And when you're a gay person a straight world, it's the same thing.

'WHO? THEM? GEE — ER, I'LL BE DARNED! I WONDER HOW THEY GOT THERE . . . '

Letters To The Editor

A Question Of Ads

To the Editor:

Unless a conflicting interpretation can be provided I assume that the advertisement (on page 3 of the October 4, 1971 issue of the MDC) offered to relieve students of the burden of writing papers for the sum of $3.50 or 2.50 (per page) depending on the "originality" of the paper supplied.

Even in our days of university crisis the implications of printing such an ad are of some interest. I can think of two explanations why there were no editorial objections to publishing the ad:

1) The MDC, like much of the commercial mass media of the country, may take the position that it does not wish to exercise control on the ads placed since they are a source of revenue--a consideration which overrides possible ethical objections to their content.

2) The MDC is not, in general indifferent to the ethical implications of the ads it accepts, but the ad in question provoked no adverse reactions.

If the latter is the case it would be interesting to know why.

I am not suggesting that if the MDC refuses to publish such ads--which I think it should--independent and original paper writing and research will flourish and cheating come to an end. I do not see however any good reason why the MDC should facilitate, by publishing the ad, the avoidance of indendent work (so much in demand these days) the writing of papers entails. Surely editors of the MDC do not believe that the venture advertised helps to improve the quality of learning or that without such ads the MDC would collapse financially.

Paul Hollander
Associate Professor of Sociology

(Editor's Note-The advertising in question or any advertising that appears in the MDC does not reflect editorial policy or endorsement. This newspaper will not pretend to judge the academic moriality of an individual through its advertising policy.)

B. F. Who?

This is to acknowledge receipt of an announcement that the University Psychology Department, Distinguished Visitors Program, and Concerned Undergraduate and Graduate Students believe that they have "the only personnel in the country who have collectively come up with the only refutation" of my "atheoretical behavioral paradigm." Unfortunately, my schedule will prevent me from exposing myself to refutation and I shall, therefore, go merrily on my way thinking I am right.

B.F. Skinner

Defining The Role

By RICHARD VERROCHI
STUDENT SENATE TREASURER

With the advent of students and, at some universities, faculty trustees, there has arisen a question of ethics for the person who is appointed to the trusteeship.

The basic premise behind this kind of trusteeship is that the person is to represent a particular constituency to the Board, and that the constituency is so large and important that it should have its own representative.

If we look at the UMass Board of Trustees as our model, we find that, at least in the open meetings, there is not much that a constituent Trustee can do or say. But when we look at the closed, "executive" meetings of the Board, where the majority of University business is argued over and decided, we can understand the value of a constituent trustee.

The value, however, is not in the input of opinions by a Student Trustee, but in the output which he can receive and bring back to the campus for dissemination. The case in point would be last week, when the Collegian was able to publish on Friday morning what the recommendations and probably outcome of the Board Trustees' action would be later in the day.

This information was able to be disseminated to the campus because there were student members of the Board present at the closed "executive" committee meetings, who were willing to "leak" the information to the campus.

It is here that the question of ethics arises. Should a constituent member of the Board of Trustees be willing to give out information which the other members of the Board do not want publicized?

The matter is best analyzed through the form of a job description. What is a Constituent Trustee's job?

It would seem obvious that the laws were changed so as to allow students and faculty to have a greater role in the management of their respective institutions. The movements of the 1960's have resulted in what many have considered token representation on the Board of Trustees of the University. But is the job of a constituent trustee to represent his constituency? Simply because of the diversity of opinions, this would seem to be an impossible task.

The representative role is obviously merely tokenism.

But along with this tokenism, there comes a great amount of benefits, those being broadly contained under the title of "information". A constituent trustee must, under the law, have all of the privileges of a regular member of the Board. He may sit in on all meetings, whether in open or "executive" session, and can demand to be informed about all matters pertaining to the University.

But does a constituent trustee have an obligation to inform his constituents about matters before the Board which other members of the Board of Trustees would rather not have publicized? The answer is an irrefutable "Yes".

With merely token representation, a constituent trustee alone has no power. But if he can inform his constituents about matters before the Board, and the probable action which the Board will take, his role becomes greatly amplified. The information will allow his constituency to act in a manner which will give to him much more power than most other members of the Board could ever command. This is simply because most Board members do not want to create a "fuss". And, should a "fuss" arise, they want to solve it as quickly and as quietly as is possible.

In other words, in most instances, the Board will acquiese to that constituency which is making the "fuss".

Thus, the role of a constituent trustee must be looked upon as one of informing his constituency on those things which the Board would rather have done quietly, behind closed doors. It is his obligation to give to his constituency the greatest amount of power possible. It is through this informative role that this becomes possible. It therefore becomes his obligation to tell his constituency what the other members of the Board do not want them to know.

It is the duty of students and faculty to encourage, and even to force upon their respective trustees, this new role of information dissemination.

Editorial Points

All the highways around here ought to have an extra lane, especially around this time of year, reserved just for tourists and sightseers.

*****

The Red Sox may argue that they weren't trading out of desperation but when a pennant contender has to trade six players (including two regulars and a starting pitcher) for three players and a minor leaguer from a last place team like Milwaukee, something is wrong somewhere.

*****

Speaking of baseball, word has leaked out of Las Vegas that the Baltimore Orioles will be slight favorites to repeat as Eastern division champions in the American league next year.

*****

The Board of Trustees is probably beginning to think that it could save itself a lot of time by cancelling all Executive Committee meetings and just waiting for the Collegian to come out the next day.

Hell, No!

"Someone said that someone called my name from 'cross the sea.
'On seeing you, I see you are appalled
'on seeing me.
I, too, hard against the wall-
I, too, would not be pulled aside.
But unlike you, who lied,
I had to tell them I had died.
They never really understood
What I knew from the start.
They'd never win my mind without my heart."
"To Ottawa, and free!!
And never will I go back home to fight that voice from 'cross the sea.
I always was afraid of dying...
But never once afraid of me."
"I swore I would not fall,
And I was never found.
I was fast upon the road
Whose rails ran underground.
I would not be caught and sold;
I swore my blood would not run cold.
I told them I was through with being told."
And all of this, my friend, is what a friend told me.
"In and out of Heaven...
Much more easily than given is a life worth saving."
"If one must live by killing others,
I'll let you kill for me.
And if they kill you in my stead, how grateful I will be."

T. David Barrett

Letters

As in previous years the MDC will continue to print letters to the editor. The only requirements are that they be typed at sixty spaces, double-spaced and absolutely no longer than two pages in length. All letters must be signed and the author's address and telephone numbers must be included. No letter will be published without this information. Also, no letters will be printed without the name of the author. Please note this change in policy.

All letters are subject to editing either for content or space according to the judgment of the editors. Also, due to space limitations, we do not guarantee that all letters will be printed.

THE EDITORS

"When Kissinger Gets Here, Maybe We Can Find Out What's Going On In Washington"

Birch Society Speaker Tonight

John F. McManus, Staff Coordinator for the John Birch Society, Belmont, Massachusetts, will give a talk entitled "The Conspiracy Above Communism" tonight at 8:15 p.m. in Thompson Hall-102.

JOHN F. McMANUS

Mr. McManus's lecture is sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program and is open to the public free of charge. A reception will follow the lecture in the Colonial Lounge.

John F. McManus joined the staff of The John Birch Society in August, 1966 as a Field Coordinator covering four states in New England. In March, 1968 he left that position to join the newly-formed Ad Hoc Committee staff at the headquarters of the Society in Belmont, Massachusetts.

McManus has served as a Coordinator of Ad Hoc Committees continuously since 1968. Additional assignments have included on-the-spot reporting for THE REVIEW OF THE NEWS on civil turmoil in Georgia and local police problems in North Dakota. He has spoken under the auspices of The John Birch Society and the American Opinion Speakers Bureau in more than thirty states.

In 1971, McManus wrote, narrated and produced a 2-1/2 hour filmstrip entitled AN OVERVIEW OF OUR WORLD. He is one of the few authorized spokesmen for The John Birch Society.

McManus was born on January 24, 1935 in Brooklyn and received a Bachelor of Science degree from Holy Cross College, Worcester, Massachusetts in 1957. A Navy ROTC student, he chose a commission in the United States Marine Corps at graduation. He received the annual Wyman-Gordon Company Award, a Marine Corps Officer's ceremonial sword, presented to the outstanding graduate accepting a Marine Corps Commission.

Oh Looking For Faculty Fellows

Orchard Hill is looking for Faculty Fellows from each academic department to act as advisors and participants in programs and courses for Hill residents.

The Faculty Fellow program began in 1964 under former Master Lee Varley who was then preceptor of Orchard Hill. The original purpose of the program was to achieve more personal interaction between faculty and students. This is still one of the goals of the program according to those in charge.

Volunteers are invited to contact Ernest Johnson at 5-2230 or Jeri Dishler at 6-6562 for more information.

Speaker Directory Published

Last semester the members of Mortar Board published the first Directory of Speakers for the university. The directory was initialed in an attempt to aid dormitories, fraternities, sororities, clubs and other campus groups who are looking for guests to speak on a particular topic or to attend an informal gathering of the group. The directory also has a list of faculty members who are interested in teaching a university credit course in a dorm rather than in a classroom and a list of faculty interested in informally interacting with a dormitory over a period of time as a Faculty Fellow. Included also is a list of individuals who would like to act as advisers to RSO groups.

Mortar Board believes there is a definite need for such a directory which can bring together the interests of the members of this University and people qualified and interested in such areas.

Now that such a booklet exists, the members of Mortar Board are willing to turn over this project to an interested group who would be willing to continue the Directory of Speakers by updating the list of speakers and topics each year.

Any group interested in sponsoring the Directory of Speakers can obtain further information on the project by contacting Kathy Reilly, president.

The University of Massachusetts chapter of Mortar Board hosted the annual meeting of Section I on the weekend of October 1-3. Representatives from the University of Connecticut, University of Rhode Island, University of New Hampshire, University of Vermont, and St. Lawrence University attended the conference.

Topics of discussion during the convention concerned the role of Mortar Board in a changing University. Miss Rachel Bussard, Section 1 Coordinator, led the Saturday morning meetings which were held at the Campus Center. After a buffet luncheon, Eva Schiffer spoke to the group on various ecology projects and what Mortar Board could do to help further the efforts of these programs.

Mobe Teach-In Tomorrow

Mobe Antiwar Teach-in will be held Wednesday, October 13 at 11:00 AM in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union.

Film documentary: "The Selling of the Pentagon" and Four speakers are planned.

SAVE ★ ★ SAVE ★ ★ SAVE ★ ★ SAVE ★ ★ SAVE

Redeem Coupons at the

STUDENT UNION HATCH

between 5 p.m. - 9 p.m.

Tues. - Oct. 12 - Oct. 16

With This Coupon
2 HAMBURGERS
FRENCH FRIES
8 oz. SOFT DRINK for only 75¢
($1.00 value)
At Student Union Hatch
from 5 p.m. - 9 p.m.
Tues. - Sat.
Oct. 12 - Oct. 16

ICE CREAM FLOAT of your choice for 10¢ less than posted price with this coupon.
at Student Union
Ice Cream Bar
Tues. - Sat.
5 p.m. - 9 p.m.
Oct. 12 - Oct. 16

Eastern Mountain Sports, Inc.

SPECIALISTS IN QUALITY LIGHT WEIGHT
BACKPACKING AND MOUNTAINEERING EQUIPMENT

INTRODUCTORY X-country ski special oct. 8-16

4000 Pair EMS Touring & X-Country Skis

	This Year's Approximate 1971-72 Suggested List Prices on Comparable Items.	SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY PRICE
EMS Asnes, light touring, Ligno	$39.00	$26.95
EMS 5000 light touring, Ligno	$41.00	$31.95
EMS 7000, superlight touring, Ligno	$44.00	$32.95
EMS 10000, Balsa	$47.00	$33.95
Ski Boots	$26.00	$22.95
Ski Boots	$28.50	$21.95

All bindings will be mounted (later) free of charge on skis purchased during the sale.

Rt. 9, Amherst - Hadley Line Amherst Mass. 01002 413-253-9504

Films

"A New Leaf" Is The Same Old Comedy

A NEW LEAF, starring Walter Matthau and Elaine May. At the Academy.

By ELLIOT EISENBERG

Some day when we're old and fat, with houses and bunches of kids, and color TV's in the living room, A New Leaf will be playing the Late Show circuit. It's the perfect kind of movie for television; it doesn't have too intricate a plot and wouldn't lose much being cut up by commercials.

WALTER MATTHAU

It's predicament is out of a time that doesn't seem to be our own, tho it is set in the present. It's a Doris Day kind of a movie, with good guys and bad guys and the good ones living happily ever after.

Walter Matthau is Henry who's used up his trust fund money, and while he still has assets of a half million or so, finds it will be impossible to maintain the standard of living he's used to without a new source of income.

"In a time when you are what you have," his butler tells him, "you'll be poor, and that's not much."

Faced with what he sees as a choice between marrying money and committing suicide, he decides against suicide. Borrowing at userious rates from a slob of an uncle to finance his campaign of a wife, Henry goes on the make.

Every Henry in movies like this finds his Henrietta, and Matthau is no exception. She comes in the form of Elaine May, a bumbling, incompetent and slightly blind sort of a woman who is nothing he admires in a woman but rich.

How they accommodate to each other, and in the process make new persons out of one another, it wouldn't be fair to say. Suffice it to say that Henrietta, who's a botanist, discovers a new leaf, and Henry turns one.

The two friends that went with me to see New Leaf were the ones who relegated it to late night TV. They wouldn't spend their money to see something so inconsequential, or so they said. The fact is though, that A New Leaf is part of a twin-bill, sharing the marquee with The Sterile Cuckoo. Besides, in times like these when everything else seems to go so raggedly, maybe an easy to take film like this has a reason to be. At any rate, at the Academy of Music where it's playing, on Tuesday night the rates are a little less.

11TH FLOOR C.C. LOUNGE

Sue O'Neill

Sings & Plays

TUESDAYS

8:30 - 12

Ski Club Meeting

TONITE

8:00 P.M. Mahar Aud.

Ski Movie

Trip Discussion

Officer Election

Membership Drive

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

1966 VW Bus in good condition, new full inspection sticker, may be seen at 226 Cliffside Apts., Sunderland or call 665-1796. tf10-14

'62 Rambler classic runs perf, new brakes, tune-up and exhaust system. Has all good tires and full insp. sticker. Only $150. Call 546-4076. tf10-14

VW Bug 1967, tan, exc. cond., lt & ll cheap. Call Jan 545-0152 or 256-6868. tf10-11

1971 Buick Opel wagon red AM-FM, 18000 mi., excellent condition, asking 2295 will talk. Call 863-8006 after 6 p.m.

1969 Nova 6 cyl., new exhaust, & cooling system, 2 studded snowtires, $1,300 or best offer. Days 545-2195, nights 586-3816 ask for Jim. tf10-13

'70 MGB exc. running cond. Must sell, 219-8193. tf10-29

1968 Falcon wagon, 6 cyl, auto. trans., excellent cond., $1300, 30 Squire Village, after 4 p.m.; tf 10-13

Ten year old Peugeot, std. Michelin rd pis tires, rebuilt eng., good cond., $250 or best offer. Call Keith 253-2215 after 9:00 p.m. tf 10-14

For sale: 69 Ford Custom 4 dr sedan, 6 cyl $995.; Harmony Folk Guitar $50.; Royal manual typewriter $25. Call Chris 283-7380 eves. 10-13

1961 VW bus, new brks, ex. mech. std. running cond. priced low - some body rot. $150. Call Ron 549-0450. tf 10-12

65 Austin, 850 wagon, 68 MG 1100 c.c. engine, good condition, $550 or best offer. Also 59 Rambler, 4 door, 6 cyl., auto., $95 or best offer. 967-5827. tf10-11

1966 VW Camper, Blaupunkt radio, new brakes, has bent rod. Best offer over $800. 533-2903. tf10-11

Ford 61 wag., needs some repairs, best offer, 665-2896. tf10-13

1961 Corvair, good rebuilt spyder turbo charged motor, no transmission, will sell parts or in entirety. Best offer. Call 549-0696. tf10-13

MOTORCYCLES FOR SALE

Must sell Honda C 11 350. Heading West. 1969 excellent shape. 13000 mi. $450. Call Steve 549-6089. tf10-8

1971 Harley Davidson Sprint 350, excellent condition, 1200 miles, must sell. Call Bill between 1-6 p.m. 584-7349. tf10-12

1971 Yamaha CT1-C 175CC Enduro, 1500 miles, expansion chamber and many more options. Truly a fine dirt bike $575. Dave 253-7541. tf10-13

1968 Honda 350 ex. cond., 4000 mi., $500. Call 546-8902. tf10-12

FOR SALE

New tire 6.50 x 13, $10. Canoe $140. 586-1076. tf10-8

Seasoned Firewood. Sale and delivery. Call 665-3031. tf10-20

Brown suede pants, skirts, skins, top quality, wholesale. Pants $27, skirts $9.49, skins $5. Stop by to look Jon-424 Chadborne 5-2036 leave number if not in. tf10-14

AM/FM/FM Stereo Radio-Cassette Player/Recorder $170. Call Paul at 256-6907 after 6. tf10-15

2 Criterion speakers, 2 mos. old, were $100, will sac. for $80. Call Bruce 546-9001. tf10-12

TO GIVE AWAY-Watches, Jewelry, radios, unusual gift and novelty items-at 50% off and more-call S.N. Brown, 665-4145. tf10-11

Ten year old Peugot, rebuilt engine, best offer, call Keith 253-2215 before 10 a.m. or after 10 p.m. tf10-12

Brand new 8 track stereo tapes - $3- latest hits incl. Superstar, Stewart. Send for free list. 43 Longview St., Spfld., Mass. 01108. tf10-12

Waterbeds-now all sizes $19.95! Factory warranty. Also, frames, liners & pads in stock. Call Mark at 546-5456. tf10-12

1957 Chevy Panel Truck, good shape, $250. Come over and see Peggy at 11 So. Prospect St., #2. tf10-13

Stereo-Marantz state-of-the-art components. Model 16, 220 watts rms, model 33, preamp mint 2 yr. warranty reg. $975 asking $725 or best offer, 1-367-9570 eve. tf10-14

Sony 630-D reel to reel tape recorder deck, 3 heads, echo, S on S, dust cover, 3 speeds, 4 months old, new cost $320 asking $220, 783-2624. tf10-14

Got a thorn in your sneaker? Travel style in a '65 Chevy Belair 546-5.21. tf10-14

1964 VW engine: rebuilt, new fuel pump and generator, $90.; 1962 VW engine; needs rings, valves $25. Call 665-3490 eve. tf 10-12

TO GIVE AWAY - watches, jewelry, radios, unusual gift, and novelty items - at 50% off and more. Call S. N. Brown, 665-4145. tf10-13

Bumper sticker - your words printed on 3 x 12" red or green sticker for $1, copies .25. The Solde Co. Route 1, Box 83 Blaine, Wash. 98230. tf10-18

Fur coat full length, ex. cond. Best offer. Also new ski parka. Call 6-6120 between 5:30 and 7:00. tf10-8

Kenwood 1110 AM-FM tuner BSR 510X turntable Jacott x15 3 way loudspeakers system retailed at 470 will sell 360. Call nites 536-7111. tf10-12

We undersell all. Any and all top name appliances, stereos, radios, refrigerators, anything. Call Larry 6-5090 or come in 356 Canoe. tf10-13

HELP WANTED

Need Vets Viet or regular to help film a documentary on adjustment problems in returning to civilian life. Call Jake at 549-3916. tf10-14

Earn $100 or more part time, excellent opportunity for an ecology minded person. 413-323-4427. tf10-13

Need money? Earn $25 or more a week! Work your own hours at your convenience. Call Barry or Dave 4 p.m. - 5:30 p.m. 546-6063. tf10-13

WANTED

Girls bike at least 3 speeds. Contact Mrs. Riley, Tel. 253-7151. tf10-15

If you play the blues, contact me in 101 Butterfield, ask for Onnie. tf10-13

Ride wanted every morning to Springfield. Will pay. Call 592-4871 collect. tf 10-12

Free young female cat long hair, clean. Call 1-323-7503. tf10-11

PERSONAL

Superstud you're a flunky prove yourself superstars. 10-12

Rm. 301 6-8822 organizational meeting for Cubha Mo. At U OWF. tf10-15

Debbie Hope your birthday was as bright and cheery as a ray of sunshine! Happy belated! From Audrey, Lynda and Diane. 10-12

Melville Basement invites James Basement and 4th floor in a party Friday night at 9. tf10-31

ROOMMATES WANTED

Female roommates wanted-$60 a month includes utilities, age 20-25. Call after 6 p.m. ask for Jean if no answer keep trying 586-3086. tf10-15

Wanted-I need a place to live. Desire own room in a house or on a farm with other people. Call Mark at 256-6786. tf10-15

APT. AVAILABLE

Ideal for advanced female grad. student, room and board, in lieu of assistance with 2 schoolage children 549-3653.

LECTURE NOTES

Lecture notes now available for all sections in Botany 101, Econ. 125, Geol. 101, Gov. 100, Phil. 105, Psych. 101, Rm. 318 S.U. Lobby. tf10-14

SERVICES

Amherst Audio services. Stereo components, tape decks for home or car. 197 No. Pleasant St. 256-8133. tf5-12

TYPING

Typing - theses, dissertations, etc. Fast, accurate: have Greek alphabet, math & chem. symbols. Call 253-3601. tf10-18

TO TRADE

To trade: 1959 Klunker automobile for a bicycle in good condition. Call 586-3280. tf10-13

DAY CARE CENTER

Children's Center Day Care for ages 3-5 opening in Greenfield, full or part time from Oct. 18. Call 773-3804 or 774-2071. tf10-14

ENTERTAINMENT

THE BEATLES IN "YELLOW SUBMARINE" PLUS EXCITING SHORT "GOING STEADY" SAT., OCT 16, 8, 8, 10, 12 MIDNIGHT, MAHAR AUD. JOIN THE FUN THIS HOMECOMING WEEKEND! tf10-15

Notices

AD-HOC COMMITTEE ON MENTAL HEALTH:
One (1) undergraduate is still needed for this Faculty-Student committee reviewing policies and improvement of campus mental health services. Contact John Hogan, Senate office. (50341).

ANGEL FLIGHT:
Meeting, 210 Dickinson Hall, 7 p.m. tonight.

ALPHA PHI GAMMA:
General meeting tonight at 7:30 in Rm. 174-76 CC to discuss plans for semester. Guest speaker: Jim Foudy, formerly with Collegian, now with Greenfield Recorder. Open to all. Coffee and donuts.

CEQ:
Steering committee meeting in Student Activities Area on 1st floor CC at 6:30 p.m. tonight. All officers attend and anyone else welcome to observe or participate.

ENVIRONMENTAL LIVING--LEARNING:
One (1) undergraduate is still needed for this Faculty-Student committee concerning the influences and improvement of the university environment. Contact John Hogan, Senate office (50341).

FENCING CLUB:
Practice every Thurs. night; Women's Phys. Ed. Bld., Fencing Room, 7-9 p.m.

FREE U:
Free University organizational meeting tonight 8 p.m. old SU bookstore. Help plan Video network, free garage, theatre workshops, movies & more. All invited.

GOVT 150:
4-5:15, Tues., Thurs. (Professor Meo). Examine postponed from Tues. Oct. 12 to Thurs. Oct 14.

HILLEL:
Any grad student interested in getting together with other grad students through Hillel, please contact Elliot at 2566907 or Terry at 5467979.

HUMAN SUBJECTS:
One (1) undergraduate is still needed for this Faculty-Student committee concerning the individual student's development within the campus community. Contact John Hogan, Senate office (50341).

MACKIMMIE HOUSE:
"The man who's nobody's man but his own." VOTE ROTH PRESIDENT.

MARRIED STUDENT'S HOUSING:
One (1) undergraduate is still needed for this Faculty Senate committee concerning all aspects of married students' housing. Contact John Hogan, Senate office (50341).

SCIENCE FICTION SOCIETY:
Business meeting Tuesday in CC Rm. 168, 8 p.m. Important.

SEARCH COMMITTEE FOR THE DIRECTOR OF SECURITY:
Three (3) undergraduates are still needed for this Faculty-Student committee formed for hiring a new head of campus security. Contact John Hogan, Senate office (50341).

SIGMA ALPHA MU FILM SERIES:
"The Beatles" "Yellow Submarine" plus "Going Steady", Sat. evening, Oct. 16, Mahar Aud. 6, 8, 10, 12 midnight. Homecoming weekend entertainment.

SPANISH CLUB:
The Club Hispano will hold its first meeting tonight at 7:30 in the 6th floor lounge in Herter.

WOMEN'S LIBERATION:
Meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Rm. 808 CC. Discussion of action plan about abortion. All women welcome.

LOST:
Textbook: "Vector Mechanics of Fluids & MagnetoFluids" by Eskinazi. Lost in Rm. 110 Engin. East at 1:20 p.m. on Monday Oct. 4. Please return to CC lost & found or call BaBa at 202 Crabtree, 545-2303-2302.

"Lost" Honda manual--please return--66005.

GOLD watch (New York relays) on 10/7 in Peters Aud. Call Gene 546-7817.

1 notebook and paperback. Contact Dan at 797 Main St.

FOUND:
A ring, near the library, last week. Call 253-9330.

GAY LIBERATION:
For all interested. People getting together without categorizing their sexuality into sex roles, or sexual identity. No organization either. Let's get together in the Free U Tuesday night at 7:30. Our phone 545-0614.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

Studies encompassing extrasensory perception, astrology and other unorthodox subjects are springing up in many universities. Dr. Howard Delaney, professor of philosophy at Loyola University, near Santa Monica, Calif., declares that, "When becoming aware of these areas, our eyes are opened to a whole new world."

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on change, variety, greater ability to communicate. Applies especially in dealing with children. Gemini and Virgo individuals play prominent roles. Strive to make your views clear, concise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Family member deserves benefit of doubt. Build solid base at home. Means gain support of loved ones. Don't expect perfection. But you can now expect affection, morale backing from those who mean most to you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are on the up. You learn. Ideas abound. Be selective. Develop concepts. Don't be afraid to experiment. Give full play to intellectual curiosity. Ask questions. Answers are now available.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Solid financial gain is a distinct possibility. Use past experience. Know that those in authority back your position. Intensify campaigns, personal and professional. Romance also is in picture.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): STRESS CHANCE TO ASSERT YOURSELF. There is no need to take back seat. Go forward. Have faith in your own judgment. Personality sparkles. You extend sphere of influence. Cooperate with Aries.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Play cards face down; keep something in reserve. Be considerate toward one confined to home, hospital. Keep confidences. Respect privacy of one close to you. Be quiet within. You will get answers.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent on friends, hopes, special desires. Aura of vibrancy surrounds; many are drawn to you. You can influence and persuade with success. Set sights on goal. Ambition is due to be fulfilled.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Avoid tendency to be stubborn. Keep an open mind. Suggestion received at social gathering could prove valuable. Know this and remain alert. You can market ideas, products. Key is self confidence.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Good lunar aspect now coincides with journey, gain through study. Emphasize ability to express and communicate. What appears a minor detail should not be overlooked. Be thorough, direct.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis on what appears obscured, mysterious. Refuse to accede to halfway measures. Dig deep for needed information. You could make discovery of value. Be persistent. Male partner will aid.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Publicity could accompany efforts. Protect image. Seek cooperation of family member. Going it alone now could be error. Act accordingly. Stress joint efforts. Delay is normal; don't panic.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Work, basic chores are highlighted. Avoid the sensational. Steady pace brings desired results. One who works for or with you makes request. Don't be hasty in arriving at decision. Wait, observe.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are artistic, possess sense of humor. You are not so good at handling details but you are capable of seeing projects as a whole. Change made this month will prove beneficial. If single, marriage is on horizon.

Copyright 1971, Gen. Fea. Corp.

SW Assembly Meets

At the first meeting of the Southwest Assembly this week several items were brought up. It was decided that two new black members be elected to the body to represent the black population of Southwest. Funds were also appropriated to both the Woman's Center and the pilot video workshop being held in the Southwest Area. Another proposal was to start a Southwest newspaper and this was referred to the Communications Committee.

NOW...YOUR CHOICE OF 5!
Showcase #1
Rt. 5 - W. Spfld.
Cinema 1-2-3-4-5
733-5131
MORE NEW SHOWS!
MORE NEW LOUNGER SEATS!
MORE NEW PARKING!!
MATINEES DAILY...POPULAR PRICES
Adults $1.50 Mon thru Fri Matts
1 Summer of '42 (R)
2 Let's Scare Jessica to Death (GP)
3 The Devils (X)
4 Walkabout (GP)
5 Fortune and Men's Eyes (R)
ACRES FREE PARKING
ROCKER LOUNGERS
CHARGE YOUR TICKETS

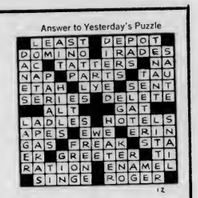
Student Mobe Elects Officers

The Student Mobilization Committee held a meeting on October 4 to elect officers for this semester and finalize plans for fall Antiwar actions.

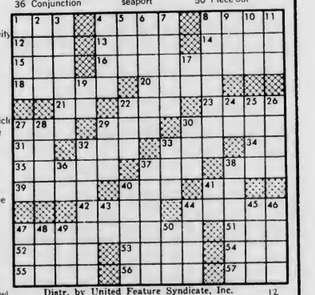
Tom Moriarty and Suzanne Mitchell were elected co-chairpeople, Mike Buckley treasurer, and Sue Brill secretary.

The Transportation Committee reported that five buses have been chartered for the upcoming demonstration on November 6th in Boston. An information table will be set up in the Campus Center and round trip tickets for the November 6th demonstration will be available at $5.00 per person.

On October 13 there will be a Teach-In held at 11:00 A.M. in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union. The controversial CBS documentary "The Selling of the Pentagon" will be shown. Mike Best of the Economics Department will speak on the Wage Freeze and War-Related Inflation, and Dave Scondoras will speak on aspects of Southeast Asian history. Other speakers will be Harvey Swados and Jerome King.



The next Student Mobe meeting will be held tonight at 8:00 P.M. in the Mobe office.



Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Footlike part
4 Festive
8 Frock
12 Fruit drink
13 Sea in Asia
14 Speed contest
15 Weight of India
16 Instrument for measuring walking distance
18 Projecting teeth
20 Dolphinlike cetacean
21 River in Italy
22 Unit
23 Man's name
27 Baker's product
29 Unit of energy
30 Plague
31 Printer's measure
32 Beverage
33 Turf
34 Babylonian deity
35 Long-legged bird
37 Secret agent
38 Residue
39 Civil injury
40 Music: as written
41 Indefinite article
42 Mental image
44 Passageway
47 Gave 51 Hairpiece
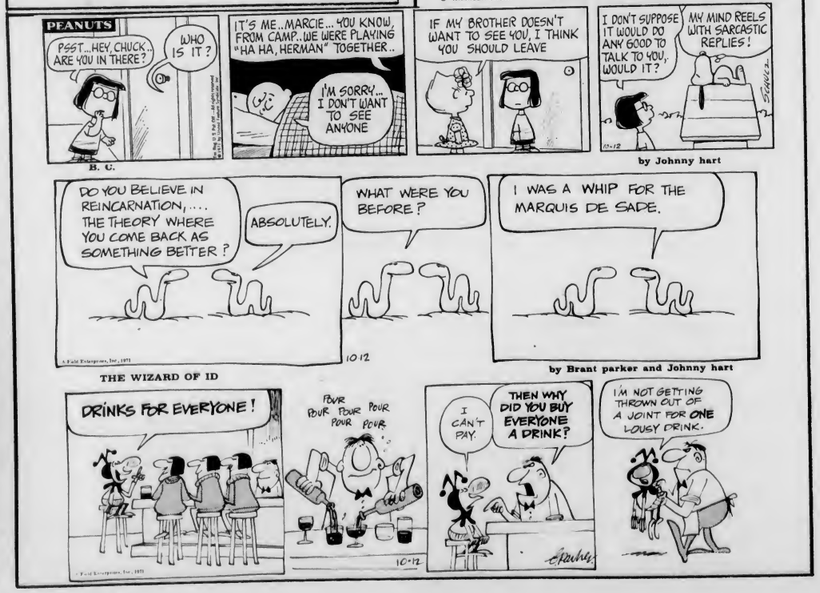
52 Girl's name
53 Nobleman
54 Period of time
55 Unlock
56 Observed
57 Communist



DOWN
1 Free ticket
2 Paradise
3 Mexican shawl
4 Openings
5 Exist
6 Loading
7 By oneself
8 Folded
9 Grain
10 High card
11 Prefix: three
17 Note of scale
19 Proceed
22 Native metal
24 Cooled lava
25 Employs
26 Girl's name
27 Nuisance
28 Preposition
29 Antlered animal
30 Plaything
32 One trained in a trade
33 Resort
36 Conjunction
37 Likeness sculptured in stone
38 Reply
40 Dispatches
41 Three-toed sloth
43 Prefix: down
44 Arabian seaport
45 Unit of Italian currency (pl.)
46 Mild expletive
47 In favor of
48 Tear
49 French for "summer"
50 Piece out

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc. 12

Eagle JV'S Splash Way Over Redmen

By BILL BALLOU

The UMass freshman football team opened up its home season Sunday against the freshman from Boston College, with both the Eagles and the weather ruining the day for UMass fans. The game had originally been slated for Alumni Stadium, but the torrential rain that poured all morning and throughout the game caused the locale to be moved to the practice fields outside the stadium.

A good crowd had been expected to be on hand to see the potentially powerful Eagles and their promising back Mike Esposito go up against a freshmen squad that had looked impressive a week before against BU. The crowd of about 200 soggy souls that showed up saw Boston College play opportunist to slosh past the Redmen by a score of 13-7.

The first half saw both teams make numerous mistakes caused in most part by the atrocious playing conditions. No one did much of note during the first quarter, although the UMass defensive line and linebackers Paul St. Onge, Ken Foisy, and Dennis Kiernan held the Boston College running attack in check with some hard hitting and gang tackling.

Early in the second quarter the Redmen struck to score their only points of the game. The Boston College defense had forced the UMass offense to punt fairly deep in their own territory. However, before the ball could be returned very far, there was a fumble and UMass had the ball. On the very next play quarterback Fred Kelliher fired a bomb to flanker John Healy who made a great grab in a crowd and dove over the goal line to complete the 40 yard play. John Ames converted and UMass led 7-0.

Before the quarter was over Boston College had closed the gap to a single point.

To score this touchdown, the Eagle offense put on what was really the only sustained drive of the game. The key to it probably came when Big Ed McAleney had dropped BC quarterback Mike Kruczek for a 15 yard loss back in Eagle territory.

But on that play there was a spearing call against UMass. That meant 15 yards for the Eagles from the line of scrimmage where the infraction occurred. So instead of being in a big hole, the Eagles had 15 yards and a first down. Kruczek then drove the offense down the field, utilizing quarterback options around the ends, regular sweeps and a great diving catch by end Tim Hunt.

Finally halfback Howie Richardson turned the left side from the seven and snuck into the end zone for the score. BC went for two on the conversion and failed, the half ending with the UMass lead cut to 7-6.

The second half proved to be all Boston College. The Eagles simply dominated play both ways while the Redman offense had trouble getting the ball from center to quarterback and from quarterback to any other back.

Boston College wasted no time in putting themselves in the lead for good. Early in the third period the BC defense recovered a UMass fumble on the Redman nine yard line. Two crunching runs by running back Harry Hanoian, the second one being from the four for the TD, gave BC a 12-6 lead. The kick was good for a 13-7 lead.

The rest of the game was an exercise in futility for UMass. Boston College had the ball the great majority of the time, although they were unable to score. The Redmen, on the other hand, could do nothing with the ball when they got it and never mounted a serious threat to the BC lead.

The question after seeing two games would seem to be "Will the real Redmen please stand up?" The team which had looked so disciplined and confident in Boston against the BU Terriers simply played poorly after they fell behind the Eagles. The weather was of course a factor in this game, but it rained on Boston College too.

The answer to this question should be forthcoming in a couple of weeks when the Redman frosh continue their season at home against the University of Rhode Island. The game is scheduled for Oct. 23 at 1:30 P.M.

Go Two Up...

Orioles Shell Pirates, 11-3

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore's Robinson boys-Frank and Brooks-led a 14-hit attack as the Orioles shelled a disintegrating Pittsburgh pitching staff and embarrassed the Pirates 11-3 Monday in the second game of the World Series.

The Orioles, taking charge in a manner reminiscent of last year's World Series triumph over a mauled Cincinnati staff, thus built their lead to 2-0 over the Pirates in the best-of-seven series as the teams headed for Pittsburgh and today's resumption of play.

Oddly, for the power-hitting Orioles, every one of their hits was a single. But they were bunched enough to produce three runs in the fourth inning and six in the fifth inning as a total of 10 men went to the plate.

The assault on six Pittsburgh pitchers brought the victory for Jim Palmer, who staggered through seven shutout innings, was tagged for Rich Hebner's three-run homer in the eighth and needed Dick Hall's relief help in the ninth.

Brooks and Frank Robinson collected three hits each, Brooks driving in three and Frank scoring two. Every Baltimore starter except Don Buford, Mark Belanger and Palmer contributed to the attack.

The Orioles appeared virtually invincible after having run their winning streak to 16, including 11 regular season games, three playoff victories and the two triumphs over the Pirates.

While the Orioles were only one shy of the Series' singles record, the Pirates stranded 12 before he finally was pulled by Manager Earl Weaver after allowing seven hits through the eight innings.

When he left he had thrown 168 pitches, gone to a full count on eight batters, and struck out 10 while walking seven in a hot-and-cold performance.

However, nothing mattered but the Baltimore bats and they left the Pirates in shaky shape as they headed for Pittsburgh with right-hander Steve Blass scheduled to go in Game No. 3 against Orioles' left-hander Mike Cuellar.

The Orioles started the bats moving, sending eight men to the plate in the fourth inning.

Frank Robinson got things going for the Orioles again with his fourth hit in six trips and moved to second when Hendricks was hit by a pitch. Brooks Robinson then drew a walk, loading the bases.

Dave Johnson followed with a single to left, driving in two runs, and that convinced Pittsburgh Manager Danny Murtaugh to lift Johnson and bring in 21-year-old rookie Bruce Kison. Kison walked to the mound as a band played "Only Fools Rush In" and proceeded to walk Belanger and Palmer, forcing in a run.

Bob Moose relieved at that point and got out of further trouble, but only with the aid of a sensational play by catcher Manny Sanguillen.

Sanguillen stood squarely over the plate as Johnson tried to score from third on Buford's fly to left. He was knocked head over heels when Johnson came rumbling into the plate. But Sanguillen held the ball for the out.

It really didn't matter since the Orioles put it out of reach in the fifth when 11 men went to the plate and six scored.

Merv Rettenmund, who tied a Series record by collecting two hits in the inning, led off with a single. Powell then singled. After Frank Robinson flied out, Hendricks singled.

That hit scored Rettenmund, and when Al Oliver slipped and let the ball get by him, Hendricks raced to third. It was a short trip home for Hendricks on Brooks Robinson's single. Johnson then singled-and Bob Veale replaced Moose.

The Belanger-Palmer team then drew consecutive run. Johnson scored on Buford's grounder and Rettenmund wrapped it up with a run-producing single before Powell grounded out to end the inning.

When the Orioles batted in the sixth, they had a new target-Bob Miller. And then didn't let him get away unscathed. Singles by Frank Robinson, Hendricks and Brooks Robinson produced Baltimore's final run.

U.S. Retains Davis Cup

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Romania's Ilie Nastase completed a four-set victory over Frank Froehling III Monday in the finals but meaningless, match of the Davis Cup challenge round.

The defending championship U.S. tennis team retained the cup Sunday when Stan Smith defeated Ion Tiriac for an unbeatable 3-1 edge in the fierce match series.

Nastase defeated the 29-year-old Froehling, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 6-3, 6-1, 4-6, 6-4 after their match had been halted by rain Sunday with Nastase leading 20 in the second set.

The United States clinched the cup when Smith, the U.S. Open champion, scored a straight set victory over Romania's Tiriac 8-6, 6-3, 6-0 before the rains came.

The Americans had won both earlier singles and Romania won Saturday's double match, Tiriac and Nastase beating Smith and young Erik Van Dillen in straight sets.

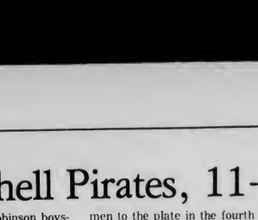
The victory marked the 23rd time the United States had won the cup, symbol of world tennis supremacy.

Officials admitted spectators free of charge for Monday's extra day of competition and about 300 persons turned out. Crowds of about 5,000 attended each of the first three days.

This year's competition is the last in which the nation defending the cup does not engage in preliminary rounds. Starting next year, all will compete in zone play leading to the finals.

Football, Pg. 12

Tonight's Intramurals



FIELD	TIME	FOOTBALL TEAMS
1	6:00	PBP vs. SK
2		TS vs. GSS
3		Education vs. Zeroes
4		Government vs. Civ. Eng.
5		Orbitals vs. Conplos
1	7:00	Whalers vs. Vikings
2		Kumquats vs. Abigails
3	8:00	Brownies vs. Pelicans
4		Mac's vs. Eyes
5		Winner (VVV Gypsies) vs. Tubes

TUG O WAR

1	7:00	Pipers vs. Terrors
2		Heifers vs. Lemons
1	7:15	Trojans vs. Lovers
1	7:30	Mouseketeers vs. Munchkins
2		Civ. Eng. vs. Stouls
1	7:45	3M's vs. Browns
2		Dutchmen vs. BX

Welcome to Pepperland! THE BEATLES
"YELLOW SUBMARINE"
•Plus "Going Steady"
Saturday Evening, Oct. 16, MAHAR AUD.
Screenings 6, 8, 10, (Midnight Showing Cancelled)
Sponsored by: Sigma Alpha Mu

SEATS NOW! AT BOX OFFICE OR BY PHONE
The Trial of the Catonsville 9
by DANIEL BERRIGAN S.J.
TUESDAY thru FRIDAY EVGS. at 7:30
SATURDAY EVGS at 7:00 and 10:00
SUNDAYS at 3:00 and 7:00
PRICES TUES thru SUN $7 6 5
FRI and SAT $8 7 6
THE NEW THEATRE
12 Holyoke Street, Cambridge
PHONE: 661-1610

There is a Homecoming Concert!
Sigma Alpha Mu presents
"James Montgomery Blues Band"
plus
"Featherbed"
Friday, Oct. 15
C. C. Auditorium
1 show only don't miss it!!
8:30 - 12:30
$2.00

Bell's Pizza
A taste not matched by any Pizza anywhere.
Open
11 to 2 a.m., Fri. & Sat.
1 a.m., Sun. to Thurs.
Free Delivery
Tel. 256-8011 - 253-9051

TONIGHT
THE DYNAMIC DESATATIONS
(DANCING) AT (LADIES NIGHT)
The English Pub
9:30-12:30
only 25c

Terriers Maul Redmen, 47-21

By DAN KAMAL

Santa Claus and the UMass football team were at Nickerson Field in Boston Saturday. Santa gave away tickets to a snowmobile show to the 6110 in attendance. UMass gave away a football game to Boston University.

To call it a give-away is probably an understatement. The Terriers scored seven touchdowns in the contest. Their defensive and specialty units either set up or scored five of them.

Redman coach Dick MacPherson said after the game, "Their specialty teams killed us." BU coach Larry Naviaux thought his "specialty teams did a great job." Again these are probably understatements.

The first half was practically all UMass as Piel Pennington put on an incredible display of aerial magic. Pennington, with split-end Steve Schubert his favorite target, amassed 240 yards through the air in the first two frames alone. However, even more incredible, the Redmen trailed BU at intermission 21-14.

With Pennington consistently hitting his receivers, who seemed to be wide open on every play, the game began to take early forms of being a UMass runaway, especially when end Bob Cabrelli hauled in a 17-yard scoring strike to open the scoring near the end of the first quarter.

But before the UMass cheerleaders had stopped doing their push-ups, BU's Harmon Hudson, a sophomore defensive back out of Dover, New Hampshire, tied the game. He took Dennis Gagnon's kickoff on his own eight yard-line, broke a couple of tackles on his 25, then out-raced everyone to the end-zone.

A few minutes later, after the Terriers had stopped the Redmen deep in UMass territory, Mel Priester returned a John O'Neil punt 41 yards to the visitors six. Three plays later, BU quarterback Bill Poole hit tight end Al Durkovich with a touchdown toss.

The home team increased its lead at 9:23 of the second quarter. Poole, after being trapped in his backfield, broke loose for a long gain to the UMass six. On that play he was jolted out of bounds by O'Neil and had to leave the game. Two plays later his replacement Sam Hollo pitched to halfback Pat Diamond who swept right end for the score.

Timmy Berra brought the Redmen to within a touchdown when he plunged one yard for a TD. This score was set up on two long gainers from Pennington to Schubert.

Even though BU led at the half, a UMass win was seemingly inevitable because Pennington was hitting his receivers almost at will. However Piel got hurt early in the second half on his only run of the ball game, and that was it for the Redmen. Oh man was that it.

Marty Evans replaced Pennington, and the Redmen stopped moving. Pennington had been passing off sprint-outs and roll-outs to avoid the Terrier rush. But Evans is a drop-back passer, and he didn't avoid the BU rush. In fact, the rush caused him to throw two interceptions within a minute, both of them being returned for touchdowns.

On the first one, BU lineman Bill Pukalo was clinging to Evans who should have eaten the ball but instead threw it into the welcome hands of tackle Brian O'Hara who went in untouched from 34 yards out. Less than a minute later, Evans was jolted by Ken Sinclair just as he released the ball, and BU's Rick Versocki picked off the wobbly pass and took it 23 yards for the score. The kick failed on this TD, but it didn't matter much as the Terriers now lead 34-14.

Mark Tripucka replaced Evans but still the offense stalled. Tripucka also tried to drop back and was immediately greeted by Pukalo who spent most of the second half in the Redmen backfield.

Meanwhile a 20 yard pass from Hollo to Daryl Smith put BU on the board again. Then the punt return specialist Priester closed out his team's scoring with a brilliant 53 yard TD return in which he broke no less than five tackles.

Berra broke the string of BU touchdowns with another one-yard run to close out the scoring. It was a sad, sad case of much too little, much too late.

GRID GRIT: Pennington suffered a separated shoulder and it is not known how long he will be out...the defense did an excellent job as it was not even on the field for most of the Terrier points...Schubert accounted for nearly 150 of Pennington's 263 total passing yards...BU was officially inducted into the Yankee Conference Saturday....

PENNINGTON...GROUNDED-UMass quarterback Piel Pennington shows the dejection left by a shoulder separation he suffered early in the third quarter of Saturday's game vs. B.U. The big qb was on mark consistently until he was knocked out of action when trying to run for a first down in Terrier territory. (MDC Photo by Barbara Brecher)

Harriers Rout Huskies; Host Tri-Meet Today

By JAY NESTOR

The UMass harriers hosted rival UConn Saturday, and the resulting Redman victory was exceptionally sweet as a fine display of team depth conquered the Huskies. UConn's Peter Bortolotti took the individual honor, leading from start to finish. Behind him, the Redmen really poured it on.

Tom Derderian lead the UMass attack, coming on strong in the final mile to finish five seconds behind Bortolotti. He was followed by Doug O'Connell, Paul Segersten, and Peter Crisci in third, fourth, and fifth positions respectively.

Mike Forbes of UConn slipped into sixth place and was barely overhauled by Bob Sullivan. Don Dunsky was two seconds behind. Sullivan and Dunsky have been doing a fine job for the Redmen this season with their consistent performances.

Sullivan maintained good position throughout the race while Dunsky came out on top of four Huskie pursuers. Seventh man for the Redmen was Rick Barry, with steady Mike McCusker not far back. The final score found UMass with a wide margin over the Huskies at 21 to 37.

The weather was a big factor in this meet. The air was cool and the ground was damp, thus eliminating dust in the Orchard, which generally irritates the runners. Many members of the UMass team substantially lowered their time on the home course due to the fine conditions.

Coach Ken O'Brien was pleased with the performance of his men. It was the harriers first encounter with a Yankee Conference team and UConn is rated to be one of the stronger powers in the Conference. This win is a good indication of the Redman's chances of defending their championship.

UNH seems to be the only threat left, and they host a mild challenge at best. With this win under their belt, the Redmen will have to be called the favorite for the Yankee Conference Crown.

THE BEARDED WONDER-UMass Tom Derderian leads fellow Redmen Bob Sullivan (14) and Peter Crisci (33) through the 2.5 miles mark in Saturday's rout in UConn. Derderian finished second overall in his best race this season. (MDC Photo by Bob Medeiros)

The UMass JV team boasted an overwhelming victory over UConn's second team. Freshmen Bill Gillin and Randy Thomas showed their heels to the field, after which Wayne Lucas, Paul Albini, Rick Tashjian, and Bruce MacLean rolled in before the first UConn finisher. Steve Brown, Tom Wilson, and Devon Croft all ran well for the Redmen. The score stood at a whopping 15-49, belt, UMass will have to be called produced by the impressive UMass sweep.

Today the Redmen are in tri-meet action with hosting Yankee Conference opponents, Vermont and Rhode Island. It should be a good test of Redman strength within a crowded field of runners. The meet starts at 3:30 and it should represent a sampling of things to come in the Conference meet.

Booters Blank UConn, 4-0

By MARCELLA SMITH

STORRS, CONN.-Imagine playing soccer for six hours and not giving up a goal. Imagine that, and you've imagined what the UMass soccer team has done, as last Saturday's 4-0 win over UConn extended the Redmen's shutout string to four games.

The Redmen-Huskie clash saw a little of everything, from the clear domination of the Huskie's in quarter number one, to the strongest period of the season for the Redmen in quarter number two. Then there were the unorthodox moves by UConn, both of which backfired, and finally there was that zero next to the opponent's score, a number that is becoming regular.

In mustering four goals, their finest production to date, three of the scores were accounted for by co-captains Lindo Alves and Augie Calheno. Freshman Tom Coburn added score number fourth with less then four minutes left in the game, as the Redmen upped their Yankee Conference mark to 2-0-1, dropping UConn to 0-3 in Conference action.

For one week the Redmen prepared for UConn, and as Coach Berryman stated after the game, "They really didn't do anything different than I expected them to, they were pretty much true to form." But one would never have known that UMass knew the Huskies game, for quarter number one belonged to the hosts.

UMass goalie, John Kiah, in chalking up his fourth shutout, got most of his day's workout in that first quarter as UMass looked sluggish, and were hanging back, starting slowly like they've done in almost every game this year, during the season as well as preseason.

Then something happened, and more than likely Coach Berryman's substituting had a great deal to do with it. UMass started controlling the action as if UConn were playing only half their squad. Blasting shots at Jon Demeter, the UConn goalie, the Redman fire never let go, as the fullbacks kept the ball in the Huskie half for nearly all 22 minutes. Chances for scores were coming by the dozens, as Berryman would shuffle in four or five players at a time.

As close as the Redmen came in the first 11 minutes, they were to come closer, as the heartbreaker came some 14 minutes into the action. With Demeter caught out of position, Coburn sent a soft pass into the middle of the goal area, which Jeff Hague met with tremendous force. Right on goal it was, but too high, and rebounding off of the crossbar the Redmen were again denied. The UMass bench was going crazy, trying to figure just what they had to do to score.

But as powerful and awesome as UMass was in that quarter they nearly didn't score, as UConn almost escaped with a scoreless tie at halftime, but Alves was not about to let that happen.

With just over four minutes remaining in the half, Alves took a Todd Buck pass and off-balance, kicked a bouncing ball between the UConn defender and Demeter. The ball lacked great force, but did the job for the 1-0 halftime lead.

And that is how the final score was shaping up as quarter number three saw both offenses testing Demeter and Kiah, both without success. The final period was half over before Alves' fourth of the season gave UMass some breathing room. This time Alves had a partial breakaway, and as Demeter came out of the nets, Alves lifted the ball over his head, and it was two-zip.

Then came one of UConn's unconventional and mysterious moves, as Demter came out of his nets, to mid-field, with just over seven minutes left in the game. But as quickly as UMass got control of the ball, the move backfired as Calheno, just to the Redman side Huskie goal. As Demeter raced back, he realized the futility of his efforts and as the ball nestled in the webbing, it marked the first time UMass had scored more than one goal in any one period.

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather: Heads it's nice, tails it's lousy; either way, what you see is what you get.

VOLUME XCIX, ISSUE 25 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1971

ISHE THAT GOOD, THAT FUNNY, OR THAT BAD? — John McManus, a member of the John Birch Society, spoke last night to a standing room only crowd in Thompson Tower, claiming that he favors a very weak government. For the complete story see page three. (MDC photos by Gary Alpaugh.)

Will Head Student Affairs

Gage Named Acting Vice Chancellor

By ANNE STADNICKI

Dr. Robert W. Gage, director of Health Services, was named to the post of Acting Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs yesterday by Acting Chancellor Randolph W. Bromery.

The Vice Chancellorship opened up when Dr. Bromery, who formerly held the position, became the Acting Chancellor after Chancellor Oswald Tippo resigned on September 30th.

"I appointed Dr. Gage mainly because he is a good administrator, as proven by our well run health center," Bromery said in an interview yesterday. "During the next few weeks Dr. Gage can implement the new reorganization of the Student Affairs department which was begun under my administration of the Vice Chancellor's office."

Bromery said he had consulted Gage about accepting the appointment earlier this week. He did not indicate who else had been considered for the position.

When contacted at his office yesterday, Gage said he "looks forward to the opportunities the position of Acting Vice Chancellor will provide to work with students." He said that he has no specific plans for action yet, but would probably make no startling changes in the operation of the Student Affairs department.

The Acting Vice Chancellor said he believes strongly in student input into the affairs of the University, as evidenced by the program he instituted in Health Services to involve students.

"I think Dr. Bromery and I have common aims," Gage said of his new relationship with the Acting Chancellor.

Gage emphasized that he considers his new position a temporary appointment. He said he would be glad to be considered for the position permanently, however.

Student Senate President Lee Sandwen does not approve of Dr. Gage's appointment as Acting Vice Chancellor, even though it is temporary.

In a letter to Acting Chancellor Bromery, Sandwen said that "The campus made it clear that unilateral decisions were unacceptable... The appointment has violated that campus consensus." (See letter on page nine.) Sandwen said he hoped that this appointment without consultation was not an indication of how the University would be administered under Acting Chancellor Bromery.

Upon notification of the Student Senate President's reaction to the appointment, Dr. Gage said he believed that Dr. Bromery acted "in good faith". He said he views his appointment as "purely interim".

"It takes time to get things together, if the campus is consulted," Gage said. He explained that Dr. Bromery probably appointed him because he needs someone to act now.

Bromery said that the appointment of an Acting Vice Chancellor was just to assure continuity of administration. He said that there was no consultation because a quick search committee might arrive on a popular but not-so-competent choice. He added that he felt he could make the choice of who would be Acting Vice Chancellor because he would be working closely with the person chosen, and knew what qualifications he should have.

The permanent Vice Chancellor, for Student Affairs would be chosen by the permanent Chancellor, Bromery said. He expected that the Chancellor named by the Trustees would form some sort of search committee to fill the post.

Bromery said his own availability to fill the permanent Chancellor office would be determined within the next two weeks. Reliable soirces have reported that Bromery can have the newly created post of Secretary of Education in Governor Francis X. Sargent's cabinet if he wants it, but financial adjustments have held up the appointment.

Governor Sargent's office has explained that within two weeks

(Cont'd on Page 2)

On The Inside:

- Voter Registration Special — See page six
- MDC Closeup: Food Service 101 — See page twelve

Dr. Robert W. Gage

Trouble-Shooter For Students

By DIANA TAYLOR

Lost and frustrated, a former University commuter knocked on the door of the man whom he believed to be his last resort. The student had been promised a room in Dwight House for this semester. When he arrived in the fall, his room had been occupied, and he was sent to Hamlin. From there, too, he was shoved into the cold. With no apparent hope in sight, he found himself in the office of the University's "trouble shooter for the students," the Ombudsman.

The name "Ombudsman" originates from the nineteenth century Swedish office, the holder of which served as an intermediary between the citizens and the government. The idea has come back to this country in the last few years, in the form of an intermediary between students and the administration in colleges and universities from coast to coast.

The office of Ombudsman was established at the University of Massachusetts in February of this year, English Professor Ellsworth Barnard being appointed to the post by a faculty-student search committee. Professor Barnard is available to anyone and is willing to help with any problem brought to him. He prefers not to get involved in such academic problems as grading, but he has dealt with problems in housing, food services, parking and personal matters. Students have also been known to come to him with proposals for change. One student, for instance, approached him with a suggestion for the erection of a stand at which motorcycles could be parked.

The Ombudsman has been able to pull red tape with University officials to help students with problems. The student described in the first paragraph, for instance, is presently settled in a room in Dwight House. He is also able to direct people to the proper channels through which they can resolve their difficulties.

The Ombudsman's office, located in Room 921 of the Campus Center, is open continuously from 8:30 to 5:00.

Northampton "Hot Line" Assists

By BOB CALLAHAN

A "Hot Line" has been established this summer in Northampton to assist those with any type of a problem or for those who find that they just need someone to rap with.

Manned by a staff of 20 full time operators, the line is presently in operation on Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights. On Friday and Sunday the hours of operation are 7:00 P.M. — 1:00 A.M., and Saturday from 7:00 P.M. — 3:00 A.M. The number to call is 586-3777.

The Northampton "Hot Line" was started this past July after a march was held to raise money for its support.

A representative from the Hot Line reported in an MDC interview that the service has been relatively unknown to many people on this campus because of a lack of publicity. Another problem has been a lack of personnel to man the lines but he feels that a recent training session in which 15 more operators were acquired may enable the line to extend its service to Thursday night.

Each potential operator has to take part in an 8 week training program. Of the present operators, the range in ages is from 17-50. Of these, 7 are students. Of the new operators recently acquired, 85% are college students.

One important point that should be stressed is that all calls are held in the strictest confidence. The representative also noted that on each weekend there is a professional on call; social worker, psychologist, pharmacist whom the operators can immediately get in contact with. In the past, the Hot Line has worked with Room to Move.

The Hot Line handles all kinds of problems that may arise. They can deal with family conflicts, drugs, Venereal Disease, emotional and psychological problems, problem pregnancy, draft questions, boy-girl problems, birth control, legal issues, suicide, marital conflict, and raps.

In case one of these problems should arise, the Hot Line is in service to help you. The number is 586-3777.

David "Chicago-8" Dellinger Here

David Dellinger, a co-defendant in the infamous Chicago Eight trial will speak tonight at 8:00 in the Curry Hicks cage.

The third speaker in the Distinguished Visitors Program, Mr Dellinger will give a lecture entitled "Vietnam -- Where Are We Now?"

Dellinger was the official spokesman for the 1971 May Day activities and, more notably, the most articulate of the eight original defendents of the Chicago Eight Conspiracy Trial of 1970.

Appropriately dubbed a "life-long pacifist", Dellinger has been involved in the planning and execution of every major anti-war rally since early 1965.

He is a Magna Cum Laude graduate of Yale University, where he received his B.A. in political science.

David Dellinger

Dellinger's first pacifistic act was his refusal to register for the Selective Service draft. He was tried and convicted of draft evasion and spent three years in prison.

His life, since the Chicago Eight Trial, has involved a continued dedication to anti-war activities. He is the editor of the controversial "Liberation Magazine," and has authored the book, Revolutionary Non-Violence.

Following this Distinguished Visitors Program lecture, there will be an informal coffee hour in Field Main Lounge. Mr. Dellinger will be available at that time to talk informally about all issues.

The entire University community is encouraged to come and listen to Dellinger's appraisal of where the United States stands today in Southeast Asia. An admission free will not be charged.

Another Disneyland?

UMass may be the first university to institute a system of tram-like, battery-operated cars as a means of intra-campus transit.

Robert Ferriter, University parking coordinator, enthusiastically elaborated on the system that could stem from a proposed 32-acre surface parking lot that is being considered as a solution for cramped UMass.

According to Ferriter, if the proposal is acted upon, the huge lot would be situated on a tract of vacant land near the Physical Plant. Because of the unstable clay and rock constitution, the area is "not good" for any building construction.

"This location would be a central area from which to fan out into the campus, and it would lend itself to mass transit." He explained that a system of 10-foot wide hardtopped lanes could run through the most heavily travelled routes of the campus. Mr. Ferriter stressed that small "pollution-freee" trams-such as those in Disneyland- could run on the lanes and commute students from the parking lot to their classes.

North Vietnamese Continue Shelling

SAIGON (AP) — Enemy forces kept their 2-1/2-week-old offensive along the Cambodian border alive Wednesday with rocket and mortar attacks on a dozen allied outposts 60 to 90 miles northwest of Saigon. Casualties were described as light.

One of the stations receiving fire was Firebase Pace, partially manned by Americans, where five U.S. soldiers threatened Saturday not to go out on a night patrol. The U.S. Command said Pace took about 30 rounds in sporadic shelling overnight. Several American soldiers were reported wounded.

The five men were among a 100-man company that was withdrawn Tuesday from Pace, 75 miles northwest of Saigon, to Fire Support Base Timbuktu, on a hilltop 75 miles northeast of the South Vietnamese capital.

Maj. Gen. Jack J. Wagstaff, commander of U.S. forces in the 3rd Military Region, said in an interview that the company was pulled out "because of all this goddamn flak, the possible harm it could do to company morale and in line with normal rotation policy."

"There was never any confrontation, never any refusal," Wagstaff went on. "There was never an opportunity. The only refusal, if you want to call it that, is that they told a newsman they weren't going to go."

Wagstaff said that the base commander last Saturday ordered a night ambush patrol and the 12 men who had been selected began preparing for the operation.

He said a reporter at the base walked into the bunker of five of the men and they told him that they were scheduled for a patrol but that they were not going.

The men reportedly questioned whether the radar was functioning and wanted to know what the intelligence was on enemy positions.

Wagstaff said the Saturday night patrol was cancelled before the order was given to move out because it was learned that a South Vietnamese unit already was in position in the intended ambush area.

He reported the company commander, Capt. Robert M. Cronin of Somerville, Mass., was so angered when he heard about the incident that he ordered the same unit to go out on a daylight patrol in the same general area.

The entire group, including the five reluctant men, moved out toward a treeline about 300 yards away with Cronin himself walking the "point," or lead.

Wagstaff said there would be no disciplinary action because "nothing was violated." The base at Timbuktu has been quiet for several months.

More Mass Arrests In Northern Ireland

BELFAST (AP) — Fifteen suspected members of the outlawed Irish Republican Army-IRA-were arrested in police raids across Northern Ireland on Tuesday.

(Cont'd from Page 1)

two of the three cabinet positions open will be appointed, with the third to be named shortly afterward.

The "financial adjustments" that are holding up the appointment concern the pay for the secretary post, according to reliable inside sources. It was reported that the Secretary of Education position is budgeted to receive less pay than UMass pays either its President or its Chancellor. It has been hinted that the pay is what is delaying Bromery's decision on accepting the cabinet post.

In the round of administrative musical chairs, there is also much speculation as to who will fill the position vacated by Dr. Gage as director of Health Services. Gage said he must relinquish the job that he "grew with for eleven years". He said that Health Services would meet last night to recommend his replacement, probably Barry Averill, presently Assistant Director of Health Services, but as the Collegian went to press there was no further information.

It was the second big swoop within a week. At least 250 men already are known to be held under the province's controversial Special Powers Act, which allows unlimited detention without trial.

As the arrests went on, British troops in Belfast came under sniper fire as they cordoned a blazing paint factory. Four firemen, injured by exploding paint cans, were the only known casualties.

The IRA's bomb-and-bullet campaign to unite the mainly Protestant province with the neighboring Catholic- dominated republic has cost 118 lives in the past two years.

Prime Minister Brian Faulkner told Parliament the army will blow up some border roads into the republic to cut off infiltration by gun-running guerrillas.

He disclosed also that security along the border will be tightened by "a wide variety" of measures, but did not elaborate.

Home Affairs Minister John Taylor said that 80 per cent of the 9,000 pounds of gelignite used by terrorist bombers since August, 1969, had been smuggled across the frontier along with 65 to 80 per cent of the arms and ammunition seized by troops. This includes 87 machine guns, 468 rifles and pistols and 104,500 rounds of ammunition.

Security chiefs claim they can limit the gelignite smuggling across the 260-mile frontier by closing off some of the 200 border roads.

The decision follows a dramatic increase in terrorist bombings in the last few weeks.

Political sources said the decision to blast the roads, coupled with intensified patroling of roads left open, resulted from last week's meeting between British Prime Minister Edward Heath and Faulkner.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN are on the second floor of the Student Union on the University campus, zip code 01002. Phones are 545-2550 (news), 545-0344 (sports), and 549-1311 (editor).

Second-class postage paid at Amherst, the DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes five times weekly Monday through Friday during the academic year except during vacation and exam periods; three or four times a week following a vacation or exam period or when a holiday falls within a week. Accepted for mailing under the authority of the act of March 8, 1879 as amended by the act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester, $10.00 per year.

New Senators Meet Tonight

All of the newly-elected Student Senators should report to tonight's Senate meeting at 6:30, according to Denise Magnell, of the Student Senate Public Relations Committee. The regular meeting is scheduled to begin at 7:00. Any student may attend. No reason was given for the new members' early arrival.

Magnell also said that the Commuter Assembly elections have been postponed indefinitely. They were supposed to have been held tomorrow, Thursday, October 14th. No reasons were given for this action, either.

Sandwen Attends Conference

Student Senate President Lee Sandwen leaves for Washington, D.C. today to attend a three day conference on the repression of South Vietnamese student leaders.

The international relations conference is sponsored by the National Student Association.

Thirty student body presidents from the U.S. and the heads of student unions from over 50 countries on both sides of the Iron Curtain ill attend.

The purpose of the conference is to discuss and make an international issue the repression of South Vietnamese student union leaders who helped to formulate the People's Peace Treaty passed last year.

According to Sandwen, these South Vietnamese student leaders have since been put in cages or listed as "missing".

'Government Is A Conspiracy'

Bircher McManus Fears Strong Government

By BOB CALLAHAN

John Birch Society member John McManus, stated last evening that the Government is a conspiracy of people who want to control the world.

He said that the organization for which he is Field Coordinator, is in favor of strictly limiting the power of the Government. "More and more government leads to total government, which can be either Communist, Facist or Totalitarian," he said in emphasizing his point.

The over capacity crowd in Thompson 102 heard McManus say that the threat of Communism is a fraud and a means of scaring the people into total government.

McManus gave the audience a brief history of Communism telling the group that the United States government has been giving the Communists aid since the takeover in 1917 of Russia by Lenin and Trotsky. He concluded by saying that while this has been going on, the American people have been told by the government that the Communists are our enemies.

He said that many are surprised to hear that the John Birch Society has taken the attitude that the government is trying to steal everyone's freedom.

Concerning the war in Southeast Asia, McManus said that the Society has considered from the beginning that the United States involvement is a complete and utter fraud. He said that the real effects of our military involvement are a bankrupt currency, a divided nation and moral decline.

"There is a powerful elite that is leading us into total control by them," McManus said in speaking about the elitist Council on Foreign Relations which has among its membership leaders in every important position of power.

McManus said that those who control the media, heads of colleges, military leaders, key government administrators and members of the two major political parties all have members who are in the Council on Foreign Relations. "By the 1940's this clite was in charge of releasing information on everything that the American people knew about."

John F. McManus
(MDC photo by Gary Alpaugh)

Nixon's new economic plans also came under attack by McManus. He called the wage-price freeze "Facism". He added that this program instituted in August by President Nixon involves government control in every business in the United States.

Calling Red Chinese leaders "brutal tyrants", the Birch member said that he thinks Nixon's planned visit to Red China is a bad idea. "I don't think he should have anything to do with them," he said.

In closing his Address, he said that the people can either join the conspiracy which the Government is undertaking, be a victim of it or work to resist it. He said that he has found that the program of the John Birch Society will enable the people of the United States to eliminate the threat of a conspiracy to establish a totalitarian government.

Following his hour long speech, McManus entertained questions from the audience. Some were sceptical of what he had to say and took issue with several statements. He was defended by one listener who told the audience that what McManus was saying was just what students have been saying.

The question and answer period came to a sudden and noisy ending when McManus left the stage after being told by a listener that what he had to say was 95% "bullshit".

After being assured that there would be no more vulgarity used against him, McManus agreed to speak to the students in a coffee hour in the Colonial Lounge. The discussion continued until after midnight.

Possible High Court Nominee

Sen. Byrd Is Supreme Court Critic

WASHINGTON (AP)-Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, a possible Supreme Court nominee, is strongly opposed to forced school integration and has been one of the high court's severest critics.

Several times in past years, Byrd, a conservative Democrat, has voted against confirmation of court nominees he regarded as too ultraliberal. He also took the justices to task for what he termed too lenient a position on crime.

In two recent speeches, Byrd assailed the Supreme Court for its school-busing pronouncements and what he termed soft-pedalling of lawbreakers.

"What is most likely to be achieved by busing and forced integration is increasing mediocrity in education," he told a national convention of the conservative Young Americans for Freedom, meeting in Houston, Tex., on Sept. 3.

"A leveling process will have been set in motion which can have the effect of stifling incentive for the bright and gifted student while discouraging the less well prepared student and the slow learner."

Byrd said the claim that forced busing and integration will teach the races to live together is false.

"Judging from the many racial incidents of fighting, knifing, and shooting that are increasingly occurring in the nation's high schools, there is cause to question the efficacy of such forced race mixing as a way to achieve racial peace and understanding," the senator said.

Byrd noted that the 1954 Supreme Court decision which outlawed school segregation was based on the premise that school assignment on the basis of race is unconstitutional. Yet, he said, busing is in itself assigning students to schools on a racial basis.

He said the courts could do more to improve black education if they would require equal amounts of money be expended per pupil on blacks and whites.

"...Hopefully not too far away-children, both black and white, will no longer be treated as guinea pigs in a social experiment that amounts to pure folly and that the needless hauling of them, like cattle, for countless miles and at a wasteful price will cease to be an obsessional fetish."

Byrd, 53, like Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black was once a member of the Ku Klux Klan, although again like the late justice he subsequently repudiated the affiliation.

During World War II, Byrd served as a kleagle, or organizer, for the Klan, and in 1946 he wrote a letter to the imperial grand wizard of the KKK urging a rebirth of the Klan "in every state of the union."

In an interview last January, Byrd said if he had his life to live over he would not join the KKK again.

FDA Monitors Called "Inadequate"

WASHINGTON (AP)-The government's food monitors announced new controls Tuesday on a suspected cancer-causing hormone found in livestock and immediately drew criticism that the controls are inadequate.

The hormone is diethystilbestrol, or DES, which the Food and Drug Administration announced last week had been found in 10 meat animals. The FDA and the Agriculture Department said Tuesday they are increasing the length of time farmers must stop feeding the hormone before animals are sent to market.

"The new regulations are not nearly strong enough," said Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., in a statement. "They suffer from the same defects as the old regulations-they rely upon the voluntary compliance of those who are using this cancer-causing hormone.

"The solution is to prohibit the use of DES in any cattle feed."

Originally the government required that farmers stop feeding the hormone to animals two days before their slaughter. Now it is going to lengthen the withdrawal period to seven days.

"Although the 48-hour period is scientifically adequate when observed, FDA concluded that a seven-day withdrawal period is a more practical period of time and is more certain to be followed," said the joint announcement from the FDA and the Agriculture Department.

A year ago the FDA doubled the amount of the hormone farmers can feed to cattle to make them gain weight faster. It kept the same two-day withdrawal period in force since the hormone was first used on cattle in the 1950's, despite the contention of some specialists that modern agriculture practices make the withdrawal periods ineffective.

This June the USDA responded to criticism that its residue-sampling program was statistically unsound by increasing its annual total of samples from 250 to 6,000.

Aug. 31 of the USDA told Proxmire it had found no DES contamination as of June 31. Tuesday the USDA conceded that seven of the ten tests showing DES contamination were made prior to June. Of the ten positive samples, seven were in beef livers and three in sheep livers.

"The samples were not reported earlier because the responsible laboratory officials considered the results to be preliminary until confirmed by a second more lengthy analytical process," the joint announcement said.

Consumer Action Group To Meet

A Western Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group, (WMPIRG), meeting will be held tonight for students wishing to join and work for the Nader-style group. The meeting will be held at 7:00 p.m. in 804-808 in the Campus Center.

About 150 students attended an organizational meeting for the development of a WMPIRG Monday night. Also at the meeting, held at Hampshire College, was Don Ross, a Washington based attorney for Ralph Nader.

The meeting was a follow-up to a series of talks that Dr. Joseph Highland of Nader's Raiders gave at several area colleges in the past few weeks.

The Western Mass PIRG, would be similar to groups already established in Oregon and Minnesota. The WMPIRG is one of 17 such new groups in development in 17 states across the country.

The group will research community problems and will inform the public of its findings. It will take direct action on matters such as consumer protection, occupational safety, protection of environmental quality, discrimination, health care and housing conditions. It will have the ability to initiate legal action against offenders.

Gage: UMass Alumnus

Dr. Robert W. Gage, newly appointed Acting Chancellor of Student Affairs at UMass, was a 1938 graduate of the University, then known as Mass State.

Following the medical degree he received at Harvard in 1942, Gage served an internship, then spent three years in the armed services.

In 1946 he practiced general medicine in rural Pennsylvania until he moved his practice to Amherst in 1954. Gage became Director of Health Services at UMass in 1960 after six years of general practice. He expanded the health service program from two half-time physicians and 5 nurses to the increased staff the Infirmary now employs

Cuban Holiday Begun

CARACAS, Venuezuela (AP) — Two hijackers seized a Venezuelan commercial airliner with 35 passengers aboard and ordered it to Cuba Tuesday night, the Caracas airport said.

The Venezualan plane was on a flight from Carupano to Caracas when it was seized, it was reported. It was to land on the Dutch Island of Curacao before going to Cuba.

Room To Move
Drop-In Center
5-0400, 5-0401

AUTO INSURANCE
ALL CARS — ALL DRIVERS
BUDGET PAYMENTS
CYCLES — SCOOTERS
Tekoa Insurance Agency
160 Pleasant St. Northampton 586-2742
10 Broad St. Westfield 562-3604

EVERY WEDNESDAY,
STAMPEDE NIGHT
starting October 13, some of the far west will come to New England...
Our Cowgirls, in western garb, armed with water pistols filled with Vodka, will serve your custom sliced western steer beef by the ounce.--45¢ per ounce for prime sirloin, 70¢ per ounce for fillet mignon, and 35¢ per ounce for a rib of broiled beef.
Keep our Friday night buffet in mind.
The Lord Jeffery
30 Belwood Ave. AMHERST, MASS. 253-2576
RAOUL DIETRICH, INNKEEPER

In The Nation And The World

Nixon Announces Spring Trip to Moscow

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon announced Tuesday he is going to Moscow in late May to meet with top Soviet leaders because there exists now "a possibility of making significant progress" toward settling major differences between the superpowers.

The President surprised newsmen by appearing at the usual noon White House briefing and reading a statement that was released at the same time in Moscow.

That statement said "President Nixon and the Soviet leaders will review all major issues, with a view toward further improving their bilateral relations and enhancing the prospects of world peace."

In answering question, Nixon explained that "I do not believe in having summit meetings simply for the purpose of having a meeting. I think that tends to create euphoria. It raises high hopes that are then dashed ... We are not making that mistake."

Nixon took pains to explain that there is no connection between the projected Moscow trip and the journey to Communist China which he announced last summer he would make sometime by or before next May. And the White House said the two trips will be separated "by a bridge of time."

In what appeared to be an effort to forefend criticism, Nixon said a few hours after his announcement of the Moscow visit that it should not be interpreted as meaning that the United States intends to be less concerned about its national strength.

"We want peace in the world, we want a reduction of tensions in the world," Nixon said as he participated in Capitol Hill ceremonies unveiling a portrait of Rep. H. Edward Hebert, D-La., House Armed Services Committee chairman.

But, the President continued, "Unless and until we have mutual agreements ... among the great powers ... the United States must maintain its defense at adequate levels."

Initial response in Congress to the President's announcement was favorable on both sides of the party aisle.

What makes the current situation favorable for a meeting, Nixon explained, can be seen as "we look back over the record of the last two and a half years, significant progress has been made" in Soviet-U.S. negotiations.

"We have had a treaty with regard to the seabeds. We have had one with regard to biological weapons. We have had an agreement coming out of the SALT Strategic Arms Limitation Talks with regard to the hotline and accidental war and, of course, most important of all-and I think this is the item that, for both us and for them, led us to conclude that now was the time for a summit meeting-we have had an agreement on Berlin."

Nixon was referring to the treaty signed last month by the United States, Soviet Union, Great Britain and France outlining responsibilities and rights concerning Berlin and the two Germanys.

Nixon indicated arms control, the Mideast, mutual troop withdrawals from Central Europe and a European security conferences are likely to be discussed.

In answering questions about the Moscow and Peking trips, Nixon said:

"The two are independent trips. We are going to Peking for the purpose of discussing matters of bilateral concern there. And I will be going to the Soviet Union for the purpose of discussing matters that involve the United States and the Soviet Union ...

"Any speculation to the effect that one has been planned for the purpose of affecting the other would be entirely inaccurate."

The May trip to Moscow will be the first visit any American incumbent president has made to the Soviet Union, although Nixon has been to Russia twice before.

The first time was in 1959 when as vice president he engaged in the famous "Kitchen Debate" with then-Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev. Nixon returned to Russia in 1967 as a private citizen.

Discussing the date for the Soviet trip, Nixon said it is "important that the preparation for the meeting be adequate in every respect and .. it was felt that May of 1972 would be the time when progress on a number of fronts, in which we are presently involved with the Soviet Union, would have reached the point that a meeting at the highest level could be effective."

As to the issues, the President said a major agreement on SALT "... ay be behind us at that point." "If it is not achieved," he stated, "certainly that would be one of the subjects that would come up."

Whether such areas as Southeast Asia would be discussed will depend on the situation at the time, Nixon said.

"As far as Southeast Asia is concerned, I would emphasize ... that, completely without regard to this meeting, and completely without regard to the meeting that will take place with the Chinese leaders at an earlier date, we are proceeding both on the negotiation track and the Vietnamization track to end American involvement in Vietnam.

"We trust that we will have accomplished that goal, or at least have made significant progress toward accomplishing that goal, by the time this meeting takes place."

In accepting the proposed trip, Nixon said he would be taking a small working group with him, including national security adviser Henry Kissinger and Secretary of State William P. Rogers.

Nixon Court Selections Due

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon said Tuesday he will announce his selections for the two Supreme Court vacancies next week.

He said Sen. Robert C. Byrd, conservative Democrat from West Virginia, and at least two women are on the list of those being considered.

Nixon did not identify the women, nor did he disclose how many other names are on the list. But a White House aide said the President has narrowed several hundred suggested names to ten or twelve.

Sources said other members of Congress-including Republican Sens. Robert Griffin of Michigan and Howard Baker of Tennessee-also have been discussed for the vacancies left by the retirements last month of the late Justice Hugo L. Black and Justice John M. Harlan.

The nominations, if approved by the Senate, will bring to four the number of justices Nixon has placed on the nine-member court since taking office. Two other Nixon nominees were rejected by the Senate.

His approved selections were Chief Justice Warren Burger and Justice Harry Blackmun. Nixon said Sept. 25 that the "most important qualification" of his future nominees is that they "share the general judicial philosophy and approach of the two men on the court whom I previously have appointed."

Byrd, the assistant Democratic leader in the Senate, said it would be "an honor for anyone to be nominated to serve on the Supreme Court." But he declined to comment on speculation he might be named.

Byrd, who has been a lawyer since 1963, but who has not practiced or held a judgeship, once was a member of the Ku Klux Klan-as was Justice Black. But like Black, Byrd later disavowed his relationship with the white supremacy group.

Now 53, Byrd was elected to the No. 2 Democratic leadership post in the Senate last January, defeating Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D—Mass.

Although he has a liberal voting record on economic issues, he has opposed some major civil rights legislation, has taken a strong law-and-order stand, and has been highly critical of some Supreme Court decisions.

There was no solid White House indication as to the identities of the two women. But speculation so far has centered on Rep. Martha W. Griffiths, D—Mich.; U.S. District Judge Cornelia Kennedy of Detroit; Superior Court Judge Sylvia Bacon of the District of Columbia; and Rita Hauser, U.S. representative to the United Nations' Human Rights Commission.

High Court Sidesteps Viet War

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court took on a new school desegregation dispute Tuesday but sidestepped the Vietnam war as it ruled in more than 400 cases.

Shorthanded by two vacancies, but working hard, the justices granted hearings on 21 appeals. The most significant concerned the splintering of some Southern school districts to limit the Negro concentrations in many schools.

The Justice Department and the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund will be heard this winter in suits against school officials in Scotland Neck and Halifax County, N.C., and Emporia and Greensville County, Va. The U.S. Circuit Court in Richmond, Va., has approved the division of the districts in ways that keep the schools in Scotland Neck mostly white and those in Emporia about half white.

The court never has agreed to hear an appeal testing U.S. military actions in Southeast Asia. So it was consistent when it rejected by a 5 to 2 vote a challenge brought on behalf of two soldiers contending they cannot be sent to war without a congressional declaration.

In other major actions, the court:

—Moved death-row author Edgar H. Smith, Jr., in a New Jersey prison, a step closer to freedom by declining to review a reversal of his murder conviction.

—Refused, with Justice William O. Douglas dissenting strongly, to halt the interrogation of prisoners at Attica, N.Y., about last month's rebellion.

In a case involving film, granted the government a hearing on federal law that prohibits interstate transportation of obscene materials.

Turned down Georgia's attempt to have delegates to the Democratic and Republican national conventions allotted purely on the basis of population.

In the school cases, Scotland Neck is part of predominantly black Halifax County. In the town itself about 57 per cent of the school children are white. The splitoff made the Scotland Neck system 74 per cent white and the county system 82 per cent black. A 1969 North Carolina law gave the town its own school district.

In Greensville County, blacks account for more than 65 per cent of the school population. By setting up a separate school division, Emporia officials kept the Emporia schools about 48 per cent white. In the remainder of the county they are 72 per cent black.

Last April, in the latest major desegregation decision, the court unanimously approved massive busing, redistricting and a variety of other techniques to break up racial concentrations in Southern schools. The new cases test the court's current views.

The Vietnam war challenge was brought by the American Civil Liberties Union and the New York Civil Liberties Union in the names of Salvatore Orlando and Douglas Kaplan. Orlando is on duty in Vietnam and Kaplan is under orders to be shipped there.

The Justice Department says Congress has given implicit authorization to the war by appropriating funds for the fighting. Justices William O. Douglas and William J. Brennan voted to hear the dispute.

House Acts on Equal Rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House sent to the Senate Tuesday a proposed constitutional amendment to guarantee equal rights for men and women.

First it struck from the resolution a provision that could have exempted women from the draft.

If the Senate passes the measure by two-thirds vote, it would require ratification by 38 state legislatures before becoming effective.

Passage was on a vote of 354 to 23.

This is the fifth time in 50 years that battlers for women's rights have brought a proposed constitutional amendment outlawing sex discrimination to a vote.

The House passed the amendment last year only to have it die in the Senate. In previous years it passed the Senate but never came to a vote in the House.

11 million ballots is enough power to change the course of history. Or not change it.

And that's too much power to just throw away.

REGISTER TO VOTE

Thurs., Oct. 14, 1 - 9 p.m. C C Concourse

The Vote Belongs To You

Student Votes Are Real

By ROBERT MEDEIROS

Last Spring it was highly publicized that the students of UMass would be eligible to register to vote in Amherst for the local town elections.

The Massachusetts newspapers played up the angle that the unsuspecting town of Amherst would soon be turned into a student-run operation by the local student population. The first reaction of the townspeople was one of understandable fear and misapprehension. Many of the townspeople were under the impression that it was only a matter of time before Amherst would fall into a state of chaos and utter confusion.

No longer is the idealist who spoke of a new utopia, or the alarmist who warned of a town takeover by "hippie freaks" taken seriously. The sensational aspects of student registration have now faded in the minds of the townspeople who are now able to look at the situation in a rational sense.

Merle Howes, Chairman of the Amherst Board of Selectmen, discussed in an MDC interview this new phase of voter registration. Howes said that the student is at UMass for one reason, and that is to get an education. He said that the average student does not have the time to school himself in the background of local affairs that would enable him to take an active part in the running of the Amherst government.

Howes favors the right of students to vote in Amherst, but feels that the effect of students on local affairs will be minimum. He said that the issues and affairs of local government are not madereadily available to the student. The student, who is interested in local affairs, finds that he must devote much of his time in the search for pertinent information. Howes reiterated by saying that the mass media covers the issues and affairs of state and national government to such a degree that the average student usually knows what is happening at these various levels of government. This aspect of news coverage has not been true of local government.

Mike Sullivan who is also a member of the Amherst Board of Selectmen said that students should be involved in the affairs of the Amherst government because many of the issues now being discussed in the town meetings are directly concerned with the welfare of the student resident. Sullivan said that student participation in the local town meetings has been poor. He blamed this situation on student apathy, and the student's own set of priorities which include uppermost his education.

Nancy Eddy, a member of the Board of Selectmen, agreed with the other two selectmen on the question of Student registration. Eddy said that she has not seen much evidence of student participation in Amherst politics.

Sullivan brought up the point that he and Mrs. Eddy are serving their first terms on the Board of Selectmen. He said that he and Mrs. Eddy represent a liberal faction on the Board of Selectmen, yet neither received any great support from the student population in their respective campaigns. Sullivan compared this with the fact that he had more students then he could handle in the state election campaign.

Speaker Bartley Here Tomorrow

Speaker of the House of Representatives of Massachusetts, David M. Bartley, will be at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, on October 14. He will speak at the Campus Center, Room 163 at 8 PM, and the meeting is open to the public. Mr. Bartley's appearance will be sponsored by the Amherst Democratic Town Committee to acquaint the potential new voters in this area with the programs and objectives of the Democratic Party in Massachusetts. Spokesmen for the Town Committee emphasize that the Committee is actively encouraging young voters to participate in its activities, and special invitation is being extended to students in area colleges.

Bartley, a graduate of the University of Massachusetts and native of Holyoke, became Speaker in 1969. At age 33, he was the youngest man this century to occupy this prestigeous and powerful position. A teacher-coach by profession, he was elected to the House from Holyoke's 10th Hampden District in 1962. As member of the Joint Committee on Education and the Joint committee on State Administration, he participated in the drafting and enactment of the Willis-Harrington Act, an important educational reform.

Attorney General Robert H. Quinn, then Speaker of the House, appointed Bartley Majority Leader in 1968. When Quinn was elected by joint session of the House and Senate to fill the vacant office of Attorney General, Bartley's House colleagues elected him Speaker to succeed Quinn.

On the same day that David Bartley, graduate of the University of Massachusetts and youngest Speaker of the House this century will speak, the Amherst Registrars of Voters will hold a special registration session for the convenience of students at the Campus Center.

Town Clerk Claims Few Have Registered

By BRIAN MARTIN

Out of 20,000 potential student voters, approximately 75 have thus far decided to exercise their voting power in the upcoming Amherst elections, according to Mrs. Estelle Matusco, Amherst Town Clerk.

The deadline for registering for the Feb. 22 elections is Feb. 2 and a list of polling places is available through the office of the clerk she said. Among those being elected are the Town Moderator, two Selectmen, and nine Town Meeting Members, according to Mrs. Matusco.

Registration takes place weekdays from 8 to 4:30 at the town hall, room 18. "Only a small handful a day show up," said Mrs. Matusco.

Next Thursday a table will be set up in the main level concourse of the Campus Center to help facilitate the registration process. This action, according to Mrs. Matusco, was taken in response to arguments that students didn't have time to register with only 15 minutes between classes. "Yet some were threatening to come here in busloads and wait on lines if a table weren't set up," she added.

When asked about the possible effects of a large student turnout at the elections she said she felt that in general, the students and townspeople would be sympathetic to the same issues partly because so many townspeople are connected with the University.

Mrs. Matusco did note some apprehension among "established" town residents though. "Some people are thinking 'would't it be horrible if...' and it is this fear of the unknown part of the equation that causes apprehension."

Let's Make One Thing Perfectly Clear

Your Vote Counts

Registration Simplified

By ERNIE ROTMAN

Registering to vote in Amherst has been greatly simplified. One no longer has to go through a big hassle to be considered a legal resident here. All that is required is that one be a resident (or student) of Amherst for a period of 6 months. If so designated it can include summer vacations as just absentee time, therefore, resting any fears one might have while trying to make the 6 month period. This means that if one has 4 months residency here by June, he'll only need 2 months more residency starting in September when he or she returns to UMass after leaving for summer recess.

According to Mr. Alan Torre, the town manager here in Amherst, "This is one of the most liberal systems in the state." He also stated that as of now there has been no great rush by students to register but added that it would probably pick up pace by next November.

Upon registering, the student will receive a folder which contains data on voting, as well as pertinent information about motor vehicle registering when one is registered here in Amherst.

Shortly there is to be an on-campus registration for any interested students. However, the town hall is always ready to offer assistance to prospective voters.

THIS IS THE TARGET-This is the Amherst Town Hall. It is but one place where you can go to register tomorrow; the other registration will be located in the Campus Center. You know where to go, so what's your excuse?

Survey Shows Many Students Registered

Nearly three out of five UMass undergraduates living on campus have already registered to vote, according to preliminary results of a survey being taken by UMass Students for McGovern.

The McGovern support group, part of the Amherst Registration Drive Coalition, is conducting a campuswide canvass of dormitories, encouraging students to register to vote and polling students' choices for President in the 1972 election.

Based on discussions with 567 undergraduates in several dorms, the McGovern canvassers recorded that some 325 of these students, or 57.3% had already registered, and that the vast majority of these had registered in their parents' home communities. The McGovern canvassers also learned that of the minority, 42.7%, of students who were not registered, only one-fourth expressed any intention of registering in the town of Amherst. Those students already registered, or intending to register, in Amherst made up slightly less than 14% of the sample. If this figure proves valid for the entire UMass student population of 21,000, it means that fewer than 3,000 students will ultimately choose to register in Amherst.

In regard to UMass students' choices of Presidential candidates, the McGovern canvassers learned that nearly three-fourths (73.0%) of the students polled were undecided or simply uncommitted to any particular candidate. Among the remaining one-fourth who cited a Presidential candidate, Senator George McGovern (D-S. Dak.) proved the most popular, primarily because of his opposition to the war and the draft. McGovern was the Presidential choice of 12.3% of all the students polled, or nearly half of those students who declared their support for any Presidentail aspirant. Senator Edmund Muskie (D-Maine) trailed with 6.7%, followed by President Nixon with 1.9%, and Mayor John Lindsay of New York with 1.8%. The remaining 4.4% was split among a total of fifteen candidates, including Rep. Shirley Chisholm, Daniel Ellsberg, Senator Barry Goldwater, Senator Fred Harris, Walter Hickel, Senator Harold Hughes, Senator Hubert Humphrey, Linda Jenness, Senator Edward Kennedy, Eugene McCarthy, Rep. Paul McCloskey, Ralph Nader, Huey Newton, Senator Charles Percy, and Governor George Wallace.

The UMass McGovern support group will continue its canvass through the months of October and November and will publish final results of the canvass before Thanksgiving. Further information may be obtained from Reid Fishman at 546-5798.

Oct. 13, 1971 - A People's Day

Why The Coalition

The ruling class of our nation has left a long trail of blood and suffering in its wake. The past few years show us plainly that there is to be no let up. On the contrary, this trial is growing in dimensions and size.

The blood of Malcolm, Dr. King, of Kent and of Mississippi are all in the trail. The tremendous bloodshed in Vietnam, the blood of George Jackson on the cement floor of San Quentin, the blood of his brother who tried desperately to set him free, of Fred Hampton, shot while dreaming of a better country, and the horrible deaths at Attica show clearly that the attacks are growing in visciousness and number. There are those political prisoners waiting faithfully for the people to set them free.

There are attacks that are not quite as open, yet their numbers and significance are just as great. These include the wage freeze, freezing the poor and working people in their misery and struggle, the cut backs in funds for education, hospitals and welfare, and the highest unemployment that many of us have ever known. Still company profits are on the rise and Nixon himself a raise in September. The war continues with our money that we need here at home. The Pentagon Papers shame Nixon in the least.

The ruling class has grown so arrogant it is hardly bothering to "explain" its murder and thievery making the cries of the suffering people and remaining relatives louder with awareness.

More and more people are seeing through the flimsy cover-ups and lies. Workers see the wage freeze as the farce it is. High school students, especially blacks, know they are being cheated. The unemployed and welfare recipients know they are getting a raw deal. People realize where their tax money is going - across the seas to own and plunder a peace-loving people.

There is so much work to be done. Repression, racism, murder, and hunger are rampant in America. The left is growing, yet its efforts have to be more coordinated and co-operative if it is to make peace and justice a reality. Obviously unity is a must, it is absolutely necessary. The importance of unity can not be over-stressed for without unity, we the people can do nothing.

In this light and spirit the Coalition for Peace and Justice was formed. A coalition of the many different leftist organizations on and off campus that has come together to work cooperatively towards our common goals: an end to the war, racism, repression, and poverty.

We are working together October 13, national moratorium day, by setting up workshops, bringing in speakers for a rally, and urging all organizations to join in and help. We see the month of November as being directed towards prisons and prisoners demands. We see ourselves as a working unit and this unit as a continuing one.

Again unity is of utmost importance-any person or organization interested in working with us is more than welcome to come to meetings and participate in our collective efforts.

UNITED WE STAND
DIVIDED WE FALL

Our Position On The War

We believe that the war in Indochina is not a mistake. We believe that it has been a conscious effort to insure American economic influence in recently de-colonized areas of the world. By looking at the war our government supports fascist dictatorships in Latin America, Greece and Spain. Economically and militarily we can see that it is not simply in South-East Asia where we have made so-called mistakes. In countries such as Brazil and Guatamala the governments of these countries use arms manufactured by the United States to suppress movements for social change. Whenever the interests of Standard Oil or United Fruit are threatened the American government does all it can to insure their safety.

In Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia, and the rest of South east Asia the issues are the same. The American government must, at any cost, protect regimes which will provide the big business interests in America with cheap labor, open markets for their products, and easy access to raw materials. The governments whom we support in Southeast Asia are willing to provide American business with these things, usually at the expense of the people.

The maximum legal wage in government supported areas of South Vietnam is $1.30/hr. There are also large deposits of tungsten, which is essential for building jet engines, and off its coasts are large deposits of oil.

Our position, therefore, is that the American government immediately withdraw all troops from Southeast Asia and all American economic interests. This is necessary in order to provide a chance for the Vietnamese to finally determine, themselves, how they want to live.

Tax Resistance Workshop

A Tax Resistance Workshop centering on Phone Tax Refusal will be held as part of today's Moratorium activities on the UMass campus. Advice, discussion, and organization of local tax resistance efforts will be carried on in Room 911 of the Campus Center between 10 A.M. and 2:30 P.M. The 10% Federal Excise Tax on all telephone bills was retained by Congress in 1966 specifically as a war-revenue measure to pay for Vietnam. An increasing number of Americans are choosing non-payment of this tax as an expression of their protest against American policy in South-East Asia. There are plans for all tax-refusers in the Amherst area to pool the funds denied the government and contribute them each month to the Street School, an educational project in the Puerto Rican community of Holyoke. All are welcome to the workshop sponsored by the Valley Peace Center and conducted by Mrs. Jean Williams of Amherst and Asst. Prof. James Matlack of the UMass English Department.

The Schedule For Today

8:30 a.m. to 1:30 -- COURT WATCHING Learn how to court watch in a Northampton courtroom. Meet at CCGARAGE BUS STOP
9:00a.m. to 3:00--THE WINTER SOLDIER FILM: Film on war atrosities.
BLACK MASS MEDIA TAPES: Taps on 3rd World movements in the country. Meet at CC room 174.
9:00 a.m. --HISTORY OF VIETNAM
11:00 - MEET AT ROOM 176
2:00
9:00 a.m.-DRAFT INFORMATION AND CULTURAL ALTERNATIVES:
9:00 a.m. to 3:00 - DRAFT INFORMATION AND CULTURAL ALTERNATIVES: Meet in room 802
9:00 a.m. - TAX RESISTANCE meet in room 911-915
10:00 a.m. - Radical Religion: a discussion on religious folk in the movement meet in room 905-909.
10:00 a.m. to 12:30 - WESTFIELD DETENTION CENTER: talk on working with juvenile delinquents. Meet in rooms 168-170-172
10:30 a.m. POVERTY and the WELFARE SYSTEM Rm. 901 CC
1:00 p.m. - LEAFLETS FOR FACTORIES: formation of a group to leaflet factories meet in room 168
2:00 p.m. - BELCHERTOWN STATE VOLUNTEERS meet in room 903
3:00 p.m. - EMERGENCY DEFENCE COALITION FOR BAY AREA PRISONERS: discussing plans to make November Prisoner Solidarity Month. Rm. 804.
AND AT 8:00 PM DVP IS BRINGING ON TO CAMPUS DAVID DELLINGER IN THE CAGE. this leaflet is put out by the COALITION FOR PEACE AND JUSTICE

THIS SPECIAL MORATORIUM DAY PAGE WAS COMPILED BY PAT DRANIGINIS, JIM MATLACK, AND BOB DAVIDSON OF THE YOUNG WORKER'S LIBERATION LEAGUE.

Fabricworld
SHOP 'N SAVE! MASTER CHARGE BANKAMERICARD
COLUMBUS DAY WEEKSALE
SALE
FASHION FABRICS
UP TO 50% OFF
SALE ENDS SATURDAY
72" WIDE NYLON NET
REG. 25c 12c YARD
• MIN. 3-YD PER CUST.
• 20 POPULAR COLORS
• WHILE IT LASTS!
HI-LO CORDUROY
1.29 REG. 2.49 YARD
• 45" 100% COTTON
• BY CROMPTON
• 54/56" WIDE
BONDED ACRYLICS
1.88 VAL. to 4.50 YD.
• SOLIDS • FANCIES
• MACHINE WASH
• 54/56" WIDE
FAKE "FUR" PRINTS
REG. 4.99 YARD 3.88
• 50% ACRYLIC/44% COTTON
• MACHINE WASH 66/60"
HELLER'S BONDED JERSEY KNIT
REG. 3.49 YD. 2.49
• 100% ACRYLIC
• MACHINE WASH
• 60" WIDE
• FALL '71 COLORS
COHAMA NEEDLE POINT TAPESTRY
3.49 REGULAR 4.99 YARD
• 80% RAYON/20% COTTON
• DRY CLEANABLE
• 50" WIDE
"DRITZ" PATTERN CUTTING BOARDS
1.99 REG. 4.00 72"x40"
WE SPECIALIZE IN CUSTOM DRAPERIES
*AMHERST
1 Pray St.
Open Daily 9:30 - 5:30
Fri. til 9:00 Tel. 549-1058
*NORTHAMPTON
21 Pleasant St.
Open Daily 9:30 - 5:30
Thurs. til 9:00 Tel. 584-6306

Sen. Hughes or Mrs. Harris?

Democrats Split on Convention Post

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Executive Committee of the Democratic National Committee gave its expected approval Tuesday to Patricia Roberts Harris for a key post at the national convention. But reform forces claimed progress in a bid to reverse this action in the full committee.

The optimism among supporters of Sen. Harold E. Hughes stemmed from a decision by backers of Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine to work for the Iowa senator in the Wednesday showdown.

Mrs. Harris, a 47-year-old Washington Negro attorney and longtime ally of Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, was proposed for the temporary chairmanship of the National Convention's Credentials Committee by National Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien.

The Executive Committee, which is controlled by the party regulars, endorsed her on a 9-3 vote for the post which can be of great importance in the organizational stages of the national nominating convention.

While this intraparty struggle was developing, the Democrats crowded field of active or potential candidates for the presidential nomination was reduced by one.

Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana announced at a news conference that he is dropping out of contention because of cancer surgery undergone by his wife. He said he does not feel he could leave her for long periods which an active campaign would necessitate.

Stephen Reinhardt, California national committeeman, said the lineup on the credentials job in the 110-member national committee is very close, adding "the Executive Committee is more conservative than the National Committee as a whole."

Meanwhile, George Mitchell and John F. English, two top Muskie aides who are national committeemen from Maine and New York respectively were reported phoning members of the National Committee in an effort to line up support for Hughes.

During the day, the Hughes candidacy picked up additional Negro support from the widow of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., Washington Attorney Clifford Alexander and Los Angeles City Councilman Thomas Bradley. Rep. Shirley Chisholm of New York, like Mrs. Harris a black, will nominate Hughes.

Mrs. King said in a telegram to Muskie, O'Brien and Humphrey that the present controversy could be resolved by naming Hughes to the Credentials Committee post and Mrs. Harris as chairman of the Platform Committee, a position to be filled later.

ZAYRE
The Discount Department Store
no space to waste?
you need a compact!
and we've got brand name compact appliances at skinny prices to meet your budget!
save $10
famous name compact 5.1 cu. ft. refrigerator
84.88 charge it
copper only
Compact refrigerator featuring adjustable shelves, large crisper, wide-range temperature control and plenty of on-the-door storage! Counter height top is ideal for extra work space. U.L. approved repeat of a sell out!
last offer at these prices compact size . . . only 19-1/2" high 20" wide, 22-1/2" deep famous name cube refrigerator
69.88 charge it
copper only
Mini-refrigerator with deluxe freezer compartment, adjustable shelves, egg storage and 2 ice cube trays. White. Operates on regular house current.
save $10
double satisfaction guaranteed
Zayre and the manufacturer stand behind every purchase.
• 1 year service included (includes repair or replacement of any parts proven defective under normal use. No extra charge for labor.)
ZAYRE/HADLEY
Route 9 (at Amherst Town Line)
OPEN MON. THRU SAT.
10 AM TO 10 PM
Prices in effect now through Sat. Oct. 16

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF — Richard C. Hanson
MANAGING EDITOR — David D. Williams
BUSINESS MANAGER — James Gold
EXECUTIVE EDITOR — Barry J. Rubenstein
NEWS EDITOR — Anne C. Stadnicki
SPORTS EDITOR — Earle T. Barroll

PHOTO EDITOR — Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR — Robert Nesti

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR — Emory Rounds, Bob Sprague
NEWS STAFF — Dennis Foley, Jan Auman, Bill Manburg, Charlie Berkow, Steven Fine
SPORTS — Earle Barroll, Bob Callahan
EDITORIAL — Barry Rubenstein
DARKROOM — Gary Alpaugh
AD LAYOUT — Bill Manburg

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administration read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the views of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, and letters represent the personal views of the writers.

Quick Decision

Now that the procedural aspects of the selection of the new Chancellor have been decided by the Board of Trustees, the time has come to implement the machinery immediately. Delay can only serve the purpose of wasting the time both of the University and of the Acting Chancellor which, in both regards, is detrimental to the well-being of the campus as a whole.

There are obvious reasons for desiring an immediate, though not hasty, decision. The most blatant one is that Dr. Bromery, as Acting Chancellor, simply does not have the strength which comes from knowing how long his term will be. For in a real sense, he is simply acting. In effect, he is a lame duck for an indefinite period of time which is like an employer telling an employee that he might be fired but that the employer hasn't decided upon exactly when. What would you expect the worker to accomplish in the interim?

However, Dr. Bromery is not the type of administrator who sits around and waits for decisions to be made. He is sure to make moves during his tenure but these will lack the power that they deserve. The effect of this will cause an administrative stalemate of sorts with no victor emerging.

Another factor to be considered is Bromery's future. It is certainly no secret that the Acting Chancellor is under consideration for the post of Secretary of Education in the State reorganization now being staffed by the Governor. Also, Bromery should be one of the prime candidates for the position of permanent Chancellor; in fact, he seems the logical choice. The result of this is that Bromery, somewhere along the line will have to make a choice.

We do not feel that the Acting Chancellor should be forced to make a decision before all the information is in. He should fully realize where he stands on terms of both positions so that he might make the wisest choice both for himself and for the University and state. Although others may make a judgment, only Bromery can decide where his talents will reap their greatest rewards.

A Search Committee which delays its selections may cost the University community the best man available. At a time when college administrators have about as much future at a University as an entering freshman, or less, we can ill afford to let any valid choice escape our grasp.

Art Buchwald

A Close Election

WASHINGTON-Some of us here, but not all, still have not recovered from the existing presidential election held in South Vietnam last Sunday.

All of us stayed up all night long as the election seesawed back and forth, first Theiu ahead, then the ballot mutilators picking up strength in the cities.

The lights were on at the State Department, the Pentagon and the White House. High government officials, whose reputations were at stake on free elections in South Vietnam, stayed glued to their TV sets in anticipation of a new era of self-determination for this great bulwark of democracy which all Americans had learned to love and respect.

The neighbors gathered at our house in the evening. My wife had made sandwiches and hot coffee and we had beer in the ice-box. We had set up three television sets in the living room so we could watch ABC, NBC and CBS at the same time. There was a festive air in the room. After eight years our investment in South Vietnam was finally paying off.

The first results came in from the town of Bu Dhang Bien. CBS reported 156 for Theiu, one ballot mutilated and 2,345 of the enemy killed.

Eric Sevareid came on and analyzed the vote. He said that By Dhang Bien had always been considered a Theiu stronghold and there was no reason to believe that this was a trend for the rest of the country.

Just then John Chancellor came on with a bulletin that Chu Phuoc Ilai had gone for Theiu by 98%, but the highway between there and Saigon was still not safe to travel at night.

Chancellor put great significance in this vote because in 1962 Chu Phuoc Ilai had given Madame Nhu a solid majority. He said that the high Theiu vote could be attributed to volunteer work the army has been doing in the past few months, rounding up the people to vote.

Harry Reasoner said that ABC had given the entire Mekong Delta to Theiu--at least those parts of it that still weren't in Viet Cong hands. This was at 9 o'clock. He did say that several ballots, four to be exact, had been mutilated in Duc Thanh and therefore it was too early to predict who would win.

Walter Cronkite then started reading returns from the north. Theiu had won in Di Boup, Chu Yang Sin and To Bong. It turned out that To Bong was one of the crucial towns in the election because three of Vice President Ky's relatives lived there. But the police had been campaigning since August and To Bong had gone overwhelmingly for Theiu, with 768 votes for him and 20 students arrested.

By this time precincts from all around the country started reporting in. NBC had Theiu leading by 95% of the vote, CBS by 91% and ABC had switched to a rerun of the Monday night football game.

But despite the heavy Theiu vote, the ballot mutilators refused to concede to Theiu. NBC and CBS had both set up their cameras in the palace of President Theiu to cover the victory celebration, but Theiu said he wanted to wait until every vote was in before he made a victory statement.

The funny thing was that most of us went to bed believing Theiu had been elected president of South Vietnam. When we woke up in the morning you can imagine our surprise to find it was true.

Copyright 1971, Los Angeles Times

An Exchange Of Power

By M. GUY ROSS
Graduate Student Senate
Student Affairs Committee

As one of the students who was somewhat involved in the events of last week which began with the resignation of Oswald Tippo and has apparently ended with the appointment by the Board of Trustees of Chancellor Bromery (I know I said Chancellor and not Acting Chancellor.) I would like to share with you some of my observations and feelings about these events.

As I write this on a pleasant Saturday morning, I find it difficult to realize that it was exactly one week ago and not one month ago that I received the news that "the Tip" had resigned. My first feelings were (callous as this may seem) excitement at the prospect of an exchange of Power within the University at a time when the "Student Leaders" had developed some political sophistication and understanding of their Institutional Situation as students.

I would like to interject here my feelings about OZ or The Wizard, as he is often called in the basement of the Campus Center. My dealings with Tippo have almost always been of an adversary nature. That is, the nature of our dealings has been such that I have rarely worked with him and usually against him, trying to pressure him into a position closer to that which we, the opposition of the hour, by the faculty, students and staff of the campus as their chief Campus Officer and not by the President and the Board of Trustees of the University System. (More on this point later.)

TUESDAY: Wood met with a basically cold reception from the campus as he presented his case at a convocation - of the Amherst Campus. At this time it was correctly pointed out by a member of the audience (I regret that I don't know his name) that it was quite obvious that the disagreement between Wood and Tippo which had led to the Chancellor's resignation was not merely over a few hundred thousand dollars, but was over something else which was far more important and that whatever it was, it was neither being disclosed nor discussed. I must say that I agree with him and it is my feeling that the basic questions which are being avoided have to do with the autonomy of the campus within the University System.

WEDNESDAY: Wednesday the unheard of happened.. The Faculty Senate, the Graduate Senate and the Undergraduate Senate (the latter senates meeting in joint session) actually passed the same motion (with the exception of small procedural differences)!!! This motion which carried in the Faculty Senate 62-1-1 abstainsion and passed in the joint session of the student senates unanimously, established an Ad Hoc all campus search committee made up of 6 undergraduates, 6 faculty, 2 graduates, 2 staff, with the faculty to be appointed by their senate, the graduate and undergraduate students appointed by their respective senates, and the staff members appointed by the Acting Chancellor. The procedure to be used by the committee felt would be most beneficial to the student. In these dealings many tactics were used and many utterances made, and few were complimentary. In other words, I have called Tippo every name in the book. My differences with Tippo were real and most of them still stand, but this must be said....He is a man I respect, he was a talented administrator, and he cares very deeply for and about UMass-Amherst. Even with our differences, he was a good Chancellor from the student point of view. My feelings for him have the depth that comes from struggle and I look forward to meeting him without the interference of our respective political roles.

I must admit, however, that these feelings played little or no part in my actions immediately following the news. Those early moments could not be wasted on sentiment; they had to be used to consolidate power and strengthen our position. (For what it is worth, I feel confident that if Tippo could have been consulted, he would have advised us to do exactly that.)

MONDAY: We, the Executive Committees of the Graduate and Undergraduate Senates, met with President Wood in the conference room at Whitmore. It was my feeling from that meeting, that Wood was very much in control, that Tippo's resignation would be accepted immediately, that Wood and the Board of Trustees (who seem to be very tight) would name the Acting Chancellor and that unless the Amherst Campus acted very swiftly and together, Wood and the Board would also name the next Chancellor. These feelings and observations seemed to be shared by many of the other participants at that meeting. Of these feelings, the one which concerned me most was the prospect of having Wood and the Board of Trustees appoint the next Chancellor. I felt that it was very necessary for the maintainance of Campus Autonomy that the next Chancellor realize that he had been appointed was simply to nominate one name to the board of Trustees (after appropriate search) for the Board to consider. If the Board were to find the nominee unacceptable, the committee would submit another name and continue this process until a satisfactory candidate was selected.

This Committee as established and its procedure has three significant features: 1) it is an all campus committee established by the legitimate representative governing bodies of the campus.

2) The representation of students is 50% and the representation of students and faculty is, correctly, given their concern over the selection of the Chief Administrative Officer of the Campus, an overwhelming majority.

3) Perhaps the most important--the committee would nominate one candidate at a time with the Board of Trustees retaining the Veto power over the selection. (a model not completely unheard of in this country's federal government).

To be continued

Letters To The Editor

You Can Fight City Hall

To the Editor:

Ralph Nader has shown you can fight city hall, General Motors, the campus bookstore. He and Nader's Raiders have been an independent group of students and professionals lobbying in the public interest on the national level. The success has led to the organization of regional, Nader style public interest research groups.

Here in the Connecticut Valley, the Western Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (WMPIRG), has been born. This will be a coordinated twenty college student run PIRG. We will be able to work on problems facing us as students and residents of Western Massachusetts. We will be able to work with experts at every level of activity, research, public education and direct action with community groups.

The public needs research done in areas of environmental quality, consumer protection, corporate responsibility, race and sex discrimination and landlord/tenant relations. Action comes through publishing articles, helping draft legislation and filing suit against those corporations acting contrary to the public interest.

Regional PIRG's can and have worked. Oregon and Minnesota have already set up student run PIRG's. Regional PIRG's are now being set up in sixteen states. What good can they do? For example, the Oregon PIRG has successfully brought the pulp mills, along the Willamette River, to court for polluting the waterway and after winning the case proceeded to bring action against the governmental regulatory agency for its negligence in controlling such pollution.

It has set up consumer hotlines and much more.

How strong WMPIRG can be depends on you. We need people to work for WMPIRG. No special skills are needed. We also need the support of people who believe in the concept of WMPIRG. There will be a meeting of the UMass PIRG Wednesday night at 7:00 in Room 804 in the Campus Center. Please come, get involved.

Rick Milliken

No Grief

To the Editor:

By the time this note reaches Amherst, the Tippo issue may be old hat, but amid all the fuss and bother I think it ought to be made known that there are those who are, not overcome with grief at Tippo's resignation -- especially those who can remember the departure from campus of people of the calibre of Dr. Eugene C. Putala, Prof. Putala, for those who cannot recall, was one of the best minds the University had, a few years ago; but unfortunately he had the courage and academic honesty to challenge the University's rush toward architectural excellence, with the result that he was sacrificed to the construction program.

Now that the campus is filled with buildings, it is time for the University to fill the buildings -- with real students and real teacher-scholars.

Dr. Raymond P. Tripp, Jr.
Denver, Colorado

Editorial Points

The story of Chancellor Tippo's resignation has reached as far as Washington. In a letter to a Collegian reporter, columnist Art Buchwald said that he hopes his visit two weeks ago didn't have anything to do with it. We don't know.

* * * *

Tonight, David Dellinger will speak at the Cage. If you can remember a few years back, the familiar slogan was "Free the Chicago 7". Now, according to an observer of the CC grafitti board, the latest slogan is "Free the Indianapolis 500".

* * * *

One observer wondered out loud whether B.F. Skinner uses the MDC to line his boxes. We could think of worse fates.

* * * *

The Orioles must have forgotten that they're the best fielding team in baseball. Either that, or they have forgotten what it's like to lose and wanted to try it out.

* * * *

One college guide reports that UMass is the place for all those who wanted to go Ivy League but couldn't get in. We wonder whether that's a compliment or not.

Made Of Stone

By DENNIS HILL

Yesterday morning, I was lounging in the music room, when I noticed myself staring, staring at the walls. Walls made of stone. Walls of Stone!? An impulse ordered me away. Obey the bastard brat of some hidden emotions? No. So I sent the bastard away and waited for his tormentors.

I needed a moment or two in order to coax my feelings out from behind my brain (lest there they remain, and masquerade as "beliefs").

As they began to emerge, I felt threatened. But before Anger could come to my defense, a sense of Admiration and Compassion gently rested control, and left the threat hollow, and alone.

Now, I wondered; how could these Walls of Stone cause such drama within me, while their talent remained so well hidden?

But why, then, was their effect so unlike Nature's?

For this I had no answer, so my eyes returned to the Walls. But I saw nothing new, so I stopped looking and I listened. And I heard. I heard what the Walls of Stone were struggling to tell me; to tell anyone who would only stop looking and listen. Listen:

"BETRAYED! BETRAYED! BETRAYED!", all of them did shout with all of their collective Remorse!

And then I was sad, twice sad, for two different hurts. I was sad for Nature's stone, but I was sad more, much more for us. Because then I think I understood.

It was an attempt, so it was beautiful. It failed, so it was ugly. The stone of Nature is Nature. The stone of Man is stone.

Deep Concern

Dear Dr. Bromery:

At the Board of Trustees meeting I expressed my deep concern that the various campus constituencies be consulted in appointing the acting chancellor. In the report of the Committee of Concern, the joint senates strongly indicated their desire to be consulted in the decision-making process of the university. In both statements, the campus made it clear that unilateral decisions were unacceptable. We had assumed that you agreed with such a concept.

The appointment of an acting vice chancellor for student affairs has violated that campus consensus. The process used was inconsistent with a campus founded on the principles of participation and communication on major issues. We call this your attention especially because we fear that this decision may indicate the direction you envision as acting chancellor. If indeed this is an example of your intentions, we view with apprehension your tenure as acting chancellor.

I shall submit this issue to the Senate for its appropriate response.

Most sincerely,
Lee Sandwen
Student Senate

A Message From The SGA

To The Senator

Congratulations on your recent election to the Student Senate! The officers and chairmen would like to welcome you to that body, and express the hope that you might achieve those goals that you have set for yourself when you ran for the Senate.

The Senate itself has a good deal of potential- its success will depend on you and how you intend to apply yourself to those tasks that you undertake.

The Senate will have its first meeting on Wednesday, October 13 in the Senate chambers, Rooms 163-165 complex in the Campus Center. We will have an orientation gathering at 6:30 to explain fundamentals. The meeting itself will convene at 7 p.m. Next week, at 6:30 on October 20 we will have another orientation for anyone who would like more details.

It is important that you attend this first meeting- you will be sworn in and receive general introductory materials that you will need to understand the format of the Senate.

Congratulations again. I hope you have a successful year.

John Hogan
Senate Vice-President

To The Non-Senator

The 1971-1972 session of the Student Senate will begin with its first meeting tonight. All new Senators will be sworn in and the process of orientation and getting acquainted will begin anew.

Many people in the past have had reservations about the Senate and its potential value to the student body. With the advent of a new Senate (and that is what we have), direction becomes important. What goals that body sets and achieves depends not only on the 100 Senators, but on the campus as a whole. The students in that body can only assume that they are doing what is correct if they get little or no feedback. It is up to the students as a whole to talk to their Senators if they feel that the Senate is going the wrong way. It is up to the Senators to respond. It has to be a two-way street. This year-get involved. Join a committee or help out on a project. There are enough interests on this campus for you to find something of value to yourself. Don't sit back this year - care.

John Hogan
Senate Vice-President

Student Senate Election Results

Cashin Temple	Lester Murphy	muter Election For
Bruner, Mary	Washington Upper	Student Senate
Donlon, Walter	Mark Moskin	Abbol Robert
Edmonds	Brown Ara Karian,	Amidon Ken
MacNamara James	Stewart Kasper,	Bishott Lee
Mclaughlin	Jim Odonoghue	Booker David
Johnson Sean	Cance Janet	Cassidy James
McGuirk	Pearlman	Chiller Robert
Lewis Jonathan	Crampton Linda	Doran Paul
Baron	Gamble	Dufour Rene
Mary Lyons Susan	Emerson Ann	Flint Larry
Holman	Middlebrook	Flores Heriberto
Adams Upper Elliot	JFK Lower Michael	Fuller Joan
Sherm	Gregory	Grant Donna
J Q Adams Lower	JFK Upper Richard	Krane Susan
Susan Davidoll	Sulni	Kurt Edie
J Q Upper Lisa	Brett Grey Acone	Kowarsky Janie
Mandell	Brooks House Ron	Matysiewicz Edwin
Moore Kevin	Young	McCallum Mike
Kulakowski, Jue	Butterfield John	Meley Clare
McKillion	Learoyd	Mosher Tom
Makimamie Bruce	Greenough Nick	Mulligan Neal
Bernstein, Bob	Apostala	Olmstead Albert
Waters	Van Meter Mari	Poisson David
JFK Middle Mike	Earnest	Rea Harry
Altillisch	Fields Phillip	Rosoli Mark
Coolidge Middle	Cohen, Matt Tuckol	Saunders Bob
Mira Marshal	Grayson David	Shimkoski Dennis
Pierponi Peter	Williams, Alan	Spatrick Susan
Lewicki, John	Davis	Sprague Robert
Whaylen	Commuter	Vachon Alec
Washington Lower	Winners of Com	Stevens John

Agnew Endorses Turkish Reforms

Ankara, Turkey (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew endorsed on Tuesday political and land reform measures proposed by the Turkish government over conservative opposition. He said they "merit our great support."

The reform measures are an issue in a political controversy that threatens the government of Premier Nihat Erim.

Agnew told Americans stationed in Ankara that their efforts can help solidify progress toward reform.

He spent more than an hour conferring with President Cevdet Sunay and later visited Turkey's parliament, the Grand National Assembly.

At the U.S. Embassy, he told about 200 Americans, many of them servicemen, that "I believe we've earned the right to say we've lost that appellation of 'the ugly American.'"

He said Americans abroad are increasingly "contributing to the general purposes and attitudes of the countries in which we serve. And I believe that reflects great credit upon you."

Agnew said U.S. attitudes and support for the cause of reform in Turkey were first evidenced in the Truman Doctrine of American aid in 1947.

"Because we have these common identities and common purposes, I believe that we can solidify through our day to day efforts the progress of the Turkish government toward greater participation of its people, educational reform, the land reform that the current government is engaged in ...

Erim's government is committed to reforms which conservative politicians, led by Suleyman Demirel, chairman of the Justice party, are resisting. That party, Turkey's largest, has withdrawn its five ministers from the Erim Cabinet.

A conservative government led by Demirel was ousted by the armed forces March 12. A political crisis could lead the military to intervene again.

Ecology Film Shown Tonight

The Pioneer Valley chapter of Zero Population Growth will present a film entitled POPULATION ECOLOGY at 8 p.m. tonight October 13th in McConnell Hall, Room B05 (Clark Science Center), Smith College. The film deals with the scientific study of the natural checks and balances preventing overpopulation within animal species and men, and considers the implications of man's rapidly expanding population.

Following the film there will be a general discussion of the effects of human overpopulation and a brief business meeting to discuss the 71-72 calendar. All members of the community are cordially invited to attend free of charge.

Zero Population Growth is a national political and educational organization whose aim it is to acquaint people with the dangers of overpopulation and offer suggestions to keep the growth rate in control. If you are interested in helping ZPG, but are unable to attend the first meeting, contact Pioneer Valley ZPG, 210 Elm St., Northampton, Mass.

For A Great Variety of Halloween Masks and Decorations visit
A. J. HASTINGS
Newsdealer & Stationer
45 So. Pleasant St. - Amherst

Acheson Succumbs At 78

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dean Acheson, secretary of state during the most turbulent years just after World War II and architect of much of U.S. Cold War strategy, died Tuesday evening.

The 78-year-old Acheson served as secretary of state under President Harry S. Truman from 1949 to 1953, the years of the Korean War, European reconstruction, the adolescence of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the Japanese peace treaty and the beginning of the so-called McCarthy era.

According to his wife, Acheson died about 6 p.m. EDT at his Sandy Spring, Md., farm, but the cause was undetermined.

After leaving the State Department, Acheson served in an advisory capacity to the administrations of President John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson. But he spent most of his time in a far-flung and lucrative Washington law practice.

The Connecticut-born Acheson carried an aristocratic manner that often alienated his foes, and even some friends. But he, nonetheless, achieved great success in the government in a career that reached from a monetary- policy negotiator under Franklin D. Roosevelt to secretary of state under Truman.

In between, he practiced law briefly, but spent most of his time in various positions within the State Department, finally succeeding Gen. George Marshall as secretary in 1949.

Upon taking over as the nation's chief diplomat Acheson immediately assumed a tough stand concerning what was thought at the time as aggressive, expansionist Soviet policy.

He implemented the strategy of alliances ringing the Soviet Union and its Eastern European allies, including the formation of NATO, still the key defense pact for the United States and Western Europe.

At the same time, Acheson promoted the continuation and strengthening of the Marshall Plan.

But in spite of his hard-line attitude toward international Communism, his hardest fight involved charges he was soft on Communism at home.

He came under near savage and personal attack for his friendship with Alger Hiss, the high State Department official who ultimately was sentenced to jail for perjury after he swore he was not a Communist.

Hiss, who was a key advisor to American delegations during some of the major post-World War II meetings, was charged with giving secrets to the Soviet Union.

In spite of the allegations Acheson refused to disavow his friendship with Hiss and thereafter was attacked for supposedly harboring Communists and their sympathizers in the State Department.

One of his most severe critics was Sen. Joseph McCarthy, R-Wis., who often charged Acheson was leading the diplomatic corps and the nation down the road to Communism.

The urbane Acheson, a product of Groton, Harvard and Yale, was known as the diplomat's diplomat.

In a speech to the Women's National Democratic Club two years ago, Acheson urged Americans not to be "destructive" and to give the Nixon administration "strong enough support to carry forward what it has to do."

"If we understood the present," he said, "we would deal more wisely with the future."

Married Students Needs Studied

By BRIAN MARTIN

The needs of the 3400 married students here are being studied by a newly formed committee of students and staff members, according to Randall Dahl, of the dean of students office.

The committee will concern itself with the housing situation, health services, financial aid, legal affairs, family planning, and any other difficulties confronting the married population.

The committee is headed by Lawrence Siddall, of mental health services. Other staff members are Miss Helen Curtis, dean of women; Donald Pelkey, director of off-campus housing; Robert Swasey, of the graduate school; and Randall Dahl. The committee is now in the process of gathering information by means of a questionnaire soon to be distributed by the university as well as expose neglected areas of concern, according to Dahl.

Although tangible help is still in the infant stages, as Dean Field has said, "Our concern for delivery of appropriate support to married students is perhaps somewhat late in recognition, but I am pleased that the work has begun."

You can't expect a great Pizza unless you buy it at a great place.
Bell's Pizza
Open
11 to 2 a.m. Fri. & Sat.
1 a.m. Sun. to Thurs.
Free Delivery
Tel: 256-8011 - 253-9051

Norwich Hill Stable
ENGLISH AND WESTERN STYLE RIDING
TRAIL RIDES
INSTRUCTIONS
Prices - Weekdays
Couples - $5.00 an hr.
Singles - $3.00 an hr.
Weekends
All $3.00 an hr.
Lessons - $5.00 an hr.
up Rt. 66 to Cullen Road
Huntington, Mass.
Tel. 1-413-667-3018

Judgeships Available for Student Judiciaries
Applications Available: Rooms 109 & 111, Campus Center
Applications Due: Noon, Oct. 18
Selections: (by appointment) Tues. Evening, Oct. 19

Culturnatives

One Man's Ideas About Women's Lib

By GILBERT J. SALK

I want to spend some time today talking about women and their bodies. This is not a column for dirty old men, however. It is a column for those interested in one man's ideas about women's lib, and for those who might, someday, become pregnant when they don't want to be.

First, some thoughts on women's lib. (If any women feel I'm not giving Lib a fair shake, see me about possible equal time.)

To my way of thinking, women's lib is primarily a freedom movement. It has to do with the way women who could be good friends nearly always compete with each other when a man is present. Think about a time when you've sat with a group of women, talking about something that was important at the moment, and what has happened when a man has joined your group. Almost invariably, he has become the center of attention, and the conversation shifts to focus on him. That's fine for his ego, perhaps, but what subtle and not-so-subtle things does it do to yours?

It has to do with the way women dress not for themselves but for other women. How often, at a party, have you seen another girl walk into the room and asked yourself whether you look better than she does? Have you ever asked yourself if you were more intelligent than her? Or more proficient?--At anything?

It has to do with having to dress and act in ways that give out signals that you're "available", and then having to get into wrestling matches because the guy doesn't understand that "no" means NO!

It has to do with thinking of yourself and your future and where you live and what you do in terms of your husband and your family. You will live where his job takes you, not where your job takes him. You will be a housewife first--not a disgraceful job in the least, if you are given a choice about it--and, if there's time after cooking his food, washing and ironing his clothes, feeding and caring for the children which you are both responsible for and to yourself, and cleaning up .he house you both got dirty--if there's time, then you might have a chance to do something which will challenge your intellect and other capabilities--unless, of course, his pride makes him feel that he can't let any wife of his work.

It has to do with UMass setting higher entrance requirements for women than for men. It has to do with women having a nearly impossible time getting into professional graduate programs.

It has to do, finally, with women's roles being chosen for them, and a vast array of social structures, pressures, and obstacles being set up to make it extremely difficult for a women to even question her relationship to that role, let alone move outside it.

I don't feel, as some might, that the women's role is a bad one. For some it is extremely rewarding, and they wouldn't change it for the world. The problem is that most have no choice about it, are unhappy in it, and recognize no alternatives to it. They feel trapped, with their identities as individuals submerged, and see no place to turn for support. This is where women's lib begins.

Women share some nearly universal experiences which most find uncomfortable, distasteful, or ludicrous. Lib groups give women a chance to share their feeling with others, come to some conclusions about what might be done to begin to change things, and a support group to which she can turn when the going gets rough--as it surely will, because almost any man in American society will become viscious when threatened, and nothing threatens him more than a woman's attempts to force him to deal with her as a human being, of whom only one part is sexual.

This is superficial, of course, because the dynamics of the situation can be discussed endlessly. If this arouses your curiosity, check out women's lib with a woman involved in it. Don't count on Newsweek, Life, or CBS to give you an accurate picture of it. It is not strident or anti-male for the most part. Instead, it is a warm movement, growing out of intense concern for women first, and for men as well because we, too, are forced into roles.

One of the major concerns of many women's groups is the right of women to control their own bodies. Women, it seems, are supposed to be producers of children whether they want to be or not. The absurdity of this would perhaps not be so obvious if the relevant laws were passed by women, but the fact is that all laws regarding birth control and abortions, sex education, and the dissemination of birth control information were passed by men.

Most states seem to operate on the principle that 1) a woman should not be taught how her sexual equipment operates, 2) she should not be taught how to avoid pregnancy, 3) she should not be allowed to purchase or use birth control devices which she has not been allowed to learn how to use so that she can prevent a pregnancy the cause of which she may not even fully understand, and 4) she may not take steps to terminate a pregnancy she does not want.

These laws are archaic, but men must get women pregnant to demonstrate their virility, right?

All this must be changed, but in the meantime, what can a woman do? Some women's groups, such as the Valley Women's Center (200 Main St., Northampton, 586-2011) can talk to you about your bodies and how they function, or can refer you to doctors who can discuss birth control with you. There are others around, if you want to look.

If you are pregnant and don't want to be, or if you know somebody in a similar situation, contact the United Christian Foundation in 317 Hampshire House (52661 or 52789). They work with a group called the Clergy Consultation Service for Problem Pregnancies, and they will give you counseling and advice about how to deal with your pregnancy. They can refer to clinics in New York, or discuss having the baby and keeping it or giving it up for adoption. Their staff is excellent, their service is available to anyone with a problem, and there is no moralizing. In addition, everything is kept strictly confidential.

Save the above paragraph. Someday, you or a friend might need it.

NOTE: Would any of you like to set up a CULTURNATIVES' Rap Session on Thursday afternoons to share ideas brought up in this column? I think it might be fun and stimulate some good new thoughts. If you're interested, Check with me in the Draft Counseling Office in 923 CC and we'll see what can be put together.

Ticketing Problem Resolved

By JUDY PITTMAN

The problem of ticketing North Village Apartments is apparently solved.

Until last Friday, even residents and guests of North Village Apartments whose card did not have decals received tickets in their own lot. The strict ticketing procedure was enforced in order to deter residents of Pufton Village from parking in lots designated for North Village.

The University Parking Committee accepted a suggestion from Robert Chiller, student representative on the committee that "legal residents and visitors who have been fined should be able to void their tickets." This was agreed upon by the committee and also that any residents or visitors who were ticketed before last Friday can void their ticket at the parking coordinator's office in Hampshire House.

On Friday, two temporary visitor passes were distributed to each North Village apartment to protect residents from being fined. These passes are effective only until November 1, 1971 or until a permanent pass system is devised.

In an MDC interview, Chiller declared himself "against payment of any parking fees on campus until the admistration figures on an equitable solution to the parking problem."

He went on to say, "Students are tired of seeing the security men sitting in front of the parking lots in their warm stations while students' cars are being damaged and their stereos being ripped off."

Chiller feels students have no real representation on the parking committee. He hopes to organize a new committee composed of only students, in order to bypass the decision-making body.

I.D. Photos
Taken Sept. 7,
Graduate Resitration
are now available
in 109 Hampshire House

SOVIET JEWRY PROTEST MARCH
10:30 a.m. SUNDAY, OCTOBER 17 at the SPRINGFIELD JEWISH CENTER
(a car pool will meet outside of Bowker Aud. by lot #6, 9:30 a.m. Call Hillel 545-2526 if you need or have a car to go.)
THURSDAY, OCTOBER 14, at 7:00 p.m. - a meeting at Hillel - 420 SU on the rally and on forming a branch of the Student Struggle for Soviet Jewry at the U. of M.
Come!

Happy Nite
Every Thursday
on the bandstand
THE SABER MEN
(Rock Band)
The most exciting entertainment of Handsome Musician.
Quonset Restaurant
Hadley, Rt. 9
From TP 91 - Exit 19

DAVID DELLINGER
Wednesday Oct. 13
7
"CHICAGO"
8:00 the Cage
"Vietnam - where are we now?"
7 7 7 7 7 7 7
Coffee hour: Field Main Lounge following lecture

MDC Closeup: Professor Fergus Clydesdale

A Course Can Be Interesting And Easy

By ROBERT and BETTY SPRAGUE

Canadian-born Dr. Fergus M. Clydesdale is a one-man crusade. The 34-year-old Assistant Professor of Food Science, who teaches "The Struggle for Food," thinks it's time for scientists to "get off their collective butt and make learning enjoyable."

Clydesdale hopes that his introductory course in Food Science is providing an unusual service to the University Community. "Look, there are two billions of people in the world who are suffering from malnutrition," he says, "and I've got a moral obligation to give these students some awareness of what they can do to make a bad situation better."

Almost 1,000 undergraduate students registered for Food Science 101. "They all got the word that it was going to be an easy course," Clydesdale laughed, "and for once the 'word' was right."

He explained that his course is scientifically conceptually oriented. "If I can give just two or three concepts to these folks each week, then I've succeeded."

The course seeks to give students insight into what Clydesdale calls "mankind's greatest problem for the 1970's," the struggle to find enough food for spaceship earth's billions of people. The course will also touch upon subjects as population control.

Forcing students to learn lists and complex formulas for this course would be, according to Clydesdale, a complete waste of time. "And I have only one formula for myself in this course," says the Professor, "Make the course reasonably simple, but keep it as bloody interesting as possible."

Clydesdale speaks with great admiration of Dr. F. J. Francis, the newly-appointed head of the Department of Food Science. "We developed this course together," he says, "and Dr. Francis worked out lots of the problems." Both men credit the Administration of the College of Agriculture which swept away much of the red tape involved with such endeavors.

Clydesdale spends between ten and 15 hours in preparation for each class lecture, and draws material from as many as 300 books and publications, as well as from his own research.

He has, since the semester began, been carrying on a one-man campaign against "these food fadists who make millions every year," and some of the inadequate worldwide food programs...

"The surplus food program was never designed to provide all of the necessary food for hungry people, but they have no way of obtaining anything else," he said.

During the second week of the semester, Clydesdale showed the 1968 CBS documentary "Hunger in America," a program which caused much controversy throughout the nation.

According to the documentary, each year the Department of Agriculture returns millions of dollars to the mother government, while thousands of Americans suffer from malnutrition. The film describes the two federal food programs currently being conducted, the food stamp program and the surplus food program.

CBS claimed that the surplus food program serves farmers rather than hungry people. The government gives away large amounts of peanut butter, lard and flour, but throughout the most depressed areas of the country the foods hungry people need most - canned meats and canned vegetables - are not provided.

The food stamp program, according to the documentary, is not at all helpful to the hungriest of Americans, the people who need the program the most. As the program is currently structured, a family can purchase stamps for about $25 to $40 and buy with those stamps about $80 to $100 worth of food. This would be great except these families do not have the $25 needed to buy the stamps, so they must rely of the surplus food which, as previously demonstrated, does not provide all of the right kinds of food.

CBS claims that the solution to most of the problems would be to force the Department of Agriculture to spend all of their allocated monies to feed these hungry people, or, better still, that the Federal Government should take the program away from the Department of Agriculture altogether and give the responsibility to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

"Food fads are nothing new," says Clydesdale, "Those old wives tales about fish being great brain food and spinach making you strong as a bull have been around for years."

Prof. Fergus Clydesdale

"There was once a man named Fletcher who believed that you should chew each bite hundreds of times before swallowing," he says, smiling, "but he died after about a year of this, yet thousands of people followed his theories long after he went to the grave."

"Kids come to me these days and tell me that they are eating nothing but wheat germ," reports Clydesdale, no longer smiling, "and they tell me that they are getting a 'high' as if they were smoking pot constantly." He then explained that this euphoria - this 'high', is one of the first manifestations of starvation. "But these kids won't listen to me," he complains.

He was now into an area of discussion which is "a source of real frustration for me."

"Kids tell me that they are really 'into' solving some of the world's problems, and I believe them," he says, "but then they turn around and devote all of their time and energy on organic farming."

According to Clydesdale, organically grown food is grown at extremely low yields, which means simply that this form of agriculture will never alleviate any of the world's food shortages.

"It's plain ignorance," he says, slamming his fist on the table, "and people like Adele Davis play on this naivete to make this big money."

He claims that the current food fadists rely on four myths about food to spread their fad: Myth Number One: That all disease is caused by faulty nutrition. Myth Number Two: That ordinary foods are "devitalized" in processing. Myth Number Three: That ordinary food comes from "poor" soil. Myth Number Four: That almost everyone in America is bordering on malnutrition.

"All of these are either half-truths or outright lies," he calims.

"We should be concerned with feeding the large numbers of people all over the world and at this point the only way we can do that is to utilize high-yield farming - put large amounts of nitrogen in the soil," he explains. He points out that if the food fadists are to produce such high yields they would have to pile cow manure at least eight feet high on the fields. "And there would be problems with that idea since there aren't that many cows excreting that much manure," he says.

According to Clydesdale, "It's fashionable these days to denounce scientists and progress of all kinds, to scream about the good old days; but were the good old days so 'good' after all?"

(Continued on Page 13)

Learn to Drive
AMHERST AUTO SCHOOL
34 Main Street
256-6066

Let Scholl Exercise Sandals send them to Austria!

The smart legs are sticking with us this winter.

We'll not only shape up your legs, we'll send them to Innsbruck if you win our drawing. You and a friend. Relaxing in your Scholl Sandals—after shussing down the slopes or ski-bumming around the town.

You'll be wearing Scholl Sandals this winter. Just like the Austrians, Germans, European skiers everywhere. They wear Scholl Sandals the year 'round. (After all, great legs are never out of season.)

Scholl Sandals have the exclusive toe-grip that helps tone and shape up your legs—whether you're a skier or not. And they give you a sense of comfort you have to experience to believe.

So put on your kneesocks and knickers and buckle into your Scholl Sandals.

It could be one beautiful winter.

Scholl exercise sandals

First Prize:
2-week trip for winner and friend to Innsbruck, Austria.

10 Second Prizes: pair of Hart Javelin SSL Skis, plus a pair of Scholl Exercise Sandals.

50 Third Prizes: pair of Scholl Exercise Sandals.

ENTRY RULES: Get your entry blank at any Scholl Sandal display in department, drug or shoe stores. Or print the words "Scholl Exercise Sandals" with your signed name and address on a 3x5 card. Send to: Scholl Austrian Contest, P.O. Box 7966, Chicago, Illinois 60680.
First-prize winner and friend to be sent to Innsbruck, Austria, or U.S. ski resort of their choice. Total expenses not to exceed $3000 for two.
Entries must be postmarked by midnight, Dec. 15, 1971. Drawing will be held Dec. 30. Entrants must be 18 years of age or over. Employees of Scholl, Inc. and families not eligible. Winners will be chosen by independent and impartial judges. Results of drawing will be final.
No purchase necessary. Void where prohibited by law. All prizes will be awarded. Tax liability on all prizes will be the full responsibility of winners. Entry in contest constitutes full permission to publish names, addresses, and photos of winners without further compensation. Your signature indicates you have read and understood the rules of the contest.

BLOW YOUR-SELF UP TO POSTER SIZE

A great gift or gag idea. Ideal room decoration... perfect for parties. Send any b&w or color photo, Polaroid print, cartoon or magazine photo. For slides and negatives, add $1.00 per poster. Better originals produce better posters. Giant b&w poster mailed in tube.

2x 3FT $3.50

1½ x 2 Ft. $2.50 — 3 x 4 Ft. $7.50

BLOWUPS IN PSYCHEDELIC COLOR. Any photo made into a poster in psychedelic Red, Green, Blue or Yellow. Only in 1½ x 2 ft. @ $3.50 and 2 x 3 ft. @ $4.50. Specify desired color.

RUSH SERVICE orders shipped in 1 day by first class mail. Add $2 per poster ordered.

Your original returned undamaged. Add 50c for postage and handling for EACH item ordered. N.Y. residents add sales tax. Send check, cash or M.O. (No C.O.D.) to

BLO-UP Dept. B
210 E. 23 St., N.Y. 10010

Clydesdale Closeup, Cont.

A Course That No One Drops?

(Continued from Page 12)

The professor offered examples of the scores of reported poisonings before the advent of processed foods, and the relatively small amount of poisonings today. "Most all of the poisonings we hear about today result from problems with home-canned vegetables and meats," he says.

He then returned to a discussion of the latest food fad: "There's nothing wrong with being a vegetarian or eating organically-grown food as long as you know what you are doing." Clydesdale pointed out that a well-balanced diet of vegetables, carefully chosen, could provide the essential proteins, carbohydrates, fats, vitamins, minerals and water. "But I hate to see people pay two or three times as much for "organically-grown food" since it is no more healthful than processed food." Clydesdale says he has seen cases where food labelled as organically-grown, is no different than regular produce.

The response to Food Science 101 has been staggering. Of the 980 students who registered for the course, no one has dropped and attendence has been running as high as 95 percent. Students have been quick to compliment their professor:

"He has disspelled lots of myths for us, things I used to take as gospel I now can question," says Sandy Cohen, an Education major in her Sophomore year.

"In this class the pressure is off," says Robert Saville, a Junior who thinks he might transfer into Food Science, "You listen to the guy and you get some good info."

"The guy has to have a lot of courage," reasons Stephen Hunt, a Junior majoring in English, "You have to believe that he's under pressure from the faculty teaching a course like this."

Wendy Lipsky, a Sophomore majoring in Education says that she's already forgotten many of the formulas she learned last semester in another science course, "but I doubt whether I'll forget what Dr. Clydesdale has been teaching; his lectures are so interesting."

"You can talk to the guy," commented Saville, "He doesn't put you off."

Clydesdale is pleased with the student response, "This proves that if you give these kids something interesting, they'll come to lectures, and they'll keep coming as long as the lectures are well-prepared."

ATTENDANCE AT CLYDESDALE'S LECTURES has been running as high as 95%.

The Professor is more than qualified to teach this course. He is the winner of the Prince of Wales Medal in 1960 for graduating first in his class at Victoria College, University of Toronto, where he majored in Food Chemistry. He did his Masters at the University of Toronto in Food Chemistry where he won a National Research Council of Canada Scholarship. He did his Doctoral research in Food Science at the University of Massachusetts, receiving his Ph.D in 1964. He was a Post Doctoral Fellow at UMass from February 1966 to February 1967.

Dr. Clydesdale has written over 50 papers for Food Science and related journals and has taught a number of graduate and undergraduate courses at this university.

He has been an active member of a number of influential departmental committees, including Faculty Personnel, Undergraduate Curriculum, and Long Range Planning.

He plans to write a text to be co-authored by Dr. Francis for the introductory course he is now teaching. "I want to make it as inexpension for students as possible," he says. Dr. Clysedale plans to fill the book with concrete, factual concepts rather than formulas and technical language. This, of course, is consistent with his educational philosophy.

Clydesdale is anxious to teach his subject to non-science majors. "We scientists have got to reach all kinds of people."

He feels that scientists have the moral obligation to communicate their concepts to the layman and not just exchange theories with other scientists.

"We don't need presumptuous people in the sciences anymore," he demands, "we need instead chemists, biologists, physicists, and food scientists who are willing to get out before the eye of the general public and battle the Adele Davis' and get the truth to these people."

Besides his book and more research, Dr. Clydesdale is looking to a personal future filled with teaching and new course development. He is anxious to go out into the community and share his knowledge of food science with everyone, especially homemakers.

"I am hopeful," he says, "that with this introductory food science course we can light a few sparks and convince some young people that Food Science is an academic major full of exciting potential, and that these young people will continue the search for answers to mankind's biggest problem of the '70s, the struggle for food."

NOTICES

AMATEUR RADIO ASSN:
The UMass amateur radio club will meet tonight at 7 p.m. in Rm. 109 ELab. Anyone interested is urged to attend; however, this meeting is mandatory for all members.

CAMPUS CRUSADE FOR CHRIST:
MAG, 911 CC. 6:30 tonight, PTL.

Welcome to Pepperland! THE BEATLES
"YELLOW SUBMARINE"
*Plus "Going Steady"
Saturday Evening, Oct. 16, MAHAR AUD.
Screenings 6, 8, 10, (Midnight Showing Cancelled)
Sponsored by: Sigma Alpha Mu

CHRISTOPHER SMART MEMORIAL FAN CLUB:
The weekly meeting will be held in Rm. 801 CC, Friday at 11 a.m.

COLLEGIATE FLYING CLUB:
Ground school at 7 p.m. in Rm. 162 CC. Subject: Basic Meterology.

CVSP:
Any psych major interested in working with faculty and other students on departmental issues or is simply in need of information should attend this meeting tonight @ 7:30 p.m. in the Grad Student Lounge in Bartlett basement.

HISTORY DEPT. STUDENT FACULTY LIASON COMMITTEE:
Actung history majors. Plebescite will be held Thursday at 2 p.m. in history dept. faculty lounge to ratify the appointment of Tom Bara, Janet Bergstrom, Kathy Schiller and Philip Toner (chairman) to the student faculty liason committee. Be there

MOVIE:
"The Reivers", Friday at 4, 6:30, 9, 11 p.m. in SU Ballroom. Sponsored by Newman Club.

AMOROSO
The very name means love — where else should you buy your DIAMOND
LOWEST PRICES ANYWHERE
certified appraisals
Call RICHARD AMOROSO 546-4300 anytime.
In Boston Call 542-2226

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

1968 VW Bus in good condition, new fall inspection sticker, may be seen at 226 Cliffside Apts., Sunderland or call 665-1796.

'62 Rambler classic runs perf, new brakes, tune-up and exhaust system. Has all good tires and fall insp. sticker. Only $150. Call 546-4076.
tf10-14

1971 Buick Opel wagon red AM-FM, 19000 mi., excellent condition, asking 2295 will talk. Call 863-8005 after 6 p.m.

Falcon Bus 1966. Clean No Rot. Rebuilt motor and Auto. Trans. Good radio. Days 545-2022, Nights Easthampton 527-0040. Make Off.
tf 10-14

For Sale - '63 Olds. Good condition. Asking $300. Call 323-7714.
tf 10-14

68 VW Bug $1200 or Best Offer. Tel: 665-4197 after 5:30 exc. Tues.
tf 10-15

1968 Nova 6 cyl., new exhaust, & cooling system, 2 studded snowtires, $1,300 or best offer. Days 545-2319, nights 586-3616 ask for Jim.
tf10-13

70 MGB exc. running cond. Must sell. 210-8893.
tf10-29

1968 Falcon wagon, 6 cyl. auto. trans., excellent cond., $1300. 50 Squire Village, after 1 p.m.
tf 10-13

Ten year old Peugeot, std. Michelin rd ply tires, rebuilt eng., good cond., $250 or best offer. Call Keith 253-2215 after 9:00 p.m.
tf 10-14

For sale: 40 Ford Custom 4 dr sedan, 6 cyl $995.; Harmony Folk Guitar $50.; Royal manual typewriter $25. Call Chris 283-7208 eves.
10-13

65 Austin, 850 wagon, 68 MG 1100 c.c. engine, good condition, $350 or best offer. Also 58 Rambler, 4 door, 6 cyl., auto., $95 or best offer. 367-3627.
tf10-14

1966 VW Camper, Blaupunkt radio, new brakes, has tent rod. Best offer over $1100. 545-2963.
tf10-11

Ford 61 wag., needs some repairs, best offer, 665-2886.
tf10-13

1961 Corvair, good rebuilt spyder turbo charged motor, no transmission, will sell parts or in entirety. Best offer. Call 549-0086.
tf10-12

MOTORCYCLES FOR SALE

1971 Yamaha CT1-C 175CC Enduro, 1500 miles, expansion chamber and many more options. Truly a fine dirt bike $575, Dave 253-7541.
tf10-13

Bultaco Metralla 250 CC, very fast, inspected, road racing fairing, 5 speed. Ask $495. Offers. 549-0017.
tf 10-15

1969 Triumph T100C Trophy 500. Mint condition. 8,000 miles. 546-7509.
tf 10-15

FOR SALE

Guitar - Fender Villager acoustic 12 string guitar, excellent condition. 546-7509.
10-15

Seasoned Firewood. Sale and delivery. Call 665-3031.
tf10-20

Brown suede pants, skirts, skins, top quality, wholesale. Pants $27, skirts $9.49, skins $5. Stop by to look Jon-Ann Clothorne 5-2600 leave number if not in.
tf10-14

AM/FM/FM Stereo Radio Cassette Player/ Recorder $170. Call Paul at 256-0007 after 6.
tf10-15

TO GIVE AWAY-Watches, Jewelry, radios, unusual gift and novelty items-at 50% off and more-call S.N. Brown, 665-1115.
tf10-11

1957 Chevy Panel Truck, good shape, $250. Come over and see Peggy at 11 So. Prospect St. #2.
tf10-13

Stereo-Marantz state-of-the-art components. Model 16, 220 watts rms. model 33, preamp mint 3 yr. warranty reg. $925 asking $725 or best offer. 1-367-9570 eve.
tf10-14

Sony 630-D reel to reel tape recorder deck, 3 heads, echo, S on S, dust cover, 3 speeds, 4 months old, new cost $320 asking $220, 783-2624.
tf10-14

Got a thorn in your sneaker? Travel style in a '65 Chevy Belair 546-5221.
tf10-14

TO GIVE AWAY - watches, Jewelry, radios, unusual gift, and novelty items - at 50% off and more. Call S. N. Brown, 665-1115.
tf10-13

Bumper sticker - your words printed on 3 x 12" red or green sticker for $1, copies .25. The Snide Co, Route 1, Box 93 Blaine, Wash. 98230.
tf10-18

We undersell all. Any and all top name appliances, stereos, radios, refrigerators, anything. Call Larry 6-5090 or come to 356 Conce.
tf10-13

HELP WANTED

Need Vets Viet or regular to help film a documentary on adjustment problems in returning to civilian life. Call Jake at 549-2916.
tf10-14

Earn $100 or more part time, excellent opportunity for an ecology minded person. 413-323-4127.
tf10-13

Need money? Earn $25 or more a week! Work your own hours at your convenience. Call Barry or Dave 4 p.m. - 5:30 p.m. 546-6063.
tf10-13

WANTED

Girls bike at least 3 speeds. Contact Mrs. Riley, Tel. 253-7151.
tf10-15

If you play the blues, contact me in 101 Butterfield, ask for Onnie.
tf10-13

Urgent! Bike Wanted 3/10 speed. Cheap. Call 549-6419.
tf 10-14

RIDE WANTED

Urgent! Ride to NYC. Must make 1 p.m. Oct. 15 appointment. Share exp. 549-6419.
10-13

Secretary in need of trans. from Sthampton. Arrangement could be made to meet Hampt. Driver tel: 545-0600 — 6-9 evenings: 527-3548.
10-13

PERSONAL

Benis-Chrst: If green M&M's had automatic stick shifts, would L&M drive you bananas? Happy Birthday! Love, Betty Jo 10-13

Hamp. Commuters: "The FROG is alive and well", Interact with him at lunch today. DC 10-13

Happy Belated Birthday Paul T. of 288 Puffton Village - Signed a 5'6" Blond.
10-13

Happy Belated Birthday -- Swinger - Snow White.
10-13

MARSHA, I missed your celebration, I was trapped. Happy 21st. Love Ecky and Roommates.
10-13

Rm. 301 6-0922 organizational meeting for Cubbs Mo. At U OWF.
tf10-15

Melville Basement invites James Basement and 4th floor to a party Friday night at 8.
tf10-21

ROOMMATES WANTED

Female roommates wanted-$60 a month includes utilities, age 20-25. Call after 6 p.m. ask for Jean if no answer keep trying 586-3946.
tf10-15

Wanted-I need a place to live. Desire own room in a house or on a farm with other people. Call Mark at 256-8786.
tf10-15

APT. AVAILABLE

Ideal for advanced female grad. student, room and board, in lieu of assistance with 2 schoolage children 549-3653.

Large, quiet, single room - 2 miles from University - For male student. Call 256-6151 after 5.
tf 10-14

LECTURE NOTES

Lecture notes now available for all sections in Botany 101, Econ. 125, Geol. 101, Gov. 100, Phil. 105, Psych. 101. Rm. 318 S.U. Lobby.
tf10-14

We have lecture notes for all sections in Hum Dev. 270, Micro 140, Psych 262, 263, 270, 280 and Soc 101 in Rm 318 Student Union.
tf 10-14

SERVICES

Amherst Audio services. Stereo components, tape decks for home or car. 197 No. Pleasant St. 256-8133.
tf5-12

I'll be more than happy to sew your new clothes. Call anytime and ask for Ann. 1-538 7802.
tf 10-15

Auto Repairs, Points, plugs and minor engine repair. Winterize your car now. Call Wayne at 546-6535 or Al at 546-6467.
tf 10-15

TYPING

Typing - theses, dissertations, etc. Fast, accurate; have Greek alphabet, math & chem. symbols. Call 253-3001.
tf10-18

TO TRADE

To trade: 1950 Klunker automobile for a bicycle in good condition. Call 586-3390.
tf10-13

DAY CARE CENTER

Children's Center Day Care for ages 3-5 opening in Greenfield, full or part time from Oct. 18. Call 773-3004 or 774-2671.
tf10-14

ENTERTAINMENT

The Beatles in Yellow Submarine plus exciting shorts going steady Sat., Oct. 16 at 6, 8, 10, Mahar Aud. Join the fun this Homecoming Weekend.
tf 10-15

LOST

Lost men's H.S. class ring in Campus Center last Thurs. Reward. Call Pete 6-6836. Initials P.J.W.
10-13

DISCOUNT STEREO COMPONENTS

All major brands of stereo components, compacts available at 20-40% discount. Contact Jim Jensen 586-1365.
tf 10-14

Orioles Praise Bucs' Blass

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The Baltimore Orioles praised Pittsburgh pitcher Steve Blass after losing to the Pirate right-hander Tuesday and declined to offer any excuses.

"The loss had nothing to do with the field or the crowd," Manager Earl Weaver said. "Blass was the total effect, and Bobby Robertson applied the crusher."

"Blass had a great fast ball and mixed it with good breaking stuff," Weaver said. "He put everything in the right spot. When I saw him in the minors, he couldn't get the ball where he wanted it."

Weaver contended loser Mike Cuellar "didn't pitch that badly. Until Robertson broke the game open in the seventh inning, Mike did all right."

Robertson hit a three-run homer after Roberto Clemente reached base on a Cuellar error and Willie Stargell walked for the third time.

"Robertson hit a low screwball," Weaver said. "It wasn't a bad pitch. I guess he was looking for it."

Just before Stargell walked, Weaver visited Cuellar on the mound.

"I wasn't thinking about taking him out" Weaver said. "I just told Mike he couldn't afford to walk Stargell with Robertson coming up."

Weaver said an eight-day layoff between starts could have affected Cuellar, who last pitched in the second game of the American League playoffs.

Catcher Ellie Hendricks agreed. "Mike was shaky," he said. "He couldn't get his slow breaking stuff over. The fast ball was about the only thing he had, and he's not a fast ball pitcher."

Hendricks said Blass, however, "mixed his pitches and kept everyone off stride-the kind of game Mike is supposed to throw."

The Orioles said the Blass fast ball was not overpowering, but credited him with mixing his pitches well and moving the ball to various spots.

Frank Robinson, who had two of the three hits off Blass, including his eighth World Series home run, said he hit a fast ball "up and in."

"We would have liked to keep winning," Robinson said of a 16-game winning streak which ended, "but we're not going to hang our heads. We'll have to start over tomorrow and win two in a row."

While Pittsburgh left runners on base, seven in scoring position, the Orioles advanced beyond first base only one time other than when Robinson homered.

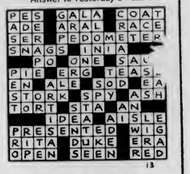
Duane Thomas: "I Came To Play"

DALLAS (AP)—Mysterious Duane Thomas, no longer the popoff who called his coach "a plastic man...no man at all," made his 1971 playing debut with the Dallas Cowboys Monday night and the coach he verbally attacked, Tom Landry, said "Duane looked like his old self."

Thomas ran for 60 yards on nine carries in the second half of Dallas' 20-13 nationally televised National Football League victory over the New York Giants.

He showered, dressed and quickly left the Cowboy dressing room after the game.

Thomas said, "I came to play....I came to play."



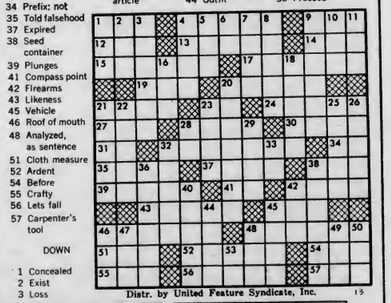
But he refused to go into his money hassle with the Cowboy management which prompted him to threaten retirement and ask to be traded. Dallas dealt him off to the New England Patriots, who gave him back just as quickly when Thomas' had some problems with his physical examination.

Cowboy quarterback Craig Morton said of Thomas. "He has tremendous determination and concentration-he wants to prove he's the best and show that last year he was for real."

Thomas was the National Football Conference offensive rookie of the year in 1970.

Crossword Puzzle

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle



ACROSS

1 Possessed
4 Diminishes
9 Unit
12 Anger
13 Positive pole
14 Church bench
15 Guard
17 Herb
19 Dine
20 Country of Asia
21 Heavenly body
23 Part of "to be"
24 Mephistopheles
27 Temporary bed
28 Wine cups
30 Girl's name
31 Conjunction
32 Puzzles
34 Prefix: not
35 Told falsehood
37 Expired
38 Seed container
39 Plunges
41 Compass point
42 Firearms
43 Likeness
45 Vehicle
46 Roof of mouth
48 Analyzed, as sentence
51 Cloth measure
52 Ardent
54 Before
55 Crafty
56 Lets fall
57 Carpenter's tool

DOWN

1 Concealed
2 Exist
3 Loss
4 Need
5 Conjunction
6 Negative
7 Paradise
8 Dispatches
9 Narcotic
10 A state (abbr.)
11 Female sheep
16 Organ of hearing
18 Faces of clocks
20 Conceive
21 Chastise
22 Japanese gateway
23 Among
25 Negatively charged particle
26 Spikenards
28 Indefinite article
29 Pintail duck
32 Dropsy
33 Paid notice
36 Not well
38 Pocketbooks
40 Satiated
42 Long, slender fish
44 Outfit
45 Vehicles
46 Footlike part
47 Everyone
48 Vigor (colloq.)
49 Period of time
50 Condensed moisture
53 Proceed

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

Among famous astrological devotees are Marlene Dietrich, Jane Withers, Henry Miller, Jan Sterling, Ann Miller, Kim Novak, Anais Nin and Glenn Ford. Astrology, far from being a fossil, is very much alive and kicking in the world today.

* * *

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Avoid actions based on impulse. Take time to time moves. Lover's quarrel should not be blown out of proportion. Accent is on children, their needs and demands. Stress diplomacy and harmony.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Conflict may exist between domestic, professional duties. Don't attempt to live in fool's paradise. See situations, persons as they exist. Tendency to wear rose-colored glasses should be overcome.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Hold off on journey, unless absolutely necessary. There are current commitments which should not be bypassed. Avoid scattering efforts. Discuss, define goals. Then do some quiet reflecting.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Financial activity is stimulated. You can complete transaction. Prestige rises. But there are obstacles, possible quarrels. Maintain hold on principles. One in authority is testing you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Highlight originality; dance to your own tune. Adhere to individual style. Do what must be done, but base actions on reason. Imagined slight should not be permitted to send you into emotional tailspin.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Much is happening. But you are not fully aware of all facts. Realize this and reserve final judgement. Cancer-born individual could play prominent role. Some restrictions come down with a crash.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Numerous contacts are featured. Refuse to become involved in battle featuring friends. Those who argue now may be friendly tomorrow. Realize this-maintain balance, sense of humor.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Read between lines; check fine print. Be aware of subtle nuances. Accent on areas affecting home, career, basic ambitions. Be cautious in dealings with Aquarius person. Look beneath surface indications.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): This is action period. Nothing is apt to remain same. Status quo takes a pounding. Open lines of communication. State desires, but do so in manner calculated to win, not lose friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Obtain hint from Sagittarius message. Highlight diplomacy. Don't forget budget resolutions. Pull in financial reins. You can obtain quality without being extravagant. Be a comparison shopper.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Check agreements concerning Scorpio person. Take nothing for granted. Avoid excess, speed. Don't write letters in anger. Close relative may be looking for an argument. Be wary. No foolishness.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): One who played paramount role in past could make reappearance. Remember recent lessons. Older individual does have your best interests at heart. Realize this bridge generation gap.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are due for plenty of variety and a change of scenery. Not wise to fight progress. Relationships with opposite sex now can result in meaningful gains. You are an understanding, sensitive individual. You cannot abide sham or tolerate stuffed shirts.

Copyright 1972, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Naiads Complete Tryouts

NAIADS, University Aquatic Art Club have completed tryouts and have accepted the following to membership: Carol Barrett, Judy Buczala, Sue Chamberlain, Mary Beth Stanne, Sharon Anderson, Karen Atran, Karen Ferguson, Marijo Caumond, Linda Grief, Carol Lee Harrington, Helaine Hughes, Andrea Korthy, Jane Perdue, Kathy Russell, Barbara Stone, Gretchen Wilke. Work is now in progress for a spring performance.

WMUA

TONIGHT ON 91.1 FM:

7:00 p.m. EVENING NEWS - one half hour. Area news is emphasized.

7:30 p.m. - 8:00 VIEWPOINT - a thirty minute public affairs program dealing with issues ranging from national politics to campus issues.

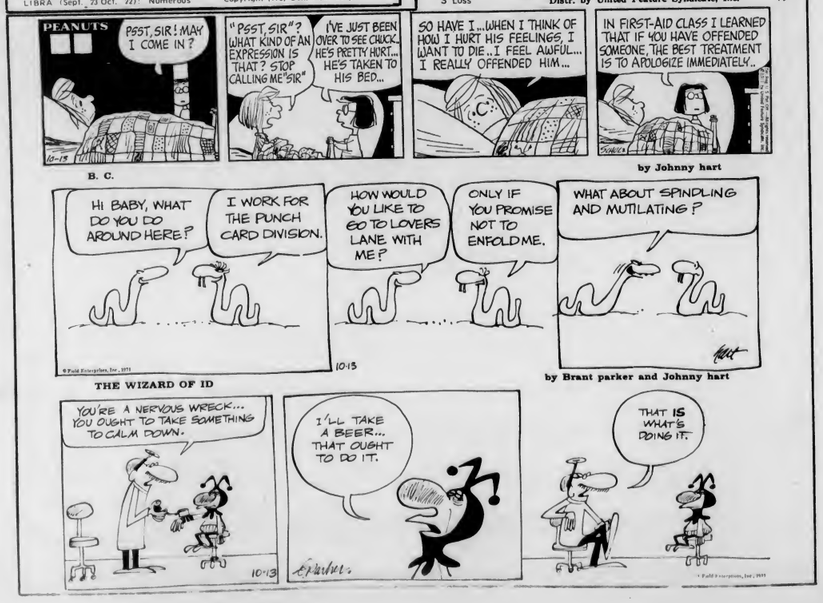
8:00 p.m. - 11:00 p.m. UJAMA DRUM - three hours of black music, poetry, commentary, and news compiled by the black news staff of Black Mass Communication and a black audio network.

11:00 p.m. - NEWS another full half hour with original reporting of local news, plus national, regional and weather.

11:30 p.m. - 3:00 a.m. Eric Benjamin with progressive rock.

LOWEST YOUTH FARES TO EUROPE $165

round-trip jet from New York



For only $165* round trip, Icelandic Airlines jets you from New York to Luxembourg in the heart of Europe for best connections to everywhere. Effective for youths aged 12 thru 29. Book within 30 days of departure. Also, check our Youth Fares to Norway, Sweden, Denmark, England and Scotland. Major credit cards accepted. See your travel agent! Mail coupon!

*Add $10 one way for departures within ten days before and after Christmas and Easter and during summer season. Fares and conditions subject to change.

To: Icelandic Airlines
630 Fifth Ave., N.Y., N.Y. 10020
(212) PL 7-8585
Send folder CN on Lowest Youth Fares to Europe ☐

Name_____
Street_____
City_____
State_____ Zip_____
My travel agent is_____

ICELANDIC LOFTLEIDIR

Big Green Machine Romps In Powder Puff Action

On Wednesday night the field was covered with Mushrooms, as the big, green machine once again displayed the precision and enthusiasm which has kept them undefeated. The Dwight Ducks, although an aggressive team, were unable to sustain the constant pressure as they quacked to the Mushrooms, 38-0.

Once again the defense was unscored upon, lead by the lightning rush of Joy Cavagnaro and Jan Morin. Helping out in the secondary were Vicki Pagel and Sue Chapman who contributed key interceptions. The offense continued to impress all concerned with another display of their unstopable, balanced attack.

Sweets and quick reverses were the order of the night as Chris "Swivel-hips" Cronin and Cheryl "Flash" McCarthy repeatedly tore through the line for substantial gains. Quick passes from quarterback Nancy Nealon to end Vicki Pagel and Flanker Nancy Lindbergh succeeded in keeping the Ducks completely off balance.

A great team performance contributed to the Mushroom's sprouting of yet another victory. It was, once again, a great night in Mushroomland.

In Thursday evening's action Pi Beta Phi succumbed to the efforts of Tri Sig as the Pi Phi team lost by a 28-14 upset. The Pi Phi defense, led by Paula Gemborys fought hard to keep the Tri Sigs from reaching their end zone. Nancy Sinden, Pi Phi's quarterback retaliated with two touchdowns bringing Pi Phi spirits up to 12 points.

Lori Filanowski, the offensive flanker, contributed greatly with both her skill and two extra points. Joan Van Order and Jeanne Nicolosi with their enthusiasm and ability encouraged the offensive team. The game now over and the bruises still being felt, Pi Phi remains a team.

Also on Thursday evening the Field Goals played a powerful Mary Lyons team at Boyden fields. Led on the offense by the dazzling running of Helen Monte and the effective passing of Donna Bell and Donna Blasko, the Field Goals triumphed 12-0.

A supposedly strong Mary Lyons running offense was stymied by the well disciplined Field Goal's defense, led by Debbie Kirchmer, Mim Kaizer, Liz Reagan and Paula Cunningham and Diane Reed.

The Field Goals first scored on a 40 yard run by Helen Monte. Their second score was the most spectacular as Ronda Factor eluded all defenders and grabbed a pass over her head for the TD. According to the girls, the victory could not have been possible without the leadership of the "Miracle Workers" better known as Coach Arnold Greenhut and Coach Mike Stephano.

The Wheeler Trojans placed second to Hamlin in their league, but they left the field in awe on Thursday evening after watching their Powder Puff counterparts roll to their second victory in as many games. The girls triumphed over Johnson 18-18 (they won on first downs, 6-2) to pull into undisputed first place in the Emerald League. It was a bitter defeat for Johnson who made an ardent attempt to win.

It was a hard hitting game which often times resembled tackle football more than flag football. Wheeler led at halftime 12-6. Johnson tied it up in the third quarter on a tremendous run by Sue Sanders. Wheeler pulled ahead by an 18-12 margin and then a "bomb" by Johnson quarterback Ann Laporte to Margie Higgins tied the score with 25 seconds left in the game. The game's outcome depended on the point after touchdown attempt. Wheeler's airtight defense held to preserve the victory.

Johnson's defense was tough, led by "Euni" Garcia, Carol Biebers and Claudia Grossi, but was no match for Wheeler's lightning quick offense. Johnson's defense teamed up with "Jet" Baker's outstanding kick-offs but Wheeler's specialty team reigned supreme.

Quarterback Joan Hluchan scored all 18 points on brilliant runs, aided by bruising blocks of linewomen Debbie Norton (who later celebrated her 18th birthday), Gail Sanborn, and Helaine Hughes and the pinpoint hikes of center Pam Pepper. As important as the points were, the first downs, 3 of which were accounted for on runs by Eue Emright.

Versatile Moe Crowley made 2 more, one of a pass from Hluchan and the other on a run. On defense for Wheeler, Connie "Bubba" Holmes knocked down two passes and nailed the opposing quarterback for two substantial losses.

After the game, the girls, like the young ladies that they are, returned to the dorm to celebrate the victory with a coke and potato chips (ha, ha) party.

Coach Carl Bessone, who thought that the spectator support was instrumental in inspiring the girls to victory, hadn't much to say. Immediately after the game, he met with Athletic Czar Ralph Simons to study game films in preparation for the girls next battle on Thursday against Mary Lyons.

PLAY-OFF PROSPECTS:

As the women's intramural powder puff football action starts its last week of play, several key games will determine teams to enter the play-offs. Teams eligible to enter the play-offs must have placed first or second in their leagues.

In the Sorority Thalian League, Alpha Chi Omega seems to have first place nailed down with a 2-0 record; their remaining game will be against Chi Omega, who is 0-2. It looks like second place in the Thalian League will be Tuesday night's winner of the Pi-Phi - Sigma Kappa game. Both teams are 0-2 this season.

The Sorority Uranian League's battle for first and second place will also commence Tuesday night at 6:00 p.m. as undefeated Tri Sig and Gamma Sigma Sigma clash in a tie-breaker. Both teams sport 2-0 records.

In the Women's Residence Hall Emerald League another battle royal will ensue when undefeated Mary Lyons meets the undefeated Wheeler Trojans at 7:00 p.m. Thursday night.

The first place slot in the Independent Topaz League was determined last week as the Mushrooms won their fourth straight game. The second place slot is still open, however, and will be determined only when the Dwight Ducks face the Roaring Twenties Wednesday night at 6:00 p.m.

Be on hand to watch the emerging teams for the 1971 Powder Puff football play-offs.

Missed Sign Leads Bucs To Win

PITTSBURGH (AP)—"Atta way to bunt the ball," Willie Stargell said as Bob Robertson crossed home plate after hitting a three-run homer.

Robertson didn't know until he was greeted by Stargell that he had been given a bunt sign with a 1-1 count in the seventh and runners on first and second and none out. But he missed it and hit a home run to right.

"It was a bunt sign on that pitch only," said Manager Danny Murtaugh in the Pittsburgh dressing room after the Pirates' 5-1 victory over Baltimore.

"I saw Brooks Robinson was playing deep at third so I was playing for the one run."

"I fouled up didn't I?" Robertson acknowledged to Murtaugh when he reached the bench.

"Possibly," was Murtaugh's reply.

"There won't be a fine under those conditions," Murtaugh said later.

"That's the first sign I missed all year," the sandy-haired first baseman said. "I'm sort of glad the way it turned out."

Robertson, who had been hitless in nine times at bat, is the second Pirate to hit a homer in this World Series.

"The way I've been hitting, I guess he (Murtaugh) thought I should lay down the bunt," Robertson said. "At least that way I'd make contact with the ball."

Robertson said he hit a Mike Cuellar screwball which "He didn't want to get up."

In the first two games Pittsburgh got only 10 hits, but Robertson didn't think the Pirate attack in the third game victory was any different.

"I think we got to Baltimore pitching in the first two games," he said. "We just didn't get the consistent pitching we needed.

"We needed a stopper and Steve Blass was it. I've never seen him pitch as hard as he did today."

Manny Sanguillen who doubled in the sixth to right center taking second with a headlong slide which set up the Pirates' third run, agreed.

"He was soooo good," he said.

JV Booters Fall, 2-0

By JIM PINSKY

The UMass Junior Varsity Soccer team lost a close contest to the UConn Junior Varsity Soccer team by a 2-0 score at Storrs Friday. The loss evened the J.V.'s record at 1-1.

The first half was extremely close as most of the action took place around the midfield stripe. This was reflected by the fact that only five shots on goal were recorded by both teams in the first quarter.

It wasn't until there was 2:25 left in the first half that UConn got its first goal. This goal proved to be a turning point as UConn rallied to take several more hard shots on goal only to be thwarted by some fine stops by UMass goalie Barry Lutchen.

UConn went into halftime with a 1-0 lead.

The third quarter was wide open with UMass taking some fine shots but failing to get on the scoreboard. With 4:43 left in the third quarter UConn scored converted a penalty shot and that gave them their eventual margin of victory.

The game on the whole was slow. UMass had plenty of opportunities to score but as in the previous game they didn't get any breaks. UConn did however play a better game.

The Junior Varsity is now looking forward to its game this Thursday against W.P.I. at Worcester.

Series Tightens...

Blass Hurls Bucs Over Orioles, 5-1

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Steve Blass, unmercifully shelled in the National League playoffs, turned Baltimore's lethal bats into toothpicks Tuesday with a three-hit, 5-1 victory that gave the Pittsburgh Pirates their first World Series triumph over the Orioles.

The defeat ended an amazing 16-game winning streak put together by the defending champion Orioles, who won 11 games at the end of the regular season, three consecutive playoffs and the first two Series games.

Dave Cash scored Pittsburgh's first run, Jose Pagan drove in the second and Bob Robertson cracked a three-run homer. But the day belonged to Blass as the Pirates pulled back into contention after two defeats at Baltimore.

Driven from the mound in both his playoff starts and facing a Baltimore team that had mauled Pittsburgh pitching for 24 hits and 16 runs in two previous games, Blass bounced back with an overpowering performance.

The 29-year-old right-hander kept the Orioles completely off balance with an assortment of blazing fast balls and round house curves and held them scoreless until Frank Robinson homered in the seventh.

That trimmed Pittsburgh's lead to 2-1, but it was the only time the Orioles were able to break through against Blass, a 6-foot, 170-pounder regarded as one of the easiest-going members of the Pirates.

And he probably couldn't help smiling when his teammates, mocked for their inability to find a crack among the Orioles' 20-game winners during two defeats in Baltimore, put it away against left-hander Mike Cuellar on Robertson's three-run homer in the bottom of the seventh.

Blass, who had a no-hitter working until Brooks Robinson singled with one out in the fifth, thus made something of a prophet of Pittsburgh Manager Danny Murtaugh. Murtaugh had warned against counting the Pirates out until they returned to their home base at Three Rivers Stadium.

The triumph also underscored the critical nature of tonight's fourth game-the first World Series night game in history. Baltimore's fourth 20-game winner, Pat Dobson, will go in that one against Luke Walker, 10-8 during the regular season.

But it is doubtful that more attention could be focused on one man than was focused on Blass in this one. For even as he checked the Orioles they weren't out of it until Robertson's blast in the seventh inning.

After a shaky start, Cuellar seemed to have as much control of the situation as Blass.

But Cuellar threw wildly to first on Roberto Clemente's leadoff grounder in the seventh. Then Willie Stargell walked on four pitches and Robertson tagged a drive over the 385-foot mark in right center field.

That made it 5-1, and all Blass had to do was coast the rest of the way. But just as he had done after Robinson's homer, his sixth hit and second homer of the Series, he bore down.

Blass stifled any thought of a Baltimore bounce-back by striking out Ellie Hendricks and Brooks Robinson and getting Dave Johnson on a soft grounder.

He went back to work in the eighth and got the Orioles 1-2-3, took a standing ovation from a crowd of 50,403 when he came to bat in the Pirates' half of the eighth and then went out to the mount in the ninth to finish it up.

He struck out Merv Rettenmund leading off, got Powell on a long fly to center and then surrendered a single to his only tormentor, Frank Robinson. But then he ended it by getting Hendericks on a one-hopper to second baseman Cash.

In all, Blass threw 136 pitches, striking out eight, walking just two and going to a full count on only three other batters.

The Pirates got started quickly against Cuellar as Cash tagged his first pitch for a double down the left field line. He reached third when Powell threw wildly to Cuellar at first in an attempt to get Al Oliver and scored when Roberto Clemente hit into a force play.

Then Cuellar kept the Pirates at bay through the next four innings, leaving six Pirates stranded. But in the sixth Pittsburgh broke through again when Manny Sanguillen doubled and Pagan, playing third in place of Richie Hebner, singled him home.

The Pirates, battling for their first world championship since 1960, will attempt tonight to knot the series 2-2.

The game is scheduled to start at 8:15 p.m. EDT, with a huge national television audience watching the precedent-shattering night game on NBC.

Tonight's Intramurals

TUG-O-WAR

PIT	TIME	TEAMS
1	6:30	PSU vs. PMD
2		SAE vs. LCA
1	6:45	APO vs. TC
1	7:00	Position Spartan
		2 vs. 3
2		4 vs. 5
1	7:15	Terrors vs. Seagrams
2		Heads vs. Senators
1	7:30	Smashers vs. Lions
2		Redwoods vs. Maroons
1	7:45	Lemons vs. Hoovers
2		Lovers vs. Trojans

FOOTBALL

FIELD	TIME	TEAMS
1	6:00	Ducks vs. Twenties
2		Cuties vs. Dickinson

W. C. Fields — Moe, Larry & Curly — Charlie Chaplin

Six

Comedy Classics

Mahar

Tonite: 8:15 & 10:00

Friday: 6:45; 8:20 & 10:00

Admission 50¢

Keystone Kops

Laurel & Hardy — Abbott & Costello

Harriers Score Double Shutout

Doug O'Connell

By JAY NESTOR

Since Ron Wayne won the New England championship last year, a Redman has yet to finish first in a cross-country race until yesterday. Yesterday, against Vermont and Rhode Island, the harriers won in high fashion and Doug O'Connell broke the hex.

O'Connell started slowly and finally took the lead about a mile and a half out. He was never again challenged as he ran strong to the finish. It was a welcome sight to see a Redman break the tape for the first time this year.

Following top man O'Connell were the freshman sensations Bill Gillin and Randy Thomas. They showed great maturity in covering the varsity distance with their highly respectable finishing places. Coach Ken O'Brien expressed the opinion that he was surprised at the fine performances of these freshmen and their adaptation to the five mile course. They are destined to be powerful assets to the varsity team.

Peter Crisci and Paul Segersten followed with some quality performances. These two are proving to be consistently dependable and their worth is great to the team.

These five runners constituted an impressive sweep over the two Yankee Conference teams.

Bob Shabowsky of Rhode Island finally broke the Redman streak with a sixth place finish. Close behind ran Rick Barry with his best performance to date, and Roger Nasatka, who ran with the leaders for three miles and also achieved his best race this year.

The score totalled up to UMass with Rhode Island, 15-46, and the Redmen with Vermont 15-48. The harriers have thus far swept all conference opponents and the outlook for the Championship looks bright.

Saturday finds the cross-country team at Franklin Park, facing Boston College. In the words of Coach O'Brien, "BC is almost as tough as Northeastern and the performance against BC and Springfield next week will serve as an accurate barometer on the condition of the team."

Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Bill Gillin

Top Ten Finishers:

1. O'Connell	UM	26:18
2. Gillan	UM	26:26
3. Thomas	UM	26:31
4. Crisci	UM	26:46
5. Segersten	UM	26:51
6. Shabowsky	URI	26:55
7. Barry	UM	26:57
8. Nasatka	UM	27:00
9. Dunsky	UM	27:06
10. Piliero	URI	27:07

Terrier's Diamond Heads YanCon Picks

Boston University halfback Pat Diamond, Holy Cross linebacker Dan Harper and Rhode Island halfback Dan Weed, have been chosen as the top offensive, defensive and sophomore players in the Yankee Conference for their performances last Saturday.

Diamond, a 5'9 185-lb. senior, netted 88 yards with 17 carries including a 15-yard touchdown as BU beat UMass 47-21. Diamond moved to within 3 yards of the all-time BU rushing record and earned his second All Star selection.

Weed, a 5'11 170-lb. sophomore, scored 4 touchdowns, on runs of 65, 2 & 15 plus a 15-yard catch, to pace URI to a 34-22 Conference win over Vermont.

Other nominations were: Offense - HB Bob Rodger (Vermont), QB Bob Hopkins (New Hampshire), SE Dave Paul (Maine), QB Mickey Connolly (Holy Cross), QB Bob Ehrhardt (Rhode Island) and QB Piel Pennington (Massachusetts); Defense - T Charlie Russo (Vermont), E Brett Bernier (New Hampshire), LB Joe LeVasseur (Maine), E Steve Furness (Rhode Island), T Rick Versocki (Boston U.) & T Bill DeFlavio (Massachusetts); Sophomores - DT Jordan Phillips (New Hampshire), QB Doug Lentz (Maine), DB Ty Blocker (Holy Cross) & HB Tim Berra (Massachusetts).

NOTE: Although new Yankee Conference members Holy Cross and Boston U. do not play enough league games to qualify for the Conference championship their players will be listed in the weekly award winners and statistical rankings.

Landry Named NFL Player Of The Week

NEW YORK (AP)—"We couldn't run on them because of their strong defensive line, so we passed," said Detroit Lions quarterback Greg Landry, who did so much of it so well that he was named Tuesday as the National Football League Offensive Player of the Week.

The 6-foot-4, 210-pounder, enjoying his best day as a pro Sunday, connected on 18 of 29 passes for 302 yards and four touchdowns, two to wide receiver Larry Walton, as he led the Lions to a 31-28 victory over the Green Bay Packers.

Landry's solid performance made him the solid choice over quarterback Kent Nix of the Chicago Bears, the winner of The Associated Press award two weeks ago, and place-kicker Curt Knight of the Washington Redskins.

Landry insisted the decisive factor was not the single coverage used by Green Bay, but rather his teammates. "The offensive line was giving great protection," he said, "and that was the key."

The 24-year-old passer from the University of Massachusetts, the Lions' No. 1 draft choice in 1968, took over as their starting quarterback in mid-season last year.

After a narrow setback by Minnesota, the eventual champion in the National Conference's Central Division, Landry proceeded to direct Detroit to five straight victories and a berth in the conference playoffs.

Varsity M

The UMass Varsity M Club will hold its weekly Quarterback Luncheon today at the Newman Center at 12:15 p.m. Coach Dick MacPherson, his staff and members of his team will be on hand to review the B.U. game with films and commentary and also preview this Saturday's game with Rhode Island.

There will be the usual door prize, a raffle of choice seats to the URI game, plus excellent food, all for $1.50. The public is invited.

Bucs Over O's

Story On Pages 14 and15

The Ugliest Football Field We Ever Saw

By EARLE BARROLL

It was definitely the ugliest football field that Dan Kamal and I ever saw. Incredible, Old Braves Field, turned Nickerson field and it was a complete abortion. As Kamal put it, "no wonder the Braves left Boston."

Due to the B.U. press box that was "unable to seat two Collegian writers", according to the Terrier Sports Information Director, Kamal sat in the box and I headed for the sidelines with my very own "Gib Fullerton" photo pass.

It was only a couple of seconds after I planted myself on the UMass side of the field that I came to the realization that this was B.U., the Berkeley of the east...Moody Blues Albums blaring in the background, radicals hanging over the barriers in a mild protest of the "high prices" on football tickets and the Charles flowing aimlessly through the smog of Boston.

The highlight had to be the old vagabond sitting in the UMass stands. Quite a sight all right. He wore a long grundgy coat, a small cap, a UMass banner, carried his own wind-up alarm clock in his hand and had the scrufty "Old Boston" look.

And while the crowd of a few meandered in he was content in yelling aloud, "Come on UMass beat B.U. by at least one point." The last I saw of him was in the third period when he left to probably pay off his bet at the nearby bar.

Ten minutes before the game the true B.U. came out in the form of the National Anthem pouring out from some dorm room with the patriotic fans standing with pride for their country, that was soon crushed by the realization that "they had been taken."

But the real topper had to be the astroturf, the new revolutionary synthetic turf that looked way out of place in respect to the surrounding buildings.

Standing from the UMass sideline, the rise in the middle of the field, for water runoff, was such that I couldn't see the hash markers on the other side of the field. The B.U. football brochure must prescribe "hill sprints" for the opposition to ready for a Terrier home game.

This was Old Braves Field, where the "knot hole gang once ruled supreme", where "Spahn and Sain and pray for rain" initiated and where the most exciting baseball ever in Boston was played.

But now turned Nickerson field, it was just a sore spot and a shot to the pride of Old Braves fans.

And certainly ugly as hell to Kamal and I.

* * * *

As for the game itself, the final score is in itself not indicative of the UMass team that performed with Piel Pennington at quarterback.

Piel was super throughout his little over two periods of action in amassing 240 plus yards with one 40 yarder to Schubert also called back.

His departure left an unfillable position in the UMass offense that resulted in the ballooning of the final score.

One has to wonder as to the outcome with Piel tossing all the way.

The play that put him out came on a third and medium yardage. He chose to run for the first down after sprinting out and finding his receivers covered.

Cutting back into the middle of the field the lanky sophomore was nailed but good by three B.U. linemen who saw the frustration of his passing rolled up in this one play. Piel went down like a shot and still remains in doubt for the next couple of weeks, his shoulder suffering a seperation.

B.U.'s starting quarterback was also put out of action, but his replacement, Sam Hollo, was no stranger to football fans. Two years ago he was the starting quarterback for the Terrier team that featured Bruce Taylor, now with the San Francisco Fourty-niners, and went to the Pasadena Bowl and played a fine game against San Diego State.

* * * *

Dean Warren McGuirk, Athletic Director and Head of the School of Physical Education, who will retire in January was presented with an award by Warren Schmakel, B.U. Athletic Director, during halftime ceremonies inducting B.U. into the Yankee Conference.

McGuirk received his masters degree at B.U. and was also cited for his outstanding work over the years as a leader in Collegiate Athletics throughout the country.

* * * *

Metawampe has left town for a while. The Great One was scalped over the weekend and asked for a couple days sabbatical in the west to recuperate for this coming weekend action...Happy six months, Roberta....

A FINE BOSTON CHAP-"Come on UMass, beat BU by at least one point", was the cry of this scruffy, old gentleman as he waved valiantly his UMass pennant throughout the game. (MDC Photo by Barbara Brecher)

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather: That's enough of that, young man.

VOLUME XCIX, ISSUE 26 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS THURSDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1971

GIT'EM GOOKS—Viet Nam Vets Against the War go after a suspect during a search and destroy mission outside the Campus Center yesterday. They did their bit for Moratorium Day, bringing it all back home. See page three for story. (photo by Gary Alpaugh.)

Senate Has Minutiae-Filled Evenings

By DONALD BISHOP

In ceremonies held last night, 19 old and approximately 60 new Student Senators were sworn into office. This action marked the beginning of the new 71-72 session.

Before entering into their evening's business, the Senate was addressed by acting chancellor Randolph Bromery. Dr. Bromery came essentially to respond to Senate President Lee Sandwen's letter criticising Bromery's appointment of Dr. Robert Gage as acting vice chancellor, without having consulted with the Student Senate.

Bromery accepted the criticisms, and stated that he wouldn't use this type of appointment procedure in the future.

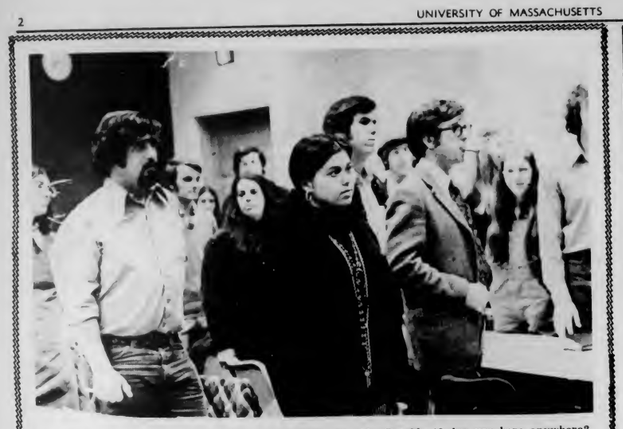
After his address the Senate went into consideration of the evening's business. The motions heard by the Senate included the appointment of 7 members to the Senate Judiciary Selection Committee, and approval for the drawing up of an opinion poll, to be administered to the student body, getting its opinions on the future funding of campus organizations which are currently funded by the Student Senate.

In future business, the Senate amended the S.G.A. Constitution, allowing for students to be represented in any future tax and fee increase decision. (Other than tuition and health fees.) They also accepted the Constitutions of various campus organizations, and they thanked the Amherst Board of Registrars in advance for coming to the Campus Center today, to register student voters.

There was considerable objection among the Senators present to the approval of the original nominations for appointment to the Judiciary Selection Committee. Senator Kevin Kulakowski and others questioned whether a Senate vice president should be appointed and whether President Lee Sandwen had passed over qualified individuals in his nominations.

Senator John Stevens felt that no Senators should be appointed to this committee. Rather he believed the selections should come from the general student body, thereby involving more members of the University community.

But the Senate as a whole rejected this exclusion motion, feeling that it would exclude too many eminently qualified Senators. It was felt that representatives from the general student body could come from the 7 nominations of the General Court to the committee.



The names of vice president Larry Ladd and Senator Bruce Bernstein were removed from the original list and final approval was given to Ed Fenwick, Elliot Sherman, Edie Kort, Peter Lewickee, Bob Saunders, Bill Staton, and Kevin Kulakowski as members of the Judiciary Selection Committee.

The motion approving the formulation of an opinion pool, to be administered to the student body, came as an offshoot of the Budgets Act. All those organizations currently funded by the Student Senate will be included in the poll. Students will be asked whether they feel the Senate should continue to fund these groups in the future.

On The Inside:

● Bromery Decides See page two

● Get Out And Vote See page two

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN, THE PRESIDENT—Uh, Mr. President? Are you here anywhere? Nope. OK, let's bring out the VP and the treasurer. That's better, boys. Smile now. The new Senators get themselves sworn in at last night's meeting which was run by Messrs. Hogan and Verrochi in the absence of the estimable Lee Sandwen. (Photo by Barbara Brecher)

WMPIRG-Money Biggest Problem

By CHARLES BERKOW

Funding, publicity and research were the organizational problems that the UMass chapter of the Western Massachusetts Public Interest Group (WMPIRG), formed committees to deal with in a meeting at the Campus Center last night.

The general consensus at the meeting was that the biggest problem facing WMPIRG will be money. They need it in order to hire professional consultants necessary for the functioning of the group. The major proposal for obtaining funds is from a tax, collected from every student at the beginning of each semester, but unlike other student taxes, refundable upon request.

Most of the students in the area served by WMPIRG are here at UMass; as such, the funding proposal will have to pass here if the group is to get off the ground. The campus chapter is presently devoting all its energies to obtaining the money needed to establish WMPIRG.

When finally functioning, WMPIRG will be run and financed by students. Its activities will be similar to those of consumer advocate Ralph Nader's group based in Washington, but it will be regionally oriented and will deal with local problems.

The group is based on an idea of Nader's, although Nader is not connected to the group in any way. WMPIRG will investigate complaints and conduct research on matters of public interest such as housing conditions, environmental quality, racial discrimination, consumer protection, health care, etc. It will be able to initiate legal action against offenders.

There will be a meeting of the Regional Proposal Committee at 7:30 tonight in Room 106 of the Academic Building at Hampshire College. The purpose of this meeting is to draw up a proposal for the structure of the overall organizing drive. There will be a regional meeting in the Academic Building at Hampshire College on Sunday night at 7:30 to see if WMPIRG will accept the proposal. Anyone can attend either of these meetings.

Students who wish to join or just have questions about WMPIRG are urged to contact Steve Rider at 546-6551 or Brian Sullivan at 546-9756.

Bromery Makes Up Mind, But He Isn't Telling

By MDC STAFF

Chancellor Bromery made up his mind yesterday afternoon, but he isn't telling what it is.

He has apparently made the decision between becoming the Secretary of Education or staying on for at least the short term as Acting Chancellor of the Amherst campus.

The decision was sent to the Governor's office via "registered mail" at 3:00 p.m. yesterday, ending Bromery's own worries for at least the moment.

"It's up to the governor to decide, now", said Bromery, declining to give any hint as to what he decided. Copies of the letter were also sent to the Lt. Governor Donal Dwight, UMass Pres. Robert Wood and Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Joseph Healey.

Lt. Gov. Dwight said last night that he had not received the letter, but did say that there were no "financial problems" surrounding the appointment of a Secretary of Education.

The Collegian reported yesterday that there may have been some delay over appointing a secretary because of the disparity between paychecks of the new cabinet post and some already established educational positions. The Secretary will be paid $35,000 while lesser positions such as UMass Chancellorship's pay $38,000.

Though nobody but Dr. Bromery knows for sure, his own emphasis on the Governor being the one who must "decide" what happens next; and that there was only one letter duplicated and sent to the Governor and University officials both, lead one observer to guess that Bromery had chosen the Secretary's position.

Official word will have to come from the Governor.

Homecoming Themes Set

The themes for Homecoming this year are "ROCK RHODE ISLAND" and "DRIVE FOR U.N.I.C.E.F."

The Fraternities and Sororities on campus have decided to make Homecoming 1971 more meaningful than those in the past. Along with the usual float parade (theme Rock Rhode Island) they are also sponsoring a car parade (theme Drive For U.N.I.C.E.F.) in conjunction with it.

There will be an organizational meeting for the U.N.I.C.E.F. drive at 6:30 p.m., Fri., 15th in the visitors parking lot which is located along Mass. Ave. across from Whitmore and the flag poles. The Greeks are inviting all interested groups and students to help them make this Homecoming Parade successful in more than one way.

MEET MR. STEAK

of Northampton

He's a professionally trained restauranteur, one of more than 200 across the nation who proudly offer fine family dining at moderate prices. The steaks he serves are all USDA Choice, naturally tender (no chemical tenderizers added) and broiled to perfection. The menu includes seafood, chicken, salads and a variety of sandwiches, too. Come in and meet Mr. Steak but be forewarned; visits to his place are habit forming.

His other name? It's Mr. Lee Turner

Open every day 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Fri & Sat 'til 10 p.m.

THE FAMILY PLACE
• MR. STEAK •
261 King St., Northampton
584-5958 Cocktails Served

Register Today To Vote Feb 22

Since the revolution doesn't seem to be imminent it might be a good idea to get your licks in voting.

If you've decided to register and haven't, in the town or city your parents reside in, or you may register in Amherst if you will have lived here six months as of February 22. (Date of town elections.) You can do that today from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Campus Center.

If you're going to register at home for the November elections, you better do so quickly. In most towns the last day for registration is today. Many registration offices close at 4:30 or 5:00 p.m., but some towns are staying open to 10. Call home, though, to be sure.

If you plan to register in Amherst, you must do so before February 2, 1972, for the town elections on February 22. Check back home if you are registered to vote elsewhere for the date of your town's or city's elections.

Today, from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. there will be "registration table set by the town of Amherst in the Campus Center, concourse level. The only requirement needed to register in Amherst is proof of residency in the town for six months. Rent receipts, letter from College Registrars, Deans or the Housing office will be accepted as proof of residence. For tomorrow only the Housing Office will set up shop in the Campus Center, near the voter registration table, to cut out running around for those students who live on campus and plan to register to vote in Amherst.

Register To Vote
Campus Center
Concourse
TODAY

Calling all children!!

MR. STEAK BIRTHDAY CLUB REGISTRATION

Fill this out completely for a FREE DINNER on your birthday.

FIRST NAME LAST NAME

BIRTH DATE: MONTH DAY YEAR

STREET ADDRESS PHONE NUMBER

CITY STATE ZIP CODE

THE FAMILY PLACE
• MR. STEAK •
261 KING ST., NORTHAMPTON

All children through age 12 can join the MR. STEAK BIRTHDAY CLUB. Fill out this card and turn it in at any Mr. Steak restaurant. We'll send you a certificate for a FREE Children's Dinner and Beverage in time for your birthday.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN are on the second floor of the Student Union on the University campus, zip code 01002. Phones are 545-2550 (news), 545-0344 (sports), and 549-1311 (editor).

Second class postage paid at Amherst, the DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes five times weekly Monday through Friday during the academic year except during vacation and exam periods; three or four times a week following a vacation or exam period or when a holiday falls within a week. Accepted for mailing under the authority of the act of March 8, 1879 as amended by the act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester, $10.00 per year.

David M. Bartley, Speaker.

Massachusetts House of Representatives

An Open Invitation to the University Students of Amherst

Everyone Welcome

THURSDAY, OCT. 14 8 P.M.
ROOM 163 CAMPUS CENTER presented through the courtesy of

The Amherst Democratic Town Committee

Viet Vets Bring War Home To The Hatch

By MARILYNN MARTIN

"Every man, woman, and child carries an I.D. card", screamed one veteran, dressed in G.I. uniform at the Hatch yesterday afternoon. Other vets crouched on the floor, armed with toy M-16 rifles and shouting bits of monologue designed to hit its listener hard. One poor fellow found himself bound and forced to the floor in an effort to display exactly how brutal, humiliating and terrifying the result of an American platoon's search for Viet Cong really is. The guerilla theatre was sponsored by Vietnam Veterans against the War and according to Ray Kildisas, a member of the group, was an effort to "bring war home to the people-- to give them an idea of what the war is all about."

A hand-out distributed by the organization brought out anything the guerilla theatre might have missed. It mentioned the use of interrogations, electric shocks, and imprisonment, as punishment for not having the "proper identification", for being suspicious in any way or maybe for just being a "gook". Any resistance, the hand-out said, resulted in death and was listed as another Viet Cong killed "in action".

The hope of the organization in sponsoring guerilla theatres, such as this, is to get people involved-veterans especially. Ray defined it as, ' Ultimately, in 10 or 20 years, when the word "war" is mentioned, you'll have to look in the dictionary to find out what it means.

Speaking for the organization, he emphasized the importance of complete de-escalation of the war (total withdrawal-now) and that they held no support, whatsoever for Nixon policy.

When asked if he thought this would have a drastic effect on the economy, Ray said "If you ask me, the economy is a mess now" and that, personally, he didn't think it would make that much of a difference.

In the future, the Vets intend to have more guerilla theatres, and promote rap sessions where everyone is welcome, in hopes of making the meaning of war clearer to the people. Another function of the organization is to make regular visits to the Northampton V.A., where they find many of the patients can identify more closely with them than with a Vet from WWII, for example.

It is their belief that people will still listen to the veterans because they have experienced the war and know what radio listeners and newspaper readers will never see or hear about.

From the Hatch, the group moved to Zayres', and from there, on to Springfield, to stage more guerilla theatres, and to hopefully have a moving affect on a greater number of people.

TAKE THAT, YOU GOOK!—Viet Nam Veterans Against the War brought the war to the waffle yesterday as part of Moratorium Day activities. Viet Vets feel that dramatization of the war's brutality brings it a little bit closer to home. (Photo by Gary Alpaugh)

Moratorium Day Centers On War

By KERRY MELLO

In conjunction with movements throughout the country, a Moratorium Day, sponsored by the Coalition for Peace and Justice, was held in the Campus Center, yesterday. The day consisted of various workshops, which provided information on problems and issues relevant today.

Court watching, using a Northampton courtroom as example began the day's activities. People participating in this observed a normal day's court proceedings.

ne of the major attractions of the day was a media-movie, the Winter Soldier, on war atrocities. The film, shown continuously on the second floor concourse of the Campus Center, featured the testimonies of the veterans of the Vietnam war. Other activities included a film and discussion on the labor movement, in relation to the student, and a discussion headed by Jean Williams on the refusal to pay telephone taxes in protest to the Vietnam war. In addition to the workshops students leafleted some factories in and around Amherst.

Most of the workshops were designed to promote interest in the issues they represented. in the hope that groups would be formed for further action. However, student attendance to the sessions was, for the most part, poor.

When asked to comment, one of the leaders of the movement stated "the day hopefully is the beginning of a broadbased political coalition to move the Student and Community population into the 1970's around peace and justice."

Student-Faculty Conference To Be Held

By ERNIE ROTMAN

The 3rd annual Student-Faculty Conference will be an important meeting as far as vital issues on the UMass campus are concerned. This conference, when held on the 25th of October in the Campus Center, will discuss issues such as the forthcoming teacher evaluation and the Report of the President on the Future of UMass.

Dr. Kofler from the Physics department will serve as chairman for the conference, sided by Terence Burke, Vernon Alden and Peter Edelman as chairmen for the various discussion groups.

There will also be a speech by Dr. W.J. McKeachie, one of the "foremost researchers in education" as cited by Tom Lindenman. Dr. McKeachie has been chairman of the Psychology department at the University of Michigan for ten years.

There is still room for students who want to participate in the conference, with funds available to pay their registration. Any one wishing to attend must fill out an application at 319 Hampshire House at the United Christian Foundation's headquarters.

Tanzanian To Speak On Ujamaa Socialism

Professor Ahmed Mouhiddin, who is presently visiting Cornell university, will be the guest of the W.E.B. DuBois Department of Afro American Studies on Monday, Oct. 18 at 8:00 P.M. in room 106 Thompson. Professor Mouhiddin will give a public presentation on the topic, "Ujamaa Socialism--The Challenge of Building a Socialist Society in Tanzania."

Professor Ahmed Mouhiddin was a senior lecturer at the University of Dares Salaam and at Makere University in Kampala, Uganda in the Department of Political Science. He has published several works, cluding:

(a) The role of education in the Socialist Transformation in Tanzania, b) Ujamaa Socialism--an analysis of President Nyerere's vision of Tanzanian Society, and c) politics in West Africa.

The Department encourages full participation and attendance of the involved publics.

Learn to Drive
AMHERST AUTO SCHOOL
34 Main Street
256-6066

NOW...YOUR CHOICE OF 5!
Showcase
Rt. 5 - W. Spfld.
Cinemas 1-2-3-4-5
733-5131
MORE NEW SHOWS!
MORE NEW LOUNGER SEATS!
MORE NEW PARKING!
MATINEES DAILY...POPULAR PRICES
Adults $1.50 Mon thru Fri Matns
1 Summer of '42 (R)
2 Death in Venice (R)
3 The Devils (X)
4 Let's Scare Jessica to Death (GP)
5 Walkabout (GP)
ACRES FREE PARKING
ROCKER LOUNGERS
CHARGE YOUR TICKETS

Last evening's D.V.P. presentation which was to have Chicago 8 Conspiracy member David Dellinger as guest speaker was cancelled last evening due to a sudden death in Mr. Dellinger's family.

EVERY WEDNESDAY,
STAMPEDE NIGHT
starting October 13, some of the far west will come to New England...
Our Cowgirls, in western garb, armed with water pistols filled with Vodka, will serve your custom sliced western steer beef by the ounce.--45¢ per ounce for prime sirloin, 70¢ per ounce for fillet mignon, and 35¢ per ounce for a rib of broiled beef.
Keep our Friday night buffet in mind.
The Lord Jeffery
30 Boltwood Ave. AMHERST, MASS. 253-2576
RAOUL DIETRICH, INNKEEPER

PROGRAM COUNCIL PRESENTS

"Midnight Cowboy"

S. U. BALLROOM

THURS. OCT. 14

7:00 - 9:30

In The Nation And The World

Agnew Helps Celebrate Iran Anniversary

PERSEPOLIS, Iran (AP) — In the campiest of all campouts, kings, presidents, sultans and prime ministers from more than 50 countries tented Wednesday night to celebrate the 2,500th birthday of the kingdom of Persia.

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew of the States found himself sharing the same patch of desert stars with President Nikolai V. Podgorny of the Soviet Union, while the presidents of Pakistan and India, South Africa and Mauritania eyed each other placidly across lumps of cold caviar.

The international bonhomie spread a splendid daylong smile across the handsome features of the Shah of Iran, who in the tumbling ruins of Darius the Great's palace at Persia's ancient capital is tossing what may well be the biggest imperial shindig since Nero got out of the catering business.

Other guests checked into the glittering tent city that Paris designers caused to bloom in the desert include Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, King Moshoeshoe II of Lesotho, Prince Mikasa of Japan, Mrs. Ferdinand Marcos, wife of the president of the Philippines, the elected King of Malaysia, a Belgian cardinal representing the pope and an assortment of crown princes, grand dukes and international jetsetters.

While waiting to greet royal guests in a bizarre welcoming ceremony of honor guards and blaring bands, the Shah told newsmen he hoped the visiting heads of state would take advantage of the intimacy of the desert Caravansary to visit privately between tents and settle world problems.

But as the champagne flowed at the opening banquet presided over by the Shah and Empress Farah in the royal tent, there already were rumors of discontent among the tents.

Desert winds carried tales that President Kai-Uwe von Hassel of the West German Parliament was unhappy about being assigned to a nearby hotel with lesser guests while the princess of Afghanistan took over the German tent. The tent originally had been assigned to German President Gustav Heinemann, who dropped out at the last minute because of a retina operation.

Reporters in identical Mao suits from the Peoples Republic of China told newsmen that the Peking representative also had sent his regrets to the Shah at the last minute due to a sudden illness and had asked the Chinese ambassador to Pakistan to take his place.

Speculation was rife that Kue Mo-jo, director of the Chinese Academy of Sciences and a vice president of the party, may have come down with a quick case of Kissinger's Disease because of his low place on the protocol list.

For his extravaganza the Shah is sticking to the protocol rules set down long ago at the Congress of Vienna, which put Agnew and other number two nonregal world figures in fifth place on the caviar chart behind emperors and kings, presidents, prime ministers and governors general and grand dukes.

Being neither royalty nor a head of state, Agnew was greeted at the Shiraz Airport by the prime minister of Iran and missed the royal reception line in Persepolis headed by the shah and his beautiful empress. Mrs. Marcos, a spectacularly handsome first lady in a puff-sleeved white Philippine gown, was greeted at the entrance to the tent city by the Empress Farah while the Shah stood back in obedience to protocol.

SHE BLOWS $200,000 IN TWO YEARS—Mrs. Jolene Genrin sits in front of $2000 television-stereo set in her rented Sand Pedro, Calif. home, all that's left of $200,000 she inherited two years ago. The money went for clothes, cars, motorcycles, dental work, skis and anything that struck her fancy. If she had to do it over? "I'd do exactly the same thing I did - blow it," she said.

Six Being Checked For High Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — G. Harrold Carswell's replacement on the federal Appeals Court in New Orleans and two women judges are among six candidates for the Supreme Court being checked by the American Bar Association, legal sources confirmed late Wednesday.

The list includes two Southern judges and Sen. Robert C. Byrd, a West Virginia Democrat. The Carswell successor is Paul H. Roney, of St. Petersburg, Fla., who took Carswell's place on the New Orleans Court last November.

Carswell was nominated to the Supreme Court by President Nixon but was rejected by the Senate. Subsequently he resigned and ran unsuccessfully for the U.S. Senate from Florida.

The two women, the sources said, are Mildred Lillie a California state Appeals Court judge, and Sylvia Bacon a judge on the District of Columbia Superior Court. The other Southern Judge is Charles Clark, of Jackson, Miss., a colleague of Roney.

The sixth candidate also is a Southerner, Herschel Friday, a Little Rock, Ark., municipal bond attorney.

Names of the prospective nominees for the court's two vacancies were reported earlier Wednesday by the Dow Jones News Service.

The White House then confirmed that names had been sent to the American Bar Association but would not identify the possible nominees for the vacancies created by the retirements of the late Justice Hugo Black and of Justice John Harlan.

Nixon said Tuesday he will make both appointments next week.

HOMECOMING MOVIE

"The Reivers"

Fri. Oct. 15

S. U. Ballroom

4, 6:30, 9, 11

50c

Sponsored by Newman Club

Student Activities Day

Thursday, October 21, 1971

9 a.m. - 4 p.m.

Campus Center Concourse Level

This Week

Sweet Chazity's

Presents from Puerto Rico the GUAMANI BAND

8 Fantastic Pieces of Santana Genius

Dig the best heavy sounds with your Dungarees on!

No door charge during Week

1270 Memorial Ave. Across from Big E

Sigma Alpha Mu presents

The Fantastic

"James Montgomery Blues Band"

Plus - Back from Winter Carni

Featherbed

Friday, Oct. 15

C. C. Auditorium

8:30 - 12:30

$2.00

1 Show Only - Don't Miss It!!

Showdown Looms For Procurement Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the face of strong antiwar lobbying pressure, House opponents of a six-month congressional deadline on U.S. military involvement in Indochina were undecided Wednesday whether to risk a showdown vote next week.

Republican Whip Leslie C. Arends of Illinois said he will decive over the weekend whether to clear the way for a House vote on the Senate's specific six-month deadline.

House Armed Services chairman F. Edward Hebert, (D-La.), announced the House action on a $21-billion weapons procurement bill containing the war halt amendment will come next Tuesday.

Asked if he thinkgs the House would again reject a date-certain war halt as it always has before, Hebert replied, "I don't know" but indicated he believed it would.

The question Tuesday will be on sending the bill to a House-Senate compromise conference. Republicans control the one motion on whether to instruct conferees to accept the six-month war date or instruct them on a different subject entirely.

Arends told reporters he is not worried that the House would accept the six-month date and said he probably will let Rep. Charles W. Whalen, Jr., (R-Ohio) make that motion.

But Arends said that is no commitment and he would decide over the weekend whether to give the motion to Whalen or to someone interested in some different feature of the $21-billion bill.

The House already has accepted one compromise amendment urging a negotiated war halt even though it set no date, Arends said, and indicated he might decide that some other feature of the bill is more important and deserving of the House vote.

The House has rejected by ever-narrower margins attempts to impose specific deadlines for U.S. war withdrawal, 219 to 176 on the Senate's nine-month deadline last spring.

Antiwar forces led by Common Cause, a self-described national citizens lobby, are working hard to swing the 23 votes needed to reverse this action.

Rep. Hastings Keith, (R-Mass.), said he has received 50 telegrams and 25 letters in the past week urging him to switch his vote-but said he will continue to support leaving the U.S. war withdrawal date to President Nixon, not Congress.

Rep. Otis G. Pike (D-N.Y.), said Common Cause has telephoned constituents to deluge him with letters and telegrams to switch his vote, and declined to say he won't.

"That election South Vietnam President Nguyen Van Thieu's one-man reelection was a real travesty of everything we've said we were fighting for over there," Pike said. "I'm thinking about it. But I won't say how I'm going to vote."

GOP Unhappy With Revenue Plan

(AP)—Republicans are inviting alternatives to President Nixon's revenue-sharing plan, now locked in committee, thus keeping alive the possibility of some help this year for hard-pressed local governments.

A request for immediate action by the House Ways and Means Committee on the proposal to earmark part of federal tax receipts for states and localities was made and rejected last week in a stiffly polite exchange of correspondence between Nixon and Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, (D-Ark).

Nixon mentioned no alternatives in his letter to Mills.

But two Republican members of the committee reopened the subject in House speeches, expanded in the Congressional Record distributed Wednesday.

"The administration has not taken an inflexible attitude about possible alternatives, understanding that the need for action overrides questions of formula desirability," Rep. Barber B. Conable Jr. of New York said.

"We have reason to believe the staff of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation has worked out an alternative to the administration's formula which would eliminate the major objections..." Conable said.

Mills, in his letter to Nixon, again rejected general revenue sharing but indicated he is considering other ways of helping local governments, especially below the state level. He said, however, considerable time would be required to work out legislation, indicating no action before 1972.

Any speedup in that time-table, it appeared, would depend on how long Congress remains in session and how much time the Committee spends in hearings on national health insurance, scheduled to begin Oct. 19.

Rep. Jackson E. Betts of Ohio, the second-ranking Republican member of the committee, generally backed Conable, saying it would take very little time to complete action.

Mills laid down these specifications for possible aid to local governments:

—Grants should be for definite sums, not a proportion of federal collections, and should be limited in time, providing for congressional review.

—Distribution should be on the basis of need of the local unit.

—Federally financed local expenditures should be for "recognized ... national high priority needs."

Rather than make direct grants to states, as distinguished from local governments, the federal government should "encourage them to help themselves by increasing their tax effort."

C'est Terrible

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I'm sick to death of women wearing pants in place of a dress," declared Mr. Blackwell as the better-dress designers opened their part of California fashion week Wednesday with a blatantly romantic collection.

The midi is out; so is the mini.

What's in is unflinchingly old-fashioned-simple box-pleated skirts hitting just above the knee or ruffled Victorian gowns sweeping down to the floor.

"I'm ignoring women's lib," Blackwell said. "I've never been a friend of intentional losers."

He displayed swirling chiffon gowns appropriate for garden parties; clinging floral jerseys topped by deeply fringed shawls and one slinky black gown with a sequined daisy climbing up the front which he called a "nasty sexy look."

A standout was a black-and-white print, ending elegantly in a ruffled flounce hem.

Blackwell, the curly-haired enfant terrible of California fashion, repeatedly said, "A woman wants to look pretty for her guy ... let women wear skirts ... pants are out except for leisure."

Michael Calderon, designer for S. Howard Hirsch, whipped up almost all floor-length dresses, the fluffiest collection yet. Victorian voile and organza frocks were trimmed in velvet ribbons, lace, satin and appliqued daisies.

Calderon said he doesn't intend these for street or office wear-"Can you imagine what would happen getting in elevators and escalators?"

The only man to give the liberated career lady a nod was Jim Church, designer for California Girl. He's even come up with "sensible" lengths, hoping to lure women back to skirts.

"My customer doesn't want the long look," he said. "She feels it's dowdy ... wear it above the knee or at the ankle, nothing in between."

Hemlines on Church's blazer-skirt costume and simple "little dresses" hit about an inch above the knee.

Even Blackwell agreed that no one length is "in" this season.

"Lengths will be according to the dress," he said. Multiple choice is the name of the game with each lady marking the answer to her own fashion question.

— SUNGLASSES —

Bausch & Lomb
American Optical
Sunvogues
Ray-Ban

Always Available at

don call

Amherst's First Optician

56 Main St. Tel. 253-7002 Amherst

Spectrum

The general interest magazine of University of Massachusetts

We are now accepting Contributions for the fall 1971 issue.

All contributions of fiction, non-fiction, poetry, art, and photography can be left at the spectum office or mailed to:

Spectrum
RSO No. 102
Campus Ctr.
U Mass.

all contributions should be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope

INTERESTED IN THE STUDY OF LAW?

A representative of the Washington University School of Law (St. Louis) will be on campus Oct. 18, 1971 from 1:00 - 5:00 p.m. to talk to students planning to enter law school upon graduation, or thinking about it.

Make appointments at the Career Planning and Placement Office, 239 Whitmore.

Bell's Pizza:

Definitely Pleasing and the Price is Right.

Open
11 to 2 a.m. Fri. & Sat.
1 a.m. Sun. to Thurs.

Free Delivery
Tel: 256-8011 - 253-9051

DEERFIELD Drive-In Theatre

route 5 & 10
South Deerfield, Mass.
Tel. 665-8746

FRI. SAT. SUN.

SOUL TO SOUL

Also:

ZACHARIAH

Showtime 7:30

Sun: Soul to Soul at 7:30

Campus Cinemas 256-6411

in the Zayre's Snopping Center on Route 9-Amherst- Hadley Line

MON. NIGHT! LADIES $1.00

Added Attraction! The Charles Pierce Revue

Campus II 7:00 9:00

meat/rack

"Explicit in the extreme!" -NY VILLAGE PRESS

Rated X

Woody Allen's

Bananas

&

George Segal in

Where's Papa?

In everyone's life there's a SUMMER OF 42

Campus III 7 & 9

SOVIET JEWRY PROTEST MARCH

10:30 a.m. SUNDAY, OCTOBER 17 at the SPRINGFIELD JEWISH CENTER
(a car pool will meet outside of Bowker Aud. by lot #6, 9:30 a.m. Call Hillel 545-2526 if you need or have a car to go.)
THURSDAY, OCTOBER 14, at 7:00 p.m. - a meeting at Hillel - 420 SU on the rally and on forming a branch of the Student Struggle for Soviet Jewry at the U. of M. Come!

Kennedy Children Complain Of Harassment By Photographer

NEW YORK (AP) — The children of the late President John F. Kennedy have said in court affidavits that a freelance photographer has harassed and frightened them and even trailed them to Greece to chase them on land and sea.

Their mother, Jacqueline Onassis, seeks an injunction against the photographer, whose pictures have appeared widely in magazines and newspapers.

John F. Kennedy, Jr., 11, said in one affidavit that the photographer, Ronald Galella, who usually operates around Central Park and the family's Manhattan apartment, once showed up when young John was operating a speedboat in a bay off the Greek island of Scorpios, where his stepfather, Aristotle Onassis, has one of his many homes.

"Unexpectedly a fishing boat ran directly across my path," John said in his affidavit. "I had to swerve and almost capsize in order to avoid a collision." He said Galella was snapping photographs from the fishing boat.

His sister Caroline, now 14, told of going to Central Park with her mother to take a tennis lesson.

"At the tennis court," she said, "Mr. Galella began jumping around men, blocked my path, made embarrassing remarks and pushed a camera in front of my face."

John, Jr., also said Galella followed them to New Jersey, where Caroline was appearing in a horse show.

After Caroline finished a jumping event, John said, he went out to the track, met her and was leading her horse when "Galella suddenly jumped from behind a tree and startled the horse."

He said it was several minutes before "we could regain control of the horse."

Caroline said in her affidavit that, "unfortunately I am one of his favorite targets, and as such, have been subjected to numerous unpleasant and often dangerous incidents with him...

"Mr. Galella often rushes at me," she continued, "snaps flashbulbs in my face and trails me closely ... I do not feel safe when he is near."

Judge Irving Ben Cooper of U.S. District Court reserved decision on Mrs. Onassis's application for an injunction Wednesday and continued a temporary restraining order prohibiting Galella from harassing the children.

The photographer, in turn, is seeking $1.3 million in damages, charging that Secret Servicemen are immune from the suit.

The government has joined Mrs. Onassis in seeking the injunction and Asst. U.S. Atty. Michael D. Hess told the judge: "We don't want Galella to stop taking photographs, but not from six inches away."

Dining Common Hours

Because of the limited number of students eating from 2:00-4:00 P.M. in all dining halls, it is difficult for the Food Service Department to maintain quality products throughout the serving period. The fact that a maximum 400 students do eat during these hours, indicates that continuous service SHOULD NOT BE DISCONTINUED. Consequently an adjustment in service to suit both students and production needs is required.

The following MENU and LOCATION adjustments will go into effect on MONDAY OCTOBER 18, 1971, in the hopes of better filling the true needs of the campus for continuous food service.

MENU: 2:00 P.M. - 4:00 P.M. in Franklin and Berkshire Commons ONLY. A soup and sandwich lunch will be offered, a selection of salads and desserts will also be available.

LOCATION AND HOURS OF OPERATION - EFFECTIVE MONDAY OCTOBER 18, 1971

I. WORCESTER COMMONS & HAMPSHIRE COMMONS
BREAKFAST - 6:30 A.M. - 10:30 A.M.
LUNCH - 10:30 A.M. - 2:00 P.M.
DINNER - 4:00 P.M. - 6:30 P.M.
CLOSED FROM 2:00 P.M. 4:00 P.M.

II. WORCESTER BASIC FOODS - CONTINUOUS SERVICE
LUNCH - 10:30 A.M. - 4:00 P.M.
DINNER - 4:00 P.M. - 6:30 P.M.

III. FRANKLIN COMMONS & BERKSHIRE COMMONS
LUNCH - 10:30 A.M. - 2:00 P.M.
SANDWICH LUNCH - 2:00 P.M. - 4:00 P.M.
DINNER - 4:00 P.M. - 7:00 P.M.

IV. HAMPDEN BASIC FOODS - CONTINUOUS SERVICE
LUNCH - 10:30 A.M. - 4:00 P.M.
DINNER - 4:00 P.M. - 7:00 P.M.

Please note - CLOSING of Hampshire Commons and Worcester Regular Menu between the hours of 2:00 P.M. - 4:00 P.M.

Dr. Sailor To Lecture At Hampshire

Hampshire College will present the fourth lecture in the Science and Public Policy Series at 8 p.m., tonight in the east lecture hall of the Academic Building. Dr. Vance Sailor will speak on "The Energy Supply and Public Power."

Dr. Sailor has been at Brookhaven National Laboratory since 1949, and is now a senior physicist there. His work has been in neutron and reactive physics, charged particle reactions, and low temperature physics.

Register To Vote
Campus Center
Concourse
TODAY

FACES OF EARTH
151 NORTH PLEASANT STREET, AMHERST
Next To The Post Office
OPEN 10 A.M. TO 10 P.M. MONDAY THRU SATURDAY
New & Used
Winter Coats

PARIS HELSINKI MOSCOW MONACO BRUSSELS BELGRADEGENEVA BUCHAREST
LONDON ROME MADRID LISBON VATICAN CITY
OSLO DUBLIN MONROVIA EDINBURGH ATHENS
Lowest Air Fares Ever
EUROPE: Dec. 17-Jan. 2 $180 Boston-London-Boston
Other dates also available on request
YOUTH FARE: a complete booklet specially prepared for you to put it all together
SKI: Special ski package to Austria for $325
NASSAU: Thanksgiving & Christmas flights from $169. Departures from Boston and New York. Stay at the luxurious Montagu Beach Hotel. With private beach & first class rooms.
*Open only to students, faculty & staff of 5 Colleges & immed. family
For More Information Call: STEVE GERMAIN 253-3359 or return this Coupon to:
American Student Travel Assoc.
27 Mass Ave., Suite 3
Boston, Mass. 02115
tel: 617 536-511
Name:
Address
Zip
School: Birthdate:
Please send me more information on:
.....Europe .....Youth Fare .....Ski .....Nassau
.....Car Plan .....Rail Passes .....InterEuropean Flights*
*complete schedule already available for you to choose from SAN MARINO WARSAW PRAGUE LUXEMBOURG COPENHAGEN OUGABOUGOU

Happy Nite
Every Thursday
on the bandstand
THE SABER MEN
(Rock Band)
The most exciting entertainment of Handsome Musician.
Quonset Restaurant
Hadley, Rt. 9
From TP 91 - Exit 19

Judgeships Available for Student Judiciaries
Applications Available: Rooms 109 & 111, Campus Center
Applications Due: Noon, Oct. 18
Selections: (by appointment) Tues. Evening, Oct. 19

HOMECOMING 1971

Friday, October 15

FLOAT PARADE & UNICEF DRIVE - Starts at 7:00 p.m. at the Haigis Mall
Sponsored by the Greeks.

CONCERT - James Montgomery Blues Band" & "Featherbed" 8:30 p.m.,
8:30 p.m., Campus Center Auditorium. Admission: $2.00.
Sponsored by SAM.

MOVIE - "The Reivers" 4:00, 6:00, 9:00, 11:00 p.m.,
Student Union Ballroom! Members Free. Non-members, 50¢
Sponsored by the Newman Club.

Saturday, October 16

CONCERT - "Beacon Street Union" and "Rush" 8:00 p.m.,
Student Union Ballroom. Admission: $1.25
Sponsored by Butterfield House

MOVIE - "Yellow Submarine" 6:00, 8:00, 10:00 p.m., Mahar Auditorium.
Admission: 75¢.
Sponsored by SAM

NIGHTCLUB - "Fusion", East Jesus," "Ronnie Gamache", and
"Shep and Janet" 8:00 p.m., Campus Center Auditorium.
Admission: 25¢
Sponsored by Program Council.

Sunday, October 17

MOVIE - Fellini's "Satyricon" 7:00 and 9:30 p.m.,
Student Union Ballroom. Admission: 50¢
Sponsored by Program Council.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF — Richard C. Hanson
MANAGING EDITOR — David D. Williams
BUSINESS MANAGER — James Gold
EXECUTIVE EDITOR — Barry J. Rubenstein
NEWS EDITOR — Anne C. Stadnicki
SPORTS EDITOR — Earle T. Barroll

PHOTO EDITOR — Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR — Robert Nesti

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR — David Williams
NEWS STAFF — Ethel Harris, Steve Fine
SPORTS — Earle Barroll
EDITORIAL — Ann Gurnett
DARKROOM — Gib Fullerton, Barbara Brecher, Bruce McConnell
AD LAYOUT — Jim Gold

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administration read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.
Unsigned editorials represent the views of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, and letters represent the personal views of the writers.

Get Out To The Polls

"If people under 21 were meant to have the vote, they would have been born younger."

That is the kind of catchy slogan that most of the "get-out-the-vote" people have been spouting to emphasize their concern for young people to register to vote. They are trying to "mobilize" the student vote for the purposes of good and justice. Not that they have any patent on truth and justice, but they figure a large student voting population could more or less change the world.

The thrust of the recent voting registration drives has revolved around non-partisan rallying of the democratic spirit in a generation of students who have seen the democratic process of this nation made sham and bufoonery by Presidents on down.

Everybody who still bothers reading newspapers for Vietnam news knows that we are still engaged in bloody war, sponsoring undemocratic governments through illegal means. No senator but Senator Fred Harris, populist candidate for president, has come out against slick, racist Senator Byrd in that "bum" Nixon's intention to seat him on the Supreme Court. That's the kind of elected officials we have. Congress has thus far refused to act on War, even though the people who elected them say the U.S. shouldn't be there.

Boston After Dark (BAD) had a story last week about how Amherst was going to be the place where students are taking over. BAD tells its readers that the students in Amherst are really getting excited about taking over the town.

Of course all the students know that there are very few people who want to take over the town, or the state, or the Federal government. Most students seem to be taking the whole voter registration drive with resigned neglect. There aren't any exciting candidates, save Fred Harris, who is out to steal from the rich. Politics is more interesting to watch than participate in.

Don't register to vote unless you really want to. (If large enough numbers of students don't register, everyone will figure that youth is disenchanted and that will be a great political lever.)

But remember, you have to live in this country.

Previously Unfortified Border

One More Time, Folks

By M. GUY ROSS

Continued from 10/13/ Collegian

The motion and the procedures established by it are very good and in fact, essential if we are to insure Campus Autonomy and if we are to insure that the Chancellor, whoever he/she is, realize that he/she is a CAMPUS officer. If we look for a moment at the procedure used in the federal government for the selection of a Cabinet Member (as well as other officials) this might become more clear. The President, when he wishes to fill a vacancy in his cabinet establishes his own search committee from within the executive office in a manner which is designed by and for the Executive branch and not The Legislative branch, which retains the power of veto. This search committee may recommend one or many candidates to the President, but he finally makes only one nomination to the legislative branch which then either accepts or rejects the nomination. If they accept, all is well. If they reject the nominee, then the Executive repeats the nomination process until a candidate is accepted by the Legislative branch.

The rationale for the procedure is quite simple and after a long history, painfully clear. The cabinet officer is to work for the President and the Executive branch, and not for the Legislative branch. Hence he must be hired by and realize that he is working for the executive. At the same time, he must be acceptable to the Legislative branch, given their vested interest in his implementation of their legislation. The legislative retains the veto over the executive choice. I am sure it is not difficult to imagine how counterproductive it would be for this procedure to be altered in such a manner as to allow the legislative branch to participate in the search.

THURSDAY: Thursday was spent in Blantyre Castle, Lenox, Mass. It disturbs me a great deal that I did not bring a videotape unit to Blantyre. I find it impossible to express in words the setting which the Board of Trustees chose for their retreat and subsequent meetings. Allow me merely to state that the castle was CLASS in a way that I call musty. In fact, if it were not deemed CLASS we would call it rank.

THE BOARD was meeting in closed session when we arrived. They were deciding behind closed doors what they were going to pretend to decide at the "open meeting". Once the "open meeting" began, it was painfully obvious that we were there as spectators to what, in fact, was poor theatre. At that meeting the Board accepted Chancellor Tippo's resignation immediately and named Bromery as Acting Chancellor. Of course the representatives of the Faculty Senate Committee of Concern were allowed to present their motions, but that was merely an aside in a well written script. The one reoccuring line in the script was Chairman Healy saying: "All in favor say aye; Allopposedsaynayit'savote." After this "open meeting" there was an hour long half-hour recess and then a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Board at which each of the three senates were allowed one representative. (It must have been an unusual feeling to sit across the table from the representatives of all three senates and find those representatives argued for and listened to arguments against the joint resolution which established an all campus search committee. The faculty member argued that the motion was in keeping with the Board's own policy for the selection of a "Major Administrative officer" and from the reports I later received (I was not in that closed session) the Board argued that the position of Chancellor was not included in this category. I'm still not sure if the chancellor is not major, administrative, or an officer, or none of the above.

The Board also argued against student representation on the committee because of the "transient nature of students" ie: that the student member might leave the University soon after, if not before, the selection was completed). Almost simultaneously they argued for Alumni representation on the committee. The inherent paradox, if not irony, of these two positions was evidently lost to these mental giants who sit up there above the hoopla. The feelings and attitude of the Board at that point are best summed up by Trustee Pumphrett (also of the UMass Building Authority...the people who brought you Southwest, Sylvan, etc.) who stated "This is the most ridiculous proposal I've ever heard."

Evidently the Board was insulted by the attempt of the Amherst Campus to select its own chancellor. One analogy which comes to mind is that of a rapist finding a scream of pain from the victim insulting. One member of the Board in an attempt at rationality tried to present a trial motion to see if it would be acceptable to all parties concerned. He was promptly stopped by Chairman Healy and several other members of that August body as out of order. When he offered to merely voice his opinion as a proposal, he was again deemed out of order and the meeting was immediately moved into (closed, of course) Executive session and the senate representatives curtly dismissed. Evidently the Democratic Process works smoothly only behind closed doors.

As we left Blantyre Castle the Executive committee was behind closed doors coming to "unanimous decisions" and there were a few things which were painfully clear. The Board was not pleased at all with the initiative taken by the Amherst Campus (evidently we expected were to 'lay back and enjoy it"); the Board would not accept an all campus search committee, (their own policy and the model of the federal government not withstanding,) nor would stand for the nomination of just one candidate by the search committee.

But there was also the feeling in one stoned car that there was a slim possibility of holding our own if AND ONLY IF we could maintain our new-found solidarity. If the Board's procedure differed from our own, and we were sure it would, our scenario called for the following:

1) all senates refusing to recognize the "Board's" committee;

2) all senates directing their presidents to refuse to appoint any delegates to the "Board's" committee;

3) all senates calling for a campus wide referendum on the two motions, that of the senates, and that of the Trustees;

4) preceeding a referendum, an invitation by all senates for chairman Healey, and president Wood to be present at an open hearing of the campus to explain their proposal to the campus.

5) Should the Board refuse to recognize the results of such a referendum, all senates were to state that they refuse to recognize the person chosen by such an altered committee as the legitimate Chancellor; and

6) Should a chancellor be named in such a manner, all members of all senates would resign their positions in those senates.

* * * *

It was one hell of a scenario...The funny thing is, it would work if we could all agree to do it; but of course we can't or won't do that. Such an action would call for a solidarity of the Amherst Campus far beyond our capabilities, and it was merely a matter of time before our petty differences began to eat away at the foundation of action.

FRIDAY: Early in the morning Board of Trustee members found copies of the Collegian on the way to the meeting scheduled for 9:30 a.m. and at which they were to be informed of the vote for the Executive Committee decision. I've been told that they were very upset to read about their decision before they "made one". A SCOOP FOR THE COLLEGIAN! Nevertheless, the Board proceeded to pass a motion which would create a committee composed of 2 graduate students, 6 undergraduates, 6 faculty, 1 delegate from the Dean's Council, 1 Alumni, and 2 Trustees. The committee would be forced to present to the full board of Trustees 5 nominations so that the Board could choose between "Willy Smith and Charlie Jones". That same morning we also began to receive reports (down in our Bunker) that Faculty Senators were receiving phone calls pointing out that the students had more representation on the committee than the faculty. And the crack in the unity, and the petty bickering begins. First it starts to look as if should there be another round of negotiation, the faculty will ask for fewer students on the committee and the idea of loss of student representation makes the students less anxious to press for rejection of the Board's committee, and Wood cries all the way to the bank.

One thing is clear...the student senates have failed to establish any real power on the Amherst campus. We have failed because

1) we have separated ourselves from our only base of power, those students we represent. This has occured because we have allowed ourselves to become sucked into the game of "POWER BROKERAGE" and have not included the student body in the information, the process, or the decisions. (And have complained the entire time of student apathy.)

2) We have been timid about exercising the only power (as little as it is) that we do have, and that is the fact that the administration has a real and vested interest in our (the senates) being the legitimate representative governing bodies. We are needed (or at least the administration believes we are needed) to legitimatize (by our token representation in the decision-making process) their decisions to the "masses" of students. It is also clear to me that the only way for the student senates to establish any power at all is to: a) insist on full disclosure of all information that is used in making our decisions; b) include the entire student body in the decision-making process whenever possible (through referendums when appropriate) and finally c) to refuse to participate in committees that have no real authority or in which the student representation is not meaningful.

m. guy ross, Graduate Student Senate
Student Affairs Committee

Letters To The Editor

A More Meaningful Registration

To the Editor

Yesterday the Town of Amherst came to the Campus Center to facilitate the registration of each student wishing to register to vote in the Town of Amherst. This event, if such it was, was the product of the work of many people throughout the state.

Attorney General Robert Quinn rendered the final stroke to open the doors of the electoral process to every student. His ruling permits every student to register where he attends school. This means that a student (like every other person) can:

1. Participate actively in a campaign for local or national office where he votes;
2. Run for office in that place where he spends the majority of his time each year;
3. Vote together with others in the same general circumstances as he finds himself, economically and geographically, if not philosophically; and
4. Participate in the operating government of the place where he lives.

Those are some of the reasons why some people feel students should vote in Amherst. Of course, if many students register in Amherst, the town will certainly be a focus of national attention in the future for obvious reasons.

On the other hand, many people persuasively argue that students should distribute their voting across the Commonwealth and across the nation in order to increase the impact of student voting. Those who share this philosophy say that students should vote where they go to at Christmastime.

While I hold the first argument more persuasive than the second, that's very much a personal view of my own.

Each student has the opportunity to very seriously consider the question of where he can vote most honestly and effectively. What has been provided for each student is the chance to exercise a choice. It would be very unfair to so many people to view this opportunity apathetically. Their work merits your serious consideration and the exercise of a sincere decision. You can guage the impact of the decision you make by observing the attention that is generated around the registration session.

Whether you register in Amherst or not, I hope that last evening you will have made a decision that has some thought behind it.

Richard M. Howland

Why The Coalition?

To the Editor:

"We see the month of November as being directed towards prisons and prisoners' demands. We see ourselves as a working unit and this unit as a continuing one." (quote from article on coalition)

We were invited to the University to help run a workshop on Crime and Delinquency for National Moratorium Day. There has been a great deal of concern as was shown by the volunteers that have been coming to Westfield Detention Center from the R.S.O.J.O.E. and Larry Dyes Crime and Delinquency class. We looked forward to meeting many more students who wanted to inform themselves of our lives at the detention center and to exchange ideas on what they can do to make some changes in the prison system.

Our great disappointment was that no one showed up. It seems to us that it is the same few volunteers who are concerned enough to carry through on their commitments. Aren't there any other concerned students at UMass?

Kids from Westfield Center

Sam I Am

To the Editor:

Every time I approach the front entrance of Goodell Library, I am overcome by a feeling of disgust. There, staring me in the face, are the initials EAM, painted in bold yellow letters on the pavement.

Last spring, I was informed that the pledges had intended this act (and others elsewhere on campus) to be merely a "practical joke", and the painting would wear off shortly. But here it is, well into the next semester, and those glorious letters remain- as a constant reminder that EAM is still alive.

In as much as I consider this defacement of University property an eyesore, I think its time for the members of EAM to show a little bit of "community interest" and remove their initials from the front of Goodell, as well as other similarly defaced locations on campus.

Howard A. Berger

Register
To Vote

Concourse
Level
Campus Center

PointBlank

Bordering What?

By STEPHEN GILLERS

Your plane lands at New York's Kennedy Airport. You're home after nine weeks of hitchhiking and camping out all over Europe. You suffer culture shock as you trudge, with your sleeping bag and knapsack toward customs. The two well-dressed couples ahead of you move quickly. The inspector barely blinks at their many pieces of costly luggage. Then he reaches you.

"Okay," he says, "empty the knapsack and undo the sleeping bag." You're dazed, tired, bewildered. You're also insulted. Why did he pick on you? But mechanically you follow his instructions until you are stopped short by his next order.

"Now, go into that room over there and take off all your clothes."

Can he do that?

The answer depends on the Fourth Amendment to the United States Constitution. Usually, that Amendment forbids searches unless "probable cause" is present. This means that for most searches -- including wiretaps and electronic eavesdrops -- a police officer must first have proof that he will probably find something illegal. Suspicion is not enough. But neither is certainty required. The balance tips in favor of the state and the search if the officer has enough facts to make it probable that he will find something.

But the Fourth Amendment works differently when a person enters this country. Indeed, for a long time courts assumed that the Fourth Amendment simply did not apply at all in these situations; that customs officers in order to catch smugglers, needed power to search as thoroughly as they wished unhandcuffed by the Fourth Amendment. Recently however, some courts have placed restrictions on this power, at least where the search involves a person's body or body cavities. Three cases one of which is now before the Supremen Court, illustrate this trend.

In 1961, in Witt v. United States, a federal appealate court in California said it was legal for customs officers to require a female traveller to disrobe even though they had no cause to believe she was breaking the law. A search of an entering traveller was legal, said the court, "by reason of such entry alone."

By 1967, the same court developed greater sensitivity. In Henderson v United States, a female traveller was forced, under protest, to let a doctor examine her vaginal area. She claimed the search was illegal. The court reaffirmed its belief that merely by crossing the border one subjects himself to a search of his baggage, purse, pockets and wallet. But a body cavity was a different story. Said the court:

> "... if in the course of the search of a woman there is to be a requirement that she manually open her vagina for visual inspection to see if she has something concealed there, we think that we should require something more than mere suspicion. Surely, to require such a performance is a serious invasion of personal privacy and dignity...."

The court said that before such an invasion could occur, there has to be a "clear indication" that something would be found. The court did not say exactly what this meant.

Hopefully, this year the Supreme Court will tell us just how free customs officers are to search the baggage, the clothing and the body cavities of travellers. In a case called United States v. Johnson, a customs inspector became suspicious of two young women crossing from Mexico to California. He had a female inspector conduct a strip search and she found heroin hidden in the panties of one of the women.

The same federal appellate court that decided Witt and Henderson said the search was illegal. In order to justify a strip search, said the court even if it does not involve inspecting the person's body cavities, the customs officer had to have a "subjective suspicion supported by objective, articulable facts." Suspicion without facts was not enough.

Even if the Burger Court upholds the lower court's ruling, a traveller's personal privacy will mean little at the border. A customs officer may still be able to satisfy the requirement of "objective, articulable facts" simply by saying that the traveller acted strange, that he seemed to be hiding something.

Unless the Supreme Court really surprises us, the only practical advice is clear: Stay away from borders if you're carrying anything you wouldn't want to be found with -- no matter how well you think it's concealed. Customs inspectors are not shy about looking just about any place.

Ziff Plans New Journalism, Journalistic Studies Program

A new undergraduate journalism curriculum is being planned at UMass.

Designed to meet the needs of students planning careers in professional journalism, the curriculum is also intended for students who might find courses in journalism to be "a way of focusing and utilizing other liberal arts training".

Planning the new curriculum is Howard M. Ziff, associate professor of English. He has been appointed by Dr. Jospeh Frank, head of the Department of English, to serve as director of Journalism and Journalistic Studies.

Ziff has announced plans calling for a nucleus of three kinds of courses.

"First, there are the basic courses in the professional skills and disciplines of the journalist. These can be utilized by a student interested in broadcast journalism, magazine journalism, and such other careers as business and law, as well as newspapering.

"Second, there are those courses which direct themselves to journalism's role in the whole area of mass communications and popular culture. An introduction to research into journalism would also be included," he said.

The third type of course Ziff has listed is "the advanced practices courses in specific journalistic skills, both written and graphic that should be taught against the background of the first and second types listed."

Ziff came to the University this Fall after three years with the journalism department of the University of Illinois at Urbana Champaign.

A native of Holyoke, he is a graduate of Mt. Hermon School and Amherst College. He spent two years on the staff of Pacific Stars and Stripes in Japan and Korea, three years with the City News Bureau of Chicago, and almost 10 years with the Chicago Daily News.

Ziff has also taught for two summers at the Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism.

WMUA

TONIGHT ON 91.1 FM:

7:00 p.m. NEWS - 30 minutes. World, Regional, and Local. Area news is stressed.

7:30 p.m. WARPATH - a half hour sports program with Marty Kelley and Kent Best. Tonight's guests: Coach Bill Maxwell and wide receivers Bob Cabrelli and Steve Schubert.

8:00 p.m. - 9:00 p.m. CYCLEBREAKER - this unique program takes a penetrating look at all kinds of happenings. Tonight: highlights of Josh McDowell address "Sex and the Single Person"; an interview with Frank Zappa will be featured.

9:00 p.m. - 11:00 p.m. MARC'S BLUES - Mark Dashevsky features many blues artists - some who are well known and many who should be.

11:00 p.m. NEWS - one half hour, features original reporting of area news by the WMUA News staff.

11:30 p.m. - 3:00 a.m. RICK MORTON blasts into action with progressive rock

School of Business To Sponsor Exceutive Marketing Seminars

A series of one-day Executive Marketing Seminars by the UMass School of Business Administration will begin Nov. 17.

The eight seminars are designed to update managers on tested and new methods for improving sales and profits and also for chief marketing executives, sales, advertising, product, and market managers, market researchers, analysts and planners, general managers and others.

The first seminar will be led by Dean Wendell Smith of the School of Business Administration and Jack Wolf, head of the marketing department.

The seminars will be Wednesdays from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. at the Campus Center. The dates are Nov. 17, Dec. 15, Jan. 19, Feb. 9, March 8, April 12, May 10 and June 7.

The cost for participants is $40 for each seminar or $240 for all eight.

Further information is available from Victor P. Buell, director of the management development program, UMass School of Business Administration.

BUY DIRECT AND SAVE!!

Why run all over town looking for pants, corduroys, or blue jeans when we have the areas largest and most complete selections - all at the lowest prices around. And we're just up the street...

the closest thing to you is

WEARHOUSE (wear-else?) Open Fri. till 9

When our mechanic is finished working on that Volkswagen, he'll work on your Volkswagen. And when he's finished working on your Volkswagen, he'll work on another Volkswagen.

Not much variety, but he sure knows Volkswagens

Free Shuttlebus for Amherst service customers. Call for information.

Authorized VW Dealer

NORTHAMPTON VOLKSWAGEN, Inc.

246 KING ST (RTE. 5) NORTHAMPTON
NORTHAMPTON
584-8620

OPEN EVES 'TIL 9

All College Students - Particularly Five College Area

SKY-DIVE

U. Mass. Sport Parachute Club Recruitment Meeting

Thurs. Oct. 14 C. C. 174-176 7:45 p.m. Movie - Info

Help Choose the Next Campus Wizard!

6 Undergraduates Needed for the CHANCELLOR SELECTION COMMITTEE

Meet academic superstars . . . .
Shake hands with trustees . . . .
Play real life power games!

Apply Student Senate Office, 1st. level, C. C.

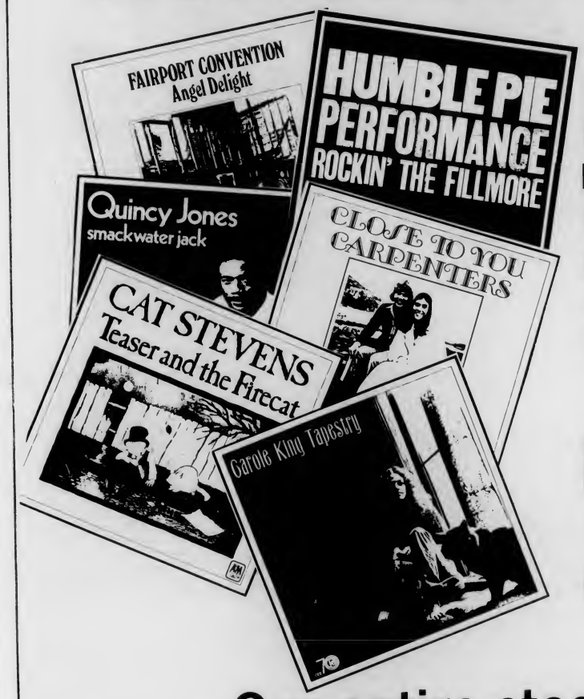
(See Larry Ladd)

Dames To Meet Next Week

The UMass Dames Club for wives of students at the University will hold a Wine-Tasting Party on Wednesday evening, October 20th, at 8 P.M. The party will be held at the Farley 4-H Lodge located behind the Southwest Residential Complex.

The party will be sponsored by the Four Seasons Liquor Store in Hadley and the wine will be supplied through the courtesy of Alamaden Wines. A fee of 75¢ will be charged to non-members and all wives and husbands are welcome.

Dames Club is open to all student wives and wives of students, both graduate and undergraduate. Dames holds a monthly meeting and activity and those planned for the near future include an auction, a Christmas supper, a rummage sale, etc.



Anyone who is interested in joining and making lots of new friends may attend the Wine-Tasting Party. For further information, please contact Joan Armstrong at 549-1145.

THE DAMES

THE LISTENING POST'S HAVING A

HOMECOMING SALE

ALL FAIRPORT CONVENTION
HUMBLE PIE
QUINCY JONES
CARPENTERS CAT STEVENS
CAROLE KING RECORDS

D $5.98 LIST $3.39

8 TRACK & CASSETTE

G $6.98 LIST $4.49

Our entire stock of . . . .
Bluenote, Solid State, Pacific Jazz
Atlantic, ATCO, Cotillion
Warner and Reprise Records

C $4.98 LIST $2.99 D $5.98 LIST $3.88 E $6.98 LIST $4.47

THE LISTENING POST AUDIO CENTRE

25 So. Pleasant St., Amherst
Open Evenings till 9 p.m.

186 Main St., Northampton
Open Thursday till 9 p.m.

Draft Counselor's Corner

Don't Fall Into The Trap

By GILBERT J. SALK

I ran into a distressing problem today, and I'm writing this column in the hope that others of you will not fall into a similar trap.

If you ever receive a IA classification in the mail, appeal it within 25 days unless you are willing to be inducted or unless you have a high lottery number.

The case I had today was a student who received a IA during the summer, after completing his sophomore year. He knew that he would be returning to school in the fall, so he ignored the classification, assuming that he would get his IIS back. Last week, he received an induction order, and now has to do a lot of running around to try to get the order cancelled.

He's lucky, and will probably succeed, but he could have saved himself the trouble by writing to his board as soon as he got his IA and requested a new IIS. The lesson to all of you should be obvious.

The draft board will not go out of its way to keep you from being screwed. It won't tell you what the implications of a classification might mean. So don't trust them.

Their basic job, as they understand it, is to provide cannon fodder for Uncle Sam's diplomatic corps. Your job is to use every available resource to stay alive and to prevent them from placing you in a position where you might be forced to kill somebody.

This means that you should use a draft counselor whenever something happens between you and the SSS that you don't completely understand. When you receive an undesirable classification, you should be sure to appeal it within 30 days from the date they mailed it (not the date you received it.) You should keep copies of everything you get from your board, and of everything you send to your board. Whenever you send them anything, you should take your letter to the post office and tell them you want it sent Certified, Return Receipt Requested. It will cost you fifty cents, but the board will have to sign for the letter and the post office will send the receipt back to you. Staple it to your copy of the letter. This will provide proof that the board received the letter and when they received it.

Don't take the word of draft board clerks. They have no legal authority, often don't know the draft laws, and will sometimes promise you anything just to get you off their backs. The only decisions you should go by are those you receive in writing from the board. If you ever speak to a clerk or a board member, immediately write done, verbatim, the entire conversation and send it in to be included in your file.

One word of reassurance. The draft board must notify you of any change of classification. So if you have a II-S which expired in S E

One word of reassurance. The draft board must notify you of any change of classification. So if you have a II-S which expired in September, for example, don't panic just because you haven't received a new II-S yet. It takes the board some time to get around to reclassifying people sometimes. If you filled out the SSS card in your registration packet in Boyden, you should get your new II-S in the mail soon. You only have to worry if you get a I-A, or if the board does not have your most current mailing address--which brings us to the next major point.

You must be sure that your board has the proper mailing address for you--your campus address, for most of you. If they send you something and you don't get it because they sent it to the wrong address, it's your hassle, not theirs.

For your own sakes, folks, learn your rights and responsibilities, and exercise them. The life you save may really be your own. PEACE.

For free draft counseling, visit Draft Counseling Services in 923 Campus Center.

Room To Move
Drop-In Center
5-0400, 5-0401

Free Pregnancy Clinic Opening

A group of area clergymen has announced the organization of the Clergy Consultation Service of Western Massachusetts. The service offers counsel without fee to women faced with problem pregnancies. The clergy who serve as counselors on this service are listed each week on a tape recording which can be reached by dialing a Northampton telephone number: (413) 586-3478. The recorded message gives all necessary information for making an appointment with one of the counselors on duty.

The clergymen are part of a nation-wide network of Clergy Consultation Service groups which have provided this counsel for the past four years. The program was begun by the Reverend Howard Moody, of the Judson Memorial Church in New York City, and has now grown to include 2,000 clergy in 26 states, who last year counseled with an estimated 150,000 women. The groups have been instrumental in bringing about much-needed changes in the availability of abortion services at moderate cost.

Where Are You Going?

Slow down. Why fight the natural forces of the Universe? Science has proven that all living organisms (including man) have cycles that correspond to astral activity. Through Astrology, man has charted these cycles for thousands of years.

Today's modern technology has made detailed personal horoscopes easily available. What used to cost $100 or more, Uniscope now offers for only $10.

What kind of person are you? How do you relate to other people? Uniscope—in more than 15,000 words—answers these and other questions regarding everyday life.

To get to know where you are going, send for your own astral portrait today!

Uniscope Box H, Burlington, Massachusetts 01803

☐ I enclose $10 for my personal Astral Portrait
Please Print:
☐ M.
Address
City
State Zip

Massachusetts residents add applicable sales tax

Date of Birth Month Day Year
Place of Birth City State Country
Time of Birth AM PM (if unknown we will use 12 noon)

A Uniscope Astral Portrait is your life in 15,000 words We take care to bind it in book form—over 40 pages stapled into an attractive folder © 1971 Uniscope

We guarantee all Astral Portraits. If you are not satisfied with your horoscope and 12 month forecast, send back the report and we will refund your $10

AUTO INSURANCE

ALL CARS — ALL DRIVERS
BUDGET PAYMENTS
CYCLES — SCOOTERS

Tekoa Insurance Agency
160 Pleasant St. Northampton 586-2742
10 Broad St. Westfield 562-3604

11 million ballots is enough power to change the course of history. Or not change it.

And that's too much power to just throw away.

REGISTER TO VOTE

Thurs., Oct. 14, 1 - 9 p.m. C C Concourse

Notices

APPLE CORPS:
Mirkwood-Orchard Hill Coffee House to be held Saturday night at 8 p.m. in Grayson Lounge.

BRIDGE CLUB:
There will be a bridge party tonight at 7 p.m. in the Essex Room of the Student Union. Please note change of location.

COMMITTEE ON POVERTY:
Thurs., Oct. 14, 7 p.m., Suffolk Rm., S.U. Meeting with representative from local welfare rights--open to all interested.

FENCING CLUB:
Practice tonight, Women's Phys. Ed. building, 7-10 p.m. in the Fencing room.

FRESHMEN BASKETBALL CANDIDATES:
Melting Thurs. at 4 p.m. in Rm. 17 Boyden Building.

LECTURE:
"The Chemistry and Biosynthesis of Elastin and Collagen Crosslinks" by Dr. Carl Franzblau (Boston U., School of Medicine) at 4:30 p.m. Thursday in Rm. 51 Goessmann Lab. Coffee will be served at 4:15 p.m.

MASS MEDIA AND RACISM:
If you are in any way interested in racism in mass media, come to a meeting on Friday at 3:30 p.m. in the Media Center (downstairs in the School of Ed). If you cannot attend, contact Chris Allshouse-leave a message in her mailbox in lounge or call 549-6250.

YOUNG SOCIALIST ALLIANCE MILITANT FORUM:
"Meet the YSA" Speaker John E. Powers, former mayoral candidate of Boston tonight at 8 o'clock in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union.

MUSICALS:
Sunday rehearsal at 3 p.m. in Lewis.

PARACHUTE CLUB:
Jump--If you're a college student you're entitled to a substantial savings--an orientational meeting--we'll answer any questions--Tonight, 7:45 p.m. CC 174-Film.

SAILING CLUB:
Meeting tonight at 6:30 p.m. in the Commonwealth Rm., SU. Everyone is welcome to attend and participate.

SCROLLS:
Meeting tonight at 6 p.m. in Plymouth Rm., SU. Call 6-8240 if you can t attend.

STUDENT HOMOPHILE LEAGUE:
Room 917 CC, 7 p.m. This week Drugs and the Homosexual will be discussed--All gay people welcome. For more information come to Rm. 413 SU or call 545-0151.

LOST:
A pair of dorm keys, somewhere in Southwest area. If found please call 6-9845 or turn into lost & found. On an eagle keychain.

Around Hampden Dining Commons on Sun. (10/3) a pair of black rim glasses. If found call Don 6-9202.

Dorm keys, Friday 10/8, somewhere between Morrill and Southwest. Contact Debbie 6-1448.

FOUND:
Beautiful little black female puppy, blind in one eye (we think), found in vicinity of Fearing St.-Nutting Ave. She can be claimed at 15 Fearing St. anytime.

Black puppy with white collar in the vicinity of Bartlett. Call Ginny or Lynne 318 Dwight to claim.

Completely Restored
OLD WEIRD HAROLD'S
USED & NEW CLOTHES AND HANDICRAFTS

Overalls & Jumpsuits $4.50
Jeans $2.50 Workshirts $2.00
Flannel shirts $1.50
Sport Jackets $3.50 Denim Jackets $4.50
Shawls & Scarves $2.00

Leathers, corduroys, furs, sweaters, 13 button navy wool pants, field coats, parkas, authentic Pea coats, suedes, tunics, M-43's, M.B.T. pants & shirts, storm coats, boots, hats.

etc.

We would also like to be an inexpensive outlet for any handmade items (jewelry, pottery, weaving, macrame, woodwork, etc.)

Hours 11:00 a.m. - 11:00 p.m.
Mon. - Sat.

Tel. 586-3727

THE COLLEGE PLAN FOR THE COLLEGE MAN
CollegeMaster
Fidelity Union Life Insurance Company
21 Pray St., Amherst

Landlubber
Jeans and Cords
WEARHOUSE
wearelse?

Room To Move
Drop-In Center
5-0400, 5-0401

TONITE AT
THE CHEQUERS
THE
COLORADO ODYSSEY
9:30 til close tonight (Thursday)

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

1966 VW Bus in good condition, new fall inspection sticker, may be seen at 228 Cliffside Apts., Sunderland or call 665-4796.

'62 Rambler classic runs perf. new brakes, tune-up and exhaust system. Has all good tires and fall insp. sticker. Only $150. Call 546-4076. tf 10-14

1971 Buick Opel wagon red AM-FM, 18000 mi., excellent condition, asking 2295 will talk. Call 863-8006 after 6 p.m.

Falcon Bus 1966. Clean No Rot. Rebuilt motor and Auto. Trans. Good radio. Days 545-2022. Nights Easthampton 527-9040. Make Off. tf 10-14

For Sale - '63 Olds. Good condition. Asking $300. Call 323-7714. tf 10-14

69 VW Bug $1200 or Best Offer. Tel: 665-4197 after 5:30 exc. Tues. tf 10-15

70 MGB exc. running cond. Must sell, 219-8183. tf10-29

Ten year old Peugeot, std. Michelin rd gis tires, rebuilt engine, good cond., $250 or best offer. Call Keith 253-2215 after 9:00 p.m. tf 10-14

65 Austin, 850 wagon, 6s MG 1100 e.c. engine, good condition, $350 or best offer. Also 59 Rambler, 4 door, 6 cyl., auto., $95 or best offer. 967-5627. tf10-11

1966 VW Camper, Bluepunkt radio, new brakes, has heat rod. Best offer over $800. 545-2803. tf10-11

1968 Austin Healy Sprite - 38,000 miles. $600. Must sell. Call 253-2548. Ned after 9 p.m." tf 10-18

1963 V.W. Bus. Runs well. $150. 586-5127 tf 10-15

1968 Cougar XR7. 253-7709 or 665-4152. tf 10-15

1965 Dodge Coronet 440 Conv P.S. Auto. Very good condition. Best offer. Call 253-9653 after 6 p.m. tf 10-18

MOTORCYCLES FOR SALE

1968 Bultaco 360cc Elbandito. New engine, new clutches. Excel. shape. Must sell. $350 or best offer. Call 584-4066 anytime. tf 10-15

Bultaco Metralla 250 CC, very fast, inspected, road racing fairing, 5 speed. Ask $485. Offers. 549-0817. tf 10-15

1969 Triumph T100C Trophy 500, Mint condition, 8,000 miles. 546-7509. tf 10-15

FOR SALE

Guitar - Fender Villager acoustic 12 string guitar, excellent condition. 546-7509. tf 10-15

Seasoned Firewood. Sale and delivery. Call 665-3031. tf10-20

Brown surde pants, skirts, skins, top quality, wholesale. Pants $27, skirts $9.40, skins $5. Stop by to look Jon-424 Cladhorne 5-2640 leave number if not in. tf10-14

AM/FM/FM Stereo Radio-Cassette Player/ Recorder $170. Call Paul at 256-0307 after 6. tf10-15

TO GIVE AWAY-Watches, Jewelry, radios, unusual gift and novelty items-at 50% off and more-call S.N. Brown, 665-1145. tf10-11

Stereo-Marantz state-of-the-art components. Model 16, 220 watts rms, model 33, preamp mint 3 yr. warranty reg. $975 asking $725 or best offer, 1-367-9570 eve. tf10-14

Kenwood 10-X Amp For Sale 200-Watts out used one year. List new $400. Will take best offer. Call Rich 253-6303. tf 10-18

9' x 12' Tent; Sleeps 4-5 comfortably. Used one season. Asking $35 or make offer. Call Xavier 5-0858. tf 10-19

65 Chevy with '69 rebuilt engine; new tires and shocks; runs well. Priced to sell fast; $450 or make offer. Call Xavier 5-0858. tf 10-19

1970 Honda 350 [illegible] tf 10-14

$450 or best offer. Please call Bill, 549-6057. tf 10-15

165-14 snow tires, Semperit Radials 2 mounted on MGB Disc wheels $50 pr. Call 549-6087. tf 10-15

Classic black 4-door 1950 Mercedes Benz $250. Call Jeff Kelly 253-7363. tf 10-15

Foreign Auto Parts Pirelli, Michelin, Bosch, Lucas, Metric Hardware, Alfa Romeo spares, wheels, snow tires. Call Herb 256-8781 tf 10-19

Yamaha Classical guitar w/case. Exc. Cond. $80 Call Artie 201 Chadbourne 5-2640 or 5-2641. tf 10-18

Sony 630-D reel to reel tape recorder deck, 3 heads, echo, 8 on 8, dust cover, 3 speeds, 4 months old, new cost $320 asking $220, 783-2624. tf10-14

Got a thorn in your sneaker? Travel style in a '65 Chevy Belair 546-5221. tf10-14

Bumper sticker - your words printed on 3 x 12" red or green sticker for $1, copies .25. The Snide Co. Route 1, Box 93 Blaine, Wash. 98230 tf10-18

HELP WANTED

Need Vets Viet or regular to help film a documentary on adjustment problems in returning to civilian life. Call Jake at 549-3916. tf10-14

WANTED

Girls bike at least 3 speeds. Contact Mrs. Riley. Tel. 253-7151. tf10-15

Urgent! Bike Wanted 3/10 speed. Cheap. Call 549-6419. tf 10-14

RIDE WANTED

Ride wanted to Ohio on or before Oct 16th. Call 549-6468 anytime. Ask for Ann. 10-14

Ride wanted every Tue.-Thurs. to Palmer. Call 283-7708. tf 10-15

FOR RENT

One bedroom Apt. Available Nov. 1. $150 a month includes utilities. Call after 5 p.m. 665-2641. tf 10-20

PERSONAL

Lotta the Boop - Happy belated 20th to the Harvest Queen. Bubushka and the "Gang". tf 10-14

Snake - You may be Super-Shack to the Sigma Kaps, but you're just plain Pee-Pee to me. Miss Pro-Pa 10-14

Rm. 301 6-4922 organizational meeting for Cubba Mo. At U OWF. tf10-15

Melville Basement invites James Basement and 4th floor to a party Friday night at 8. tf10-31

ROOMMATES WANTED

Female roommates wanted-$60 a month includes utilities, age 20-25. Call after 6 p.m. ask for Jean if no answer keep trying 586-2886. tf10-15

Wanted-I need a place to live. Desire own room in a house or on a farm with other people. Call Mark at 256-8788. tf10-15

APT. AVAILABLE

Ideal for advanced female grad. student, room and board, in lieu of assistance with 2 schoolage children 549-3653.

Large, quiet, single room - 2 miles from University - For male student. Call 256-6151 after 5. tf 10-14

LECTURE NOTES

Lecture notes now available for all sections in Botany 101, Econ. 125, Geol. 101, Gov. 100, Phil. 105, Psych. 101, Rm. 318 S.U. Lobby. tf10-11

We have lecture notes for all sections in Hum Dev. 270, Micro 100, Psych 262, 263, 270, 290 and Soc 101 in Rm 318 Student Union. tf 10-14

SERVICES

I'll be more than happy to sew your new clothes. Call anytime and ask for Ann, 1-28-7052. tf 10-15

Auto Repairs. Points, plugs and minor engine repair. Winterize your car now. Call Wayne at 546-6535 or Al at 546-6467. tf 10-15

TYPING

Expert typing done at home. Previous experience in theses work. Electric typewriter. Call 584-5377, Mrs. Orsini. tf 10-18

Typing-theses, dissertations, etc. Fast, accurate; have Greek alphabet, math & chem. symbols. Call 253-3601. tf10-18

REWARD

Lost, Wire glasses and case in vicinity of SBA. Reward. Call 546-9777. tf 10-15

DAY CARE CENTER

Children's Center Day Care for ages 3-5 opening in Greenfield, full or part time from Oct. 18. Call 773-3094 or 774-2071. tf10-14

ENTERTAINMENT

The Beatles in Yellow Submarine plus exciting shorts going steady Sat., Oct. 16 at 6, 8, 10, Mahar Aud. Join the fun this Homecoming Weekend. tf 10-15

LOST

Guy who took grey suitcase (S.M.T.) on bus from Springfield to Amherst, please return it. I need my clothes. Nancy Jones 6-7916. tf 10-15

Reward! Blue & green afghan in David's bag. Lost in C.C. Please return to "Lost & Found". tf 10-20

DISCOUNT STEREO COMPONENTS

All major brands of stereo components, compacts available at 20-40% discount. Contact Jim Jensen 586-1365. tf 10-14

MIME THEATRE
CLAUDE KIPNIS MIME
TICKETS: 125
HERTER HALL.
TEL. 545-0202
THUR., OCT. 21
8:00 P.M.
BOWKER AUD.

Whalers "Smooch-It-To" The Vikings

Tuesday night the Melville Whalers, coached by Paul Scelera and Wally Shaw, scored against and finally defeated the formerly Invincible Vikings by a score of 22-6.

The quarterback, Janet Manning skillfully directed her superb first string offensive team, Mary Beth O'Sullivan, June Manning, Pat Murphy, Bonnie Bufalo, Mary Young and Karen Fruzetti to "SMOOCH" through the solid Viking defense.

The Whaler defense, composed of Marcia Lappin, Jane Andrews, Carol Bohn, Beth Rasmussen, Corrine Karakalas, Janice Lazzaro, Nancy Fink plus the three able-bodied offensive linewomen Murphy, Manning and Bufalo limited the Viking attack to only one touchdown.

The invaluable kicking of Meredith Schmidt alleviated the task of the defense by continuously kicking the ball far into Whaler territory.

The Whalers could not have won without the support of Maida Keighley, their former center, unable to play because of an injury received in last week's game.

The Whalers are now looking play-offs.

Also in Tuesday night's action the Kumquats of Grayson became the number one team in the Sapphire League, although three teams, the Kumquats, Vikings and Whalers were tied with 2-1 records. When the tie occurred it became necessary to determine first and second place teams by total offensive points due to insufficient time for a play-off. The Whalers copped second place through this controversial method.

The Kumquats defeated Adam's Abigails bringing in their second victory by a score of 24-0. Adams entered the game with a cheerful attitude which remained as they continually tried to advance.

The Kumquat offense was led by quarterback Janis DiPiettro who scored one touchdown. Karen Sarkesian, an offensive end seemed to be intercepting passes all over the field and she was responsible for scoring the remaining Kumquat points.

Other players included center Diane Clark, running back Arlene Breau, end Jill Hunt, Blockers Shelley Reid and Joan Reilley, defensive end Chris Ricciardoni, Safety Sam Fletcher.

Other players who have helped the team greatly include Charlie Burns, Coach, Beth Cronin, scorekeeper, and Kathie Wheeler. The Kumquats of Grayson are going on to whatever the championship round brings them.

Hocketts Top Keene State

The UMass women's varsity and junior varsity field hockey teams began their seasons by beating Keene State yesterday.

The varsity got off to a quick start when seven minutes into the first half Sue Tyler scored from left wing. Four minutes later Wendy Alpaugh followed it up with a goal from her left inner position. UMass dominated the first half with Keene State getting into our striking circle only three in the thirty minutes.

Nancy Lord and Wendy Alpaugh both scored goals during the second half. The second half was very sloppy with both teams tiring and making many mistakes.

UMass dominated the play in the first half of the junior varsity game. Most of the half was spent in Keene State's half of the field. Rhonda Tilley put UMass in the lead with a first half score and Karen Bornheim followed with a goal in the second half for a 2-0 victory.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

Dr. Reuben Greenspan, a former professor at New York (City) University, has a remarably accurate record of predicting earthquakes by utilizing the positions of the planets, sun and moon. Dr. Greenspan, now a resident of Laguna Beach, Calif., has pinpointed Jan. 4, 1973, at 9 a.m. (PST) as the time when a devastating quak will rock San Francisco. Dr. Greenspan feels the 1973 quake will probably measure around 7.4 on the Richter scale.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Perform basic tasks. Don't skip essential appointments, including need for auto repair. Take nothing for granted. Review lessons learned in recent past. Pisces person figures prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Hard facts replace mere speculation. Key is not to be taken in by wishful thinking. See in light of reality. Older individual is trying to tell you something. Steer clear of dubious money venture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Finish what you start. No time for delaying tactics. Accent on knowing that opposition is weak. You are in a better position than might be imagined. Continue to build on solid base.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Light touch is essential. Heavy handed methods will not suffice. Key is to be independent, not arrogant. Stress original approach. Lead way, but be gracious about it. You will understand.

LEO (July 23-August 22): Obtain hint from Taurus message. Be aware of liquid assets. Maintain rhythm. Refuse to be tied up, emotionally or otherwise. Hunch is valid. Follow through on inner feelings. Be yourself.

VIRGO (August 23-Sept. 22): What appears solid may, in actuality, be something else. You learn lesson close to home. Keep lines of communication in operation. Social affair could be productive. Sagittarius is involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What causes depression initially will boomerang into occasion for celebration. Barriers of restriction are due to fall away. You are provided with material needed to get job done.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Not wise to mix friendship and money. Make some changes and concessions. But don't think you can buy adulation. That can and will come naturally. Gemini and Virgo may be involved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Highlight harmony; stay away from one who is looking for a fight. Permit vision to flow through; means perceive opportunity, potential. Some, with little faith, are envious. Ignore them.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Some secrets are kept, others revealed. But this is a time when you are involved in what is clandestine. Whatever occurs is featured by soft undertones. A Pisces person plays important role.

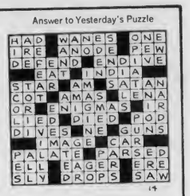
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Money situation aided if you are alert to hint. Friend passes on information which can be valuable. What you do with it remains major question. Key is to build for future. Take conservative course.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Lie low. Obtain hint from Aquarius message. You are apt to be involved with Capricorn. Accent is on partnership, ambition, ultimate realization of goal. Take long range view. You have time to succeed.

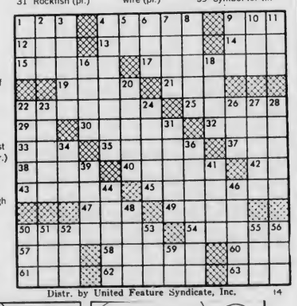
IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY changes made in family, home relationships will work in your favor. You are a perceptive, magnetic person. You harmonize with gemini and Aquarius, find Leo and Sagittarius persons pleasant to be with you and you are due for financial windfall.

Copyright 1971, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle



ACROSS



1 Possessive pronoun
4 Newspapers, collectively
9 Devoured
12 Algonquian Indian
13 Lasso
14 Game at cards
15 Delineate
17 Speakers
19 Tardy
21 Female ruff
22 Restrain
25 Narrow openings
29 For example (abbr.)
30 Go in
32 Separate
33 Sea eagle
35 Pigeons
37 Siamese native
38 Profound
40 Pertaining to punishment
42 Prefix: not
43 Vapor
45 Collections of peoples
47 Everybody's uncle
49 Father
50 Fights
54 Greek fabulist
57 A state (abbr.)
58 Smallest number
60 Before
61 In music, high
62 Rock
63 Stitch

DOWN

1 Suffix: adherent of
2 Sailor (colloq.)
3 Top of head
4 Sham
5 A state (abbr.)
6 Dine
7 Heavenly body
8 Transactions
9 Beverage
10 Rocky hill
11 Dawn goddess
16 Solicitude
18 Ashes of seaweed
20 Bar legally
22 Musical instruments
23 Long-legged bird
24 Lucky number
26 Grain
27 Retinue
28 Mixes
31 Rockfish (pl.)
34 Born
36 Sate
39 Time gone by
41 Unit of Italian currency (pl.)
44 Shaded walks
46 Bacteriologist's wire (pl.)
48 Encounter
50 Cry of sheep
51 Everyone
52 Make lace
53 Portuguese for "saint"
55 Native metal
56 Church bench
59 Symbol for tin

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Jones Elected Crew Captain Leonard Appointed Frosh Coach

The Umass rowing association elected Rick Jones captain and announced the appointment of Charles Leonard as the freshman coach for the coming year. Varsity Coach Mike Faherty made both announcements as his team begins final preparations for the three mile Charles River Race later this month.

Jones, a senior dean's list student majoring in economics, has been a team member for four years. He was the stroke for last year's JV boat which was the New England Champion and runners-up at the College Nationals in Philadelphia.

Faherty was high in praise for his captain. "Rick is a valuable member of our team. He represents what we are trying to achieve in rowing. His teammate's respect for him is obvious."

By naming Leonard to the freshman post Faherty has a former captain returning to coach. Leonard captained the 1970 varsity which won the New Englands and finished fourth at the College Nationals.

Additionally he had summer rowing experience at Ecorse, Michigan and the Rochester Boat Club, where he twice was a finalist in the paired-oared National Championships.

"Leonard brings with him an awareness of our clubs workings and its goals. Additionally he has new ideas, a fresh attitude and a full understanding of the new and increasing problems facing student-athletes," Faherty remarked about his assistant.

With Leonards appointment to the voluntary position, frosh crew activity will be increasing in the coming weeks. Faherty has been very pleased with the frosh turnout so far but is encouraging additional inquiries from freshmen.

The fall program for freshmen is very limited and more instructional than training. Practices are held two or three times weekly with everybody participating.

Faherty said that no experience is necessary, that candidates only have to be six feet tall, have played some sport in high school and have the desire to compete.

Any people interested in becoming members or seeking additional information should contact the crew office, 211 Boyden, or call 545-2801 and ask for Mike.

"I Could Have Done Better"

BALTIMORE (AP) — "Oh my God," was the immediate response from Colts middle linebacker Mike Curtis when he learned Wednesday he had been named Defensive Player of the Week by The Associated Press.

Curtis picked off two Buffalo Bills passes in Baltimore's 43-0 victory at Buffalo Sunday-with his right arm in a cast because of a broken thumb suffered in the Colts 14-13 loss to the Cleveland Browns two weeks earlier.

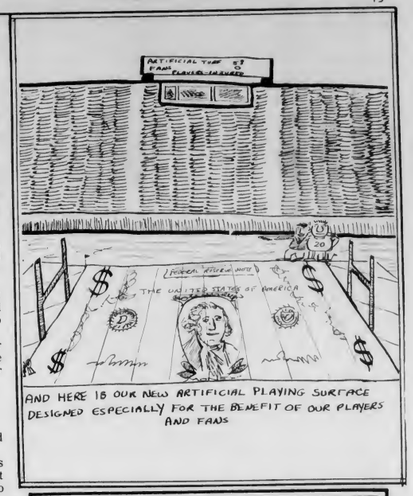
It was the third time the 235-pound Rockville, Md., native has been named Player of the Week by the AP he said.

"I made one last year and one in 1968. I'm surprised, to say the least, and I'm honored.

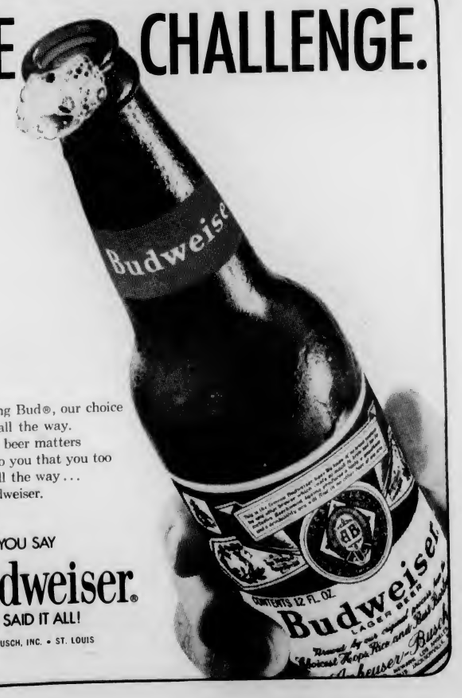
"I didn't tackle that well, and I didn't run that much. I could have done much better."

The All-Pro outside linebacker in 1968 who was moved into the middle linebacker position in 1969 when Baltimore had trouble with defense there, has had numerous broken noses but "this is the first time I've ever broken a bone of any consequence.

"I feel more confident now and think I will do better in the next game, especially in tackling and running.



"I still can't get a good grip on the ball, last week my fingers were taped shut.



"I was a little nervous about my arm, but I think this week I'll be able to keep my balance a little better," said the seven-year Colts veteran who played linebacker and fullback at Duke.

The cast over his right arm was affixed with a hollow cap to protect his thumb, said Colts trainer Ortho Davis.

"It was checked out by the official and was ruled perfectly legal."

WELCOME TO PEPPERLAND!
THE BEATLES'
"YELLOW SUBMARINE"
in color
* Plus "Going Steady"
SAT. EVENING, MAHAR AUD.
6, 8, 10 p.m.
Sponsored by SAM

THE CHALLENGE.

In brewing Bud®, our choice is to go all the way. We hope beer matters enough to you that you too will go all the way... with Budweiser.
WHEN YOU SAY
Budweiser.
YOU'VE SAID IT ALL!
ANHEUSER-BUSCH, INC. • ST. LOUIS

meat/rack begins where Midnight Cowboy left off... but with realism heretofor implied only by innuendo!" – N.Y. VILLAGE PRESS
meat/rack sex scenes are numerous, bizarre and graphic... just a hairsbreadth away from the bustable!" – VARIETY
meat/rack
is the real story of midnight cowboys. Real is the word as far as the low-down dirt is concerned!" – ARCHER WINSTEN, N.Y. POST
meat/rack
is a harbinger of films to come. It is totally uncompromising in its graphic approach to unconventional relationships and it is explicit in the extreme!" – N.Y. VILLAGE PRESS

Sherpix Inc. presents a film by Michael Thomas
meat/rack
In EASTMANCOLOR Screenplay by Joel Ensana Rated X
Added Attraction!
"CHARLES PIERCE IS THE WORLD'S GREATEST FEMALE IMPERSONATOR!" – John Wasserman, S.F. CHRONICLE
"I am not a 'female impersonator!' I am a Male Actress!" – Chas Pierce
The Charles Pierce Revue
Now Exclusively Playing!
Campus Cinemas 256 6411

Evans Gets Nod Against URI

By DAN KAMAL

It was all football at the weekly Varsity M luncheon yesterday afternoon at the Newman Center. Head coach Dick MacPherson and two of his players, Marty Evans and Skip Parmenter, were on hand to speak to the large gathering.

Evans was introduced as a nomad of sorts by his coach. This is the eleventh place the back-up quarterback has lived in. The reason? His father is a football coach who is currently on the staff of the New England Patriots. Evans quipped, "It all began in Reno, Nevada," then added, "I'm glad I came to this area because, of all the areas I've been, in I like New England the best."

The senior signal-caller was a bit more serious when he talked about Saturday's Homecoming Game against the University of Rhode Island. As he did in the BU game, in which he was treated rather rudely by the Terriers, Evans will be filling in for the injured Piel Pennington. He felt he had "a lot to prove to myself and my teammates."

Senior defensive lineman Skip Parmenter spoke about the unusual spirit of the UMass defensive corps which he described as "enthused squad." He also mentioned that he had been away from the game of football for two years, and this has hurt him somewhat.

MacPherson was next, and naturally he talked about the BU game. First of all he cited the statistics which were overwhelmingly in the Redmen's favor, as opposed to the game against the University of Maine in which his team's stats were not overly impressive. Then he mentioned the score of each game which "is all that counts" and expressed his obvious preference for the score against Maine.

He felt that his team played a fine game offensively and defensively but failed miserably on the special teams. "I'm very concerned about the special teams because unlike the Dartmouth game in which their specialty units did such a good job, in Saturday's game BU did so well primarily because our specialty squads did so poorly."

Some films of the BU game were then shown, with Sports Information Director Dick Page doing the narrating. At the end of the film, MacPherson quipped, "I liked Dick Page's version of the game better than our own."

In presenting a capsuled preview of the upcoming Rhode Island contest, MacPherson noted that the Rams have a season record of 2-2 and might be characterized as an "up and down" football team.

According to the first-year Redman coach, Rhode Island has had great success with its goal-line defense, which in the Ram game against the University of Vermont stopped the Catamounts on eight plays throughout the game from the one yard-line. On the other hand, MacPherson noted that "our goal-line defense has not been too good."

Pennington's shoulder separation is mending well, but there is very little chance that he will see any action Saturday. Commenting on his number-one quarterback's status, MacPherson said, "I'm glad there are doctors around to make these kind of decisions. Piel has said to me that he is ready. If it were up to me, I would say, 'Yes, you are; yes, you are...' "

Rookies Kison and May Lead Bucs To Equalizer

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Reserve catcher Milt May and reliever Bruce Kisen, a pair of 21-year-old rookies with unflinching nerves, combined their efforts to bring the Pittsburgh Pirates a 4-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Wednesday night in the fourth game of the World Series.

May, batting for Kison, drove in the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning with a pinch-hit single after the baby-faced but mean right-hander had stilled Baltimore's bats on 6 1-3 innings of one-hit pitching.

Their steel-nerved performances, before an anticipated record television audience of close to 60 million watching the first night game in series history, pulled the Pirates even with the Orioles at two victories apiece in the best-of-seven showdown.

And it made a record Three Rivers Stadium crowd of 51,378 deliriously happy at the end of a tense, dramatic struggle in which their favorite, Roberto Clemente, lost a homer on a disputed foul call by umpire John Rice.

Kison came on for starter Luke Walker after the Orioles struck for three quick runs in the first inning and was virtually untouchable through the next six innings.

Only Paul Blair was able to get a hit, a bloop double, as the kid who was pitching for Waterbury in the Eastern League last year, set the Orioles down, never allowing another Baltimore runner to reach second base.

Veteran reliever Dave Giusti took over for Koson, retired the last six men in order and saved it for the brash Kison, who is scheduled to be married this Sunday-the scheduled date of the seventh World Series game.

Until the Pirates finally broke through for the clincher in the seventh, it appeared that the teams might play all night in the precedent-shattering game under lights.

For the Pirates were robbed at least once and possibly twice.

The second instance occurred in the sixth inning when, with men on first and third, Orioles' third baseman Brooks Robinson made a diving catch of Rich Hebner's line drive. That, however, only brought a sigh from the record crowd.

The first instance brought a major rhubarb.

It occurred in the third inning with one out and Hebner on first after a single with the Pirates trailing 3-2. Clemente then hit a long drive off the right field wall right at the foul line and Rice signalled foul.

Pirate third base Coach Don Leppert raced down to argue the call and the normally placid Murtaugh also came out to dispute the decision. As always, the arguers lost to the umpire. Pirate pitchers Bob Moose and Bob Johnson, in the bullpen at the time, later said the drive was foul.

Clemente stepped back up when the argument ended and drilled the next pitch for his sixth hit of the series, sending Hebner to second. One out later, Oliver tied the score with a run-producing single.

The Orioles started out as if they would put it out of reach before Pittsburgh starter Luke Walker could get an out. Blair, Mark Belanger and Merv Retenmund collected singles to load the bases in the first inning.

Blair scored on a passed ball by Baltimore catcher Andy Etchebarren, Belanger came home on a sacrifice fly by Brooks Robinson that drove Oliver to the warning track in right center field.

The convinced Murtaugh that Walker didn't have it. He called for Kison, who stopped the Orioles until Giusti took over. Kison also set a series record by hitting three batters.

Baltimore starter Pat Dobson didn't appear to be any more effective than Walker when the Pirates came to bat in their half of the first. A walk to Dave Cash and doubles by Stargell and Oliver produced two runs.

But Weaver stuck with Dobson, who gave up 10 hits, until the sixth inning. By that time the Pirates had tied it and the stage was set for May's winning hit.

BALTIMORE	ab	r	h	bi	PITTSBURGH	ab	r	h	bi
Blair cf	4	1	2	0	Cash 2b	4	1	1	0
Belanger ss	4	1	1	0	Hebner 3b	5	1	1	0
Rettenmund lf	4	1	1	0	Clemente rf	4	0	3	0
FRobinson rf	2	0	0	0	Stargell lf	5	1	2	1
BRobinson 3b	3	0	0	1	AOliver cf	4	0	2	2
JPowell 1b	3	0	0	1	BRobinson 1b	4	1	1	0
DJohnson 2b	3	0	0	0	Sanguillen c	4	0	2	0
Etchebarren c	2	0	0	0	Hernandez ss	3	0	1	0
PDobson p	2	0	0	0	Davalillo ph	1	0	0	0
GJackson p	0	0	0	0	Giusti p	0	0	0	0
Shopay ph	1	0	0	0	Walker p	0	0	0	0
Watt p	0	0	0	0	Kison p	2	0	0	0
Richert p	0	0	0	0	MMay ph	1	0	1	1
					Alley ss	0	0	0	0
Total	28	3	4	2	Total	37	4	14	4

Baltimore	300 000 000 3
Pittsburgh	201 00 10x 4

E—Blair. DP Baltimore 1, Pittsburgh 1. LOB Baltimore 4, Pittsburgh,13. 2B Stargell, A. Oliver, Blair. SB Sanguillen, Hernandez. SF B. Robinson, J. Powell.

	IP	H	R	ER	BB	SO
P. Dobson	5 1-3	1	0	3	3	3
G. Jackson	2-3	0	0	0	1	0
Watt L, 0-1	1 1-3	4	1	1	0	1
Richert	2-3	0	0	0	0	1
Walker	2 3	3	3	3	1	0
Kison W, 1-0	6 1-3	1	0	0	0	3
Giusti	2	0	0	0	0	1

Save Giusti. HBP by Kison D. Johnson, F. Robinson, Etchebarren. PB Sanguillen. T 2:48. A 51,378.

Intramurals

TUG-O-WAR

PIT	TIME	TEAMS
1	7:00	Terrors vs. Lovers
2		Stoulees vs. Trojans
1	7:15	Pipers vs. Heifers
1	7:30	BX vs. Browns
2		Stouts vs. 3M's
1	7:45	Munchkins vs. Civ. Eng
2		Dutchmen vs. Mouseketeers

FOOTBALL

FIELD	TIME	TEAMS
2	6:00	ACO vs. CO
		Pos. Grad Fac
3		1 vs. 2
4		3 vs. 4
5		5 vs. 6
1	7:00	Trojans vs. Lions
2		Johnson vs. Goals

Sports Notices

"WARPATH"-Tonight at 7:30 Marty Kelley and Kent Best will host freshman football coach Billy Maxwell and varsity ends, Steve Schubert and Bob Cabrelli on WMUA's Warpath. The topic for tonight's program: UMass vs Rhode Island. Tune into WMUA, 91.1 fm, the Voice of the Redmen.

HOCKEY—There will be a meeting today of all JV and freshmen hockey candidates in room O Boyden at 4 p.m. Any candidate who cannot make the meeting, contact coach Kidd at 5-2341.

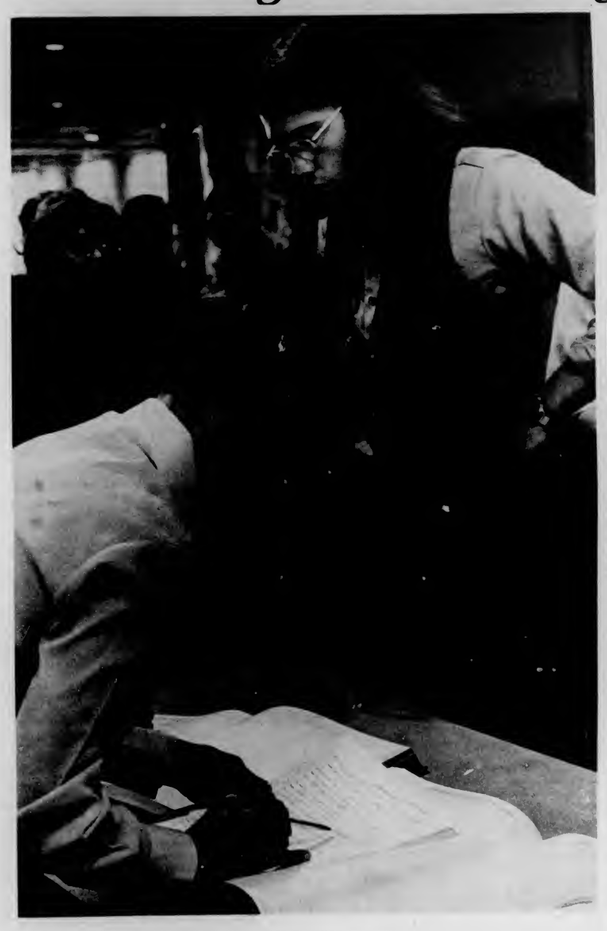
INTRAMURALS—All basketball rosters are due in the Intramural Office no later than October 18.

Collegiate Football Brings Out The Best

DEAN WARREN McGUIRK receiving a present in recognition of his brilliant career as a leader in national collegiate athletics...

DR. RANDOLPH BROMERY, Acting Chancellor of UMass, watching the Redman from the sideline...

YANKEE GREAT YOGI BERRA watching his son Tim score two touchdowns for UMass. (All MDC Photos by Barbara Brecher)



New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather: "I look pretty good in this stuff, maybe the trees will save us."

VOLUME XCIX, ISSUE 27 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS FRIDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1971

Speaker Bartley Stresses Vote; Urges Partisan Registration

By JAN LIVA

"It damned well does make a difference how you register and it damned well does make a difference how you vote", declared House Speaker David M. Bartley before about 40 persons in the Campus Center last night. He was speaking to UMass students and members of the Amherst Democratic Town Committee.

Bartley opened his remarks by congratulating the coordinators of the voter registration drive at the UMass campus. He mentioned that between 400-500 voters registered in the Campus Center Thursday evening and termed this as a "fantastic opportunity for these new voters."

Bartley stated that those urging students "simply to register to vote" are not doing enough. This kind of talk alone is "patronizing, non-political fluff." Bartly urged instead intensive student participation in "partisan politics...at every level."

Bartley claimed that his purpose at the university last night was "a partisan one." "I want to see young people registered- as Democrats. And I want to see young people voting - as Democrats." He also defended the two party system as giving a semblance of stability which is lacking in a multi-party for fractional party system.

"I happen to believe that one party has been more perceptive to public needs, and that party is the Democratic Party." He was quick to add that the Democratic Party is not a neat, closed or especially well disciplined party. However, it is effective. Two examples of this effectiveness on the state level are education and consumer protection.

Bartley pointed out that spending for public higher education increased 600% in the decade 1959-1969, which was the first full decade of Democartic control in the legislature. Going to UMass before this decade was considered going to "Cpw College" Bartley claimed.

He then blasted Republican efforts two years ago to scuttle the UMass Medical School because it would cost too much. "Public higher education has always cost too much for the Republican Party," claimed Bartley.

Environmental concern is another area where the Democrats have pushed through statutes on the books which make Massachusetts the leader in the nation for environmental protection he said; Massachusetts also formed the first Consumer Council in the Nation. The Speaker noted that "federal legislation is patterned after the state's contribution in this field."

Bartley stressed the importance of partisan politics and added "even if they become Republicans...let them become something." He criticized those who remain Independents, who are unable to participate in the primaries. He added, "Any influential

Bartley stressed the importance of partisan politics and added "even if they become Republicans..let them become something." He criticized those who remain Independents, who are unable to participate in the primaries. He added, "Any influential voter participates in the primaries. That's where the action is."

Closing his prepared remarks, Bartley believes that "the same general apathy which grips so many Middle Americans also grips many young Ameriaans too. And that's too bad." He feels that local state and national elections are for doers and hopes that the students are willing to work in the Democratic system.

A question and answer period followed Bartley's speech. Major areas of concern included: --abortion. The speaker explained that legislation for liberalized abortion laws were defeated by a vote of 2-1. He attributed this defeat to traditional Middle America attitudes, to the letters received from church officials and to lack of imagination of the proponents of the bill.

--marijuana. He mentioned that legislation is now up to change the possession of marijuana from a felony to a misdemeanor. He predicted that if a vote to legalize marijuana was taken, it would be defeated by a vote of 4-1.

--UMass tuition increase. Bartley predicted that tuition would probably be increased within the next 2-3 years, although he personally will oppose any tuition increase legislation. He stated, "Power to raise tuition, by statute, rests with the Board of Trustees." However, he feels that the trustees don't have the intestinal force to raise tuition.

Registering at the Campus Center. One of 600 students who registered to vote in the Campus Center yesterday. A bit of a contrast? (Photo by Gib Fullerton)

House Speaker David Bartley spoke on Campus yesterday. He felt students had to do more than simply register to vote. Approximately 40 people attended the lecture.

On The Inside:

● Poor Richard See page eight

● Shah of Iran See page five

Montgomery Blues Band Here Tonight

By JEANNETTE MARTINEAU

James Montgomery, described in the September 21, 1971, issue of Boston After Dark, as the "Heir To Boston Blues," will be featured in Friday nivt's Homecoming Concert in the Campus Center Auditorium, from 8:30-12:30, sponsored by Sigma Alpha Mu.

Kenton describes the James Montgomery Blues Band as "hav(ing) entered that special musical twilight zone that is rock 'n' roll."

It's great to be able to say, "Kenton continues," although many people in town don't know it, that there is a group well on its way to filling that void.

The group consists of Larry Carsman (guitar and sweet vocals), Billy Mather (bass), Chuck Puro (drums), Kenny on keyboards and, naturally enough, James Montgomery (harmonica and lead vocals). Chuck used to be with The Colwell-Winfield Band and Larry and Billy, like James, are from Detroit.

James Montgomery, according to Kenton, "has moved from one sphere of existence to another completely different one and has made it look fairly easy and natural. He brings to his performances a special feeling for the blues and an awareness of his audience which demonstrate his remarkable-spiritual, if you will-capabilities as a musician. He has a phenomenal sense of audience dynamics and a rare ability to make you feel, although part of a large number of people, that he is talking directly to you."

Book Exodus Planned

By LINDA ROTH

When the exodus from Goodell to the new University Library begins sometime next year, books contained in the university's archives and special collections will probably be transported by hand, says a library staff member.

Goodell classifies "rare books" as those which are too fragile and/or too expensive to be kept in the regular stacks. As a spokesman in the rare book section puts it, "They need extra protection."

Although seldom used by undergraduates, the collections are frequently utilized by graduate students and faculty as invaluable primary sources.

Among the collections are 1,524 indexed French Revolution pamphlets, a collection of anti-slavery pamphlets dated 1800-1860's, and a contemporary biography of Martin Luther published in 1570.

Many of the volumes will be carried by hand by library staff members to avoid damage during routine packing and transport.

"Although it is difficult to assess specific value to the books", the spokesman reported, "many would be irreplaceable if damaged or destroyed."

Socialist Speaker Claims Support

By IMELDA ROJAK

"There is a deep change in the political consciousness" of people in the United States, said John Powers of the Socialist Workers Party Thursday night. Speaking to a gathering of 50-75 students in the Colonial Lounge at the Student Union, he continued, "The response", to the Party has been, "unbelievably friendly." Aside from a few accusations of "Commie" there has been little harrassment, Powers said. Instead, people are quiet and listen to Socialist speakers.

People are "questioning the system" which has hidden many things from the public, according to Powers. The much publicized "Pentagon Papers", for example, revealed "the secret history of the war in Vietnam," which proved that for 20 years the American people have been consistently lied to.

Many are questioning the validity of the "wage-price freeze" as a means to end inflation. Because the factory owners are asked to enforce the wage freeze and the store owners are asked to enforce the price freeze, prices still go up while wages remain the same. Why should the owners work against their own interests? The real cause of the inflation is deficit spending Powers suggested. "Nixon should end the war in Vietnam."

In 1972, The Socialist Workers Party plans the "biggest Socialist campaign since 1920, when Eugene V. Debs ran." A 30 year old woman, Linda Jeness, will run for president, with EX-GI John Pully, of 20 as Vice-president. "You have to remain independent from the capitalist class, the Democrats and Republicans, to get things done," Powers stated.

Powers informed the audience, "I ran for mayor of Boston in the last campaign. It was a very effective campaign. We had only 1./ of the vote, but we weren't particularly interested in getting people out to vote. We spent less than $1000. I was not a full time candidate, and was not well known." Nevertheless, compare to candidates who spent hundreds of thousands of dollars and had innumerable people campaigning for them, "We made a big impact," he said.

Powers was proud of the fact that "We forced the other politicians to deal with the issues." The other candidates had very vague platforms. By debating with politicians on television, Powers forced him to reveal their positions on, say, abortion laws. It was convenient to "propogandize for socialism at a time when people were interested in politics," Powers admitted. The speaker appeared on television and got coverage in the Boston newspapers. Powers is aware that a Socialist candidate probably won't get elected, but "We're going to have a big muckracking campaign" to expose the political system as it is.

John Powers

Powers said he spoke at Norfolk Prison, supposedly one of the best in Massachusetts, although conditions need to be greatly improved he felt. "Radicalization has reached the prisons." Powers told tales of rats and roaches in the food, undesirable jobs useless after release from prison as "rehabilitation." The prisoners struck for three and a half days.

"I think the same thing will happen on a broader scale. "Powers concluded.

Fac Sen. Rep. Hits Trustees

By DON POUTRY

"It is completely and utterly irresponsible-like a hurt child striking out and trying to emasculate the authority figure," Professor Joseph Burroughs, the Faculty Senate representative to the Board of Trustees, reported to that body at its regular meeting yesterday afternoon. He was referring to the Boards reaction to the Ad Hoc Search Committee at the Boards meeting in Lenox on Oct. 7th.

Burroughs said that chairman of the Board Joseph Healy stated that the Committee's proposal for the placement of major administration officers did not apply to the office of Chancellor.

When the Faculty Senate's Statement of Concern was presented to the Board there were no questions - no comments - no discussion - no debate, according to Burroughs. He said that the Board prefers that "we all shut-up."

On October 8th the Board passed a motion that a search committee be established, Burroughs noted. The committee is to be comprised of six faculty members, six undergraduate students, two graduate students, one member of the Deans Council, one member of the alumni body and two members of the Board of Trustees. The committee will nominate at least five names for the position of permanent chancellor of the Amherst Campus. Acting Chancellor Bromery addressed the Faculty Senate. He said that his three years with ex-Chancellor Tippo have been the most "productive, beneficial and stimulating" of my professional career. Bromery said that at the present he is most concerned with getting the budget straightened out. He said that he will be spending most of his time negotiating with President Wood to revise the budget. He asked the Faculty Senate to give their consent on his probably appointment of Dr. Gage as Acting Vice-Chancellor of Student Affairs. The matter was tabled by the Faculty Senate.

Senator Ellen Gerber moved that the Senate "express its concern at the lack of response to the report of the Committee of Concern by the Trustees, and that it calls upon the Board to meet on the Amherst campus to deal fully with the issues and principles raised in the report." The motion was approved unanimously.

Professor Ellis G. Olim moved that the Faculty Senate ratify the appointments that the Committee on Committees had made for the Search Committee for a Chancellor. The appointees were Terence Burke, Micheline Dufau, Glen Gordan, Warren Litsky, Leland Roblee and Donald St. Mary. The motion was approved.

The Faculty Senate also approved of the new Undergraduate Regulations. In the new system F's will not affect the students cumulative average and a student must earn at least twelve graduation credits to keep from being given an academic warning.

Everybody's got a tummy.
Cover It Up with Clothes from
THE DEALER
A CLOTHING STORE
56½ MAIN ST· AMHERST, MASS·
"IN THE ALLEY"

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN are on the second floor of the Student Union on the University campus, zip code 01002. Phones are 545-2550 (news), 545-0344 (sports), and 549-1311 (editor).

Second class postage paid at Amherst, the DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes five times weekly Monday through Friday during the academic year except during vacation and exam periods, three or four times a week following a vacation or exam period or when a holiday falls within a week. Accepted for mailing under the authority of the act of March 8, 1879 as amended by the act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester, $10.00 per year.

For all your scuba diving equipment, air sales regulator repairs, tanks tested. Largest stock in Central Mass.
WHOLESALE PRICES
U.S. DIVERS — DECOR
Send for Price List.
The REEF DIVE SHOP Inc.
70 Washington St., Leominster
6 p.m. - 9:30 Mon. - Fri.
Sat. 10 a.m. - 6 p.m.
Sun. 7 a.m. - 10 a.m.
Call 534-3546 or 537-2829

Spectrum

The general interest magazine of University of Massachusetts

We are now accepting Contributions for the fall 1971 issue.

All contributions of fiction, non-fiction, poetry, art, and photography can be left at the spectum office or mailed to:

Spectrum
RSO No. 102
Campus Ctr.
U Mass.

all contributions should be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope

Life Is Sweet In Sylvan

By STEPHEN FINE

Dick Polomba, graduate assistant to the coordinator of academic and social programs in the Sylvan area feels the Sylvan area is finally "coming together". "Its a misconception that residents become alienated here. True, we had very few activities here last year, but this year a lot is happening," he explained.

The Sylvan complex has about 1400 residents, of which 900 are freshman, 200 upperclassman and 200 are graduate students. Palomba says they're all becoming involved with activities in the area. "One good thing about having the freshmen is they're really into starting projects. The grad students act as a potential resource in the area of academics, seminars, and tutorial services," he said.

Plomba added that Sylvan now has dorm government. "We have 3 dorms governments going really well. They've elected representatives and written constitutions. I'm very enthusiastic about the whole thing."

One of the projects he is very excited about is getting some type of area government in Sylvan. "What we're trying to establish is some type of coordinating force for area and dorm governments.

So that there's no duplication in the allocation of funds for projects and events."

Right now the Sylvan area is appropriated $4500 for its use. Palomba believes funds for Sylvan can be raised in other ways besides dorm dues." Some dorms charge as much as ten dollars for dues. We're thinking of alternatives like pinball machines which make 50% profit. All possibilities are opened."

Polomba is very pleased with the response of the residents to make Sylvan a better place to live." The most exciting thing is the acceptance of the part of the students in taking the responsibility of making Sylvan better. I see tremendous potential because the students are active and responsive to individuals needs. They know it's up to them and nothing is going to be given to them."

He then pointed out intereested students are taking a survey to determine what academic and social programs they want. "They're also getting to the grass roots by conducting corrider meetings rather than large house meetings. It's more direct rule."

Polomba believes the purpose of the office. is to act as a student resource center. "Our job is to answer any questions about setting up projects in Sylvan. For example students are setting up a coffee shop this weekend in one of the dorms. We helped them get the necessary equipment for it. We're the people to see because we know how to cut the red tape.

Since Sylvans spring Semester opening last year, 1400 students have taken up residence in Cashin, Brown, and McNamara dorms. This year the Academic and Social are innovating new projects and dorm governments in the area. Dick Palomba, graduate assistant in the office says things are finally getting together in Sylvan.

600 Students Register At C.C.

By SHARON MCGOURTY

Special provisions were set up by the Amherst Town Clerk's office for one day's registration at the Campus Center Concourse, where approximately 600 UMass sstudents registered for Amherst elections.

"I'm really pleased with the way things turned out today," said John Stevens, head of the Voter Registration Drive in Amherst, "my faith in students has been renewed. I only expected 500 people." A woman registrar also expressed pleasure at the large turnout, saying that 600 was a relatively good number. Stevens also said that he was very happy with the efficient manner in which the registration was run.

Various organizations such as The Student Vote (a non-partisan organization) and UMass Students for McGovern were on hand to give people informatior about candidates and registration procedures.

In order to vote, a student must prove that he or she will have been a resident of Amherst for at least 6 months prior to Election Day. This regulation excludes freshmen and transfer students from registration. The summer interim is officially viewed as "absentee time" and thus can be included in the six month residency period.

According to Mr. George Como, a registrar for the town of Amherst, there was at first some discussion as to whether or not registrars were needed on campus. Stevens pointed out that the registrars and representatives of the Voter Registration Drive finally agreed that it was not easy for students to register at the Town Hall, and that some sort of on-campus registration was needed. According to Como, it is quite possible that in the future there will be provisions made for on-campus registration, again.

At the concourse today there were tables set up for information and registration, as well as a table where students could secure affidavits which proved their six months on-campus residency. Students living off campus were required to show proof of residency in the town of Amherst.

The flow of people was continuous from 1-4 p.m. said Stevens.

Though lines were long, the wait was usually not, said an observer. Registration slowed down from 4-5:30, but picked up again at 6, and the steady stream continued until 9 p.m., said one worker.

John Stevens said that in a recent poll it was found that 61% of UMass students have already registered to vote elsewhere. This poll also showed 14% of the student body expressed a desire to vote in Amherst and that 2% did so prior to yesterday's drive. Stevens said that it is expected that the town of Amherst will register 3,000 students. UMass is the only Amherst college where on-campus registration was provided.

For those who missed registering yesterday, it is possible to do so at the Housing Office at Whitmore 235 any weekday from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

SIGNING UP—These are some of the over 600 students who signed up and registered to vote yesterday at a special table staffed by clerks of the Town of Amherst. Those who registered yesterday are now eligible to vote in Amherst Town elections. (MDC photo by Gib Fillerton)

U.S. to Consider Aid to Israel

UNITED NATIONS, (N.Y.) AP—Secreatry of State William P. Rogers said Thursday the United States will reconsider its military commitments to Israel because of a new Soviet promise of more military aid to Egypt.

A U.S. official said afterward the Soviet promises had prompted an "active" review of the Israeli request for more warplanes and that the review would begin "pretty promptly."

Student
Activities Day
Thursday, October 21, 1971
9 a.m. - 4 p.m.
Campus Center Concourse Level

Keep It Under Your Hat.

A Coat from Wearhouse.

We have all kinds from denim (lined, unlked, fur collar), leathers (flight bomber) to parkas and hunting jackets. Look around & compare! Best selection & best prices always the closest thing to you.

WEARHOUSE
wear-else
Open Fri. til 9

Take your Lunch to the Game

Football Bag Lunch

Cold Cut Grinder
Brownie
Potato Chips
Pepsi

99c

"BITES & PIECES"
"CATALYST"
Hampden Commons
Worcester Commons

In The Nation And The World

Deception Charged In Consumer Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House passed a consumer protection bill 344 to 44 Thursday over protests by Ralph Nader's allies that the legislation is a skillfully designed deception.

It creates a new consumer protection agency, gives legal underpinning to the White House's Office of Consumer Affairs, and sets up a 15-member consumer advisory council.

The legislation was sent to the Senate-which endorsed a similar bill a year ago-after the House rejected a key strengthening amendment by 218 to 160 and defeated the major weakening amendment by 240 to 149.

The White House has approved the plan. Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan, urging the House to turn down all efforts to "undermine the bill one way or another," hinted that serious changes could prompt a presidential veto.

Rep. John E. Moss, D—Calif., pleading for approval of a strengthening amendment, said the committee bill had "no teeth, no bite."

Rep. Chet Holifield, chairman of the Government Operations committee said it is a strong bill "that is carefully balanced bysafeguards to insure that trade secrets will not be improperly disclosed, test data will not be misrepresented, duplicative work will be avoided, and governmental operations will not be disrupted."

An amendment offered by Rep. William S. Moorehead, D—Pa. would have extended the new agency's authority to get involved in more of the so-called adjudicatory preceedings-the process of formulating orders. It also would have permitted the new agency authority to review informal steps by which other agencies dispose of consumer complaints. The amendment was defeated.

Another unsuccessful amendment aimed at putting more limitations on the new agency's power was sponsored by Rep. Don Fuqua, D—Fla. He proposed to give the agency the status of an adviser, handing out "a friendly warning" to other agencies, but without power to enter cases as a legal party with rights of "adversary advocate" of consumer interests.

Nader's backers said they had gained last week the support of Ways and Means Committee Chairman Wilbur D. Mills; D—Ark., for their attempts to strengthen the bill. But Mills voted against the Moorehead amendment.

Scientist Uncovers New Star

LOS ANGELES (AP)—An astronomer says he has discovered an incredibly small but intense X-ray source deep in the galaxy that might be the first "direct evidence for the existence of a neutron star."

The object is only 10 miles across, and this tiny size-in an area where distance is measured in trillions of miles-is the main basis for believing it's a neutron star.

But Dr. Stuart Bowyer, associate professor of astronomy at the University of California at Berkeley, admits his report published Friday in Astrophysical Journal Letters is certain to spark controversy. Many astronomers think neutron stars already have been observed-that they are the strange pulsars which emit bursts of radio energy usually in intervals of seconds.

"There's no doubt it's going to generate controversy," Bowyer said in a telephone interview.

"We saw something which through a straightforward line of reasoning leads us to believe it's a neutron star. It's possible Mother Nature was pulling the wool over our eyes."

Bowyer and Michael Lampton, assistant research physicist, and two graduate students, Bruce Margon and Ray Cruddace, detected the object 52 million billion miles from earth with instruments aboard a rocket launched June 14, 1969 from Natal, Brazil.

They observed 20 differenent X-ray souces during the flight and submitted the data to a careful computer analysis. Only one object, called GX340-plus-0 by astronomers, fit the idea of what a neutron star should be.

The existence of neutron stars first was suggested in the 1930's. The theory is that a star many times more massive than our sun exhausts its nuclear fuel and, in sort of a death convulsion, explodes, hurling matter far out into the universe.

But part of the star collapses inward, forming a tiny object much smaller than the sun and far more dense with a much greater gravitational pull. This object, which might be spinning rapidly from forces caused by the contraction, is a neutron star. Its diameter is believed to be about 10 miles.

When pulsars were discovered in 1968, most astronomers agreed they might be neutron stars, since a spinning object could generate radio pulses. But Bowyer said recent evidence suggests this might not be the case.

The Berkeley scientists found the GX340-plus-0 produces its X-rays by a process called blackbody radiation. Two other processes exist, synchrotron emission and bromsstrahlung.

But only with an object exclusively emitting blackbody radiation can astronomers use a formula to calculate its size. Bowyer's group came up with an object only 10 miles across.

The size of other X-ray objects observed since their discovery in 1964 haven't been measured, Bowyer said, because they weren't exclusively emitters of blackbody radiation.

He said his group's conclusions can be challenged by critics who question the computer analysis that only black-body radiation is involved.

Border Clash In N. Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP)—Forty gunmen battled British troops for an hour Thursday across the border between this strife-torn province and the Irish republic.

The gunmen opened fire with carbines and machine guns as army sappers tried to blow up a border road at Forkhill in south Armagh.

The only casualty on the army side was a sapper hit in the leg by a bullet.

Erupted in Belfast

Irish Republic police captured four terrorists as they tried to escape.

As rioting erupted in Belfast, where seven busses were hijacked during the day and set afire, there was more shooting in Londonderry.

The army said its marksmen hit three snipers firing on the outskirts of the Roman Catholic Creggan Estate in Northern Ireland's second city. The injured men were spirited away by comrades.

The buses in Belfast were hijacked at gun point by men who ordered the passengers off and then set them ablaze. Police said five men had been arrested in connection with the incidents.

Demolitions Continue

Nail bombs and stones were hurled at security forces in several parts of the capital.

The British army continued blowing up unapproved country roads crossing the border with the Irish Republic. The move is aimed at stopping the shipment of arms and explosives to terrorists of the outlawed Irish Republican Army along roads which do not have customs posts. Some of the craters already have been filled in by Northern Ireland civil rights protestors.

The body of the 120th victim of Northern Ireland's two-year orgy of sectarian feuding between Roman Catholics and Protestants was found Wednesday night in Belfast. Troops found the corpse of a man shortly after they had opened fire on a nail bomber, but were unable to say whether the victim was their attacker.

Peking Expecting Kissinger

WASHINGTON (AP)—Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, the top White House foreign policy expert, will leave for Peking Saturday to make final arrangements for President Nixon's historic journey to mainland China.

Press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, announcing Kissinger's travel plans Thursday, said the presidential assistant would stop en route in California, Hawaii, Guam and Shanghai.

Although Ziegler said, "I don't want to suggest anything to you about the President's trip," it was believed Kissinger's route would closely-if not exactly-parallel the Nixon itinerary.

As preparations for the President's trip went forward, his domestic economic policies struck sparks in China. The official Hsinhua news agency said in a broadcast monitored in Tokyo that Nixon's Phase 2 economic plan meant that "in his opinion the way to solve all problems is to let the capitalists have more profits...'

The broadcast said U.S. inflation is due basically to policies of "aggression and war by the U.S. ruler classes, and particularly the unleashing and expansion of the war of aggression in Indochina."

Kissinger will be accompanied by eight White House specialists in such diverse fields as communications and presidential protection, plus a State Department representative. The party, which also will include a small support staff, will return to Washington via Anchorage, Alaska, on or about Oct. 25.

POWERS Jewelers OF AMHERST offers you
WATCHES
JEWELRY
U.M. MUGS
(Leather & Pewter)
Expert Repairs
65 N. Pleasant St.

For Prices on Stainless Hollow Ware
You Won't Believe
See
"... Everyone's Favorite Jeweler ..."
BAKER - WINN
JEWELERS
31 South Pleasant St. Amherst

AUTO INSURANCE
ALL CARS — ALL DRIVERS
BUDGET PAYMENTS
CYCLES — SCOOTERS
Tekoa Insurance Agency
160 Pleasant St. Northampton 586-2742
10 Broad St. Westfield 562-3604

dvp
"PLEASURE - SEEKERS" from UMASS
!! Don't Miss !!
DR. JOEL FORT speaking on
"THE PLEASURE - SEEKERS:
The Drug Crisis, Youth and Society"
Monday - Oct. 18. - 8 p.m. - S.U.B.

Shah Urges Peace At World Banquet

PERSEPOLIS, Iran (AP)-The Shah of Iran threw a glittering banquet Thursday night for leaders of nations as far apart politically as the United States and Red China, and urged them to harmonize their efforts for a world "free from fear, anxiety and the constant threat of annihilation."

"We all know that man is still grappling with many problems," said the shah. "We are aware that a large part of the population of the world still suffers from poverty, ignorance, hunger and all kinds of discrimination.

"Every day, in some corner of the world, we hear the whistling of bullets and come across various manifestations of violence and hatred."

He urged his guests to "try as hard as possible, as much as circumstances allow, to turn the world into one of love, peace and cooperation for mankind."

The gathering at Persepolis for the 2,500th anniversary of the founding of the Persian Empire by Cyrus the Great was one of men of good will, said the shah.

Since they began arriving at the ancient city a few days ago, the glittering caravan of kings, sheiks, presidents and other guests were coping bravely with the rigors of luxury camping, ranging from dead telephones to crowding in the servants' quarters.

There were reports of royal beauties waiting with wet heads for hair dryers and no chairs to sit on.

A minor housing problem developed in the imperial tent city when Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia arrived with an entourage of 72 instead of the expected 20.

There also was a rumored disagreement over protocol.

Speculation was rife that Peking's representative, Communist party vice president Kuo Mo-jo, contracted a sudden illness and declined with regrets after learning of his low place on the protocol ladder. The Chinese ambassador to Pakistan took his place.

Then there were the sultans who were rumored to be unhappy that U.S. Vice President Spiro T. Agnew was whisked across the desert in a helicopter while they had to rough it in air-conditioned limousines.

Agnew met Thursday with the shah in the Iranian ruler's giant, chandeliered tent. Douglas MacArthur II, the U.S. ambassador to Iran, also was on hand. Agnew's spokesman, Victor Gold, declined to say what they discussed.

Agnew is to remain at Persepolis until Saturday, then fly to Athens, to spend a week in his father's native land.

Others seen Thursday around the ruins of Persepolis included King Olav V of Norway, Crown Prince Gustaf VI of Sweden, Princess Muna of Jordan, Premier Jacques Chaben-Delmas of France, Gov. Gen. Sir Paul Hasluck of Australia and President Ludvik Svoboda of Czechoslovakia.

Other guests relaxed in their air-conditioned, Paris-designed tents or went calling on their campsite neighbors.

An army of chefs from Maxim's of Paris was preparing an exotic banquet featuring 90 roasted peacocks, stuffed quail and pounds and pounds of choice golden caviar.

Throughout the festivities, Shah Mohammed Reza Pahleui and his wife, Empress Farah, could be seen sparkling in their diamonds, emeralds and rubies at cozy breakfasts as well as at formal banquets.

Iran's crown jewels, which contain more than half of the largest cut diamonds in the world, include 3,380 diamonds, 368 rubies, 5 emeralds and 2 sapphires in a 10,000 carat setting.

WMUA

For Fri. Oct. 15
TONIGHT ON 91.1 FM:

7:00 p.m.-EVENING NEWS-30 minutes with special concentration on area news reported by WMUA NEWS.

7:30 p.m.-COMMONWEALTH REVIEW-a 30-minute program dealing with the state legislature focusing on discussions with congressmen. WMUA's Ben Muse is the reporter.

8:00 p.m.-UJAMA DRUM-a black program put together by Black Mass Communications featuring jazz, soul, poetry and black news.

11:15 p.m.-JOHN LORING SHOW-progressive music until 3:00 a.m.

Chicago 7, Another Encore

CHICAGO (AP)-Oral arguments on the appeal of the controversial Chicago 7 conspiracy trial are set for February-two years after five men were convicted of inciting rioting at the time of the Democratic National Convention in 1968.

But defense lawyer Leonard I. Weinglass of Newark, N.J. does not expect a reunion of the defendants when the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals hears on Feb. 5 and 6 arguments on the conviction of the five defendants and the contempt sentences levied against all seven defendants, both defense lawyers and a defendant who was severed from the trial.

"I'll be there with Mr. Kunstler," Weinglass said. "But we don't expect the other defendants. Maybe one might show up."

William M. Kunstler of New York City, the other defense lawyer, was sentenced to four years and 13 days for contempt.

"That doesn't rule out the possibility of a reunion," Weinglass said. "But it won't be there."

"We will argue the appeal in February and I'm ready to go to jail in the spring," he said. "But I expect whichever side loses in Chicago will appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court."

Weinglass was sentenced to 20 months and 5 days for contempt by Judge Julius J. Hoffman at the conclusion of the U.S. District Court trial which began Sept. 24, 1969 and ended Feb. 18, 1970.

The five defendants convicted of inciting rioting were sentenced to five years in prison and fined $5,000. Two other defendants were acquitted of all charges.

Judge Hoffman, however, sentenced all seven defendants to prison terms for contempt. The sentences ranged from 2 months to 2 1/2 years.

The lawyers handling the appeal filed briefs in the spring charging that the landmark U.S. Supreme Court decision of Mayberry vs. Pennsylvania-handed down after Hoffman ruled-showed Judge Hoffman erred in imposing contempt sentences at the conclusion of the trial.

Weinglass said he expected the government would ask that the contempt charges against the five defendants be sent down for retrial in a different court.

U.S. Atty. William J. Bauer also said that a four-year contempt sentence imposed on Bobby G. Seale, chairman of the Black Panther Party, is valid. Seale, an original defendant, was severed and a mistrial declared for him

Allen's Alley gifts gadgets
GREAT things for your room
Store hrs. Mon.-Wed. Sat. 10-6 Thurs. Fri. 10-9 Sun. 1-5
Rt. 9 (next to Friendly's)

Amherst Audio's 2nd Annual Scratch and Dent SALE
FRIDAY AND SATURDAY ONLY!!
Non Scratched Sale Specials

RECORDS - ALL
$4.98 LIST - $2.99
$5.98 LIST - $3.99
$6.98 LIST - $4.39

TAPES
All Original 8 Tracks $4.85 ea. Tape Regardless of List.
"No Brand" Tapes - $2.75 ea.
Sample Selection: Who's Next James Taylor Aqua Lung etc.

DEMO COMPONENTS (some of these machines were scratched just for this sale.)
(1) GARRARD SL95 B Changer with deluxe wood base and new Shure M91E car tridge. List $214.35 $109.00
(1) DUAL 1218 automatic turntable with base, dust cover, and M91E $125.00
(2) PIONEER SA-900 Integrated Amplifier 100 watts rms. List $259.95 $200.00
(1 pair) EPI Model 202 Loudspeakers, 2 8" Woofers, 2 1" Tweeters in each cabinet. Frequency response — 3DB 27-18,000 HZ. List $398.00/pair $220.00
(1 pair) KLH Model six loud speakers the pair $177.00
SONY 630 D three head tape deck, close-out special $250.00

Any Item on the Tape and Cassette Maintenance Rack for a Dollar Save up to Eight Bucks.

USED EQUIPMENT
AR turntable (used 2 hrs.) complete with M91E cartridge $70.00
AKAI 150D cross field head tape deck-like new-list $249.95 $135.00
AMPEX 1100 real tape deck-as is special-(great for dubbing) $55.00
TURNTABLES
BSR Model 5500 changer complete with base, cover, and ceramic cartridge $25.00
GARRARD SL95B - base, dust cover, and cartridge (pickering V15 AME) $60.00
GARRARD 40 MKII - base, cover and grado cartridge $25.00
GARRARD 40B Base, Cover, Grado Cartridge $22.00
GARRARD SL55B with base $40.00
BOGEN Manual Turntable $20.00
TEAC 401S Open Reel Tape Deck, needs belts and alignment. List $499.95 as is $175.00
(2) STANDARD Cassette Decks, last year's finest. List $169.95 ea $90.00
CRAIG 2705 AM-FM Cassette Player-Recorder w/o Speakers. List $199.95 $99.00
*Unless specified, all used equipment is guaranteed to work for seven days.

197 NO. PLEASANT ST. AMHERST AUDIO OPEN FRIDAY TILL 9 P.M.

NES Tutoring Sunday; You Can Help

The Northern Educational Service tutoring program will have its fourth tutor orientation session this Sunday at 1:30 PM in the Campus Center Auditorium. Previous sessions keyed on some basic tutoring background. This Sunday's presentation will have Phil Christensen from the School of Education as the main speaker.

Previous sessions covered such aspects of tutoring within the educational structure of NES, the resources available for tutoring, some of the problems of the NES target areas in Springfield, and the excitment or nervousness of the first meeting of a college student and a tutee of a different age, race and socio-economic background.

The above aspects of education can only be dealt with generally by a tutoring organization that has approximately 250 registered volunteers. As of this date approximately half have been assigned to tutees in Springfield. The matching procedure is a difficult task involving many variables such as subjects to be tutored, day and times both tutors and tutees find mutually available. Therefore there is always a need for more tutors, so if you are interested in tutoring on a one to one basis please come to the NES Office in room 105 of the Campus Center and sign up.

The key to success in such a program like NES is involvement and a personal interaction of tutor and tutee. Students often believe that the program is purely a tutoring activity when actually it is the interaction of people on many levels with educational alternatives in mind.

Previous orientation sessions have demonstrated alternative methods of education such as the use of games, group activities and the advantage of one to one educational experience. This Sunday's talk by Mr. Christensen will cover the more or less "religious" aspects of education.

Mr. Christensen will give a speech titled the 180 Degree Curriculum Change. This will be the basic text but he has also been invited to comment on the School of Education's Modular Credit System and the future of Modular Credit for the school as a whole.

This Sunday's talk will explode for the listencr the many myths we all have about education and schools in general. Public schools have a very powerful middle class orientation-this basically creates a need for such a program like NES of Springfield to help those kids who do not match these ideals.

The basic reason for this Sunday's talk by Mr. Christensen is the fact that most college students are the product of 13 years of middle class educational practices and we hope generally to change these for some alternative approaches. Then the question settles on the tutor as how middle class does he or she want to be in working for NES.

Therefore the uniting point of this Sunday's meeting will be the marriage of methods with ideas for each tutor personally. The public is also invited to hear Mr. Christensen in what should be a very interesting evening.

The key to success of any tutoring or educational experience is rapport. The above is the critical first meeting of a tutor and her tutee at the NES Hancock Street Center in Springfield.

Sitting With Binoculars on the Bay

SAN BRUNO, Calif. (AP)—The next time anyone dumps unauthorized fill in San Francisco Bay, he'd better look over his shoulder. Sylvia Gregory of the Baywatchers may be watching.

Using a pair of 98-cent binoculars, Mrs. Gregory spotted something suspicious while hospitalized with a broken leg last month.

Her daughter, Diana, had brought her the binoculars so she could get a closeup view of jet planes going in and out of neighboring San Francisco International Airport.

"Suddenly I noticed this cloud of dust near the bay shoreline-a danger signal that someone's dumping," said Mrs. Gregory, a member of the conservationist Baywaters group, which has members throughout the bay area on the lookout for illegal filling.

"Then I saw some red dirt trucks and some blue ones that showed up beautifully with the binoculars," she said in an interview.

Mrs. Gregory telephoned Pat Lloyd, another Baywatcher, who hurried over, photographed "the dirty business and got in touch with Inspector Hans Lamm of the Army Corps of Engineers.

It turned out the fill work was being done for a new airport taxiway. "We were trying to level off and clean up," an airport statement said. "Our boys ... inadvertently pushed too much dirt over the slope into the marshland."

"The amount of dirt was far more than necessary to protect the shore," said Lamm, who issued a "desist and removal" order to Lowrie Paving Co. and S.J. Swindle and Arndt Construction Co., the contractors.

The Bay Area Conservation and Development Commission and Army engineers look to groups like Baywatchers to help spot illegal attempts to fill in more of the bay.

"These volunteer groups are really our enforcement arms and we're quite thankful for them," William Travis of the commission said Thursday.

Since 1865, San Francisco Bay has shrunk by about one-third as tidal marshes and mudflats were filled to accommodate urban growth along its shores.

BELL'S
The Super Pizza
Open
11 to 2 a.m. Fri. & Sat.
1 a.m. Sun. to Thurs.
Free Delivery
Tel: 256-8011 - 253-9051

MAKE IT A POINT
TO CHECKOUT
THE SHOE-BIN
CAMPUS FOOTWEAR
SHOES
BOOTS
HIKERS
MOCCASINS
CLOGS
WORK SHOES
in the alley
(off Main St.)
Open Fri. til 9

ROOM TO MOVE
Campus Drug
Drop-In Center
CALL 5-0400
24 HOURS A DAY
7 DAYS A WEEK

NEW SHIPMENT
Landlubber
Big & Small Bell
Blue Jeans
WEARHOUSE

AFTER THE GAME
D. J.
AT
The English Pub

FACES OF EARTH
159 NORTH PLEASANT STREET, AMHERST
Next To The Post Office
Open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday thru Saturday

Army Woolen O.D. Overcoats	used $11.95
Army Sateen Overcoats w/liners	used $ 7.95
Blue Woolen Air Force Coats	used $11.95
Officers Wool Garbardine Overcoats	used $16.95
Air Force Parkas w/fur lined hood	used $34.95
Air Force Style Parka w/fur lined hood 8.8 oz. Dacron fill	new $49.95
English Navy Blue Woolen Great Coats	used $25.95
Pea Coats	used $ 9.75
Field Jackets	used $ 6.50

Ex-Gangster Tries Again: Doesn't Make It

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP)—Ted Walters, a gangster once compared to his contemporaries Bonnie and Clyde, died on a rural road Thursday with a Texas Ranger's bullet in his head rather than be jailed again.

Walters' last desperate bid for freedom ended midway between Dallas and Fort Worth as he held four members of a family hostage. They escaped unhurt.

A former member of the Hamilton gang which terrorized the Southwest in the 1930's, Walters spent more than 20 years in Alcatraz and Leavenworth. He had been free on federal parole since May.

In the 1940's, he told a interviewer, "I'd rather be shot down like a mad dog than have the cops take me."

Walters, 58, started his last brush with the law Wednesday night.

A Euless, Tex., policeman stopped his car for investigation. A shootout erupted and Walters fled on foot carrying a shotgun. He suffered a minor wound. The policeman was uninjured.

A night-long manhunt by law officers followed. About daybreak, Hoyt Houston, 49, had just finished breakfast in his Bedford home, three miles from Euless. He went out to a small boat shed to return a kitten to its box, noticed a pair of shoes in the kitten box, looked around, and saw a man sprawled across the seats in his boat. It was Walters.

Together they went into the house. Mrs. Houston, who was there with her 5-year-old daughter Jana, saw Walters was hurt and offered to clean the wound.

The Houstons' other daughter, Pam, 15 hearing the commotion, slipped out a window and ran to a neighbor for help.

As Mrs. Houston was applying first aid to the gunman, police knocked on the door.

Walters told Mrs. Houston to open it and tell the police everything was quite all right. She did so. But the police were suspicious and didn't go away.

Walters ordered the family into the family car. He made Houston sit in front with his wife and nearly hysterical small child at his side, and kept a gun pointed at Houston's head from the back seat. Within minutes the Houston car was halted on a little bridge.

Lawmen at the roadblock tried to talk him into surrendering. Walters wouldn't listen.

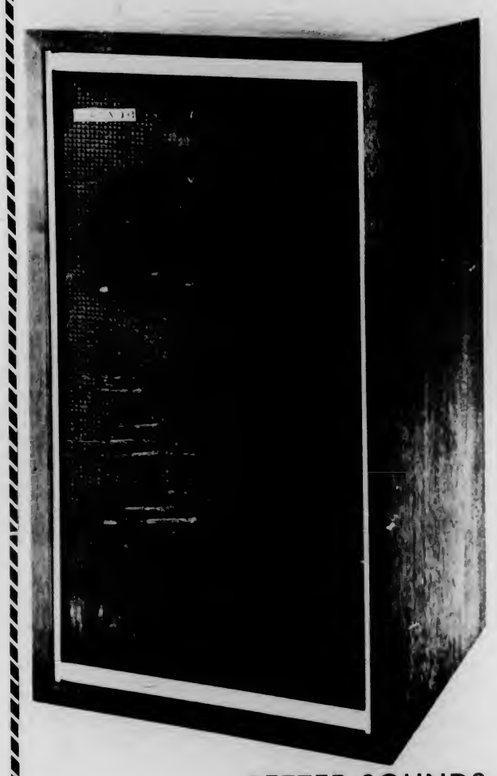
While the gangster's attention was momentarily diverted, Texas Ranger Tom Arnold raised his rifle and fired from 100 feet away. The shot hit Walters in the head. Four more pistol shots slammed into Walters from closer range.

Walters was once a member of the gang led by the notorious Hamilton brothers, Raymond and Floyd, who made headlines in the 30's with Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow. Since then he had dropped from sight behind penitentiary walls.

Walters was one of the few who made a bid to get away from Alcatraz. Shot scaling a fence around the prison, he plunged into the icy waters of San Francisco Bay. When fished out an hour later, he was paralyzed with cold.

University Lost & Found

The University Lost & Found is located in the 1st floor coat check room of the Campus Center. Articles lost or found on campus, must be turned in there to be recorded.



Articles in storage from last spring semester and this summer will be distributed to charitable institutions at the end of this fall's mid-semester date.

We have some articles with names on them who haven't a current address or phone at student information (5-1515).

Operational hours are Mon. thru Sat., 8 A.M. to 7 P.M. and 1 P.M. to 8 P.M. on Sundays.

You may check coats etc. free, during these hours also.

Trade-in Sale
A SPEAKER^TO BLOW YOUR MIND . . .NOT YOUR POCKETBOOK
OUR ADC 303AX

We believe the ADC 303AX to be the finest bookshelf speaker available. We were initially skeptical that the 303AX could live up to it's advance billing - until we heard it.
Let your ears make believers of you.

EXPERIENCE THE CLARITY AND TRANSPARENCY OF OUR HIGH EFFICIENCY ADC 303AX AGAINST YOUR AZTEC
EPI
KEMP
KLH
OR ANY OTHER BOOKSHELF SPEAKER.

THE ADC 303AX REGULARLY SELLS FOR $110, BUT OUR UNUSUALLY LARGE TRADE-IN ALLOWANCES, THIS WEEK, MAKE IT EASY FOR YOU TO UPGRADE YOUR SYSTEM.

BETTER SOUNDS COST YOU LESS
THE LISTENING POST AUDIO CENTRE
25 So. Pleasant St., Amherst
Open Evenings till 9 p.m.
186 Main St., Northampton
Open Thursday till 9 p.m.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF — Richard C. Hanson
MANAGING EDITOR — David D. Williams
BUSINESS MANAGER — James Gold
EXECUTIVE EDITOR — Barry J. Rubenstein
NEWS EDITOR — Anne C. Sladnicki
SPORTS EDITOR — Earle T. Barroll

PHOTO EDITOR — Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR — Robert Nesti

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR — Nathan Gorenstein
NEWS STAFF — Steve Fine
SPORTS — Bob Medeiros, Dan Kamal, Metawampe, Roberta Ann Gurnett
EDITORIAL — Alan Chapman, Barbara Brecher
DARKROOM — Bill Manburg
AD LAYOUT

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administration read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.
Unsigned editorials represent the views of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, and letters represent the personal views of the writers.

Good For You

Though often characterized as a "hotbed of apathy", the UMass community yesterday took a giant step to dispel the image which has haunted it for the past few years. This label has in the past been verified by the actions, or lack of them, of the student body, the halls of the Campus Center were the scene yesterday of a significant action by a significant portion of the student population.

In the past few weeks, the response to the voter registration movement has been feeble at best and many, including ourselves, were beginning to wonder if students were actually going to neglect the use of the franchise which had been so difficult attaining.

Yesterday, though, the story was far different. According to an unofficial figure about 450 people registered at the Campus Center yesterday. Although this figure might seem unimportant on a campus this size, there are two factors which make this turnout a substantial effort.

First of all, some of the people who intend to vote in Amherst have already registered. Although the rate was small, estimated at about twelve per day, the total amount was not one that could be ignored. Secondly, and more importantly, it has been strongly indicated that a large proportion of the student body have registered in their home towns. This aspect has been overlooked and generally not considered in condemnations of the apathy of students.

That the 450 total was significant can be judged from the response of one of the registrars. "We couldn't have handled many more. We've been busy all day."

A great deal of the credit for yesterday's success should go to John Stevens who, more than any other individual, is responsible for the success of the registration drive. His effort kept the drive going.

However, more than any individual, the praise for yesterday's turnout should go mainly to those who registered. It was they who demonstrated, in the face of growing skepticism, that many students do care enough to want a voice in community and national affairs. Though the stigma of apathy still engulfs the community, 450 people yesterday managed to escape its curse.

Arms For The Poor

(Ed. Note: This article was reprinted from the 10/4/71 issue of I. F. Stone's Bi-Weekly.)

The United States is like a man with a brood of hungry, brawling children who insists on keeping an elephant as a house pet. The pet is the Pentagon, and the annual discussion of its huge needs has just begun again in the Senate, as usual with far too little public attention. It looks as though total spending for military purposes this fiscal year will again be about $80 billion, or as much as at the peak of the Vietnam war. Half that amount spent every year for ten years could go a long way toward cleaning up this country, its prisons, its pollution, its schools, its slums. Even the much smaller "peace dividend" from the winding down of the Vietnam war would help at a time when we're stingily shaving 7 cents a day off the meagre school lunches for poor children.

The Peace Dividend Is Gone

But the peace dividend, too, has disappeared in the Pentagon's hungry maw. The "incremental" cost of the Vietnam war, the conservative way the military figure it, will be down from its $24 billion peak to $8 billion this fiscal year, or a saving of $16 billion. The army will be reduced a million men by the end of the fiscal year, a saving of $10 billion. Eliminate the overlap and you still have a saving of $20 to $22 billion. Deduct $12 to $14 billion for military pay raises and inflation—again a liberal estimate—and you still have a net peace dividend of somewhere between $8 and $10 billion. That, too, has disappeared in current budget requests.

The arms race grows more costly and insane, but the fight against it is weakening. Fear of more unemployment is the military's strongest ally. Local pressure from both business and labor makes itself strongly felt in the Senate. The first three major votes on the new defense procurement authorization bill were overwhelmingly defeated. From a long range point of view, the most important was Humphrey's motion to put MIRV funds in escrow until we see the outcome of the SALT talks. MIRV is the single most destabilizing, dangerous and expensive new escalation of the arms race. For the past five years the military, with its industrial and scientific allies, has worked to make MIRV a fait accompli; to limit any agreement on strategic weapons to the number of missiles, allowing a qualitative race to put more and "better" warheads on each missile. Humphrey would have put a stop to any more MIRVing by embargoing this year's funds. Nixon "does not hesitate," he told the Senate, "to take $12 billion in funds appropriated by Congress for hospitals, sewers, food" and put them in escrow. But arms funds are sacred. The motion was beaten Sept. 24, 39 to 12.

McGovern had no better luck the day before. His motion would not have cut this year's budget at all but given the Congress greater leeway when next year's budget comes up. He would have required the President next year to present along with his military budget (1) an alternative budget showing what the military establishment would look like if cut to $60 billion, as suggested in the "Counterbudget" presented by the Urban Coalition and (2) recommendations for job-creating civilian programs to alleviate any hardships caused by the cut in weaponry. "I think that something more useful could be thought up," Fulbright said with admirable understatement at one point in the debate, "than an obsolete weapon." McGovern argued at another point, "military spending is a very poor creator of jobs per dollar spent...a given level of spending in high technology area produces many fewer jobs than the same number of dollars would provide in such priority areas as housing and transportation." But no one was so tactless as to mention that arms spending is a form of welfare for the rich; it may be a poor creator of jobs but it is a major producer of profits. McGovern's motion was beaten 46 to 36.

As always the annual debate was preceded by a "gap" scare, and as usual the scare made headlines while the rebuttal didn't rate the shipping pages. Though the U.S. spends almost half the world's arms bill, and about twice as much as the Soviet Union, it is constantly in danger (according to the Joint Chiefs of Staff) of becoming a second-rate power; to hear their melancholy tales, Mexico is liable to retake the Alamo any day now. This year's gap scare was that the Soviets had secretly developed a new swing-wing bomber, and put the U.S. five years behind in strategic bomber development. Proxmire replied in the Senate Sept. 21 that this Soviet plane was discussed by Laird in his annual defense report two years ago, when he said prototypes had already been produced and tested; its inferiority to the FB-111 (already operational in the Strategic Air Command) is discussed in the 1970-71 edition of Jane's All The World's Aircraft; it is a medium bomber (a fact Pentagon propaganda withheld), a potential threat to China or Western Europe, not the U.S., and in any event (as Proxmire said) "is only the latest in a long line of Soviet prototype aircraft, few of which ever go into production." Finally Proxmire drew from Chairman Stennis of Senate Armed Services an admission on the Senate floor that "their (the Soviet's) bomber forces are old and their capability is not as great as ours." That, too, is an understatement; Laird's own budget presentation this year showed that we have three times as many heavy bombers as the Soviet and that their fleet is still declining.

Even In North Vietnam

But none of this had any effect on the Senate when McGovern's motion to slow up development of the B-1, a new strategic bomber, came up. The strategic bomber is obsolete, a rich nation's luxury to keep bomber admirals happy. Fulbright pointed out that if ABMs can shoot down missiles flying at 5,000 miles an hour, they could certainly shoot down the bigger and far slower target of a strategic bomber. McGovern, one of the few bomber pilots in Congress, pointed to what is happening in the skies over North Vietnam. There we are afraid to use our B-52s because they are so vulnerable even to the "rather primitive" SAMs the Soviets have given Hanoi. If strategic bombers cannot safely operate there, how could they penetrate the better defended Soviet Union?

McGovern would have cut the $370 million asked this year for the B-1 to $31 million, restricting all work on it to research and holding up on prototypes. The B-1 is variously estimated to cost from $40 to $75 billion over the next decade. If the big war ever comes, bombers will do their crazy work when it's all over anyway. But the Senate voted McGovern down on a voice vote—he didn't ask for a roll call because only about 12 votes for his motion were visible. So the military juggernaut rolls on. why can't the press pay more attention to this debate, especially since it is only the first round? After the authorization must come the appropriation bill, a second chance to cut the monster's feed allowance. Is there no way to rouse the country against this waste of funds and march to destruction?

Art Buchwald

"Let A Thousand Flowers Bloom"

WASHINGTON—TOP SECRET
MEMORANDUM:
FROM: Wang Po –anti-imperialist Secret Agent 655 (code name Egg Roll), Washington, D.C.
TO: Chu Ping Pi, Political Bureau, Peking
SUBJECT: Situation in the United States at present time vis-a-vis Nixon's trip.

1–There is great confusion here in Washington concerning who is in charge of the American government. President Nixon has been photographed in public and, to prove he was in good health, the capitalist newspapers showed him greeting Emperor Hirohito in Alaska.

2–The big mystery is what has happened to Vice President Spiro Agnew. He has not been photographed with President Nixon for six months. The man who has seemed to replace Agnew in power is the secretary of the treasury, John Connally, who always seems to be at Nixon's side.

3–Another mystery which has most U.S.-watchers confused is that the Supreme Court is now down to seven members. Nixon has promised to appoint two more members but so far he has been unable to find anyone with the same idological philosophy. This has led many observers to believe that there is a power struggle going on in the Department of Justice between the moderates and Martha Mitchell. Martha Mitchell still seems to wield great influence in the government and some believe she is the real power behind the attorney general.

4–Walter Hickel, the former secretary of the interior, is no longer under house arrest in Alaska.

Nixon met with himrecently, indicating a softening of a hard-line stand he took six months ago. In a speech to the Veterans of Foreign Wars the President said, "Let a thousand flowers bloom," which indicated the Nixon government would welcome advice. But two days later the party line changed again, when Spiro Agnew told a Republican fund-raising dinner in Texas that if there was any criticism of the President he would personally purge the dissidents.

5–One of the reasons for the confusion in Washington is that the United States is in serious economic condition and a wage-price freeze has been in effect, which has caused a great deal of bitterness among the workers. The campaign to produce more for Richard Nixon has not succeeded, and few people now are waving their Little Red Books with the "Thoughts of Nixon" at chamber of commerce rallies.

6–Postmaster General Blount has called for an economic boycott against France because France won't help the United States solve its drug problem. The U.S. government said it didn't agree with the postmaster general so there is a power struggle going on there. No one can predict the outcome but Walter Hickel has invited the postmaster general to live with him in Alaska.

7–The opposition party is still in disarray although the Democrats are hoping for a Cultural Revolution in 1972.

8–If you are confused in Peking as to what is going on in Washington, so are most of the American people. The Washington Senators have been exiled to Texas. This has caused great speculation in diplomatic circles as to who will be the next to go.

9–As for Henry Kissinger's visit to Peking next week, my advice is to meet with him and try to have him explain what the political situation is in the United States. If he can't come up with satisfactory answers, I would suggest that Chou En-lai call off the meeting with Nixon. It would be a mistake to talk to Nixon while there is so much chaos in the United States.

10–I will need some more money. You can't believe the prices since Nixon started his War on Inflation.

'I'LL NEED YOUR HELP ON THIS ONE!'

Letters To The Editor

Repent, Ye Sinners

To the Editor:

I would like to respond to the comments of Howard A. Berger in the Collegian in reference to the SAM signs painted throughout the campus.

First, last spring's pledge class painted these signs not as a "practical joke", but as an expression to the University community of the pride they felt in the organization they were about to join. Within 24 hours, both the brotherhood and pledges realized that, whatever the motives for the signs being painted, a serious error had been made. We were immediately in contact with Whitmore to try to remove the signs, and efforts have persisted to this day to find a feasible means to remove the "defacement". Short of sandblasting, we have not found any way to remove the signs without additional damage being done to the surfaces. At this time, the resources of our fraternity do not allow us to bear the considerable expense of sandblasting, and we have not embarked on a less expensive method which would complicate the damages to the surfaces.

It is with the realization that some people would react as Mr. Berger has, that we have acted and will continue to act to remedy our mistake as swiftly as we can; a mistake which is far more detrimental to SAM than any other segment of the University community. Until we can find and implement our solution, we can do little but publicly express our regret over what has happened and ask for the understanding and tolerance of the University community.

Rocky Hodgson
Sigma Alpha Mu

Have It Your Way

To the Editor:

Those of us not privy to the secrets of the Universe must stand in awe of the detective work evidenced by the "Young Workers' Liberation League" in their Moratorium Day broadside. They have discovered in American foreign policy the machinations of a sinister Corporate Conspiracy that oppresses foreign workers for its own gluttony. Right on!

But the "Young Workers" want to have it both ways. They seem to think the business-government syndicate is singularly powerful. If that thesis is true, the syndicate would have to be singularly stupid as well, to: (1) permit a protracted conflict in resource-rich Vietnam instead of massive and rapid extermination of non-capitalistic elements; (2) to support a long war that generates an inflation to hinder corporate planning and threaten full value repayment of debts; (3) to tolerate a corporate profits tax that consumes about one-half of returns on investment; (4) to witness phlegmatically the confiscation of copper mines in Chile; (5) to permit the continued rantings of groups like the "Young Workers," who would have been speedily squelched in several "Workers' Paradises" one can think of.

Stranger things have happened in the cuckoo-land of the student ("Worker"?) revolutionary movement, but it is comforting to see that their penchant for implicit contradiction persists while empires fall.

Clark T. Irwin, Jr.

Gordian Knot

To the Editor:

Perhaps M. Guy Ross can untie another Gordian Knot for the benefit of this campus. If students are so smart, why do they go to school?

Mark Johnson

At Ravenna

Despite a sparrow
I come back to you,
my head between my arms,
and I think: why
is night black?
The sun replies
in half-eaten intervals,
sinks down,
grinds to a halt,
and the mechanics
of precision, left on the tree,
are fulfilled
by your sweaty wonder.
We left the bed at four o'clock.
No wonder the bird cries!

Jerome Nathanson

Big H

Have you heard the word?
Harrison's back.
Spent the summer in Corsica - sunning on sordid beaches,
Painting in the blue-deep coves.
He met a girl - the girl.
Long, brown hair; eyes as black as a bat.
So he says.
Can you imagine -- the girl!
What the world has been waiting for for centuries.
Venus Adonna, Mary Magdalene, Florence Nightingale, and Raquel Welch all rolled into one.
Says he can't remember exactly.
Lost all recollection of time.
Like the world stopped turning and his mind took off into space,
And he was engulfed by this pungent feeling and ever in front of him this beautiful face.
Lips and eyes and nose, but mostly lips.
Like the parting of the continents with the seas flowing in between.
Sweet juices of life.
Yeh, it was good.
But you know how it is.
She comes and she goes.

Swan Song

"Sweet Jesus," he thought,
"If I get through this one..."
Not that it really matters—Or does it.
He shouldn't take it so seriously.
After all it isn't a matter of life and death.
He'll still be alive tomorrow no matter what.
That's the biggest kick. Maybe it's harder to go on living, to really face up to yourself.
"Shit, what difference does it make?
Let the bastards tear me to pieces.
As long as I give it all I've got,
there's no reason to be ashamed.
The joke's on them anyway."

910 rr

Rest In Peace

The angry face of time scowls the hours away.
The tired face of time sleeps all day.
And the withered face of time whithers the flowers away.
I wonder if my roses will bloom again today.
I cannot be expected to live a carefree life if all my time must so be spent,
Listening to the pleas of the guilty innocent,
And raking up the leaves of yesterday.
Perhaps our General's war has cried you all to sleep.

A Question - And Answers

The question of homosexuality is now, more than ever, one which modern society must face openly. The following article, submitted by individuals belong to the Student Homophile League is one of the first attempts to publicize information concerning the subject. Bear in mind that the following paragraphs were written by specific individuals in an attempt to deal honestly and constructively with the issues. What follows is not intended as a statement of group position, nor will it give specific advice to any individual; it is written under the assumption that one acts more responsibly when one is best informed.

QUESTION: What are the options open to someone who feels he or she may be a homosexual?

In dealing with one's supposed homosexuality, as in dealing with any of the crucial issues in one's life, there are several avenues which may be followed.

FIRST: One may choose to ignore the issue, feeling that a direct confrontation with the facts may not be in one's best interest at the present time. Homosexuality does not necessarily imply a sexual frigidity or impotence with regard to one's relationships with the opposite sex. Usually it merely implies a sexual preference, either in fantasy or reality, to have meaningful sexual experiences with members of the same sex. Many homosexuals find it easy and beneficial to marry, to raise children, and to blend in favorably with the straight world that surrounds them. Yet among the happiest of those who do marry and raise a family are those who have found a constructive way to express their inner feelings and desires.

SECOND: For some, the most rational option is an attempt to rid themselves of all homosexual feelings, in other words, "to go straight". For most people who choose this route, professional consultation, either with a psychologist or psychiatrist, proves to be the valuable and rational source of aid. Not all people who seek professional aid in "going straight" do succeed in accomplishing their goal. Success is due in large part ot a combination of the following factors: (1) the desire to become totally heterosexual must be paramount, (2) the relative age of the individual must be young (under 30), (3) a degree of past success with heterosexual relationships must be evident.

Bear in mind, also, that not all professionals, those with PhD's and MD's beside their name, believe in the possibility or necessity of an individual's becoming "totally straight". A fourth factor to consider, therefore, in seeking aid is the degree of dedication any certain professional has in helping one to reach one's goals.

THIRD: For those who have felt no desire nor any success inexercising the above two options, the option of honest acceptance, and discrete self-admission often proves to be most advantageous. Most of the membership of the Student Homophile League candidly admit to themselves and to each other that the decision to accept their own homosexuality was one of the most beneficial decisions they have ever made. Through SHL, they have found new ways of confronting the various implications of their feelings in relation to the world in which we all live. Without SHL, many admit they would lost at times in the alienating world of "straight" society.

To those of you who have read this article and who may still desire more information on the issue, the members of the Student Homophile League invite and welcome any questions, either by phone, in person, or in writing. If the demand for information is great enough, and if the editors of this paper are so willing, we will attempt further columns on these issues in the coming months. Feel free to drop by at the Student Homophile League office, room 413E, Student Union or call 545-0154.

"Call The NASA Space Center — I've Got An Idea For Another Trip Before November 1972"

There's Baloney In Your Baloney

WASHINGTON AP—A carton of eggs with four substandard eggs is still a Grade AA carton. A package of bologna with 31 per cent fat is cleared for sale. So is a chicken containing 13 per cent water.

The handbooks of federal food inspectors and graders don't read that way, but the guidelines they follow mean that consumer protection laws tend to bend here and there in practice.

The bending, in official parlance, is called tolerances. In consumer terms, it's an expensive practice. For example, the General Accounting Office has estimated that a 1 per cent increase in the water content of poultry costs consumers $32 million a year.

While federal laws forbid interstate sales of any food, drug or cosmetic that is adulterated or misbranded, government regulators follow a guiding principle that can't be found in a law book.

Here's how the principle works: Regulators look at, say, the spice processor they regard as the nation's most efficient, and determine that the best he can do is keep the number of whole dead insects in each lot at four. Therefore, four or less is tolerable; more than four is illegal.

The regulatory process involves "recognizing that although you strive for perfection, you don't get it," said Thomas Brown, head of compliance in the Food and Drug Administration's Bureau of Foods.

The FDA acknowledged that it has a set of secret administrative guidelines for food. Brown provided specific examples of the tolerances but refused to provide a complete copy.

In the other bastion of federal food inspection, the Agriculture Department, the tolerances and guidelines tend to be public.

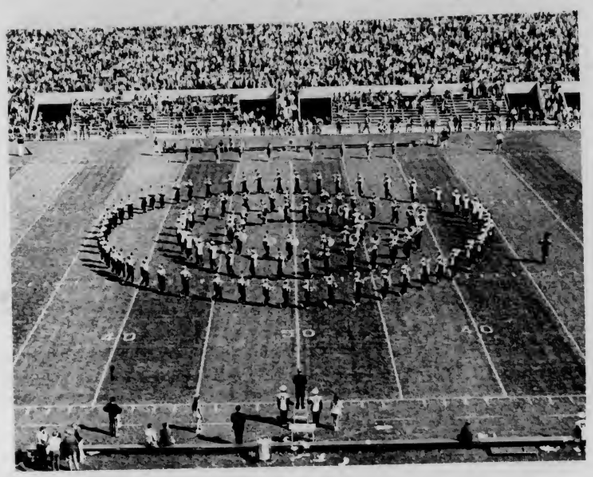
The department's regulations on water in poultry originally specified that no bird could absorb more than 12 per cent water while being dipped in ice water to cool the carcass. But in drawing up the guidelines, the department permitted a fifth of the birds to absorb as much as 13 per cent and still pass inspection.

Regulations forbid sale of bologna, hot dogs and other cooked sausage products containing more than 10 per cent water. But the guidelines which interpret the regulations require automatic detention only of products containing more than 13 per cent water.

The system for regulating fat content in hot dogs is the same, but the figures are different. They can contain up to 30.6 per cent fat and be cleared routinely, or up to 31.6 per cent fat before inspectors clamp down.

Officials say they're confident the fat guidelines are effective because the department's retail sampling programs have shown that the average fat content of cooked sausage products is about 28 per cent.

Tolerances also crop up in the grading programs administered by the Department of Agriculture for olives, apples, lemons, eggs and virtually everything that grows.



The system for eggs is typical. Eggs are graded AA, A, B or C on the basis of size, shell condition, size and nature of the yolk and white, and location of the air cell.

A carton of AA eggs in a supermarket need contain only eight eggs of top grade. Two are permitted to be of Grade A quality. The eggs may be of lowest quality, meaning there might be small blood clots, visible germ development in the yolk or a cracked but non-leaking shell.

Asked why the tolerances were kept from the public is that some felt if you tell the industry this is the level at which you take action, the industry will take this level and shoot for it.

"Now comes the era of consumerism. I think the public has a right to know the level at which we'll take action.

"It's going to be a hell of a job explaining to the consumer. But it's better than having to explain every time why we don't release them."

This Saturday at the Football Stadium mum corsages will be sold. This sale is being sponsored by the Floriculture Club of Stockbridge College. Profits will be used for scholarships for Floriculture freshmen. Prices will range from $1.00 to $1.50. That's the UMass marching Band.

Fancy Pants
Like double knits or a really nice pair of wide wale cords for that special occasion.
The closest thing to you
Open Fri. til 9
WEARHOUSE
wear-else

Saturday Night
BLACK MAGIC
featuring
Natalie Cole
DANCING
9:30 - 12:30
50¢ COVER
at
The English Pub

PLAYMATE OF THE YEAR AWARD
"Perhaps the country's greatest authority in the field of consciousness-altering drugs"
- PLAYBOY
JOEL FORT, M.D.
speaks on:
"THE PLEASURE SEEKERS:
The Drug Crisis, Youth and Society"
Monday - Oct. 18 - 8p.m.
Student Union Ballroom
Coffee Hour: Colonial Lounge following lecture
Sponsored by dvp

sale
...a bright new concept in casual, contem porary, inexpensive accent-furniture for the young and the young-minded.
CAROUSEL disassembles, nests, ships and stores in incredibly little space. Assembly is instantaneous, requiring no tools whatsoever and the finished pieces will support 500 lbs.
Made in Denmork of wearproof, weatherproof polypropylene, CAROUSEL's 6 modular compenents and 6 mod-bright colors offer a world of interchongeable possibilities for juvenile ond adult seating, dining and entertaining.
*White *Yellow
*Blue *Orange *Black
*Olive Green *Red
BISTRO SET was - 34.00 NOW - 26.00
3 pc. set consists of: 2-H101/KNU stools 1-H104 KNU table
J104/KNU was - 17.00 NOW - 14.00 HIGH TABLE 22" DIA. X 28" H.
was $8.50 NOW $6.00 ADULT STOOL 12" DIA. X 18" H.
J102 KNU was - 13.00 NOW - 10.00 BARSTOOL 12" DIA. X 28" H.
J103/KNU was - 12.50 NOW - 10.00 LOW TABLE 22" DIA. X 18" H.
borders of our lives
Open Fridays til 9
253-9552

3,900 sq. mi. of Land For Sale In Florida

NEW YORK (AP)—If you know of anyone who would consider buying 2.5 million acres of Florida real estate for $1.625 billion, with only $487 million down, there's a man here who would like to hear from them.

The various parcels involved total more than the size of Delaware and Rhode Island together. At 3,900 square miles, they outmeasure Los Angeles County or Yellowstone National Park.

Peter Hilton, a business consultant who operates Corporate Diversification, Ltd., is trying to find a buyer for the properties, which are to be sold in one block.

Hilton said "The property has vast and varied development possibilities, with existing mineral deposits, forests, water homesites, recreational facilities, urban and rural tracts."

And while "almost totally unexploited to date," he added, the properties already are "generating several million dollars income annually."

"Who is the seller?" he was asked.

"I won't tell you," he said, "but it involves one family which has been accumulating the estate since 1892." The family strictly forbade identification, he said.

The parcels, he said, are held in various names by about 250 legatees, although the entire deal apparently can be transacted with the senior legatee, who is said to own 60 per cent of the acreage.

The land currently is held in a trust, Hilton said, adding that "because of diverse family interests it is preferable to liquidate in the toto in a single sale to one or multiple buyers simultaneously."

Here are some of the details or clues about "The Pandora Project" that Hilton is circulating among the heads of the country's largest corporations, whom he feels are the only ones capable of buying. The words are largely his.

—It is in various parcels in 25 different counties. The smallest is 348 acres and the largest 402,000 acres, or more than 600 square miles.

—There are more than 500 miles of water frontage on lakes, rivers, canals and the continental coast. Ninety-five per cent of the land is stated to be high, dry and fenced. More than 300 miles of paved highways skirt or traverse it.

—One 348-acre tract is bound on one side by a six-mile seawall recently built, and on the other almost entirely by a medium-size city. About 50 per cent of the land is an 18-hole golf course. A copy of the proposed zoning indicates 14,000 apartment suites could be built on the site.

Hilton said the price of the land at $710 an acre was developed after a two-year study by land appraisers, timbermen, assayers and bankers.

So far, he said, little progress has been made toward finding a buyer.

Interested?

Crisis In UMass Medical Care?

Amherst, Mass.--"We take it as axiomatic that the crisis in medical care is in the delivery and not in the nature of the care itself." This statement from the research proposal of a group of investigators at the University of Massachusetts pinpoints the urgent need for reorganization in our medical system, especially in the area of outpatient care.

The role of outpatient care in America is expanding enormously, but there is no organized body of knowledge which can be used to evaluate an existing outpatient facility or to help in designing a new one. Financed by $165,000 two-year grant from the U.S. Health Services and Mental Health Administration, an interdisciplinary team of researchers from the departments of industrial engineering and operations research and sociology hopes to remedy this situation.

The principal director, Dr. Edward J. Rising, and the co-principal investigators, Dr. Richard J. Giglio, Dr. Frank C. Kaminsky and Dr. Eugene Piedmont, plan to construct a general planning methodology which can be used to evaluate, design, and improve various types of outpatient facilties.

Mathematical-computer models of individual facilities at the University of Massachusetts Infirmary and Albany Medical College have already been constructed and implemented and have proved extremely effective in dealing with such problem areas as excessive waiting time for patients, proper scheduling procedures, and efficient staffing. The team plans to study and build models of several other facilities of varying types before synthesizing them into a general model operative for all outpatient facilities.

Since these facilities constitute a vast, costly system, the value of improving their effectiveness is self- evident. It has long been known that hospital inpatient facilities are overused and costly and that the doctor with his "little black bag" is an anachronism for most of our population. The team at the University of Massachusetts hopes to offer solutions for the planning and operation of outpatient facilities which appear to be the trend of the future in the delivery of medical care.

Three Cars Totaled

An auto accident involving three vehicles occured at the corner of Lincoln Ave. and Fearing Street yesterday afternoon at approximately 4:00 P.M.

All three vehicles were declared totaled by Amherst Police who responded to the call. Two of the operators received minor injuries and were treated.

One of the vehicles was owned by the Daily Collegian.

CollegeMaster
No. 1
in college sales
Fidelity Union Life Insurance Co.
21 Pray St. Amherst

COVER THE EARTH with Carter Overalls $7.49 All Sizes the closest thing to you Open Fri. til 9 Wearhouse wear-else

Room To Move
Drop-In Center
5-0500,
5-0401

Completely Restored
OLD WEIRD HAROLD'S
USED & NEW CLOTHES AND HANDICRAFTS
Overalls & Jumpsuits $4.50
Jeans $2.50 Workshirts $2.00
Flannel shirts $1.50
Sport Jackets $3.50 Denim Jackets $4.50
Shawls & Scarves $2.00
Leathers, corduroys, furs, sweaters, 13 button navy wool pants, field coats, parkas, authentic Pea coats, suedes, tunics, M-43's, M.B.T. pants & shirts, storm coats, boots, hats.
etc.
We would also like to be an inexpensive outlet for any handmade items (jewelry, pottery, weaving, macrame, woodwork, etc.)
Hours 11:00 a.m. - 11:00 p.m.
Mon. - Sat.
Tel. 586-3727

The Whopper®
BUY ONE GET ONE FREE
Lettuce–lots of it. And mayonnaise.
Juicy, red tomato slices.
Onions. What's a burger without 'em?
Crisp, crunchy pickles.
Pure beef through and through. Ketchup on top.
(Any wonder it takes two hands to hold it?)
WITH THIS COUPON
BUY ONE WHOPPER®
GET ONE FREE
Our famous broiled beef burger and all the trimmings
344 KING STREET
(Two blocks North of Kingsgate Plaza)
Northampton, Mass.
Our Hamburger Patties are quality assured by Swift & Co., Springfield, Mass.
Offer Expires Oct. 24, 1971
U.M.F.

Dems Warn Radicals Against Intimidation

WASHINGTON AP—Democratic National Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien warned Thursday against "attempts at intimidation or threats" from the far left or far right and said those unwilling to work for reform within the party should go elsewhere.

Speaking a day after party regulars smashed a move by reform elements to name Sen. Harold E. Hughes of Iowa to a key convention post, O'Brien told the Democratic National Committee that reform rules to guarantee minority rights do not permit anyone to make winning a requirement for staying in the party.

"Persons unwilling to participate in the work of the Democratic party on this democratic basis had better look elsewhere for a political home, fourth, fifth or sixth party notwithstanding," O'Brien said.

He declined to name a target but former Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy has said that failure by the Democrats to reform their party could lead to a fourth party of the left in the 1972 presidential election.

O'Brien made clear in talking to newsmen later that his words were not aimed at Hughes, who pledged to keep up his fight for reform within the party. O'Brien sidestepped making a similar disclaimer on McCarthy.

Mrs. Patricia Roberts Harris, the 47-year-old black attorney who beat Hughes for the post of acting chairman of the Credentials Committee with the backing of party regulars, pledged "obedience to the spirit and the letter of the guidelines" reforming delegate selection procedures.

"These rules are going to be obeyed," she said.

The credentials panel will deal with what is expected to be a large number of delegate challenges resulting from the guidelines developed by a special party commission and approved last February by the National Committee.

Mrs. Harris also said in a speech to the committee that reform was not the issue in her battle against Hughes "because this party has set its feet firmly on the road to full access for all interested persons to the Democratic party.

"We can leave that road only at the risk of wrecking that party-a wisk we do not intend to take," she said,-urging steps to repair what she termed "a continuing lack of trust" displayed in the fight over her election.

AIRCRAFT AIRLIFT-Spectators in foreground watch Wednesday as a giant helicopter ferries a twin-engine Cessna aircraft over Grand Central Parkway in New York City. The helicopter lifted the Cessna from LaGuardia Airport and transported it to the nearby grounds of the Academy of Aeronautics, where the aircraft will be used to train students. Police closed the parkway for about 15 minutes, while the operation was in progress.

Coming Soon: Bike Racks

Facilities for bicycle parking cannot be improved until about the first of the year, according to George A. Norton, Director of the Physical Plant. The lack of an operating budget for the current year has made it "impossible" for the University to purchase the racks needed, he told the Collegian today.

He said approximately 20 racks will be needed in the academic area and an unknown number in the dormitory area. The cost of a good quality rack is approximately $185.00.

Further delay is anticipated by Norton, who pointed out that the purchases must be sent out for bids. It takes about two weeks for a bidder to be chosen, orders must be processed and time is needed for delivery.

"If all goes well", Norton says, "the problem should be nearly eliminated before Spring of 1972."

WARM UP
with the
ENDLESS KNIGHTS on SATURDAY
(FOLLOWING THE GAME)
AT THE CHEQUERS
9:30 -12:30
Hoo-Rah-Rah: Rhode Island

Senate Committee Cuts Military Asst. By 20%

WASHINGTON (AP)-The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted 7 to 6 today to cut this year's Military Assistance Program by 20 per cent.

The vote came a day after the committee voted to put a ceiling on aid to Cambodia, an action that the State Department said could seriously threaten the ability of that Southeast Asian nation to defend itself.

Today's action, cutting the U.S. military aid to other nations from $765 million to $565 million, was taken after efforts to reduce the program even further failed on a series of 6 to 6 tie votes.

The committee voted Wednesday to impose a $250 million limit on military and economic aid to Cambodia for this fiscal year. The committee also voted to limit the American civilian and military personnel in Cambodia to 200.

FRANCONIA
FRANCONIA COLLEGE
FRANCONIA, N.H. 03580
Become the architect of your own education. Conceive it, describe it, construct it, and then achieve it.
Franconia is seeking qualified transfer students for Spring (Feb. 15) and Fall 1972 admission. Students who are ready to play an active role in planning their education are invited to apply.
For application, catalog or interview appointment contact Admissions, Box R.S.

Fall Harvest of Fashions
at Paraphernalia
featuring...
...bodysuits
...bodyshirts
...new shipment from India Imports
...and more
63 N. Pleasant St. Amherst
Open Friday nites till 9: 00 p.m.

Judgeships Available for Student Judiciaries
Applications Available: Rooms 109 & 111, Campus Center
Applications Due: Noon, Oct. 18
Selections: (by appointment) Tues. Evening, Oct. 19

Four Dates Given For Teaching Exams

College seniors preparing to teach school may take the National Teacher Examinations on any of the four different test dates announced today by Educational Testing Service, a nonprofit, educational organization which prepares and administers this testing program.

New Dates for the testing of prospective teachers are: November 13, 1971, and January 29, April 8, and July 15, 1972. The tests will be given at nearly 500 locations throught the United States, ETS said.

Results of the National Teacher Examinations are used by many large school districts as one of several factors in the selection of new teachers and by several states for certification or licensing of teachers. Some colleges also require all seniors preparing to teach to take the examinations. The school systems and state departments of education which use the examination results are listed in an NTE leaflet entitled Score Users which may be obtained by writing to ETS.

On each full day of testing, prospective teachers may take the Common Examinations which measure their professional preparation and general educational background and a Teaching Area Examination which measures their mastery of the subject they expect to teach.

Prospective teachers should contact the school systems in which they seek employment, or their colleges, for specific advice on which examinations to take and on which dates they should be taken.

The Bulletin of Information for Candidates contains a list of test centers, and information about the examinations, as well as a Registration Form. Copies may be obtained from college placement officers, school personnel departments, or directly from National Teacher Examinations, Box 911, Educational Testing Service, Princeton, New Jersey 08540.

Elmont, Swed Emerge Victors

On October 3, a University Whist Tournament was sponsored by Gorman House of Central Area as part of their new Social Program. Thirty students played valiently for the Whist Title, prizes, and Trophies. By midnight, two remained undefeated; In front of Third Place John Morse and Estelle Hardy of Gorman House and Second Place Paul Slack and John Boncoddo both of South Prospect St., Amherst, stood, or leaned, Al Elmont and Tom Swed, Victorious!

THE VICTORS

Sen. Javits Proposes Tax Cut For Job Increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., urged the Senate Finance Committee Thursday to add to President Nixon's tax cut bill a new tax credit plan designed to produce 500,000 additional jobs.

He said this would fill a gap in the President's proposals, adding that he saw little chance these would restore full employment.

Under the Javits amendment, an employer whose employes worked more man-days in the current year than the previous one would be eligible for a tax credit of $4 per man-day or about $1,000 per year.

A credit may be subtracted from taxes due. Javits estimated the total cost at $41.8 billion the first year.

Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., asked the panel to add to the $15.5 billion House-passed tax cut a $3.5 billion program designed to aid chiefly families at or below the poverty level.

Such families would be given federal payments to reimburse them for sales taxes paid on food and for state and local property taxes.

The South Carolinian's proposal also would include a tax credit of up to $325 per year for expenses paid by a family to send a child to college.

THE CHOPPING BLOCK
Adam and his staff are available evenings for free hair care classes and demonstrations for any men's or women's groups.

If it has to do with hair, (men's or women's) Adam and his staff will do it perfectly.
The Chopping Block is located at 26 Main St. Amherst, second floor. Open 9:00 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Mondays thru Fridays; 9 to 5 Saturdays. For appointment call 253-9293 or 253-9271.
Continental Coiffure

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

Volkswagen Bus, completely reworked and liveable in. $725. Call 253-9968, ask for Chris, Rm. #3.
tf10-18

1968 VW Fastback, $1100, good car and value. 545-0465.
tf10-21

'68 VW Camper, white, exc. cond., fact instld. gdyr. polyglass widetrds., 2 new studded snowtires, new valves/rings 40,000 miles, $2400 - 863-9249.
tf10-18

1964 Chevy Impala, 3 speed, hurst shifter with A 283 cu. in. Engine runs well, dependable excellent radio, $150. Call Jeff at 546-8913.
tf10-18

1971 Buick Opel wagon red AM-FM, 18000 mi., excellent condition, asking 2295 will talk. Call 863-8005 after 6 p.m.

69 VW Bug $1200 or Best Offer. Tel: 665-1107 after 5:30 exc. Tues.
tf 10-15

70 MGB exc. running cond. Must sell. 219-8193.
tf10-29

1968 Austin Healy Sprite - 38,000 miles, $600. Must sell. Call 253-2548. Ned after 9 p.m.
tf 10-18

1963 V.W. Bus. Runs well. $150. 546-5127
tf 10-15

1968 Cougar XR7. 253-7769 or 665-4152.
tf 10-15

1965 Dodge Coronet 440 Conv P.S. Auto. Very good condition. Best offer. Call 253-9653 after 6 p.m.
tf 10-18

65 Mustang, conv. 35p., good mechanical cond., straight six, 30 miles per gal., $250 or best offer. Call 549-1013 bet. 6:30 p.m.-10:00 p.m.
tf10-20

MOTORCYCLES FOR SALE

1968 Bultaco 360cc Elbandito. New eng., new clutches. Excel. shape. Must sell. $350 or best offer. Call 584-4066 anytime.
tf 10-15

Bultaco Metralla 250 CC, very fast, inspected, road racing fairing, 5 speed. Ask $495. Offers. 549-0017.
tf 10-15

1969 Triumph T100C Trophy 500, Mint condition, 8,000 miles. 546-7509.
tf 10-15

FOR SALE

Guitar - Fender Villager acoustic 12 string guitar, excellent condition. 546-7509.
10-15

Seasoned Firewood. Sale and delivery. Call 665-3631.
tf10-20

AM/FM/FM Stereo Radio-Cassette Player/ Recorder $170. Call Paul at 256-6967 after 6.
tf10-15

9' x 12' Tent; Sleeps 4-5 comfortably. Used one season. Asking $35 or make offer. Call Xavier 5-0858.
tf 10-19

65 Chevy with '68 rebuilt engine; new tires and shocks; runs well. Priced to sell fast; $450 or make offer. Call Xavier 5-0858.
tf 10-19

Kenwood 140-X Amp For Sale 200-Watts out used one year. List new $460. Will take best offer. Call Rich 253-6303.
tf 10-18

Guild F35 and F47 with hard cases. Call 6-9332.
tf10-21

Honeywell Pentax Spotmatic, 55MM., one year old, $165. Call 253-9968, ask for Chris in room #3.
tf10-18

200 MM Nikkor lens brand new, must sell immed., only $125 includes guarantee, and leather case. Call 549-6411
tf10-19

Fiat 68, Spydr. sell as parts, 337-6625.
tf10-18

Custom built amp. 100 wts. plus hatchingtwin spks. 12". Both beautifully constructed!! Can be seen at Guitar wkshp. in Northampton $250.
tf10-19

1970 Honda 350 Scrambler Good cond. $450, or best offer. Please call Bill, 549-6057.
tf 10-15

165-14 snow tires. Semperit Radials 2 mounted on MGB Disc wheels $50 pr. Call 549-6087.
tf 10-15

Classic black 4-door 1950 Mercedes Benz $250. Call Jeff Kelly 253-7303.
tf 10-15

Foreign Auto Parts Pirelli, Michelin, Bosch, Lucas, Meiric Hardware, Alfa Romeo spares, wheels, snow tires. Call Herb 256-8781
tf 10-19

Yamaha Classical guitar w/case. Exc. Cond. $80 Call Artie 201 Chadbourne 5-2680 or 5-2641.
tf 10-18

Bumper sticker - your words printed on 3 x 12" red or green sticker for $1, copies .25. The Snide Co. Route 1, Box 93 Blaine, Wash. 98230.
tf10-18

HELP WANTED

$50 for one day's labor. Roofing experience helpful. Roof a one story shed/tar paper & sealer. Call 533-6651 (Holyoke).
tf10-21

WANTED

Girls bike at least 3 speeds. Contact Mrs. Riley. Tel. 253-7151.
tf10-15

2 V.W. tires. 5.60 x 15. Ted 546-9231.
10-15

RIDE WANTED

To Baltimore or Washington D.C. Oct. 21 or 22, will share expenses. Call Susan 6-1471.
tf10-19

Ride wanted every Tue.-Thurs. to Palmer. Call 283-7708.
tf 10-15

FOR RENT

One bedroom Apt. Available Nov. 1. 1150 a month includes utilities. Call after 5 p.m. 665-2641.
tf 10-20

Town House Apt. to share with another girl in Amherst. Own room possible. Call 584-2273.
tf10-21

PERSONAL

BBII is 21! Hapy Birthday, Toots. Love, MB.
10-15

Pamela Nolan (Bright red lights on a Marquee!). Hope you enjoy it.
10-15

Serena: I hope that your nineteenth birthday is a memorable and happy one tomorrow. Love Steve.
10-15

Rm. 301 6-6822 organizational meeting for Cubha Mo. At U OWF.
tf10-15

Melville Basement invites James Basement and 8th floor to a party Friday night at 8.
tf10-31

ROOMMATES WANTED

Female roommates wanted $60 a month includes utilities, age 20-25. Call after 6 p.m. ask for Jean if no answer keep trying 586-2986.
tf10-15

Wanted-I need a place to live. Desire own room in a house or on a farm with other people. Call Mark at 256-8766.
tf10-15

APT. AVAILABLE

Ideal for advanced female grad. student, room and board, in lieu of assistance with 2 schoolage children 549-3653.

SERVICES

I'll fix your rough smokey car so it's just like new. Call Wendell at 256-8638. I fix Volkswagons too.
tf10-26

Auto Repairs. Points, plugs and minor engine repair. Winterize your car now. Call Wayne at 546-6535 or Al at 546-6447.
tf 10-15

I'll be more than happy to sew your new clothes. Call anytime and ask for Ann. 1-28 7892.
tf 10-15

TYPING

Expert typing done at home. Previous experience in theses work. Electric typewriter. Call 584-5377. Mrs. Orsini.
tf 10-18

Typing -theses, dissertations, etc. Fast, accurate; have Greek alphabet, math & chem. symbols. Call 253-3601.
tf10-18

Will type papers quickly, accurately, & inexpensively!! Call Steffi 6-8024. Please keep calling.
tf10-19

MUSICIANS

Versified good drummer w exp. Looking for estab. rock type band. Have place to practice! Call Scott 253-7210 nights.
tf10-19

REWARD

Reward-for finding a pair of black rim glasses, lost around Hampden Dining Commons (10/5). If found please call Don 6-8292.
10-15

ENTERTAINMENT

The Beatles in Yellow Submarine plus exciting shorts going steady Sat. Oct. 16 at 6, 8, 10 Mahar Aud. Join the fun this Homecoming Weekend.
tf 10-15

LOST

Guy who took grey suitcase (S.M.T.) on bus from Springfield to Amherst, please return it. I need my clothes. Nancy Jones 6-7916.
tf 10-15

Reward: Blue & green afghan in David's bag. Lost in C.C. Please return to "Lost & Found".
tf 10-20

Read Poor Richard's This Week

Notices

BELCHERTOWN VOLUNTEERS:
There will be a bus leaving Whitmore at 12:45 on Saturday for the State School. All interested people are welcome. There will be a meeting Monday at 8 p.m. in Rm. 168 CC for all interested in field trip.

CAMPUS CRUSADE FOR CHRIST:
Family time, 6:30 p.m. tonight. 971 CC; LTC, immediately following at 8:30; Don't forget College Life next Wed. at 8 p.m. PTL.

CEQ:
There will be a 'glass crushing party' (for recycling purposes) at the Amherst landfill, Sunday from 10 a.m. on. Everyone invited.

CHRISTIANS:
Bus leaving Sunday for Florence Cong. Church from Newman Center at 8:35; Bus station across from Morrill at 8:37; Hamlin House at 8:40; and Emerson house at 8:45.

COUNTRY COMFORT COFFEE HOUSE:
Country comfort coffee house Friday (today) at 8 p.m. in Crabtree basement. Performers and listeners invited.

HILLEL:
Friday evening services tonight 7:30 p.m. at the Hillel office.
Brunch Sunday 11 a.m. Commonwealth Room, SU. David Wyman speaking on the conflict within the American Jewish Community during the holocost. Lox and bagels.

INDEX:
Photo meeting at 6:30 on Monday in Rm. 401 SU.

JUNIORS AND SENIORS:
CUSP (Council of Undergraduate Psychology Majors) and the Psych dept. are sponsoring a Graduate School information night on Oct. 20 from 8-10 p.m. in Herter 231. Faculty members representing each area of the dept. will answer your questions. Later there will be time for faculty members to talk with students regarding a particular area of interest.

KENNEDY UPPER:
Six comedy classics tonight in Mahar Aud. 6:45-8:15-10 p.m.

NAIADS:
Please read Naiads bulletin board in WOPE to note schedule change. Composition work to begin Monday-- sign up for compositions, if you haven't.

OH RESIDENTS:
Everyone is welcome to attend the Free Mirkwood coffee house on Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Grayson main lounge.

OUTING CLUB:
Meeting Monday at 6:30 in Rm. 165 CC. Slides; upcoming trips; Halloween party at Knox Cove; Rock climbing; equipment sales; etc.

PRE LAW STUDENTS:
All students interested in applying to Law School should contact Harvey Stone, pre-law advisor, E-22 Maduner-- It is especially important that seniors be the process of applying to law schools see Mr. Stone as soon as possible.

RECREATION SOCIETY:
There will be an important meeting of the recreation society at 7 p.m. in Rm. 174-176 CC on Monday. We will be discussing our upcoming Mountain climbing trip and other future activities. Please try and attend.

SIGMA ALPHA MU FILM SERIES:
Silkscreening course offered in Leverett. Building of a screen and inks will be included. Starts Wednesday, Oct. 20. Call 549-3631.

LOST:
Dog- Black with some white. Part lab & part hound. Answers to Guy. Has tag that says Springfield--Jeff Erlichman 549-0519.
Columbus H.S. ring with initials DJC. If found, call Dan 6-8789.
Thursday, a black umbrella somewhere between Machmer & Bartlett Hall. Please return it if you found it. Call Dan: 6-8789.
Navy blue knitted small pocketbook. Has important ID's and cards inside. Please return if found. Call 546-7585.

FOUND:
Dorm key...claim at Franklin Commons.
Money colored cat near Gorman. Needs good home desperately. Call 6-6432.

PINNING:
Judi Woll, '74, Thoreau to Joe Correia, '72, Phi Lamda Pi.

ENGAGEMENTS:
Ellen Barish, '71, to Sidney Zonn, '72.

Learn to Drive
AMHERST AUTO SCHOOL
34 Main Street
256-6066

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

Pisces is sensitive, Leo is flamboyant, Gemini is versatile, Aries is original, Aquarius is inventive, Taurus is determined. Each and every sign possesses individual and identifiable characteristics. Cancer is protective, Virgo is health concious, Libra is artistic, Scorpio is intense, Sagittarius can be pontifical and Capricorn can wait for the right time.

* * *

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Check reservations, appointments. Not wise to delegate duties. Get job done-yourself. Some now are apt to be careless-with your time, money. Know this and be self starter. Reward is due.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Slight delay actually can work in your favor. Maintain natural pace. Refuse to panic. Apparent confusion over funds will be rectified. Apply light touch. What you need will be forthcoming. Act like you know it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be wary of commitment which could prevent you from making constructive moves. Means allow yourself freedom to be independent. Treac to do battle. Means keep the peace especially inner peace. Some of your natural qualities, abilities receive added appreciation.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Steer clear of neighbors, relatives who are anxious to do battle. Means keep the peace-especially inner peace. Some of your natural qualities, abilities receive added appreciation.

LEO (July 23-August 22): Highlight versatility. Use material at hand-in your own, unique manner. Message will become increasingly clear. Sagittarius is involved. Money situation may be muddled. Young person brings solution.

VIRGO (August 23-Sept. 22): What appears clear sailing needs a second look. Realize that slight delay is no reason for discouragement! Leo person can show you how to hurdle or bypass obstacle. Listen and learn.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Work in conjuction with associates, those familiar with your likes, dislikes. Grass is not necessarily greener far away. Realize this; get busy with what is available. Hold off on journey.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Financial situation improves. Friendly persuasion can be constructively utilized. Highlight diplomacy. Gift purchase now brings favorable reaction. Be considerate. Remember anniversaries.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may be trying too much at once. Expanding too quickly now would be an error. Accent is on willingness to check contracts, agreements and to be aware of potential. Pisces figures prominently.

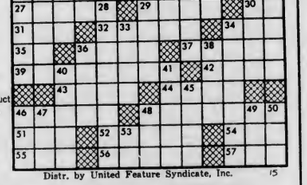
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Some may ask for more than you are ready to give; heed your own counsel. Lunar emphasis is on long-haul rather than short range view. You have some preparing to do-review lessons, material.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Some wishes can now be fulfilled. Key is to utilize wide range of contracts. Promises are fine-but take steps to reinforce needs. If a self starter, you get going on road to productivity.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Obtain necessary rights, permissions. You are in a hurry to get going. But you will retrace steps unless paper work first is cleared. Know this and act accordingly. Contract could be an issue.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensitive, appreciative of the arts and could have musical ability. Your voice often has been termed unusually. Recent emotional bruise is being healed. If single, marriage could be upcoming.

Copyright 1971, Gen. Fea. Corp.



Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Soak up
4 Strip of leather
9 Contend
12 Organ of hearing
13 Numbers game
14 Kind
15 Attributes to 17 Dipper
19 Head of Catholic Church
20 Characteristic of 21 Quarrel
23 Posts
27 Manifests concern
29 Part of stove
30 Pronoun
31 Native metal
32 Manufactures
34 The urial
35 Note of scale
36 Enclosure for animals
37 South American mammal
39 Eatable
42 Seasoning
43 Retained
44 Filament
46 Near
48 Holds back
51 Swiss river
52 Mortification
54 Vast age
55 Baker's product
56 Domesticates
57 Arid

DOWN
1 Dry, as wine
2 Paddle
3 Make ready
4 Undergarment
5 Carries
6 Rights (abbr.)
7 Near
8 Most courteous
9 Television
10 Sick
11 Piece out
16 Lavish fondness on 18 Related
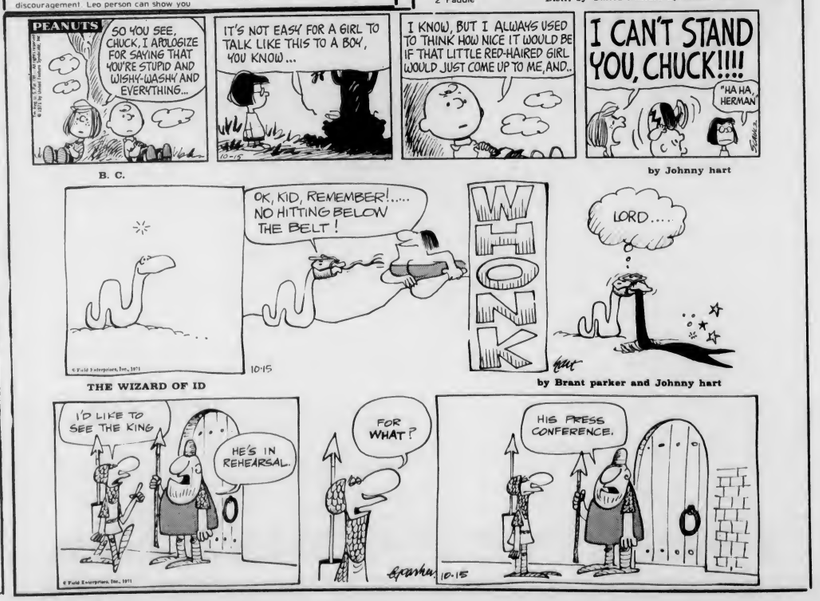
20 Wash
21 Tally
22 Peels
24 Emblem
25 Nothing
26 Begin
28 Tiniest
33 Matured
34 Boxed
36 Hints
38 A continent
40 Task
41 Subject of discourse
45 The sweetsop
46 Headgear
47 Burma tribesman
48 Male sheep
49 Click beetle
50 Vessel's curved planking
53 Exclamation

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

I	T	S		P	R	E	S	S		A	T	E
S	A	C		R	I	A	T	A		L	O	O
T	R	A	C	E		T	A	L	K	E	R	S
		L	A	T	E		R	E	E
R	E	P	R	E	S	S		S	L	O	T	S
E	G		E	N	T	E	R		P	A	R	T
E	R	N		P	O	V	E	S		T	A	I
D	E	E	P		P	E	N	A	L		I	R
S	T	E	A	M		N	A	T	I	O	N	S
			S	A	M		S	I	R	E
B	A	T	T	L	E	S		A	E	S	O	P
A	L	A		L	E	A	S	T		E	R	E
A	L	T	R		S	T	O	N	E		S	E	W

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.



CLAM DIGGERS

are for going places. Wherever your fancy takes you, great looking, Clam Diggers make the trip comfortable and easy. Pick a pair today from lots of new styles.

Mathews SHOES

Amherst Mass.

Dan Kamal

For the Celtics, the Glover just doesn't dit.

* * * *

Larry Naviaux should let his specialty units play all the Terrier games on offense.

* * * *

All the Pirates have is hitting. Richie Hebner has hit three home runs since the playoffs began. So what does Murtaugh do? He benches him. That's strategy?

* * * *

Greg Landry, FORMER UMass STAR, was named NFC offensive player of the week by AP. Has a nice ring to it, doesn't it?

* * * *

UMass shouldn't have given BU such a warm welcome into the Yankee Conference.

* * * *

Duane Thomas had one comment for newsmen after Monday night's game in which he saw action for the first time this season: "I came to play." Whoopee!

* * * *

What's to get excited about? The Jets are virtually crippled.

* * * *

If only the Pirates had Vernon Law.

* * * *

Larry Cannon jumped the ABA Denver Rockets for the Memphis Pros; Jimmy Jones jumped the Pros for the Utah Stars. Why doesn't Julius jump the Squires for UMass?

* * * *

Marty Pattin and Tommy Harper are supposedly quiet, business-like ballplayers. Lew Krausse is supposedly not. Pattin and Harper will learn; Krausse already knows.

* * * *

I keep waiting for the Brewers to send the Red Sox someone else.

* * * *

The UMass soccer team has yet to be scored on. That's defense, or goalkeeping, or both.

* * * *

Dock Ellis talks a lot and has a sore pitching arm. Maybe he's in the wrong profession.

* * * *

George Scott says he wants to be the leader of the Milwaukee Brewers. They're lucky they're in last place already.

* * * *

Pennington to Schubert looks like one hell of a combination. Now if only they can heal.

* * * *

The Detroit Lions have got to the opposing quarterback three times this season! Good thing they got rid of Karras.

* * *

Dick O'Connell is cleaning house. But he kept Eddie Kasko; the house is still a bit dusty.

* * * *

The UMass hockey team is a definite ECAC Division II contender. How about a new hockey rink? In fact, how about A hockey rink?

* * * *

Who's paying Nixon's phone bill?

* * * *

Don Pavletich is gone. What did he look like, anyway?

Series Takes A Turn...

Briles Hurls Bucs To One Game Advantage

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Righthander Nelson Briles, who fashioned a two-hit, 4-0 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Thursday and pushed the Pittsburgh's Pirates to the threshold of their first world championship since 1960, wound up crying about it.

The victory, achieved at the expense of a team Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver has called the best in baseball history, was the Pirates' third straight and gave them a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven Series.

It brought Briles, acquired from St. Louis in the off-season and only a spot starter since, a standing ovation from a crowd of 51,377 when he came to bat in the eighth inning.

So he cried.

The Orioles are taking a three-game losing streak and, according to Frank Robinson, the challenge of finding out how deep their courage runs.

Saturday, when the Series resumes at Baltimore, the Orioles will be facing a Pittsburgh team that is one victory from the greatest comeback in nearly a half-century of World Series history.

The Pirates can reach that pinnacle if they beat the Orioles in the sixth game. They would then become the first team to lose the opening two games of a World Series and then post four successive triumphs.

If the Pirates can do it, they will have done it with a maligned pitching staff that has been nothing less than sensational since moving into Three Rivers Stadium for the third game.

Tuesday Steve Blass got the job done with a three-hitter. Wednesday night Bruce Kison and Dave Giusti got the job done with 81-3 innings of one hit relief. And Thursday Briles topped them all.

Briles allowed a second inning single by Brooks Robinson and then kept the Orioles hitless until Boog Powell singled in the seventh.

Robinson, however, also was to underscore the Orioles' futility before the game was over when he committed the ninth error made by the usually impeccable fielding club as the Pirates scored without a hit in the third inning.

Briles, who put together only four complete games while posting an 8-4 record during the regular season, did not allow one Baltimore runner to reach second base and faced only 29 hitters-two over the minimum.

Briles struck out just two but also walked only two. He went to a full count on only two other batters while throwing just 99 pitches.

The Pirates, meanwhile, got started early against Dave McNally, the ace of the Baltimore staff, with Rob Robertson hitting the first pitch in the second inning for a home run.

Briles and Roberto Clemente, collecting his ninth hit, also drove in runs for the Pirates while Gene Clines scored on a wild pitch.

Briles missed his turn in the playoffs when he reinjured his thigh while warming up for the third game against the San Francisco Giants. But the only thing he missed this time was the Baltimore bats.

After Robertson connected in the second, the Pirates cracked through for another run in the game inning when Manny Sanguillen singled, stole second and rode home on a single by Briles.

In the third the Pirates embarrassed the three-time American League champions by scoring without a hit.

Gene Clines opened the inning by walking, took second as Clemente grounded out, streaked to third when Robinson bobbed Robertson's grounder and scored on McNally's wild pitch.

The Pirates made it 4-0 in the fifth, chasing McNally on Clines' triple and Clemente's single.

Briles took it the rest of the way for the bounce-back Bucks who now are only the fifth team since the inception of the seven-game Series in 1922 to stand on the threshhold of winning the world championship after losing the first two games.

The four who did it were the 1955 Brooklyn Dodgers, the 1956 New York Yankees, the 1958 Yankees and the 1965 Los Angeles Dodgers won the Series after being down 0-2. But no team has ever been able to accomplish the feat with four straight victories. The Pirates will attempt to do that Saturday when the Series resumes in Baltimore, with Bob Moose hurling for Pittsburgh and second game winner Jim Palmer for the Orioles.

BALTIMORE

	ab	r	h	bi
Buford lf	3	0	0	0
Blair cf	4	0	0	0
JPowell 1b	3	0	1	0
FRobinson rf	3	0	0	0
Hendricks c	2	0	0	0
BRobinson 3b	3	0	1	0
DJohnson 2b	3	0	0	0
Belanger ss	3	0	0	0
McNally p	1	0	0	0
Leonhard p	0	0	0	0
Shopay ph	1	0	0	0
Dukes p	0	0	0	0
Rettenmund ph	1	0	0	0
Total	27	0	2	0

PITTSBURGH

	ab	r	h	bi
Cash 2b	4	0	0	0
Clines cf	3	2	1	0
Clemente rf	4	0	1	1
Stargell lf	4	0	1	0
BRobertson 1b	3	1	1	1
Sanguillen c	4	1	1	0
Pagan 3b	4	0	1	0
Hernandez ss	3	0	2	0
Briles p	2	0	1	1
Total	31	4	9	3

Baltimore	000 000 000 0
Pittsburgh	021 010 00x 4

E,B Robinson. DP Pittsburgh 2. LOB Baltimore 2, Pittsburgh 9. 3B Clines. HR B. Robertson 2. SB Clines. Sanguillen. S Briles 2.

	IP	H	R	ER	BB	SO
McNally L.	1-1	4	7	4	3	2
Leonhard	1	0	0	0	1	0
Dukes	3	2	0	0	0	1
Briles W,	1-0	9	2	0	0	2

HBP By Dukes Hernandez. WP McNally. T a 16. A 51,377.

"We Can Still Win"

PITTSBURGH (AP)—"We'll see what kind of club this is on Saturday," Frank Robinson said. "We can still win if we want to win."

"The easiest thing in life is to quit-in anything," the Baltimore Orioles' outfielder said after Pittsburgh had taken a 3-2 lead in the World Series with a 4-0 victory Thursday.

"It would be easy to crawl into a corner and quit," he said. "The toughest thing is to pull yourself up when things are going bad. But we can't win the way we've been playing."

The Orioles have made only nine hits in losing the last three games.

"The Pittsburgh pitching hasn't been that good," Robinson said. "But I do have to give Steve Blass credit for the game he pitched against us Tuesday."

"They haven't knocked the bats out of our hands, although they've pitched good games," said third baseman Brooks Robinson. "We've just stopped hitting."

"I wish I knew what I could do," said Manager Earl Weaver who had no explanation for the lack of hitting.

The Orioles lost four in a row only twice during the regular season. The last time they did, they launched a winning streak that reached 16 through the second game of the World Series.

"We'll just have to start our long winning streak a little later next year," Weaver said. The defending champion Orioles won 17 straight in 1970 before losing the fourth game of the Series.

"We've been bad in everything," Frank Robinson said. "Defense, offense and pitching. It hasn't been one thing, but a whole combination of things. The thinking hasn't been too good, either.

"We've been hitting the pitcher's pitch instead of waiting for ours. We've got to be more determined at the plate, and know what we want to do."

Weaver said that although both teams have won all their games at home, he saw no advantage to returning to Baltimore Saturday.

He said that Jim Palmer, the second game winner, would start Saturday and he was "90 per cent sure" that Mike Cuellar, the loser in game No. 3, would start the seventh game, if it is needed, Sunday.

Not since they lost to the New York Mets in the 1969 Series have the Orioles been faced with a do-or-die game.

"This is the biggest one of the year," Frank Robinson said. "Now we'll see what we're made of."

"No Bunts Today"

PITTSBURGH (AP)—"We've learned the art of confidence," said Pittsburgh first baseman Bob Robertson, "and that confidence came by playing under pressure and winning before."

The art of hitting is Robertson's bag, and he said he still prefers hitting to bunting.

"No bunts today," said Robertson in the dressing room after hitting a solo home run that started the Pirates to a 4-0 victory over Baltimore in the fifth game of the World Series.

"I'm just glad we didn't need to bunt," he said. "Now they have to win two of two and we have to win one of two. It's just that simple."

Pirate Manager Danny Murtaugh wouldn't predict how the Series will go, but he pinned back some writers' ears.

"You had us written off after the second game," Murtaugh said.

Of Briles' two hit pitching, Murtaugh commented: "I thought he was a little sharper than he should have been since he hadn't pitched in a while."

Murtaugh and Robertson agreed on the performance of Baltimore pitcher Dave McNally.

"I don't think McNally was getting the ball to the spot he wanted to," said Murtaugh.

"There was no comparing this McNally with the McNally who pitched a couple days ago," added Robertson. "He didn't have good stuff today."

Pirate centerfielder Gene Clines, often a benchwarmer when he's not platooning with Al Oliver, hit a triple to center and scored a run when Roberton Clemente singled.

"Pride, we have a lot of pride," said Clines, a rookie. "I know that whenever the skipper makes a lineup card, he's not afraid to put anybody in there. And because he's not afraid to put anybody in there, it gives you pride in yourself

Equistrian Team Performs Saturday

By BOB CALLAHAN

The ten member UMass Equestrian Drill Team will be performing this Saturday afternoon, October 16, at the Alumni Tailgate Luncheon in the field opposite Southwest Residential College.

This extra-curricular activity is sponsored by the Department of Veterinary and Animal Sciences and has a membership of ten girls.

The team spends many hours of practice in the early evening and on weekends to get ready for a performance which may be of a short ten minute duration.

A short while ago this group performed at the Morgan Versatility Horse Show in Amherst, where this picture was taken. The team has also participated in Syracuse at the International Morgan Horse Show.

Their last performance of the year will be at the UMass Inter-Collegiate Horse Show to be held on October 24, at Tillson Farm.

Tryouts for the team will be held around the first of November and it is hoped that this will bring in some male members.

All registered Morgan Horses in the team are born, raised, and trained here at UMass.

RUSSELLS PACKAGE STORE
HAPPY HOUR Headquarters
18 Main St.
Amherst
253-5441

Homecoming: UMass vs. URI

By EARLE BARROLL

"The character of a football team is when it can overcome adversity (which we've had a lot of), and we'll find this out on Saturday."...This was Dick MacPherson two days prior to his second home game at the helm of the UMass football team.

Tomorrow at Alumni Stadium "Mac" will find out the answer when his gridders take to the field to due battle with Rhode Island in the annual "Homecoming" football game.

After a rude awakening to what lay ahead in the Yankee Conference last week at Boston University, Mac was quick in saying "I'm glad we're home, we need all the help we can get."

Rhode Island will present the Redmen with another life style they'll have to encounter in the conference this season, inconsistency and plenty of it...The Rams have won two and lost two, winning and losing every other week so far during the season.

They put a lot of a points on the board behind a high powered backfield, but have been scored upon rather freely on top of this.

Last season the Redmen went down to Kingston and came away with a loss to Rhody, only their second to the Rams in the last 11 games between these two and the same quarterback who did the Redmen in last year will be on hand again.

His name, Bob Ehrhardt and he's a good one. This season he's hit on almost 60% of his passes and poses a double threat with his speed on the sprint out. "We have to stop Ehrhart on the run" MacPherson commented.

Ehrhardt will have a big split end in Chris Hess to throw to and a loaded backfield in Molly McGee and Dan Weed to compliment his passing attack.

Hess has caught 21 passes already this season while Weed was named to the all-East first team last week on the strength of four td's against Vermont. McGee at fullback has averaged close to five yards a carry on the ground.

On defense the Rams are huge up front (averaging 6'4, 245 lbs. per man), and tough at linebacker and in the defensive backfield. "They just keep coming", cringed MacPherson.

For the Redmen Marty Evans will get the starting nod at quarterback due to the shoulder injury to Piel Pennington. Evans was racked pretty good last week at B.U., but with a week behind him as the number one man MacPherson feels he'll be ready.

With the Rams putting up a zone defense MacPherson said his offense would have to hit the seams with short passes and establish an effective ground attack that has been lacking in recent weeks.

Defensively the Redmen are sound. "They're the strong point of our team," the first year coach emphasized.

The specialty teams which have been a major problem for UMass in the last two games ate still a big question mark. Some minor changes have been made. "We're working like hell on the specialty teams," Mac said. "We're trying to see to it that the mistakes that happened against B.U. and Dartmouth don't happen again.

"We need a win now that we're in the conference. We're much better than the 1-2 record shows. We've played the two teams we were concerned about (Dartmouth and B.U.) and now we can concentrate on the conference schedule", "Mac" concluded. So there you have it. Homecoming game '71...team character on the line, an up and down team as the opposition, an unseasoned qb leading the Redmen and a load of other questions on the minds of both teams and both head coaches...It all unfolds tomorrow at Alumni stadium.

FUMBLE...RECOVERED-The strength of the UMass football team this season has been the proud defensive unit shown here against B.U. last week persuing a fumble. Tomorrow they face the task of stopping Bob Ehrhart and co. (MDC photo by Barbara Brecher)

Daily Collegian

SPORTS

Metawampe's Picks

Oh, my aching wampum bag. Feels like a pound of feathers after last weeks horrendous effort at predicting those mortals who tag themselves so called "gridiron warriors". But, wow did they do me in, yes me the Great One and now it's my turn for revenge against those ravenous four-year scholarshipped brutes of the midway. Three out of seven, not bad for the mortals, but for me, blah. So now under the guidance of my Great forefathers, a day after the birthday of my compatriot "D—Boy," I shall place on me the "Garb" that won the raves of my reservation and tend to the business at hand, to prove my worth to one and all, including the grandad of the almost great warrior Cal. (I'm the great one, so he can only be "the almost great one." Not even that high, but I'll give him a break.

UMASS 14, RHODE ISLAND 13
Pennington's out and Evans is in,
The Redmen will win by the width of a Rams skin.

* * *

B.U. 28, HOLY CROSS 21
Crusaders have risen to fifth in the East,
But Terriors will win with a resurrection feast.

* * *

CORNELL 20, HARVARD 14
Last week the Crimson held a Lion at bay,
Don't expect Marinaro to have a bad day.

* * *

BOSTON COLLEGE 17, TEXAS TECH 14
Eagles are getting extinct in the west,
Chestnut Hills bird will outlast the rest.

* * *

ALABAMA 16, TENNESSEE 14
The cry is out "The Bear is back,"
The Volunteers will find this out to be a fact.

* * *

NOTRE DAME 24, NORTH CAROLINA 0
Ara's missing a Heisman-type gun,
But his defense keeps the offense mum.

* * *

THE GREAT ONE

NEBRASKA 35, KANSAS 10
Devaney's Huskers are quite a bunch,
They'll feats on Jayhawk after lunch.

* * *

OKLAHOMA 27, COLORADO 24
Sooners are down after their wish-bone win,
They'll still have enough left to send the Buffs for a spin.

Booters Host URI For YanCon Lead

By ROBERTA SMITH

Their toughest foe to date? The Rhode Island Rams would like to think so, as Rhode Island visits Amherst, to face the undefeated UMass soccer squad at 10:30 tomorrow morning. The second consecutive Saturday morning inter-conference battle for both the Redmen and the Rams will feature two teams boasting 2-0 Yankee Conference marks.

Last Wednesday the Yankee Conference soccer publicity release came out, remarking, "Massachusetts convinced everyone that they are the team to beat for the YanCon crown, as they belted Connecticut 4-0, Saturday." This is certainly the case, , as the Redmen in four games, with a 3-0-1 mark, have yet to give up a goal.

Thus URI will be thinking upset, and considering the opposition that UMass has faced so far, the Rams will seemingly have the best chance. Rhode Island holds a 3-1-0 record, after having dropped their season opener to Brown, the number two ranked team in New England, 5-3. Since then its been 2-1 over Bridgeport in overtime, and 3-1 over both Maine and Vermont, the latter game having been played one week ago tomorrow.

With them, the Rams bring a multitude of scoring power, led by Bob Hooks and Leif Kametsen. Hooks is a sophomore having scored five goals thus far, presently tied for the Yankee Conference goal scoring lead. Kametsen is close behind Hooks, having scored four times; thus between the two nine goals have been recorded, the same total amassed by the Redmen in their four games.

Victor Gaspar will be another Ram to be reckoned with as he plays the halfback position, and has scored two goals, one coming off of a penalty kick. Another halfback, Bruce Goff, will be another troublemaker for Kiah, as he already has four assists to his credit, and is atop the conference assist leaders.

Ranked eighth in New England, Rhode Island has much the same team that played UMass to a 0-0 tie last year. With an attack that has mustered an average of 2.75 goals per game UMass goalie Kiah is likely to have his busiest afternoon. And at the other end, Lindo Alves and Co. will have it anything but easy as Dick Hartley, the URI goaltender, was good enough last week to get voted the outstanding YanCon goalie.

The remaining two slots were nailed down by a Redmen and a Wildcat. Augie Calheno received the defensive player of the week for his effort against UConn, and for the second week in a row a UMass player filled this slot, as Dick McCarron owned the defensive award two weeks ago.

For the third week in a row Lindo Alves received votes for the offensive player of the week, as this past week's selections also saw John Kiah garnering some points.

Presently fifth in New England, after moving up a notch due to last Saturday's blanking of UConn, the Redmen will face a 4-2-4 Rhode Island attack. Healthier than they've been, UMass finds Blanchette, Coburn, and Slack all in good condition and ready to run.

Tom Coburn, after scoring his first goal of the season last week, has been impressing Coach Berryman during the past week as he and Alves are working a little more smoothly each day. Berryman also mentioned Vinny Grandonico, Todd Buck and Dave Oulette as having done fine jobs in the few games.

Berryman has so many talented players, it is nearly impossible for him to name a starting team before gametime, but then again it matters little who starts as he cited six linemen, six halfbacks, and six halfbacks all who will be seeing action in the 3-3-4 Redmen alignment.

A low scoring contest? Yes, it looks that way, as both teams will be playing four men at the fullback position, and both URI and UMass have excellent goaltenders. An upset? Who knows all we do know is that after the Redmen rested for one week they handily knocked off their opponent. If they'll be able to repeat this against more potent opposition is the question to be answered out there across from Boyden Gymnasium.

Harriers Face Powerhouse B.C.

By JAY NESTOR

The UMass harriers will be put to the test today against a powerful Boston College team in what will have to be called the turning point of the season for UMass.

Coach Ken O'Brien's team will have to put it all together in order to come out on top of this one. The Eagles feature some fine top runners along with substantial depth. Frank Zabel, Charlie Diehl, and Dick Mahoney are all accomplished athletes and they constitute one of the toughest team combinations in the region.

It looks like a battle with the top men of Boston College facing the strong team depth of UMass. The outcome is questionable. BC definitely has a fine team, but the Redmen are confident, coming from straight wins over UConn, URI, and UVM.

The previously inexperienced Redmen are now tried and tested. They know both their strengths and weaknesses and are really starting to pull together, as shown by Tuesday's performance when the team split was only thirty seconds.

Physically, the Redmen are ready. Doug O'Connell, Paul Segersten, and Peter Crisci are all in the fine condition that they have maintained all season. Tom Derderian, Roger Nasatka, and Rick Barry have shown marked improvement in the last couple of meets and are nearing their potential.

The steady performances of Bob Sullivan, Don Dunsky, and Mike McCusker are not to be overlooked.

Coach O'Brien rates the Eagles as equal to Northeastern, who swamped the Redmen in the first meet of the season.

The harriers are a different team now than at the season's opener. They have tasted victory and appear to be hungry for more. A win against the Eagles would definitely prove that the Redmen have matured.

It is O'Brien's opinion that this meet is the turning point of the season. BC will provide the competition to really test the worth of the Redmen. The result will serve as a good indicator on how the runners will fare in the upcoming championship meets.

WMUA

Tune into WMUA, 91.1 fm, for the Homecoming game tomorrow between the Redmen and URI. Marty Kelley will host the pre-game show at 12:30 to be followed by the game with Kent Best calling the action and Kelley on color.

On Sunday night Kelley and Best will host sports talk at 10 p.m.

MDC
SPORTS HOTLINE
5-0344

Poor Richard's

A Weekly Magazine

Weekend (continued from back page)

Erick Hawkins, founder and leader of his own dance company, will bring his ensemble for a six day stay at Smith College next week.

famous characterizations in film history, and the film is really quite wonderful.

Hiroshima, Mon Amour (Tuesday, Thompson 104, 8, 9:45)

A classic film of the French New Wave, directed by Alain Resnais. It is an explorative study of the effects of war upon the love affair of a Frenchwoman and a Japanese businessman.

I Love My Wife (starting Sunday, the Academy, Northampton)

Last season's anti-matineé idol Elliot Gould began to wear his frazzled characterization quite thin in this silly and lifeless comedy. The story is about a young man and his disgust with his middleclass existence including his wife (Brenda Vacarro). It's an uneven mixture of comedy and drama which really doesn't come off and amounts to a waste of some very talented people.

Let's Scare Jessica To Death (Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield)

A low budget thriller in which a mentally disturbed woman faces a bevy of ghosts in an old New England home--or does she? It's a poor attempt at a spooky psychological thriller in the vein of Shirley Jackson. The cast is made up mostly of television performers, led by Zohra Lampert and Kevin McCarthy.

The Marriage Of The Young Stockbroker (Calvin Theater, Northampton)

This is perhaps the flattest comedy of the year, adapted from the novel by Charles Webb ("The Graduate"), the film is a marital and sexual comedy about a young broker bored with his occupation, his frustrated wife, and his mild voyeuristic tendencies. Some years back this kind of comedy was considered sophisticated, now it comes across as silly and unrealistic. The cast includes Richard Benjamin, Joanna Shimkus, and Elizabeth Ashley.

Meatrack (Campus Cinemas, Hadley)

I have no idea as to the nature of this film except to say that, judging from the ads, it won't have Ryan and Ali prancing about in conjugal bliss. It looks very much like the first commercial, gay sexploitation flick.

The Mummy (Friday, Merrill Science Center, Amherst College, 8)

A creepy and unnerving early Thirties horror film. It was directed in a ponderous, sustained manner by the cinematographer Karl Freund and builds to an oddly disturbing mood. Boris Karloff is the three-thousand year old mummy brought back to life and British actress Zita Johann plays the girl he stalks after as she is a Twentieth century incarnation of the princess he loved.

Ned Kelly (Thursday, SU Ballroom, 7 and 9)

Mick Jagger's first commercial film and a major disappointment. Directed by Tony Richardson ("Tom Jones"), the film recounts the exploits of the Nineteenth century Australian bandit played by Jagger. Jagger isn't too bad, although he isn't half as effective as he was in Performance, but the film really isn't very good.

The Private Lives Of Henry VIII (Sunday, Thompson 194, 7 and 9)

The first British film ever to be a commercial success on American screens. This 1932 feature was an enjoyable historical romp in which Charles Laughton gave one of his richest portrayals (it won him an Oscar) with a fine cast led by Robert Donat and Elsa Lancaster.

The Reivers (Friday, SU Ballroom, 4, 6, 8, 10)

William Faulkner's 1905 Mississippi is handsomely mounted in this easy-going, highly enjoyable nostalgic comedy. A boy of twelve accompanies two irresponsible pals (one white, one black) from Mississippi to Memphis. In the course of their stay, they go to a brothel, get involved with a mean sheriff, and ride in a horse race. Steve McQueen gives a fine performance and the film has a pleasant charm which is very easy to digest.

The Andromeda Strain

Poor Richard's

Poor Richard's is the weekly magazine of the MDC.

Contributions may be delivered to the MDC office.

Compiled this week by David Williams and Bob Nesti.

Front cover by Barbara Brecher.

Staff: Frank Johnson, Steve Feld, Frank Baglione, Kenneth Sullin, Ed Janusz, Nancy Smith, Pat Suprenaut, Emilie Sikora, Kerry Gilliland, Elliot Eisenberg.

If you wish to join the staff come to the MDC office and see either David Williams or Bob Nesti. Vol. I, no. 2.

EVERY WEDNESDAY,
STAMPEDE NIGHT
starting October 13, some of the far west will come to New England...
Our Cowgirls, in western garb, armed with water pistols filled with Vodka, will serve your custom sliced western steer beef by the ounce.--45¢ per ounce for prime sirloin, 70¢ per ounce for fillet mignon, and 35¢ per ounce for a rib of broiled beef.
Keep our Friday night buffet in mind.
The Lord 30 Boltwood Ave. Jeffery 253-2576
AMHERST, MASS.
RAOUL DIETRICH, INNKEEPER

Program Council Presents
Homecoming Nightclub
with
"Fusion", "East Jesus," "Run Gamache," and "Shep & Janet"
Saturday, October 16 8:00 p.m.
Campus Center Auditorium
Admission: 25¢
Alcoholic Beverages will be available for those over 21 and with I. D.
Also available: Deli Platter 99¢
Cheese platter 99¢ and other refreshments.

NOW..YOUR CHOICE OF 5!
Showcase Cinemas 1-2-3-4-5
Rt. 5 - W. Spfld.
733-5131
MORE NEW SHOWS!
MORE NEW LOUNGER SEATS!
MORE NEW PARKING!
BARGAINS DAILY...POPULAR PRICES
Adults $1.99 Mon thru Fri Eves
1 Summer of '42 (R)
2 Death in Venice (R)
3 The Devils (X)
4 Let's Scare Jessica to Death (GP)
5 Walkabout (GP)
ACRES FREE PARKING
ROCKER LOUNGERS
CHARGE YOUR TICKETS

An Expression Of Black Spirit

Take Two

An Exercise In Absurdity

by Nathaniel W. Hayden

"How about a monopoly game, Mark?"

"Sure Rob, let's get some more people". Rob went into the lounge on his floor of Driscoll House, a dormitory at Cliffborough College in Waverly, Massachusetts. Before continuing with our story, you are entitled to a little background information. My name is Nathaniel Hayden. One of my friends, Robert Strong, who is a student at Cliffborough told me the story I am about to tell. I must emphasize that

THE ACTIONS IN THIS STORY WERE TRUE. ONLY THE NAMES HAVE BEEN CHANGED TO EXPOSE THE GUILTY. ANY SIMILARITY WITH PERSONS LIVING IS INTENTIONAL.

Now more about Cliffborough. It's one of those NEW BREED institutions of higher education that have been set up in the past few years. It caters primarily to creative geniuses instead of the academic kind. Of course, in some instances, these categories overlap. In other words, most of the students are more concerned with what may come rather than what is. The type of courses offered by the school are an example:

NATURAL SCIENCE & MATH: WHO'S AFRAID OF THE CLONAL MAN AND WHY?
SOCIAL SCIENCE: THE MAKING OF MISFITS (A STUDY OF SOCIAL DEVIANCE, NOT HOME ECONOMICS
HUMANITIES AND ARTS: WHO SHOULD READ MARX AND WHY

The campus is situated on well over 2000 acres of rich, fertile land in the Berkshires. The current enrollment is 724 with an equal number of males and females. The student faculty ratio is ....? That doesn't matter, this isn't a catalog. No doubt this superflousness is getting on your nerves by now. On with the story.

"Are there any monotony players in here?" Mark asked.

"Give me that again?", asked George Walker, one of Cliffborough's few science brains.

"Do you want to play monotony, or what is sometimes mistakenly called monopoly?"

"Certainly", George said.

"I'd love to play. It's been years since I last played" said Carl Richards. At first glance, Rob said, you would think that Carl is the type who follows the leader. He later discovered that Carl was one of the most genuine and forceful students at Cliffborough. More will be said about Carl's character later.

Cornelius Worthington Crandell VI, one of the members of the Crandell Dynasty which set up the Crandell Foundation forty years ago because of their guilt feelings due to the fact that the family gained its' billions by using virtual slave labor during the Industrial Revolution, decided to visit Cliffborough College during its' first year in operation. He said that his aim was to investigate the possibility of students and members of big business getting together to fight the pollution of the Waverly area.

A sizeable number of students and faculty members were wary of Crandell's motives. Was this an attempt to keep the natives from getting restless? So what if he is giving $25,000 free of limitations to get the program started. He might change his mind about giving more if that $25,000 isn't used the way he wants it used. Bob mentioned all of this because of the role Mark played in this conference.

Mark voiced strenuous opposition to the cooperative effort Mr. Crandell suggested. This was due to Mark's belief that Crandell's money was "tainted", Mark barraged Crandell with allegations in spite of Peter Franklin's objection. Mr. Franklin is the President of Cliffborough. From this one may assume that Mark is anti-materialistic. Now that I have thickened the plot, you deserve another bite of the story.

"Gentlemen, shall we begin? May the best man win", Bob said.

After about an hour, everyone either had a monopoly or was in an excellent position to get one, except Bob. Therefore, he made a soft-spoken plea for assistance:

"Help me, goddamit, or I'll have to leave the game!"

"Bob,...stop with the theatrics", Mark said.

"I'm not kidding. It's impossible for me to get a monopoly now unless someone helps me. And without a monopoly, it won't be an interesting game".

Mark, the great anti-establishment, anti-capitalist member of the group said, "I don't think we should have any mercy on him. If he had played better he would have had a chance. No way".

"Mark, how crude can you get? It's only a game. I think one of us should give him a monopoly just to give him a chance. What is there to lose by doing so?", asked Carl.

"The damn game, that's what. Would he do it for you? Haa? Do you really think so?", asked Mark.

"The point, Mark, is that so far, it seems that you are the only one playing the omnipotent capitalist."

"That's only because no one else has the amount of money and properties that I have."

George jumped into the dispute at this point. "So what are you trying to do, play the divide and conquer game? Well, I don't think it's going to work. I think Bob should be given a monopoly. However, I am in no position to make a deal with him."

Then Bob said, "Yes you can. You have two properties that could give me a monopoly".

George replied, "But if I give you one of them, you'll put houses on them right away since you have so much money. I just can't."

Mark then said, "I think it's smart of you not to, George".

"Well, I'm going to sell Bob one of mine if only to make sure that Moneybags Gottman doesn't win."

The game ended at about midnight. Mark won. Bob and Mark decided to go to the snack bar.

"Mark, I can't let you off the hook that easily. I want a rematch, now, tonight."

Mark was shocked. He smiled and said, "You know I've got monopoly in my blood. Sure, I'll play."

Bob said, "We'll find out once and for all which one of us is the best monopoly player." The game began at 12:30 A.M. in Bob's room. After six hours of playing, they discovered that it would be impossible for either of them to win because neither of them had a monopoly and of course could not get one unless they traded some properties. Also by this time, Mark had had to start writing new money because the bank had been depleted of cash. One of the basic rules of monopoly is that the bank does not go broke. Since Bob had several thousand dollars more than Mark, he decided to sell Mark a piece of property that was of more value than the one Mark sold him.

At 7:30 A.M. Bob and Mark decided to call it quits for the "night". I have night in quotes because by now the sun had risen, and some of the other students in the dorm had awakened and were getting breakfast. They washed themselves and went to breakfast too. While they were there, they proudly announced to several of the other students who were there what they had done all night. Many of the other students had been involved in all-night poetry readings, pot parties and studying but all night monopoly? No, you must be joking. You spent all of that time on just one game?

"Mark, let's continue the game this afternoon, OK?"

"I don't know. I'm going to be sitting-in outside Sam Francis's office today. (Samuel Francis is a professor at Cliffborough)

"Why?"

"He demands that I fill out a student evaluation form for one of his classes I was in last fall."

"Why don't you? It doesn't sound like too much to ask."

"When I came here, I was under the impression that the only thing we would have to do was to take exams at the end of each term. What he puts on one of those evaluation forms has the same effect as a B or an F on the regular report card. He says that since the vast majority of students have no------objection to the evaluation forms, I have to adjust to it."

"Good luck", "I'll see you there at about 1:30. I have to go into town to buy a few things."

That afternoon, Bob and Mark continued the game outside of Professor Francis's office. While they were playing, Professor Francis walked in and out of his office, as usual, and ignored Mark. Two other professors who had offices on that floor went by and talked about the game. They were Arthur Burholtz and Jules Ortega.

"You know Jules, I think people in the ghettoes should be encouraged to play games like monopoly because it may lessen the feeling of frustration due to their inability to amass large sums of money in real life."

"You're worng Art. It would undoubtedly lead to more frustration. They'll become embittered because it's so easy in the game but extremely hard or impossible in real life to amass huge amounts or sometimes even a minimal amount of money."

"What I'm saying is that for a few hours they can gain the feeling of power, of control that is missing from their everyday lives."

"I understand what you mean. However, I am certain that it would have the opposite effect. They would start asking themselves why they can't have such power in their everyday lives. Games like this have the same effect as the racketeers. It would make people wonder why they too could not also get money the easy way. You might also say that it would make them more eager to engage in our present capitalistic system. However, what would you really be doing in that case? You would be reinforcing the inhuman corporate system which exists at the present time. Is that your intention?"

"That's not what I'm saying at all. I'm saying that by playing games such as monopoly, they will gain the sense of power that they know they can never gain in real live."

"Now I understand. You're saying that games like monopoly evoke a feeling of contentment and complacency. You believe they will then say to themselves, "What do I need to make a lot of money for? I can get as much a sense of power by playing monopoly as I would by trying to become middle-class, and share in the real power."

"No Jules, you're misconstruing what I'm saying-----"

The argument went on and on, as did the game. At dinner time it was still going on. Bob suggested that they continue the game after a lecture that was to be given at Cliffborough that night.

There was one aspect of the monopoly argument that was not explored by Professor's Burholtz and Ortega. They failed to comment on the good job done

Continued to page 5A

Writing For 'Take Two'

Now that everybody has found the dormitory, the refectories, the bus stops and the classrooms, perhaps there's some unattracted attention left around that can be paid to TAKE TWO. Dues.

This is an open space, white space, and that's how it was in the beginning and that's why we got the idea to move on it-- treat it to a little Gospel. Crowd a little Nonstandard Negro English onto the white page. Put it in black and white.

You got somethin you wanna put in BLACK, huh? We can't make it on the lonelyhearts adds or trying to figure out who's got their fingers in the jar, petting the petty funds. We need items of black anthropology--you and me digging ourselves. It's all going to be written down, just like before, and if we don't do it the man will do it for us, just like before. Either you roll your own or you go out and buy Old Gold or Virginia Slims. There's no question about who's picking it. Is there?

If you attend Smith, Amherst, Holyoke, Hampshire or the northernmost factory, and if you ain't 100% Wool, you are presently being chastized for not using the simplest organ the five-college system ever spawned. It is called TAKE TWO, and right now it isn't taking any. We have a few literary geniuses who can sit down and write shit all day and right now they're filling the pages with their drivel. And will continue to do so cause print is a very powerful

All you have to do is get anything over to the UMass Student Union Daily Collegian office in an envelope marked TAKE TWO by the middle of the afternoon CPT on any Thursday and if you hand around you'll be able to read it in print come morning--pictures and all. If you can't deal with that or the US Mails then you can phone it in to 549-0417 at eight in the mornig. If the line is busy it means that there's two of you that fucking lazy. But hang on.

luv, editor.

TONITE ONLY FUSION
Recent Appearances:
- The Groggery
- Lucifer's
- Bunratty's
- The Boston Club

"Probably the best 6-piece jazz-rock group in N.E."
9 p.m. - 1 a.m.
Berkshire Clubroom - Southwest
Admission $1
Sponsored by Washington Upper

The Follies Of Youth

By David Williams

Part I

I rejoiced when the Holy Man came out of the East to be in our midst. A bearer of such peace and tranquility is a rare gem, one that is not often placed among us. We must listen to him carefully, for what he tells us will help us to find the answer. I was bathed in serenity when I learned of him coming. Perhaps, I thought, he will give me the final clue and I will know bliss. I eagerly awaited his arrival.

His plane arrived on time but we didn't see his Mercedes-Benz coming up the street until late because he got hung up in Customs.

The car glided smoothly and crisply on the rain slicked road. It stopped at the curb and the crowd began to ooze slowly around the car. The crowd parted when the car door opened and His Holiness stepped out, followed by his huge bodyguards. My breath came in short puffs and I became lightheaded. I was stunned by the bright light that seemed to surround him and I watched all from a distant place in my brain.

His Holiness, the Mashuganishi, the Light from the East I was touching his robes! I was touching his holy hand! I swoone and dark shadows passed over my eyes. He passed, leaving me standing on the sidewalk.

Dark shadows still covered my eyes. No, I thought. He has cursed me, I have displeased him! I nearly swooned again but a voice shocked me.

"OK, Mac. Open them eyes up!"

My eyes flashed open. Standing before me was a man, big, with a red face and two chins. He wore a blue suit that was all wrinkly and shiny. His eyes glared at me and his nostrils flared in and out when he breathed.

"All right pal. What's the big idea?"

"Excuse me, please? I....."

"Don't be a wise guy," he interrupted me. "What's the hell's the big idea of hanging around the Mashuganishi?"

"But, he is my master," I said to him.

"Sure, sure, he's your master." Taking a notebook out of his pocket and flipping it open, he said "All right bud. What's the name?"

"Why do you want my name? I asked. "I don't have to tell you my name."

"Look, chum," he said. "The Mashuganishi is an important person and it's my job to protect him from all you kooks. Now, what's the name?"

I was seething. Who was this man? My master is a gentle man and all his followers are gentle. Why did he keep these uncouth men, for another had joined the first, around him?

The first one spoke to me again.

"I'm afraid you're going to have to come with us. And don't give us no funny business either."

They took me by the arms and I went limp, for we are taught by the master to resist unproper authority, and I certainly thought these men were unproper. We went into an elevator, my feet dragging all the way, and went up to the top floor of the building, which was very high. Once at the top they took me out of the elevator and brought me down a long white hall and into a tiny stuffy room with a heavy door. They thrust me into a chair in the middle of the room and shut the door. Then they took off their coats and turned on very bright lights aimed at me. They drew up chairs and sat on them backwards, facing me. One of them was sweating and drops were falling off his chin.

Here's a moo for you, Blue. Swerve right, Richard, swerve right.

"My, my," said the one who had stopped me first. "Will you look at him now, Fred. Boy, is he funny-looking!"

"Yah, you dirty bum," said Fred. "Why don't you get a haircut?"

I was very uneasy. The bright lights made the men hard to see and I did not like the tone they were using.

"Hey Leo," said Fred, "What do you suppose this creep really wanted with the boss. I bet he wanted to plant a bomb on him. These peace-freaks are always pulling stunts like that."

Leo grunted. Fred looked over at him.

"Huh? What was that?" he asked.

"Nothing," said Leo. "Gas."

Fred chuckled. "You oughtta lay off the yak butter for a while." His tone turned harsh again.

"OK, creep! Are you gonna talk or are we gonna have to get rough with you?" He stood up and pushed the chair away. Then he squatted down. We were face to face. His breath smelled of the most rancid yak butter. The master believes that yak butter will help one find the Eternal. All of his followers use it. I knew that these men would not hurt me.

Fred gave another short chuckle that sounded more like an animal snorting. He reached out and grabbed my nose.

"Talk, you creep," he said, and gave my nose a sharp twist. I was in pain. My nose felt very red and it hurt.

"Want some more?" he asked with a leer, and twisted my nose again. Tears began to come to my eyes, but the master preaches that we should master our emotions, so I held them back.

"Ohhh, so you're gonna be a stoic, huh?" said Fred. "Well, we've got just the thing for you."

He got up and walked over to a large door that was set into the wall. It had a lock on it and he was digging in his pocket for the key when the heavy door into the corridor swung open and His Holiness stepped into the room.

He was moaning.

"Christ," he said in an odd gruff tone. "Fred, get me a cube, quick."

"But boss," said Fred. "We got company. He looks like one of yours."

"Ahhh, I see. Very good. Let me examine him to see if he is worthy." His Holiness' voice became soft and musical like usual.

"Is this him?" he asked. He was standing in front of me.

"My son, my son. Why have they taken you to this place? What have you done? Tell me."

I could only gasp. "Your holiness. May the ground be ever firm under your feet. May the sky be always blue over your head. May the waters always part for you. May the foo-bird....."

"Enough, enough, my son. I understand. You are confused. Perhaps we can help you," His Holiness said.

Turning back to Fred, he began to talk that gruff tone.

"C'mon, c'mon, get that cube ready," he snapped.

Fred was fumbling with a large spoon and a small candle. He placed the candle and the spoon on the table. Then he took a small silver cube and began to unwrap it. It was boullion. He placed the brown lump in the spoon and held the spoon over the candle. Meanwhile His Holiness was taking a syringe out of a flat plastic case and assembling it. What was going on, I wondered.

His Holiness folded the left sleeve of his long white back up to his shoulder and then wrapped a long piece of rubber hose around his bicep. He began to tighten the hose and flex his hand.

"Almost ready? Fred," he asked. Fred grunted. "Almost. Just a sec."

Fred took the syringe and poured the melted soup into it. He put in the plunger and held the assembly up to the light. A thin brown stream was coming out of the tiny silver needle. He handed it to the Mashuganishi.

His Holiness took the syringe and carefully stuck the thin needle into one of his bulging veins. Quickly he loosened the hose and began to tap on the plunger gently with his forefinger. He closed his eyes and began to moan again. His body jerked and twitched. His head sank down onto his chest. His arm fell and the needle dropped out of the vein onto the floor.

Fred walked over and picked up the syringe. He squatted down and peered into the Master's face.

"He's ok," he said. "But he'll be out for a little while."

He turned back to me.

"And you," he said, "We still have to deal with you! Ahh. Let me think. What can we do with you? Hmmm? We can tie you up and heave you out the window. But that really won't do. What do you think, Leo? What should we do with this schnook?"

Leo stirred from the corner where he was standing. "I don't know, Fred," he said. "He sure is a funny-looking one in any case. We could maybe use him in one of the street gangs...That's just a suggestion, though. Fred, you wouldn't do anything rash, would you."

A gleam lit up Fred's eyes. He began to get really excited.

"Ahhhh, Leo, you wonder! That's what we'll do!"

He turned to me with a wild look in his eyes.

"The street gangs! The street gangs! Know what the street gangs are, boy? We take you and shave your head, drape one of those ratty orange sheets on you, and shove you out onto the street with a whole bunch of idiots like you, and make you sing and dance and beg all day. For peanuts! You have to live in a beaten down old house, we don't let you eat meat or drink milk. And you have to pray all the time! Ha! How do you like that!"

I did not like it at all. And they did take me and shave my head, drape a ratty orange sheet on me and shove me out onto the streets with a whole bunch of idiots like me and make me sing and dance and beg all day.

Our corner was the corner of Park St. and Tremont St. in Boston. We had to stand there and sing and dance all day. Then we had to go to our beaten old house and pray for the rest of the night. But I did not like it at all. I began to lose my faith because of the conditions that we were kept in. People ridiculed us on the street and I questioned. My questions were answered one day when a pigeon did an unspeakable on my head.

That just about tore it for me. I started to swear and my brothers and sisters tried to hush me. But I did not let them and I ran away with some money that people had given me. The rest of my brothers and sisters ran after me so I went into the subway where they can not go. They shouted after me as I paid my quarter and ran down to the rapid transit downstairs. I did not listen to them.

A fat man got in my way as I tried to get on the train so I pushed him. I beat out a little old lady for a seat. When the train came out of the tunnel I did not recognize the city. They had kept me on the street corner so long that things had changed and I was confused. The street car had become very old. The air and the sunlight changed, mellowed. I felt very calm and I floated above my seat. The train stopped and everyone got up slowly and moved gracefully to the doors. The doors slid open and the people flowed gently out. I floated along among them until we got to the street.

It was raining softly and lights reflected off the puddles in the street. I walked along the sidewalk slowly, looking at all thed-shaped cars parked at the curb. They were very strange. They were very old, but they were brand-new. I stood next to one, stroking it and wondering. I looked up the sidewalk and a little man dressed in white was coming towards me. When he got close I could see he was a foreigner, from the East someplace. He stopped next to me, clasped his hands and made a little bow, and began to speak.

"It is good to see you here. We have been awaiting you for some time. Will you please follow me?"

He bowed again, turned, and went back down the sidewalk. I touched the car longingly for a second and then followed him.

To Be Continued

Albums

By NATHAN GORENSTEIN

We're All Bozo's On This Bus The Firesign Theater, Columbia.

The new Firesign album is about the future, and like the future, it's hard to find a place to put your head.

Unlike their past albums, in which they have placed their message in a context that the listener could identify (indians, TV shows, high schools etc.) and use as a place to start from in figuring out the rest of the piece.

"We're all Bozos on this bus" doesn't make it quite that simple.

In Bozos Firesign take the listener on a trip to the future where everyone is classified (bozos, Zips and Berserkers among others) and everyone, (thing) you deal with there is a machine.

At your first listening you'll probably end up asking yourself what you've just heard, but try it again and you should be able to begin to sort some of it out. The album continues over both sides, a disadvantage in that it doesn't give you any opportunity to start over again. Just keep plugging away.

I don't want to try and explain much of it to you, that's your problem, but I will, give a run down on the story line.

Clem (who's never defined in Bozo-Zip terms, and may be said to symbolize the last sane man) is on a vehicle (airplane?) going to the future with a large number of other people. Next to him is a Bozo (a person--who wears inflatabile shoes, rubber noses and fucks around alot). They reach the future 1/3 of the way through the first side.

Once there everyone, by loudspeaker command, is separated into their own sections, and sent on in. We follow Clem through. The future as Firesign sees it (maybe) is composed of machines controlling the people which are in turn controlled by other people (A smaller number of course) Clem has a number of run ins with the machines. At one point he meets the President (a machine) and is told permitted to ask a question. The President sounds suspiciously like Tricky Dick, uttering nonsensical platitudes. (The machine may in fact be classified as a Dick machine.)

After meeting the President Clem is sent to the Funway where he ends up arguing with a child-care machine (all of which are benevolent till you ask the wrong questions). For his trouble he ends up being tossed out of the future, but not before he gets an interview with Doctor Memory, which, as you may guess, doesn't change anything. Clem still goes out at which time, well, listen to the record.

The point of the record may be that the future is now (the present keeps popping up all through the album) and this may just be Firesign's attempt to explain our troubles to us. At any rate, welcome.

The Firesign Theater

The New Herbie Mann

By DON GLICKSTEIN

Push, Push, Herbie Mann, Embryo SD 532

Now, there is no one. To be sure, Ian Anderson of Jethro Tull plays flute, and plays it very well, but he has never been the innovator and artist that Herbie Mann was. Anderson is the performer, with his knee in the air, his gyrations, his forced physical emotion. Mann was the flutist, the serious jazz musician, the one that George Wein loved to hear play at Newport.

Now, Herbie Mann's flute is subdued; not subtle, but merely subdued. The flute playing of Mann's earlier albums, his first one on A & M records, for example, is no where to be found on Push, Push. Instead, Mann has arranged his music for jazz musicians. The music is very tight, flawless, and professional, but it does not feature Herbie Mann, the flutist.

"Man's Hope", a cut on the new album, is good jazz, but spiced up by electric guitar, one barely hears Mann's flute. Even in "If", another cut on the album, where the flute is prominent, the backup musicians play unneeded "jazz-up" notes a bit too loudly, that serve only to distract from the anemic Mann.

Herbie Mann, the arranger, seems to think that the only way to interpret a piece of music is to play its antithesis. This is all well and good, but on a song like "Never Say Goodbye", Mann misses the point and wallows in his sobbing softness. There is no power, just matter of factness.

Mann's album jackets have always been raunchy, and while this is no comment on what's inside the album, Push, Push continues tradition with an almost invisible orange psuedo-velvet collage of two couples pushing each other, so to speak, on the inside jacket.

If you like jazz, you'll like Push, Push. If you like the jazz flute of Herbie Mann, don't waste your money.

Continued from page 3A

by the admissions office at Cliffborough. At how many schools does one find students who are as determined as Bob and Mark? How many colleges have students with enough stamina and fortitude to play a monopoly game for fifteen hours? True, they stopped to sleep, eat breakfast, dinner, go to a lecture, oh, and also have a sit in, but fifteen hours of one monopoly game? If they devote that much time to something trivial, what would happen if they were given a difficult, meaningful assignment, or decided to fight for a worthy cause? The thought boggles the mind.

By the way, the game ended at 1 a.m. It would have continued for hours more if Bob hadn't gotten up and said, "This game is totally absurd, you win. I'm leaving. Keep the game." Alas, Bob is not very perceptive. Everyone knows now that life is totally absurd.

meat/rack
begins where Midnight Cowboy left off...but with realism heretofor implied only by innuendo!"
– N.Y. VILLAGE PRESS

meat/rack
sex scenes are numerous, bizarre and graphic...just a hairsbreadth away from the bustable!" – VARIETY

meat/rack is the real story of midnight cowboys. Real is the word as far as the low-down dirt is concerned!"
– ARCHER WINSTEN, N.Y. POST

meat/rack
is a harbinger of films to come. It is totally uncompromising in its graphic approach to unconventional relationships and it is explicit in the extreme!"
– N.Y. VILLAGE PRESS

Sherpix, Inc. presents a film by Michael Thomas

meat/rack

in EASTMANCOLOR Screenplay by Joel Ensana Rated X

Added Attraction!
"CHARLES PIERCE IS THE WORLD'S GREATEST FEMALE IMPERSONATOR!" –John Wasserman, S.F. CHRONICLE
"I am not a 'female impersonator!' I am a Male Actress!" – Chas Pierce
The Charles Pierce Revue
Now Exclusively Playing!

Campus Cinemas 256-6411

The Who Come Back

ROGER DALTREY

By STEVE FELD

WHO'S NEXT - THE WHO (Decca Records)

What would you do if you had created a monumental rock opera that won the praise of everybody and his grandmother, and realized that it was time for something new? Would you try to outdo yourself with some incredibly innovative conception? What about going back to the basics, like the Beatles after Sgt. Pepper? Or maybe you would retire, acknowledging your masterpiece as the ultimate in Art.

Peter Townshend of the Who did none of these. Instead, he released "Live At Leeds", which accomplished two things. First, it satiated the public's rage for a live Who album. Second, it gave him time to decide what his answer was going to be to the opening question of this review.

In the two years since "Tommy" walked over water into our lives, The Who have been engaged in numerous projects which were supposed to make "Tommy" seem miniscule and paltry. We heard of such abortive attempts such as a multi-media move/experience and "Bobby", another rock opera. So, Townshend did go down the transcendant route. And the Who are all too creative and aggressive to just forget it all and hang up their gear.

So, here it is, basic Who. It seems that Townshend has come to the conclusion that there is more permanence to the Who as the Who, as opposed to the Who as "Tommy", or whatever. And this is what "Who's Next" is-the Who as themselves which is one of the best fuckin' bands around.

"Won't Get Fooled Again" (a great title) serves as a mold which can equally describe the effect that the other eight songs had on me. Remember the first time you heard that song? It was probably on your local, teenage AM radio station. Nothing particularly prolific, right? And after a few hearings you could recognize it in a flash. It wasn't really a "catchy" song, though, it was more like "distinguished". And if you were lucky enough to hear it on a good stereo, you realized how unbelievably wild it was. Daltrey's scream, at the end of the organ break, along with Moon's maniacal drumming and Townshend's vibrant chords was so fuckin' cool. You'd swear that the vinyl had teeth and it was going to jump up 'n bit ya. "Meet the new boss-same as the old boss." Yeah.

As for the rest of the record, "Baba O'Riley" starts out like a Ravi Shankar record being played at a faster speed. Townshend then employs a I-V-IV progressions upon which the song is built. It's a hell of an opener, with some good lyrics about "teenage wasteland". "Bargain" features Daltrey and Townshend exchanging lead vocals. Daltrey comes off as potent as ever, while Townshend provides for the more sensitive moments, essential for the mood of the song.

It was good that they kept "Love Ain't for Keeping" down to a little over two minutes. It's the weakest cut on the album, though hardly objectionable. "My Wife" is a John Entwhistle song and it makes up for everything "Keeping" lacked.

Second only to "Won't Get Fooled Again" is "Song is Over." Nicky Hopkins' piano is, as always, masterful. With just a minimum of alteration Townshend could have made this song a fitting climax to "Tommy" and it would have had an equal impact, although a much different, though quite valid, effect. Try it and see. It also holds true for "Won't Get Fooled Again". They are both variations of "We're Not Going To Take It", in a very real sense.

Side two contains the same professionalism and originality as Side One. "Getting in Tune" and "Going Mobile" will please anyone. And "Behind Blue Eyes" is a many-leveled song that has some CSN&Y harmony. Daltrey spits out the words which are excellent (which is not unusual for Townshend). "My dreams are not as empty as my conscience seems to be".

Which brings us back to "Won't Get Fooled Again". Just turn up the volume and have a toke.

Redwing And Santana: Two That Didn't

By FRANK JOHNSON

This week I have unfortunately been prompted to write a tale of 2 losers. Normally in this column, I have been treated by a wealth of good new talent, and the continued outlook so far looks favorable. But in the case of these two groups, I can honestly report nothing about their works to recommend them.

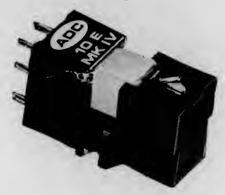
The first group, Redwing, seems to have unofficially taken the task of revivifying "Delta" sound, made famous earlier by the new-defunct Creedence Clearwater Revival. They appear by courtesy of Fantasy Records (a company that has joined the Dynaflex bandwagon with similar technical disasters) which was big John Fogerty's label. They also purport to have the same gutsy Delta style, with its typical heavy beat and overpowering guitar. As ersatz Creedence, however, they fall far short of even coming close to the earlier group's quality. In the first place, they lack Fogerty's vocals, which carried Creedence to fame and stardom. They also lack his musical ingenuity and the versatility that endeared Creedence to so many. Due to these omissions, in the final analysis what could emerge as an important new group has to stand as only "just another group". Their sound is contrived, hackneyed, and static. The liner notes on this album deliver a glowing introduction that virtually gushes, which is fine if you like gushy people.

If I were to compliment Redwing, it would have to concern the tight instrumentation of the group and their freedom from sticking to one monotonous key, a frequent plague of rock groups. They are also dandy to dance to, especially with a generous application of volume. But aside from these virtues, I can hardly recommend them as being serious musicians. No doubt you will experience the same sort of annoying déjà vus I did when first listening to this album.

I might in addition be treading on "holy ground" when I speak out against Santana's latest release, wrapped in a splotchy, psychedelic-celestial album cover. Their third work has no title, and, I hasten to add, very little content also. Everything in this release seems to be a rework of something done previously. One Side One, for instance, "No One To Depend On" emerges as a resyncopated "Evil Ways"--it has the same chord changes, the same chords, and the same repetition, but only in a new album. Instead of finding an innovative outlet for their considerable musical virtuosity, Santana has clung to an extremely restrictive song structure, organized around some rather tired South and Central American music. Does anyone remember back in 1961, when the Drifters cut "Sweets To My Sweet"? Evidently Santana does, because they have been reworking that song ever since. Bossa Nova died in 1963, but Santana still cashes in on it. (No wonder few of us are historians) Hang on, folks, because the reworking--and the beat--goes on. "Taboo," a little 12-bar blues number in the minor key, might be excused were it not another dub of "Black Magic Woman." One doesn't have to be much of a detective to find this out, I might add; just a Santana fan. If you're really into 12-bar blues the way some people are, you might conceivably like "Everybody's Everything," another continuation in this theme. But to me, 12-bar blues aren't everything, let alone everybody.

I can point with some satisfaction to the commendable efforts of an outsider, Mario Ochoa, on some superb piano improvisation in "Guajira." As the darling of the Woodstock crowd, Santana can further boast of fine musical workmanship. But this praise is endemic to other groups who have chosen to branch out and do different material, instead of emulating Santana and looking inward for their inspiration. Santana's artistry saves them from being branded as a put-on. But a group should not try to disguise repetitive material with good artistry. And, besides stealing from themselves, Santana has stolen from others. I am thinking primarily of the album cover, where they have juxtaposed a classic work of abstract photography, used earlier in the Life Science Library, on some other pictures from that same series, and have called it their own. This blatant rip-off in the purely artistic sense should fortell what is inside the album, in the musical sense.

Basic Audio



A Primer On Cartridges--Part Two

By FRANK JOHNSON

The last section concerned design specifications and theory. Because we want to put theory into practice, we'll talk now about actual cartridges on the market.

There are currently two types of cartridges in common use. The first is the ceramic (or crystal) cartridge, which operates under the principle of piezo-electric current generation. In this type, the stylus shank is coupled to two ceramic or crystal slabs that have been selected for piezoelectric stress properties. When the stylus shank moves, it presses against the elements and causes a small current to be generated. The design of this type need not be very elaborate, because usually the active elements are inexpensive and very rugged. In this respect ceramic and crystal cartridges are apt to be found in inexpensive record changers, and more often than not, they can have a sapphire needle. This will quickly tell us that serious hi-fi installations will not include this type of cartridge. The rigid qualities of these cartridges tends also to restrict their bass response, but due to the amount of current that is generated by the ceramic elements, they do not require a "boost" or a preamplifier before power amplification and thus offer a sort of economy.

The second type is the magnetic cartridge, which formed the bulk of our earlier discussion. This type operates under a different principle than does the ceramic cartridge. There is no mechanical coupling to piezoelectric elements: here the stylus shank is suspended in a rubber mounting in a small magnetic field. Depending on the design, either a magnet will be located on the end of the shank or else some iron will be found there; the former design is called moving-magnet and the latter is known as the moving-iron type. Here, principles of electro-magnetic induction cause current to be generated, but the amount is very small-much smaller than the ceramic cartridge. In addition, some sort of compensation (known as equalization, which we'll explain later) must be provided, because the properties of a magnetic cartridge are not linear. This is not needed in a ceramic design. Despite these drawbacks, magnetic cartridges are favored for serious record playback because with good design they can deliver extremely good frequency response,

The ADC Model 10 E MK IV, the latest model in the Audio Dynamics line of magnetic cartridges. This model uses a slightly different magnet system than found in other cartridges, here a heavier moving magnet is replaced by a hollow tube and eliminates losses and resonances found in the older system.

track at a low pressure, and also track very good results. Though a magnetic cartridge will always need a preamplifier, this does not present a problem because if more than one source is desired, preamplification can be combined with control and switching. We'll spend enough time on this later.

The first record styli, we will note, were simply needles that were connected to a diaphragm: sound was generated without any electrical amplification. Piezoelectric cartridges appeared when electrical amplification was introduced in the 1930's. Magnetic cartridges did not follow until much later, because early designs had a tendency to pick up hum. Also, because everyone played 78 rpm records, there was simply no need for a very compliant, low-output cartridge. However, when LP discs appeared in the late 1940's, there was suddenly a great demand for "the magnetics" because their potential was needed to take advantage of the possibilities with LP's.

We will assume that everyone reading this knows the difference between mono and stereo, the latter also known as binaural sound. We will also assume that readers know when stereo first appeared (1957) in disc form. So on this basis we'll proceed with a short history of stylus size.

78 discs demanded a stylus diameter of 3 mils (1 mil 1/1000 in.) to track correctly. The size of the grooves diminished with 45 rpm records, and so did the stylus- 2 mils was standard. For 33-1/3 rpm records, the size of the stylus dropped to 1 mil; this is why one must change styli when playing 78 records on a turntable also outfitted for 33 and 45 rpm discs. But when stereo came along, which necessitated a stylus that would have to move in both vertical and lateral (horizontal) directions, the size was further reduced to 0.7 mil to allow better penetration of the slightly smaller groove. Continued evolution proceeded to 0.5 mil, but this size had a tendency to "bottom" on the base of the groove, so 0.6 was adopted as a "standard compromise". This is now the most common conical stylus size.

But we must also pay attention to that last sentence. A stylus is usually fashioned in the shape of a cone, because a record groove is cut in the shape of a "V". The actual cutting of the record is done by means of a small wedge, known as the cutter. A conical stylus sometimes suffers from "pinch effect", which forces the cone upward in heavily-modulated passages on a record. In addition, only two small surfaces of the cone make contact with the groove walls; the rest do not. Therefore, another type of stylus was created, known as the elliptical stylus, which is a diamond cut in the shape of an ellipse and not a round cone.

Shure Brothers in 1963 were the first firm to offer this improved type. Because an ellipse is closer to the actual wedge shape of the record cutter, it reduces distortion and can more faithfully track the record grooves. It does not suffer from pinch effect, and groove contact is always the same on the two edges of the ellipse. The result is somewhat cleaner and brighter sound.

But, because of the production problems involved in cutting a diamond down to an ellipse, these styli must always be more expensive than conical styli. Also, one must never use an elliptical stylus at forces exceeding 3 grams, because slightly greater record wear occurs with it, which is accelerated at high tracking forces to a greater degree than with a conical stylus. So therefore never use an elliptical stylus in an old record changer.

An elliptical stylus is also more vulnerable to damage than a conical stylus, and it must be tracked at low pressures to take advantage of its design. The shape of the ellipse is specified at its widest and narrowest points; for instance, 0.2 x 0.7 mil. This size is said to be the standard, but occasionally manufacturers offer elliptical styli in 0.4 x 0.9 sizes, with additional combinations of 0.2 x 0.9 and 0.4 x 0.7 mil. The smaller sizes (0.2) are to be used at lighter forces such as occur in high-quality turntables, and the larger values (0.4) can be used on record changers, providing the stylus force does not exceed 3 grams.

Since 1964 records have been cut at a standard angle that ideally all cartridges must duplicate. When a record is cut, the "master" is shaped by the cutter, like metal grooves formed on a workshop lathe. The cutter supplies the information that the stylus will later pick up. But the wedge-shaped cutter meets the groove at a 15º angle, relative to the record. If the phono stylus is also positioned at a 15 angle, it is said to conform to the ideal tracking angle, necessary to reduce distortion.

Finally, all cartridges vary in accordance with how efficient they are. Each design will generate a different amount of current, depending on how the stylus shank moves within its magnetic field. Cartridge efficiency is measured as output, in terms of the number of millivolts (1 millivolt or m.v. = 1/1000 volt) per centimeter per second (cm./sec.). The standard record velocity is 5 cm./sec. Consequently, a cartridge that generates 1 m.v./c.m./sec. will generate 5 m.v. at this record velocity. An inefficient cartridge, which does not generate much voltage, demands a very sensitive amplifier with low noise, because the volume control has to be set higher to hear a record at a desired level. Therefore, cartridge output is also an important specification.

A record is played by means of a cartridge, but it is suspended on a turntable, so it is only natural that next time we'll discuss turntables

UMass Theater Plans Ambitious Season

The UMass Theatre Department, with an eye towards growth and in keeping with the demands and needs of its students, has announced its most ambitious season ever for the Fall and Spring semesters.

The UMass Theatre Department has come quite a way since its incorporation back in the Fall of 1928 when they produced their first play, "Odeipus Rex", with costumes on loan from the Stratford Ontario Shakespeare Festival. During these early days, the theater had no home of its own and only a small staff served a limited number of students. Productions were staged either in the Student Union Ballroom or in Bowker Auditorium.

In 1967 a lecture hall in the basement of Bartlett Hall was converted into a 388-theatre. The theatre is now the present home for the Department as it uses the facility for most of its major productions. When the new Fine Arts Center opens in the fall of 1973, the UMass Theatre Department will finally have a place to call home.

Staff and students have grown with the expansion of the UMass' campus. In the fall of 1962 there were only four faculty members and 12 majors. Today there are 23 faculty members, nearly twice the number of original majors, 100 undergrads, 35 grad students, and over 400 students participating in theater productions.

This month the Theater department celebrates its tenth year in operation and offers the University community its most diverse season yet. Six major productions will be presented in Bartlett Auditorium as well as a full season of plays that are planned for the smaller Studio Theatre in South College.

In Bartlett Auditorium, on the 21st of October, UMass Theatre will open with Eugene Ionesco's, modern classic, Exit the King, under the direction of Doris Abramson. Exit the King will be the University's entry in the 1971-72 American College Theatre Festival. Production dates are Oct. 21-23; 28-30.

William Saroyan's, The Cave Dwellers, directed by Michelle Faith, will be the next offering. Dates are Nov. 11-13, 18-20.

The final fall production will be Arthur Kopit's, award winning, Indians. Gary Stewart, who directed last years, American College Theatre Festival, entree The Clouds, will direct. Indians will be seen Dec. 9-11, 16-18.

The Spring semester will open with Vincent Brann's production of Rick Besoyan's Little Mary Sunshine on March 9-11, 16-18. Christopher Fry's The Lady's Not For Burning will be produced April 13-15, 20-23. Harry Mahnken, who directed the very first UMass Theatre production, will direct. The final production of the season will be a yet to be named work, directed and conceived by Marya Bednerick. Production dates are May 4-6, 11-13.

These productions can be seen at Bartlett Auditorium. All curtain times are at 8:30 PM. Reserved seats are available at the UMass Theatre Box Office, or by calling 545-2579. Prices are $1.50 for UMass students and $2.00 for all others.

In addition to the above season, a full compliment of productions will be presented at the Studio Theatre on the UMass Campus. This Fall will be seen, Noon, Two Bs Pinter, A reader's theatre production, The Jew of Malta, the UMass Theatre's children show, Diary of a Madman, and a Dance Theatre Concert.

Ticket Information is available by calling Box Office, 545-2579.

DEERFIELD
Drive-In Theatre
Route 5 & 10
South Deerfield, Mass.
Tel. 665-8746
FRI. SAT. SUN.

SOUL TO SOUL
COLOR by DE LUXE
FROM CONTINENTAL RELEASING

Also:
ZACHARIAH
COLOR by DE LUXE GP
Showtime 7:30
Sun: Soul to Soul at 7:30

PROGRAM COUNCIL
Presents
FELLINI'S
"SATYRICON"
S. U. Ballroom
Oct. 17
7:00 — 50¢ — 9:30

Introducing Channel 57

CHANNEL 57 is on the air. On Sunday, September 26, at 1:00 AM the citizens of Amherst had a new television station on their dial. And Western Massachusetts was no longer the largest segment of population in the country without a public television station.

Affiliated with the Public Broadcasting Service and WGBH in Boston, Channel 57 makes available entertainment, education and public affairs programs to all television viewers, not just to those who subscribe to cable wgby 57

Public Television in Western Massachusetts systems or could receive Boston or Hartford public stations. Such programs as "Sesame Street", Kenneth Clark's "Civilisation", Masterpiece Theatre's JUDE THE OBSCURE, "The Advocates", and The French Chef...innovative and exciting programs...are now reaching homes in the state's four western counties.

Channel 57 starts its broadcast life with offices and a small studio located in the Arsenal Museum on the grounds of the old Springfield Armory in Springfield, now the location of Springfield Technical Community College. The transmitter located on Mt. Tom in Holyoke broadcasts a strong signal of about a million and a half watts south and north into Connecticut and Vermont, and west and east into the Berkshires and Central Massachusetts.

Local public affairs programming which reports and explores the concerns of the many western Massachusetts communities served by Channel 57 will be increasingly produced and broadcast as public support and funding grows. It is Channel 57's plan to equip a mobile unit with cameras and video tape recorders so that the entire western Massachusetts area becomes a studio. Studio sites located in the larger cities and towns, within the area will require only that the mobile unit be plugged in and the cameras unloaded. These facilities will enable Channel 57 eventually to cover city council and town meetings, public hearings, speakers at the many educational institutions, and events of importance to the lives of the citizens of western Massachusetts.

Channel 2, Boston, and Channel 57 together are able to reach over 90% of the state's population by a single broadcast, the only communications system in the state with that capacity. This will mean, for instance, that all the voters in Massachusetts will be able to watch the state's political conventions, a chance available to western Massachusetts voters two years ago even though one of the conventions was held in Amherst.

The interconnection of these two public stations also means that events occuring in Boston at the State House which affect western Massachusetts will be able to be reported directly to the west. Conversely, reporting of events and opinions of western Massachusetts will be able to be viewed and judged directly and openly in the eastern end of the state.

Channel 57's week-time broadcast day starts at noon with the in-school instructional television programming of the "21-Inch Classroom". These programs, many of which are produced at WGBH in Boston, are designed to both supplement and complement elementary and secondary school classroom work. A school system, by becoming a member of "21-Inch Classroom" receives the appropriate workbooks and guides to make this in-school instructional television service an integral part of their educational program. Over 600,000 school children in the eastern part of the state participated in these programs last year.

Channel 57 will join the Public Broadcasting Service in the afternoon, at four o'clock with "Sesame Street", the remarkable program for pre-school children now beginning its fourth year. Following "Sesame Street" will be "Misterogers' Neighborhood", "Hodgepodge Lodge", and "The Electric Company", all for children.

"The Electric Company" is a reading program for 6-8 year-olds produced by the Children's Television Workshop, the originators and producers of "Sesame Street". It begins on October 25, and consists of an acting company of six performers, including Bill Cosby and Rita Moreno, who together with the imaginative use of video animation and electronics work to "turn on" a child to reading.

Channel 57's evening programs come mostly from the networking services of PBS. This year's PBS season, which begins on October 3, consists of both programs which received universal acclaim last year and new programs.

"Civilisation", the BBC's much-lauded 13-week series of one-hour programs will return with Sir Kenneth Clark once again making his urbane way through sixteen centuries of human ideas and events. William Buckley switched to PBS this year with "Firing Line", where he will continue to win ardent advocates and equally ardent detractors.

Masterpiece Theatre will return with four fresh imports from the BBC, starting with Thomas Hardy's JUDE THE OBSCURE. In January, all the episodes of THE SIX WIVES OF HENRY VIII will be shown, uncut.

On Monday evenings, a 90-minute "Special of the Week" will air major programs of drama, music, dance, and cultural documentaries. The season starts with Fred Wiseman's documentary, BASIC TRAINING, a blunt view of the brutalizing and dehumanizing experience recruits must undergo after joining the U.S. Army. The NET Opera this year will include Stravinsky's "Rossignol", Puccini's "La Rondine", and a specially-commissioned new opera by an American composer.

"The Advocates" will begin its third season, retaining its unique adversary format to analyze the hard questions that face the country. "Black Journal", one of television's major rostrums for the black viewpoint, will continue, as will "Soul!", a program providing a showcase for the best new black talent and ideas.

Public affairs and news programs are plentiful through the week's schedule. "This Week" is a half-hour examination of the week's major national or international news story. "Thirty Minutes With..." will feature prominent national and international figures with ATLANTIC MONTHLY editor, Elizabeth Drew. "Washington Week in Review" will be a weekly assessment of major news events as seen from the Nation's capital. "World Press" returns with a 45-minute round-up of national and international events as interpreted by the foreign press.

The sleeping habits of western Massachusetts viewers may be changed, as national news and comment is now available every week-night at 10 PM. Martin Agronsky presents "Evening Edition", an incisive half-hour of reports, interviews, and commentary on the day's events.

"The Reporters", a team of six young investigative reporters with the State of Massachusetts their beat, look into stories and issues closer to home every weekday evening. Louis Lyons, an old favorite, presents the early evening news as he has over Channel 2 for many years.

"The Great American Dream Machine", which became a favorite with the college-age viewer last year in its first season, returns with Marshall Effron and others to continue to explore and examine life in the USA in an amusing and satirical way.

"Film Odyssey" will present a collection of film classics produced throughout the world in the past fifty years. Shown on Friday evenings starting in January, the series will include "Jules and Jim", "The Blue Angel", "Grand Illusion", "The Gold Rush", "Beauty and the Beast", and 21 others.

And then there's Julia Child's "The French Chef"; Thalassa Cruso, television's expert at "Making Things Work", and, in January, "Making Things Grow"; exercising with "Maggie and Her Beautiful Machine" and fellow sufferers in the studio; and other programs sure to enthrall, entertain, and instruct the viewer all at the same time.

This season on public television, more so than any season before, offers a diversity and quality for viewers of all ages and interests. And for the first time, these programs are now able to be enjoyed by everyone in western Massachusetts who owns a television set.

Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops orchestra in one of the concerts featured on the Public Broadcast program "Evening At Pops" to be seen weekly on channel 57.

Eli Wallach and Anne Jackson

The first Special of the Week is on Basic Training at Fort Knox.

Channel 57's program schedule will be made available to 250,000 western Massachusetts residents through the cooperation of the four largest supermarket chains in the area and the Postal Service. The 47 stores of First National, Food Marts, Stop & Shop, and Big Y-Jumbo-Gateway will distribute 188,000 folders containing Channel 57's program to all their customers for four days starting October 6. Another 70,000 folders will be mailed to homes in the three Connecticut Valley counties.

One may obtain a charter membership in Channel 57. A membership contribution of $15.00 or more will result in a subscription to Channel 57's program guide, which will start publication in December.

"Radical Chic" Incisive And Delightful

By FRANK M. BAGLIONE

Radical Chic and Mau-Mauing The Flak Catchers by Tom Wolfe (Bantam Books)

Part One: Radical Chic.

There is some confusion when one reads Tom Wolfe's Radical Chic, the now famous account of the Bernstein party for the Black Panthers. We are told that Wolfe's treatment of New York's social elite is savage and satirical, frequently cruel but very sharp. Radical Chic is categorized as "pop-sociology," funny and socially perceptive.

One can almost hear a nervous laugh with these descriptions for the unavoidable feeling is that Tom Wolfe is satirizing more than the Bernstein's party and New York Society's unique way of slumming. There is the distinct impression that his satire includes the Panthers--our modern martyrs--and the entire socio-political philosophy of the "concerned" generation. For Tom Wolfe is the master of ridicule, his art the description of the ridiculous whenever and wherever it occurs. The movements, ideas and programs, including those of the Panthers, that began as a gnawing sense of responsibility for the ills of the society have been transformed into implacable moral aggression. Thus, "radical chic" is more than the slumming of the upper class, it is the new pose of our society. It has been awaiting its ridiculer.

Tom Wolfe is the man capable of exposing it to us. He is funny, he makes us laugh, he makes it possible to deny he is really seriously ridiculing the entire absurdity of our situation, only other people's absurdity. "Wonder what the Black Panthers eat here on the hors d'oeuvre trail?" Wolfe asks the reader when telling of the Bernstein's party in Radical Chic. "Do the Panthers like little Roquefort cheese morsels rolled in crushed nuts this way, and asparagus tips in mayonnaise dabs?"

The party is in the thirteen room Park Avenue apartment of Maestro and Mrs. Leonard Bernstein. The gathering is billed as a fund raising for the Panthers on trial in New York charged with conspiring to blow up some Father improbable places--like the Bronx Botanical Gardens. Actually, as Wolfe tells us, throwing such parties for minority groups and political factions like the Panthers and the Puerto Rican Young Lords is the current way New York Society expresses its Nostalgie de la boue, or romanticizing of primitive souls. It is a nineteenth century French term which means, literally, "nostalgia for the mud." It tends to be a favorite motif whenever a greant many new faces or a lot of new money enters the social scene. When the black movement left the hands of the middle-class and went "funky", went to Stokely, Rap and Eldridge, this meant it could be intergrated along with the New politics into a tried and true social motif, nostalgie de la boue. Radical Chic was born.

Wolfe entertains us throughout the book with the history and operation of Radical Chic. But the funnier segments deal with the styles of the Bernstein's guests, the Panthers. "Christ, if the Panthers don't know how to get it all together, as they say, the tight pants, the tight black turtlenecks, the leather coats, Cuban shades, Afros." Wolfe highlights the speech given by Don Cox, Field Marshal (now there's an interesting term) of the Black Panther Party. Cox's drinking in Cox's performance like Tiger's milk, for the...Soul, as it were. "All love the tone of his voice, which is Confidential Hip." Yet, as Wolfe points out, his delivery falls into strangely formal patterns. What are these block phrases, such as "our Minister of Defense, Huey P.

TOM WOLFE

speech is mainly the ten point program of the party, punctuated on this occasion with a number of you knows and sees which the gathering loves. "They are so somehow...--black...so funky...so metrical. He uses them not for emphasis but for punctuation." Cox closes his speech with the "When in the course of human events..." part of our Declaration of Independence. He reads it straight through, every word. Then, "You know where that's from?"--and he looks out at everyone and hesitates before laying this gasper on them--"That's from the Declaration of Independence. And we will defend ourselves and do like it says...you know?...and that's about it."

Cox later embarrasses the fund raisers by referring to the breakfast program of the Panthers. The crowd is nervously aware of how the Panthers gain merchants "donations" for the program. "--shee-ut. What the hell is Cox getting into that for? For God's sake, Cox, don't open that can of worms. Even in this bunch of upholstered skulls there are people who can figure out just evening, man--don't bring out that ball-breaker--" who those merchants are, what group, and just how they are asked for donations, and we've been free of that little issue all But no matter, everyone is Newton"?

After the speeches and the pledges of support (Lenny pledges his fee from the next performance of Cavalleria Rusticana, the assemblage in the Chinese yellow walled living room have their question and answer period. Says Wolfe, "As anyone knows, Lenny treasures the art of conversation, monopolizes it, conglomerates it." He is "the Great Interrupter, the Village Explainer, the champion of Mental Jotto, the Free Analyst, Mr. Let's Find Out leading the troops on a seventy-two-hour forced march though the lateral geniculate and the pyramids of Betz, no breathers allowed, until every human brain is reduced finally to a clump of dried seaweed inside a burnt-out husk and collapses, implodes, in one last crunch of terminal boredom."

Lenny questions the Panthers unrelentlessly about the threats they allegedly make against leaders of the black community. He is relentless because he can't get a straight answer. Lenny: "Bayard Rustin was supposed to be here tonight. The reason he isn't here tonight is that he was warned that his life would be in danger, and that's what we want to know about." Cox's answer is, "We don't know anything about that."

Otto Preminger, no piece of wallpaper himself, wants to quiz Cox about his statement that this government is the most repressive in the world. Preminger: "Do you mean dat zis government is more repressive zan de government of Nigeria?"

"I don't know anything about the government of Nigeria," says Cox.

Meanwhile the Panther lawyer, Lefcourt, is laying the old "ninty-five percent of the wealth is owned by five percent of the people" rap. "Leon and I could draw up a constitution that would give us all the power, and we could make it so deep and legitimate that you would have to kill us to change it."

Julie Belafonte rises up in front and says: "Then we'll kill you!"

"Power to the people!" says Leon Quat...and all rise to their feet...and Charlotte Curtis, women's news editor of the Times puts the finishing touches in her notebook...and the white servants wait patiently in the wings to wipe the drink rings off the Amboina tables.

The aftermath of the party was embarrassing for the Bernsteins and Society. The papers called it "elegant slumming" that "mocked the memory of Martin Luther King." "This was an editorial," writes Wolfe, "on the editorial page, underneath the eagle medallion with 'All the News That's Fit to Print' and 'Established 1851' on it...in the very New York Times itself." Bernstein was being called a masochist and--and this was the really cruel part--as "the David Susskind of American Music."

In the final pages Wolfe brilliantly analyzes the reasons for the debacle of Radical Chic and the Panthers' debut in Society. He is so funny, so witty, so excellent a writer that one sincerely regrets the end of the story. We wish he had written more. We yearn to hear his comments on the annual Washington Peace Marches, like the last one when dumpy Bella Abzug confused the rhetoric and shouted "Right on to the People." How lovely if Tom Wolfe, rather than the dull Mailer, had written his insights on the Women's movement. In short what a tremendous mental relief if Tom Wolfe would spotlight the ridiculous movements that have harried us across the land, that have related our entire existence to one type of guilt or another; to chauvinism, imperialism, oppression, repression. Those sanctimonious rebels whose moral aggression has sent us cowering into the defensive corner of self-consciousness.

Happily we turn a page and find another story by Wolfe, "Mau-Mauing the Flak Catchers" (a story on how the ghetto hustlers make the poverty program work). Next week we will see what Wolfe has found ridiculous about the confrontation between the ghetto and Bureaucracy.

This Week

Sweet Charity's

Presents from Puerto Rico the GUAMANI BAND

8 Fantastic Pieces of Santana Genius

Dig the best heavy sounds with your Dungarees on!

No door charge during Week

1270 Memorial Ave. Across from Big E

Dig the Weekend Fun in PEPPERLAND!

The BEATLES

"YELLOW SUBMARINE"

in color

*Plus "GOING STEADY"

SAT. EVENING, OCT. 16

6, 8, 10, IN MAHAR AUD.

Sponsored by MAM

The Reivers

A Reiver is a rascal. A Reiver is a brawler. A Reiver is a scamp

A Reiver is a con artist. A Reiver is an operator.

Steve McQueen is the head Reiver.

Friday Oct. 15 - Homecoming '71

Student Union Ballroom

Showings 4, 6:30, 9, and 11 p.m.

50¢ Sponsored by Newman Club

Theater

Revival Has Nowhere To Go But Up

By BOB NESTI

If the current revival of the 1944 Leonard Bernstein–Betty Comden–Adolph Green musical On The Town does not kill the current nostalgia craze infecting Broadway, then I doubt anything will. Now in Boston prior to New York, the show is undistinguished, banal, and inane, and is packaged in an ugly, tacky production that's appalling beyond belief.

When the musical opened in 1944 it was hailed as ingenious and fresh, as well as introducing a number of great talents to the Broadway theater. Besides Bernstein (music) and Comden and Green (book and lyrics), the original production was staged by master director–choreographer Jerome Robbins and was designed by Oliver Smith. This impressive line–up rocked Broadway, a Broadway of a generally whimsical nature. 1944 was the season of Rodgers and Hammerstein's Carousel, which along with Oklahoma! was their second show running on Broadway; Bloomer Girl, a musical extravanganza with Celeste Holm, was also a smash; as was the shmaltzy Song of Norway, and the ice revue, Hats Off To Ice. Taken in context, Town's success seemed inevitable.

Yet whether or not it was worth reviving should by now seem a mute point. We've come quite a ways since 1944 and what was bold and inventive then seems about as fresh today as a Jackie Gleason television musical, which it very much resembles. The sketchily drawn story line concerns three sailors on twenty-four hour leave in New York City. While on a subway, one sees a photo of Miss Turnstyles and immediately wants to date her. He and his two cohorts decide to each go their own separate ways and find her.

As they traverse the city they find themselves in a series of misadventures (which are so embarrassing I shall not detail them here, just catch a Three Stooges short for an interesting comparison) and, of course, romance. Chip, the homespun sailor, meets a delightfully pushy taxi driver named Hildy. Ozzie, the girl crazy member of the trio, meets his female counterpart in the form of the seemingly sedate anthropologist Claire. And Gabby, the naval hero, meets, loses, and eventually gets his Miss Turnstyles.

Today this is about as shaky a premise to build an engaging musical as can be imagined and I doubt if it didn't have the names involved and the legend behind it this show would have been redone at all. It's here though, and, in its present form, can only evoke a very garish and lifeless memory.

This is because On The Town is nostalgic in name only. It misses the warmth and charm nostalgia so essentially needs. No, No Nanette has it, as does Follies to a controlled degree. This one has about as much charm as ration stamps, pleated skirts, and white bobby socks. The production assaults the audience with unabashed pride what is hopelessly gauche by today's standards: a vaudeville-like entertainment with a symphonic score and infused with dances and other aspects of pop culture of its day.

Ron Field, who directed, choreographed, and co-produced the show, probably should be held for most the blame. He has staged it straight, which was probably the kiss of death as its very embarrassing to watch the cast seriously present the dated and inane material. The authors Comden and Green have always struck me funny in a forced sort of way and in this one they push things to astounding ends of believability. Their satire was probably once droll, now it floats above the audience like a cloud and misses the mark entirely.

The choreography is also a major dissapointment. The man who moved Cabaret and Applause with such breathtaking ease, plods his way through this one with routines that seem forced or bizarrely acrobatic. At one point, for instance where four couples dance to blissful love in the ballet to the nice, bluesy "Lonely Town", the male dancers pick up their young female partners and hold them forward from their waist. The effect is very reminiscent of mastheads on a ship. Mastheads. I could not understand. Perhaps it was because the show was about sailors–no, then it could be because the scene took place in a park and they were imitating statues. If that's the case, they'd better beware of pigeons.

The sets by the late James Trittipo (he died two weeks prior to the Boston opening) are tacky and aesthetically ugly. A number of times I wondered if the next set would be any worse than the previous one, but I think it reached its lowest point in the museum sequence and in a Congo-like nightclub scene which resembled a front to a jungle ride in an amusement park. There is also an ugly, ugly grey scrim which kept dropping at the worst moments.

The costumes are accurate and colorful and seem fun at first, what with all those polka-dots and pleats and wild colors, yet these wear down pretty quickly. After some time it was hard to decide which aspect of the production was the most distracting, in the end it seemed a toss-up.

The Bernstein score is well-performed and remains the show's singular saving grace. The songs are always melodious and the ballet sequences coming from the pit seemed to betray what was appearing on the stage. The music which reflected the Forties in a mildly satirical vein, is finely arranged and well-performed. Unfortunately the songs alone can only bring moments of respite and cannot hold the production together, although they may keep you from dashing to the nearest exit in disbelief.

As far as performances, well, everyone tries hard and smiles a lot. There is, though, one delightfully distinguished characterization, this by Bernadette Peters as the wonderfully racuous Hildy. She is, quite simply, a knock-out. A small wonder of a young lady whose dancing is neat and perky, whose sublime timing can handle even the corniest line with style, and can fill the theater with a full and fetching, completely captivating voice.

On the other hand Phyllis Newman is the same Phyllis Newman we so fondly remember from afternoon panel shows, and her Claire is insufferable. She sings adequately, but plods her way through her dance numbers and reads lines as if it was the first run off of idiot cards.

Of the three sailors, Kurt Peterson as Gabby seemed quite detached, although he did pleasantly sing two of the show's best numbers, "Lonely Town" and "Lucky To Be Me." The other two, Bill Gerber and Jess Richards, were adequate and danced well enough.

Eating Out

Somewhere Else, Quicksilver, and (Again) Flo's

By KERRY GILLILAND & EMILIE SIKORA

Eating out is an irregular weekly column (based on a non-existent stipend) that we will be writing for the remainder of this semester. Realizing that opinions and tastes do vary, our main purpose will be to inform the University Community about what to expect at various eating locales in terms of service, menu, prices and atmosphere. We would also certainly like to hear (via the Collegian Office) of any complaints, rip-offs, and good or derogatory comments about any of the places whether on or off campus.

Somewhere Else is a relatively quiet but teeming new enterprise happening over at J. Adams in Southwest. Located on the 12th floor lounge, this small-quickie food place is a total dorm venture. Looking around, you'll find a pinball machine (practically inaccessible to females) and a piano, to while away the time while waiting for your order but the service was prompt when we were there even though there was a line. If you're a girl, you shouldn't have too much trouble getting a good conversation going, as quite naturally, there is an abundant turn-out of male clientele.

Somewhere Else has an interesting menu and their prices aren't bad. The only thing we took issue with was the cost of grinders (.60-.70) which is a little steep for what you get. Otherwise: Sandwiches run between .20-.45; Drinks, usual choice at usual prices; Fresh pastries & homemade pie .25; Candy Assortment with a Big Penny Candy Jar; Cigarettes .55; and Papers, ZigZag .15, Top .20.

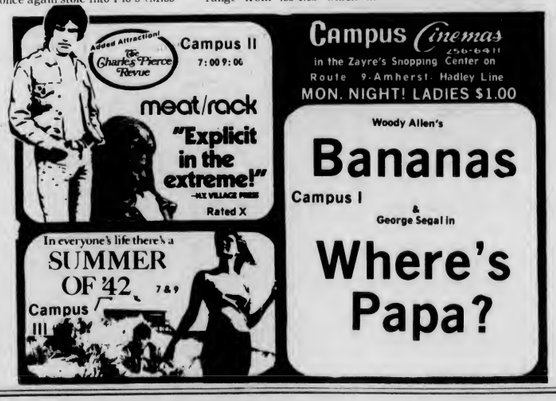
Scattered tables with bright oilcloths also help erase from your mind that you're still on campus and not in Munchies or Bites & Pieces. Overall, Somewhere Else is not a great place to eat; the food is edible and plain but the tone seems friendly and relaxed. Hours: weekdays 7 p.m.-1 a.m., weekends noon-1 a.m.

Another place we hit last weekend was Quicksilver, located on N. Pleasant St. across from the Fire Station. When we asked Manager Fred Boyajian how Quicksilver got its name, he explained that it was a synonym for Mercury, a name important in astrology and mythology for its aspects of communication. This aptly describes Quicksilver's atmosphere. It's a very relaxed place where you can sit and lounge leisurely without nervous employees breathing down your neck. Two really good stereo speakers tuned into an FM station add to this mood along with a couple of pinball machines and a color TV over the bar. However, we would be hesitant to recommend this place for parents and visiting dignitaries. You order and get your food at the snack bar, eat at the tables provided, and it would be helpful if you got rid of your own trash. Lights are dim and bare feet were seen, so it seemed to us a place geared to collegians.

The menu includes salad .35 (a little steep again, but good), chili .40 (bubbly hot and really spicy), baked beans, hamburgers, a steak plate, and others. If you like rice, the Begger's Banquet gives you a heaping plateful with fried onions and peppers for .35. Beverages include milk, milk shakes (made with non-articiel ice cream) and juices (no coke) with desserts consisting of pies and pastries. Overall, the food is food; nothing more, nothing less.

At the bar the over 21 crowd has a choice of light & dark domestic & foreign beers (Reingold, Miller, Lowenbrau, Miller Dark) and a variety of wine and wine coolers (Cold Duck, Apple, Leibfraumilch).

Quicksilver is open 24 hours a day and as mentioned before, it's a good place to feel unhurried in, with wine, music, and food to help you get exactly the right mood to write that English paper for that first Monday morning class!



With journalistic pencils secreted beneath our cloaks, we once again stole into Flo's (Miss Florence Diner, main drag, Florence, an extension of Northampton) last week in a surprise coup to unseat her high ratings. However, being the consistent place she is, we are proud to affirm that nothing has changed in any aspect. Although we had to wait in a line that stretched out the front door, down the steps and onto the sidewalk, we were served within 8-10 minutes of being seated. Eh, food freaks?

By now, a lot of you have heard of Flo's chaotic, rollicking atmosphere, which is like dining with King Henry VIII's court. So let's get right into the menu and price range.

Seafood is a bigey here; prices range from .85-1.95 which include stuffed haddock, jumbo shrimp, brook trout, softshell crabs, and lobster a la Newburg.

In the 1.45-2.95 category are Chinese noodles, barbecued spareribs, roast stuffed L.I. duck, broiled lamb chops, honeycomb tripe, and pan browned corned beef hash & eggs to name a few. Sandwiches, beverages, and entrees are also on the menu. Interesting to note is the choice of 9 vegetables they will offer you ranging from baked eggplant to butternut squash.

Flo's goes all out on desserts, too. Why, we don't know because a fair amount of people don't get beyond the doggy bag stage.

Kipnis Mime Group To Perform Thursday

The Kipnis Mime Theatre group perform a scene from "Opus Blue is Pink," their multi–part work which is highlighted by a performance of Bela Bartok's "The Miraculous Mandarin." This work, written by Bartok in 1919 has traditionally been performed as a ballet but originally was written as a pantomime.

Claude Kipnis and his Mime Theatre will present a four-part theatrical production Thursday, Oct. 21, at the UMass-Amherst.

The 8 p.m. performance in Bowker Auditorium, Stockbridge Hall, will be sponsored by the UMass Fine Arts Council.

The production feature "Opus Blue...is Pink" will be highlighted by a presentation of Hungarian composer Bela Bartok's "The Miraculous Mandarin" which was staged by Mr. Kipnis and performed when he was director-in-residence for the Boston Opera Company.

The other three pieces of this production will be "The Crowd," presenting man and his struggle for individuality; "Point of View", demonstrating the futility of war; and "Au Clair de la Lune," concerning man's conquest of outer space and his landing on the moon to find the surprise of a lifetime.

Combining the worlds of theater, dance and classical music, Mr. Kipnis is soloist, performer and director of his own company. He has performed in New York at the Theatre de Lys where he presented "Men and Dreams" with the New York Philharmonic during the spring Promenades, and at the Chicago Ravinia Festival.

He is artist-in-residence at the University of Illinois and a fellow at that University's Center for Advanced Study.

Tickets for the performance are available at the Fine Arts Council Ticket Office, 125 Herter Hall. Telephone 545-0202.

The Kipnis Mime Theater

Though many people have some idea about what Mime is, very few have had a close contact with this form of art and, furthermore, a rather thin choice of Mime shows has been offered to the public's attention.

This production, yet being a personal and original creation, was conceived so that it offers a wide range of Mime's possibilities.

Having won international recognition and shown his creative skill and personal talent with his show "Men and Dreams", Claude Kipnis has created a program for an enlarged company and widens the frame of his work.

Taking its inspiration in the modern environment (numbers like "Point of View" and "Au Clair de la Lune", a space trip with music) as well as revitalizing classics (Bartok's "The Miraculous Mandarin"), this production offers a unique venture in a world of theatrical illusion and a rare communion between actor and spectator beyond the spoken language.

Most eloquent are the revues about "The Miraculous Mandarin" which is the only work of this show to have been already performed since it was commissioned by the Boston Opera in 1967. The program will also include Stravinsky's "L'Histoire du Soldat" and "Renard".

The Kipnis Mime Theatre presented at Philharmonic Hall in 1968 two works commissioned -- Dukas' "Sorcerer's Apprentice" at the Promenade Concerts, and Kabalewski's "Comedians" was given before children's audiences with The Little Orchestra Society.

"Opus Blue...Is Pink" will be presented at Hunter College for a two-week run in New York City before the nationwide tour.

Two works commissioned in 1968 were presented in New York at Philharmonic Hall -- Dukas' "Sorcerer's Apprentice" was a feature of the Promenade Concerts, and Kabalewski's "Comedians" was given before children's audiences with The Little Orchestra Society.

Mr. Kipnis has been seen on television networks in the "Today" show, NBC's "Profile on the Arts", and a special program created for the CBS network "Encounter".

The premiere of "Opus Blue...Is Pink" came at the University of Illinois. The program will be seen for two weeks in New York at Hunter College with a tour following, and includes in addition to "The Miraculous Mandarin", two works of Stravinsky -- "L'Histoire du Soldat" and "Renard".

Claude Kipnis: A Biography

Claude Kipnis was born in Paris, where he joined a theatre group and became a mime-pupil of the celebrated Marcel Marceau. Studying and performing in Europe until 1960, he then went to Israel in 1961, to Tel-Aviv, where he founded a School of Mime. He held three teaching positions at the same time, being associated with the University of Tel-Aviv, the Conservatory of Ramat-Gan, and the Habimah Theatre, home of the world renown Habimah Players. Mr. Kipnis created a unique group with deaf-mutes in Israel's Helen Keller Center. During all this activity he was still able to manage various tours through Israel.

1963 saw the creation of his mime-drama "Men and Dreams" which was presented on tour in Israel, to be followed by many performances in Europe. The presentation in London brought an engagement for Mr. Kipnis with BBC-TV, and his mime-drama was also seen at the Nord Sea Festival in Belgium. "Men and Dreams" was seen at the Festival of Theatre des Nations in Paris, which led to a nine-week engagement in New York City at the Theatre de Lys in 1966

The Miraculous Mandarin

Bela Bartok's "The Miraculous Mandarin" dating from the year 1919 is presented by Claude Kipnis and his Mime Theatre, as originally intended by the Hungarian composer, that is as a pantomime and not as a ballet.

Mr. Kipnis has adapted the scenario by Melchior Langyel which relates the story of an impassioned mandarin who is enticed by a girl belonging to a gang of thugs. Mr. Kipnis plays the three roles--The Old Gentleman, The Shy Young Man and The Mandarin.

Bartok's score pulses with primitive, exciting rhythms propelled by a large percussion section in the orchestra. The composer has made his music strong and seductive as it coils around the action which dramatizes the sadness of the story with deep pathos relieved by moments of light humor.

'Smith's' Showplace
ACADEMY
AT THE GATES OF THE COLLEGE
Northampton, Mass. — 584-8436
NOW ENDS SATURDAY!
Michael Crichton's
"The Andromeda Strain"
All the suspense of the great novel...
On Screen at: 6:45-9:00
SUN., MON., TUES.
"Diary of a Mad Housewife"
at 9:00
plus
Elliot Gould "I Love My Wife" at 7:15
Use The Masonic Street Parking Lot - Just Across the Street.

CALVIN
TEL. 584-7310
Now Ends Tues.
Eves. - 7:00 - 9:00
Sat.-Sun. 5:25-7:00-9:00
So what's wrong with being a voyeur?
RICHARD BENJAMIN JOANNA SHIMKUS
The Marriage of a Young Stockbroker
COLOR BY DE LUXE R
BARGAIN NITES
Mon.-Tues.-All Seats $1.00

Weekend

By BOB NESTI

Theater

Exit the King

University Theater presents its first production of the year in their interpretation of absurdist playwright Eugene Ionesco's play. It's something of a Dorian Gray-like fable in which a 400 year old king is to die in two hours. He, though, is totally unprepared for such a drastic action since he never aged and is young, handsome, and vigorous. Opening night will be next Thursday, October 21, at 8:30 in Bartlett Auditorium. ($)

Erick Hawkins Dance Company

Three dance concerts featuring the Erick Hawkins Dance Company will be performed October 21, 22, 23 at Smith, completing that group's six day residency on campus. The first three days, which begin on Monday, will be occupied with lectures, master classes, and lecture-demonstrations, conducted by Hawkins and members of his company.

The Hawkins group will be accompanied at two of their performances by the American Brass Quintet Lucia Dlugoszewski, who has worked as a composer with Hawkins on many previous occasions, has composed the score for a new dance, "Angels of the Inmost A Heaven", especially for the quintet. "Angels" will be performed Thursday and Friday evenings.

The Kipnis Mime Theatre

Claude Kipnis brings his company to UMass next Thursday, October 21, for a four-part theatrical production entitled "Opus Blue...Is Pink." The featured portion of the production will be Bela Bartok's "The Magnificent Mandarin." For further information see page 11A.

Le Treteau de Paris

That world famous Le Treteau de Paris, will perform at Bowker Auditorium again this year. Through the efforts of the French Corridors at UMass, the Treteau will present Moliere's "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme" tonight, Friday, October 15 at 8:15 p.m. Tickets, available through the Student Union Box Office, cost $4, $3, or $2.

Films

The Andromeda Strain (Academy of Music, Northampton)

A scientific melodrama about a deadly substance which threatens human survival. Men and machine combine, as a maze of computers and a group of scientists in a germ-welfare center race-against-the-clock to halt the deadly menace. It's very uneven; at times compelling, at other moments dull and corny, still effective in the final moments. Directed by Robert Wise featuring Arthur Hill, David Wayne, and Kate Reid.

Bananas (Campus Cinemas, Hadley)

Woody Allen's latest exercise in absurdist humor is a joy for his fans and those who like a wild, zany farce in the Marx Brothers' tradition. It loosely concerns a schmeil of a young man who, when rejected by his girl, runs off to a Banana republic and becomes its president. What it all finally amounts to is a series of Woody Allen's wonderfully perverse gags done by a thoroughly competent group led by Allen and featuring Louis Lasser.

Bombay Talkie (Talkie, Northampton)

A feature film from India which is a droll comedy about movie making, sophisticated movie stars, and a neurotic lady novelist. It's from the team of James Ivory (direction) and Ismail Merchant (screenplay) whose last collaboration Shakespeare Wallah was a clever delight. This one is equally fine, with wit, lushness and warmth.

Death in Venice (Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield)

Thomas Mann's 1911 novella has been made into a richly evocative experience by Luchino Visconti. An aging composer (patterned after the German master Gustav Mahler) discovers a vision of perfect beauty in the form of a fourteen year old boy while vacationing in cholera-ridden Venice. Visconti's focus is less upon the Platonic and more upon the sensual, and, although it may not be true to Mann, is hypnotically effective. The film is a visual and aural treat with a magnificent recreation of Venice and music of Mahler, and a moving performance by Dirk Bogarde as the aging composer Aschenbach.

One of the actors of Le Treteau de Paris. The acclaimed company return to UMass this evening at 8:15 for a performance of Moliere's classic comedy "le Bourgeoise Gentlehomme."

The Devils (Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield)

A look into the corruption and perversity of Sixteenth Century France which is about as illuminating as a Road Runner cartoon. The usually fine British director Ken Russell somehow lost control of his material and over-indulged in presenting scenes of unrestrained depravity which challenge your sense of propriety. Oliver Reed plays a highly-individualistic priest who is crushed (literally) by the forces of emerging French statehood led by Cardinal Richelieu. Vanessa Redgrave, as his foil, is a totally mad nun whose sexual fantasies are something to behold.

The Diary Of A Mad Housewife (starts Sunday, Academy of Music, Northampton)

Carrie Snodgrass makes a distinguished film debut in this excellent Frank and Eleanor Perry collaboration. The ennui of an upper, middle class New York housewife is explored with uncommon clarity and wit. Her boredom leads her to an affair with a famous writer (Frank Langella), which doesn't solve her problems at all, only makes new ones. The film is a wonderful character study of three, diverse types and is blessed with taut direction, a good script, and fine performances from all the principals (who include Richard Benjamin as the snively, nasty husband).

Dracula (Sunday, Merrill Science Center, Amherst College, 8 p.m.)

The original 1931 version that introduced (and typed) Bela Lugosi as the celebrated Count. Directed by Tod Browning from the popular stage play, the film is occasionally static and stagy. Still though, it has been a great popular success and remains one of the most important of Hollywood horror films.

Fellini Satyricon (Sunday, 7 and 9:30, SU Ballroom)

Fredrico Fellini's highly graphic view of decandent Rome. He has created a near surreal vision in which three bisexual males wander through pagan Rome. The film at times may be confusing and its reality is quite alien to our own yet it is undoubtably the most masterful presentation of the grotesque ever filmed. Fellini has managed to assemble a cast which is probably the most striking sideshow assembly since Browning's Freaks.

Fortune and Men's Eyes

The film version of John Herbert's off-Broadway success dealing with the brutality of prisons. It flattens any of the subtlety and honesty of the play and emerges as a misshapen and voyueresque look into the problem of homosexuality in prisons. The melodramatic plot deals with a young man's fall into depravity and is very difficult to swallow. Wendell Burton, Zooey Hall, and Michael Greer all lend their talents in the first film in recent memory to leave a bad taste in the mouth.

Frankenstein (Saturday, Merrill Science Center, Amherst College, 8)

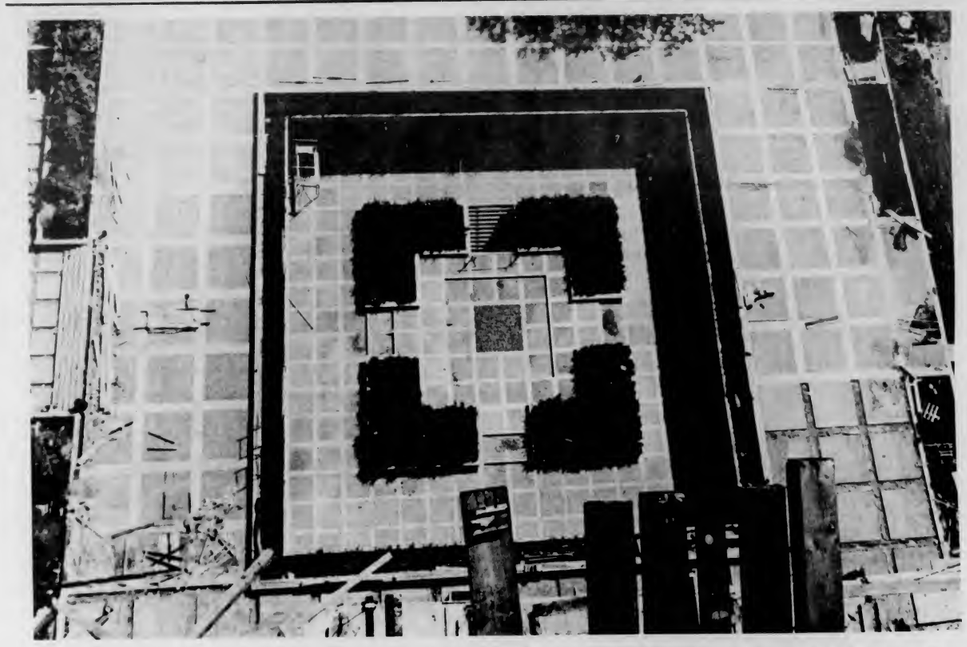
The most famous horror film of all time and a classis of the genre. A film adaption of the Mary Shelley novel about a slightly neurotic doctor and his lumbering monster. Boris Karloff's Monster rightly remains one of the most

Continued on Page 2A

THE DEVILS

John Lincoln Wright, singer and songwriter of the Beacon Street Union. Remember the Boss-town sound, the days of old when Dick Summer was all the rage and Ultimate Spinach were the rave of tomorrow.

Relive it, this Saturday night in the Ballroom when the Beacon Street Union will play.



New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather: Chile today, Hot Tamale, and the War rages on.

VOLUME XCIX, ISSUE 28 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS MONDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1971

Did you ever wonder what was growing in those L-shaped gardens around the terrace of the new library tower? Well, it's a little difficult to tell from twenty-eight stories up, so for a close-up solution to this picture puzzle see page 3. MDC photo sequence by Steve Schmidt)

Bromery Withdraws State Post Candidacy

By JEANETTE MARTINEAU

Dr. Randolph W. Bromery, withdrew his candidacy for the state post of secretary of education Thursday.

Dr. Bromery commented last night in a telephone interview: "My position is stated in the letter on the Lt. Governor's desk. I withdrew because this is a critical time for the University, and, even though it's a temporary position, I thought it best that I stay on here."

In the letter to Governor Francis W. Sargent and Lt. Gov. Donald R. Dwight, Dr. Bromery cites his new chancellor duties as: "paramount to making the state university a better facility for both students and faculty."

A special committee of eighteen members has been authorized by Board of Trustees to search for candidates for the permanent chancellorship. The committee's recommendations are not expected until early 1972.

Responding to Dr. Bromery's request for the withdrawal of his candidacy for the state post, Gov. Sargent expressed "reluctant acceptance", and Lt. Gov. Dwight stated that another candidate for the cabinet post would be named "very soon".

"We have acceded to Dr. Bromery's request that his name be withdrawn from consideration," Dwight continued. "However, we are not ruling out the possibility that he could be convinced to accept appointment to higher government service in the future."

According to Dwight, Dr. Bromery's qualifications for the secretariat and his outlook on education had impressed Gov. Sargent: "He was a prime candidate for the appointment, and we are sure he will do an outstanding job for the university in his new position as acting chancellor."

Thus leaves still three secretariat positions unfilled, including the secretaries of education, communities and development, and elder affairs. Recently, the House Ways and Means Committee in the state legislature withheld funding of the governor's secretariat, noting that Gov. Sargent has failed to fill the positions authorized earlier this year, and mounting the pressure to secure appointments of these secretaries. Lt. Gov. Dwight recently disclosed that Gov. Sargent is "very close to making a final decision" concerning these appointments.

Dr. Bromery recently withdrew his candidacy for the state post of secretary of education.

On The Inside:

- Food Service See page 2
- Another Distinguished Visitor See page 3
- Sports Pages 14-16

Food Services

Where Has All The Money Gone?

By FRANCINE NICHOLSON

Question: "Where goes all the money taken in by Food Services?" Answer: to help maintain and operate the Campus Center.

As explained by Food Services Director Mike Egan, the department manages the various eating places within the Campus Center (the Hatch, coffee shop, Blue Wall cafeteria, the Top-of-the-Campus, the Campus Center bars) and the catering service. Designed as an effort to bring the UMass student a wide range of choices in eating places, the Food Services does not include the dining commons or Munchy's.

Financed by a smaller trust fund within the Campus Center Trust Fund, Food Services turns all profits back into the fund to help pay for student activities and maintenance within the Campus Center. According to Egan, "All profits made here (by Food Services) are funneled back into the Campus Center."

Roughly speaking, the Campus Center expense list reads about $1,830,000 yearly. Student fees cover approximately $1,275,000. Besides paying for its own operation, Food Services profits contribute an additional $100,000 to help cover Campus Center expenses.

Food Services is budgeted not only to pay for itself but also to make a profit. The management of Food Services plans out this budget and then submits it to the Student Union Governing (S.U.G.) Board for approval. Throughout the year, the S.U.G. Board maintains an active interest in the operation and management of Food Services.

If maintenance costs for the Campus Center remained the same and Food Services profits rose, student Campus Center fees would decrease.

Prices throughout Food Services vary according to cost of maintenance of the individual restaurants. However, all prices set are approved by the S.U.G. Board. As Egan explained, prices of packaged foods tend to run higher than those in grocery stores because Food Services offers service and a place in which to eat purchases, both of which must be paid for.

In addition to eatables, Food Services brings free entertainment to the Campus Center. Besides the Cabaret at the Top-of-the-Campus on Friday and Saturday nights, students can take advantage of the Wednesday night Coffee Houses and varied Tuesday night entertainment.

Also, Food Services has begun to manage the vending machines in the dorms. Financed by a trust fund separate from that which backs up the Food Services, the vending machine system pays the Food Services for overseeing its operation. Under the new management, vending machine damage has been reduced by one-third. According to Egan, damage is due mostly to frustrated customers venting their emotions on machines not kept in good repair. Food Services has improved machine maintenance.

All vending machine profits go to support university athletic scholarships and the Cultural Enrichment Fund. Vending contracts are chosen to give more profits to the students.

Joe

"A Trip For Tina"

The third performance of "A Trip for Tina" will be presented tonight at 7:30 PM in the East Lecture Hall of the Academic building at Hampshire College. The play has been performed previously at UMass and at American International College.

"A Trip for Tina" is an attempt at a realistic presentation of how a kid may end up at the Westfield Detention Center starting with the home life of the young offender. The play is the co-production of staff members at the Westfield Detention Center and some volunteers of Juvenile Opportunities Extension (JOE).

However, the play is more the efforts of the Westfield Players. This is a new theater group composed of the kids of the Westfield Detention Center. They are the individuals responsible directly for the play including the writing of the script, props, stage work and the cast of characters.

The production of "A Trip for Tina" is just one vehicle by which staff members with the help of volunteers from JOE and other individuals have tried to provide alternative experiences for the kids at the Westfield Detention Center.

After the play the audience is invited to ask any questions they may have about juvenile delinquency and how it is handled of the kids or the staff members present. Thus "A Trip for Tina" becomes an alternative experience for the viewer.

Still the strain on regular staff members at the detention center is great with twice as many kids residing there than the building was designed to hold. Therefore, the need for volunteers is great especially those interested individuals with transportation. Students at UMass can participate in such volunteer activity through a new RSO group the Juvenile Opportunities Extension. The president of JOE is Cyndi Dunbar and she can be reached at 253-9353.

Currently there are approximately 100 UMass students listed as members of JOE who expressed some interest in working at the Westfield Detention Center. After those who have found some way to get to the detention center, they have found the lack of resources the second biggest problem for JOE and realistically for the staff members who make their living there.

There is a general need for educational and craft material but a few staff members can cite a specific and immediate need. The Westfield Detention Center needs about 20 bicycles on a temporary or permanent basis. Some staff and volunteers want to take a bike hike around Western Massachusetts with some kids before the weather turns from cool to cold. The kids and supervisors will stay at other institutions or camp out if the weather is good on this trip.

There is a lot of work to be done in helping the kids at the Westfield Detention Center. Anyone interested can contact JOE and see the play "A Trip for Tina" tonight at Hampshire College.

Bread For The Hungry

Bread for the Hungry Luncheon. Tuesday, Oct. 26 from 11:30-1:30 at Immanuel Lutheran Church, 867 N. Pleasant (next to the School of Ed). $2.00 adults. $.75 children. BONUS. ALL proceeds will be used to buy food for a few of the world's starving. The $2 will buy 400 lbs. of food to be distributed to disaster areas and areas of extreme poverty.

Student Senate Committee Calendar

COMMITTEE & CHAIRMAN	MEETING TIME & PLACE	MAIN TOPIC OF DISCUSSION
Rents & Fees-Bob Chiller	Oct. 19 (Tues), 7 p.m. Room 165, CC	Committee structure and introduction
Women's Committee-Lisa Mandell	Oct. 19 (Tues), 9 p.m. Room 168-170 CC	Women's Medical Emergency Loan Fund
Academic Affairs-Nick Apostola	Oct. 19 (Tues), 6:15 Room 811, CC	Committee structure and introduction Teacher Evaluation Report
Government affairs-Bill Spinn	Oct. 19 (Tues) Room & time to be announced.	Committee structure and introduction
Student Matters-Bruce Bernstein	Oct. 21 (Thurs), 8 p.m. Room to be announced	Committee structure and introduction
Financial Affairs-Skip Olmstead	Oct. 21 (Thurs) 7:30 Room 177, CC.	Financial applications
Services-Brenda Rau	No meeting this week.
Public Affairs-Denise Magnell	No meeting this week.
Social Action-Maggie Houghton	Oct. 20 (Wed) 6:15 Room to be announced.	Committee structure and introduction
Budgets Committee-John Stevens	Oct. 19 (Tues) 7 p.m. Room 801, CC	Committee structure and introduction

All unannounced times and places will be posted on the door of the Student Senate office within the Student Activities area on the first level of the Campus Center.

Poll Reveals Attitudes Toward Violence

Results of a national survey on the attitudes of American males toward violence indicate that there is "substantial agreement" that disturbances should be controlled using no more force than billy clubs most of the time.

However, results also showed that 48 to 64 percent of Americans felt that disturbances should be handled by shooting (not to kill) "almost always" or "sometimes."

A total of 1,374 American men between the ages of 16 and 64, including 303 blacks, were surveyed in the summer of 1969 to determine their attitudes toward the question of how much force should be used by police in the control of "hoodlums," student protests, and ghetto riots.

The results of the survey were presented by Dr. Monica D. Blumenthal of the Institute for Social Research at the University of Michigan, at a special symposium in September at the 79th Annual Convention of the American Psychological Association in Washington, D.C.

The findings indicate that:

* from 9 to 10 percent of the men felt that the police should shoot to kill in the control of disturbances;
* from 19 to 32 percent of the men felt that the police should shoot to kill in the control of disturbances;
* from 9 to 10 percent felt that necessary social changes could not be made fast enough in the U.S. without protests involving extensive property damage and some deaths;
* from 19 to 25 percent felt that protests involving some property damage and personal injury would be necessary before change could be brought about fast enough;
* that figures were higher for black men than for white men;
* attitudes toward different types of violence proved to have some association with demographic variables.

Results of the survey also indicated that Americans may differ widely in what activities they regard as being intrinsically violent. For example, Blumenthal reported that "while in the nation as a whole only 35 percent of American men regard shooting looters as violence, 64 percent of Southern blacks find it violent. On the other hand," she said, "while 58 percent of American men find burning draft cards violent, only 26 percent of college students see this activity in this light."

Something To TRADE
Something To SELL

INPORIUM

Putnam St. Fitchburg
Main St. Amherst
Dunham-Mall Pittsfield

For the best in new, used & antique clothing

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN are on the second floor of the Student Union on the University campus, zip code 01002. Phones are 545-2550 (news), 545-0344 (sports), and 549-1311 (editor).

Second class postage paid at Amherst, the DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes five times weekly Monday through Friday during the academic year except during vacation and exam periods, three or four times a week following a vacation or exam period or when a holiday falls within a week. Accepted for mailing under the authority of the act of March 8, 1879 as amended by the act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester, $10.00 per year.

WHAT IS A P.I.R.G.?

Distinguished Visitor

"Pleasure Seekers": Lecture Tonight

The Distinguished Visitors Program presents Dr. Joel Fort in a lecture entitled "The Pleasure-Seekers: the Drug Crisis, Youth and Society," tonight at 8:00 in the Student Union Ballroom.

Fort is aptly described as one of the foremost physician-author-lecturer-consultants in the world, specializing in the areas of drug abuse, human sexuality, youth problems, and social reform. He has been a leading spokesman for the reform of drug laws–and for moving America beyond drugs.

For several years he served as a Consultant on Drug Abuse to the World Health Organization which studied drug use and abuse and other forms of deviance, including criminal behavior, sexual maladjustment and suicidal depression. In 1967, he was removed as director for being too independent and for dissenting from established police philosophy on drugs, sex, and youth.

In 1969 he continued the work of his center by establishing the private Fort Center for Solving Special Problems, more popularly known as FORT HELP. Here, comprehensive help is given to anyone with problems in the areas of drugs, sex, suicide, crime, sleep, and many more.

Fort has authored many books, including one identical to his lecture title, The New View of Human Sexuality, Common Sense: Regenerating American Institutions, and Healers in a Sick Society. His articles have been featured in the New York Times, Time, Playboy, Look, Life, Newsweek and many other publications.

Fort has been the major witness for the defense in some of the most celebrated trials of our age including those of Timothy Leary and Lenny Bruce. He was also involved in attempts to have the Boston anti-marijuana laws changed.

Room To Move will have closed workshops with Dr. Fort on Monday morning from 9:00-11:00, and in the afternoon from 3:00-5:00 in the Campus Center. The morning workshop is designed for people in University-related drug work, while the afternoon is designed for those involved in community drug education and services.

The lecture will be followed by a question and answer period and a coffee hour in the Colonial Lounge.

Agnew Says "Hands Off"

ATHENS (AP)—Vice President Spiro T. Agnew is taking a hands off attitude on the issue of when democracy should be restored to Greece, the nation of his forebears.

Agnew is stressing mutual security and alliance in his talks with leaders of the authoritarian regime. A spokesman said the vice president was adhering to the position he had already taken publicly, that "it is not up to us to impose on another government or attitudes" as to a schedule for the return of representative government.

In activities yesterday, Lt. Gen. George Zeitakis, the agent who acts in place of exiled King Constantine II, presented Agnew with the Grand Cross of the Order of George I, "for the distinguished service you have rendered to our country in the development of relations between our two countries."

Toasting Agnew at a luncheon, Zeitakis wished him success in office and "future success in the political field in your country." He said Agnew has a rare quality, "to speak in every occasion the language of truth."

Agnew had told newsmen traveling with him on his two-week mission abroad that he does not consider it "fair to say that this administration is hostile to the timetable that the government of Greece is on for reinstatement of representative rule."

No specific timetable has been announced by Athens.

Association Reorganized To Help Law Students

By DON BISHOP

In response to the anticipated needs of about 1000 students on campus, the Pre-Law Association is being re-organized and re-vitalized under the auspices of Harvey Stone and Prof. Samuel Goldman.

In a Collegian interview, Stone stated that the Pre-Law Association and his office are here to help the interested student with any problems or questions he or she may encounter in considering the possibilities of law school.

The Association will help students in selecting the right law school, or possible alternatives to law school. They will assist individuals in filing the necessary recommendations and reports.

In summing up, Stone stated: "We're here to help students facilitate their applications to law school."

An important meeting for any person interested in law or law school will be held next Thursday evening, October 28, in room 163 of the Campus Center, at 7:30. Stone especially urges interested seniors to attend.

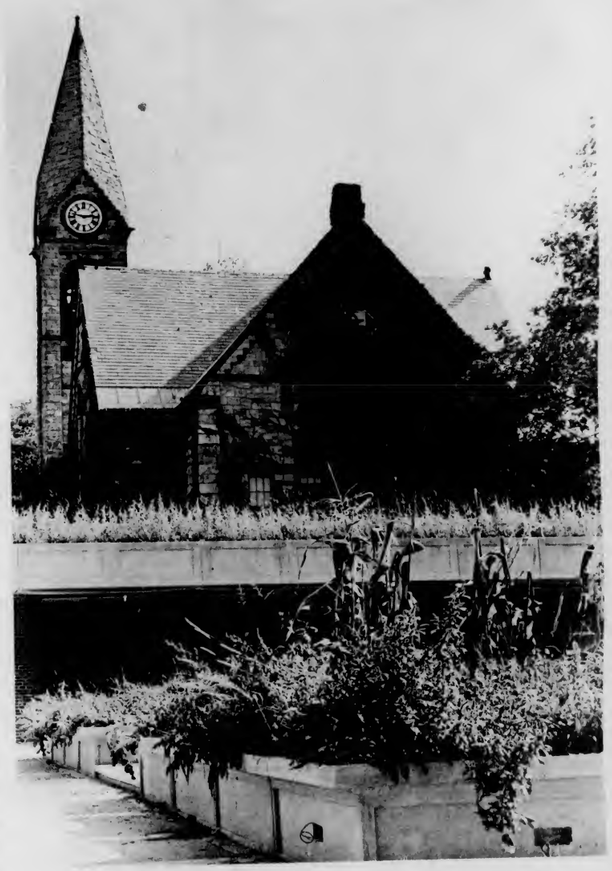
Stone and Goldman are available for consultation in their offices in room E-22 of Machmer Hall. Office hours for Mr. Stone are: Monday 9-12, Tuesday 1-4, Wednesday 1-4, Thursday 1-4, and Friday 9-12.

Goldman's are Tuesday and Thursday 9-12. Again, any interested students (especially seniors) are urged to stop in

Accounting Seminar Today

The accounting department and the undergraduate Accounting Association will conduct a seminar today at the Campus Center.

Local and regional certified public accounting firms have been invited to the seminar which is aimed at establishing communication between them and the UMass accounting department.



David Love, partner in the New England regional office of Laventhol, Krekstein, Horwath and Horwath, of Boston, will be featured speaker.

The seminar will be from 2 to 9 p.m., with registration in the ninth floor lobby of the Campus Center. During the afternoon there will be conversations with the faculty and Mrs. Dorothy Hardesty and Clark Edwards of the Office of Career Planning and Placement. Following dinner, a joint meeting of the accounting faculty qnd the Accounting Association undergraduates will hear Mr. Love speak on careers in smaller CPA firms.

Mr. Love has been with LKH&H since 1968, including years with its predecessor firm, Robert Boyer & Co., which merged into LKH&H in 1970. He is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania Wharton School of Finance and Commerce and of the Harvard Law School.

A certified public accountant, he is a member of the American Institute of CPAs, the Massachusetts Society of CPAs and the New York Society of CPAs.

There will be a registration fee for the seminar.

Yep, you guessed it. It's jst some sickly tomato plants (intersparsed with a few stalks of corn when in season) growing in the shadow of the Old Chapel. Well after all, what did you expect from our friendly hardhats? Now when Dr. Tippo returns to the Botany Dept. we will expect to see some improvement. (MDC photo sequence by Steve Schmidt).

dvp

"PLEASURE - SEEKERS" from UMASS

!! Don't Miss !!

DR. JOEL FORT

speaking on

"THE PLEASURE - SEEKERS: The Drug Crisis, Youth and Society"

Monday - Oct. 18. - 8 p.m. - S.U.B.

In The Nation And The World

Rap Brown Captured During Shoot-Out

NEW YORK (AP) — H. Rap Brown, the black militant on the FBI's "most wanted" list for 17 months, was reported in fair condition yesterday after abdominal surgery following a shoot-out with police during a bar room-crap game-holdup.

Held in $150,000 bail each for hearings today were Sam Petty, 23, of St. Louis, reportedly Brown's bodyguard, and two other men.

Brown's attorney, William Kunstler, refused to identify his client, but police, who took his fingerprints, said:

"We are going on the assumption that no two sets of fingerprints are identical and, as far as we are concerned, this man is H. Rap Brown."

From his bed in Roosevelt Hospital, Brown, 28, was charged by telephone with attempted homicide, robbery and possession of a dangerous weapon.

Petty, Arthur Young, 25, and Levi Valentine, 24, all of St. Louis also were charged with attempted homicide, robbery and possession of a dangerous weapon. They appeared in night court Saturday. The long-missing Brown surfaced about 3 a.m. Saturday when a passerby called police to report he could see a holdup going on in the Red Carpet Bar on West 85th St.

A group of men shooting craps on the sidewalk outside were robbed.

The victims, all black, were forced to lie on the floor while their valuables were collected and put in a plastic garbage bag which was later recovered.

Six patrol cars answered the call about the robbery and the gun battle began. Police said so many shots were fired that they could not count them. Bullets ricocheted off parked cars and neighboring buildings. Another patrolman, Salvatore Rosato, was hit in the hand.

Brown and one of the other suspects fled into an apartment building near the corner of Columbus Ave., The second man was captured and Brown was wounded in an exchange of gunfire which left the building lobby a shambles, tenants reported.

Despite his injury, Brown was able to enter an elevator and pushed the button marked "Penthouse."

Getting out on the 13th floor, he dragged himself past an incinerator and up seven steps. He then climbed another 15 steps to the roof, leaped a four foot parapet and jumped 18 feet to a terrace below. There, authorities said, a policeman shot and wounded Brown a second time.

Kosygin Visits Canada On Top-Level Mission

OTTAWA (AP)-Premier Alexei N. Kosygin's visit to Canada this week brings to the U.S. doorstep a determined Soviet diplomatic offensive that has sent top Kremlin leaders on missions in four continents.

This is a time of strain in relations between Canada and her closest neighbor and biggest trading partner, the United States. The strain has been generated by resentment of President Nixon's economic policies; some Canadians complain of an unfair burden.

While the Russians may be probing for ways to exploit these difficulties to Moscow's advantage, Kosygin's mission fits into a broader picture of an assertive Soviet campaign to carry Kremlin messages around the world on major issues. The timing has suggested an intention to counter Red China's growing influence as Peking emerges from isolation.

Clearly, too, the offensive is aimed at pushing a number of top-priority foreign policy aims in Asia, the Middle East and Europe.

Kosygin is the first Soviet government chief to visit Canada, and he will get royal treatment. He will have two private meetings with Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, then visit Montreal, Vancouver, Edmonton and Toronto.

Canada is an important member of the Atlantic treaty organization and Trudeau will be listening attentively to Kosygin on such matters as detente in Europe, the "European security conference" that is a major Soviet policy goal, mutual troop withdrawals and the chronic Middle East crisis.

Despite some bruised feelings here because of resentment of Washington policies, the Canadians likely will listen to the Russians with a large measure of caution. There is no real indication yet that the Russians are ready, as President Nixon has publicly hoped, to end the "era of confrontation" and begin an "era of negotiation." They appear at the movement to be trying to blend the two, and elements for dangerous confrontation will mark a number of situations.

Kosygin and Trudeau also have on their agenda a discussion of the present state of relations between the two countries. There is, for example, a recent agreement on collaboration in science and technology. The two are likely to discuss Canadian-Soviet trade and to touch on such matters as their respective interests in the Arctic.

Every precaution is being taken to guard against hostile demonstrations. More than 1,000 police have been detailed to the visit and reserves are ready if needed at all stops. At the border, authorities have been on the watch for any trying to cross into Canada for trouble-making.

Freeze Has No Effect On Big Business, Yet

NEW YORK (AP)-Some of the nation's largest corporations say their expansion plans remain unchanged despite the Nixon administration's new programs to stimulate the economy.

As Associated Press survey of companies around the country indicates many of them are waiting for further evidence of the effectiveness of the new policies before committing more funds to additional plant facilities and equipment.

If Congress approves a tax credit for businesses which invest in new facilities, some companies say they might increase their capital spending.

In the meantime the corporations are spending at a level called for in their 1971 budgets. In some cases expenditures are running above last year and in others below. Spending plans for 1972 show the same mixed pattern. None of the companies reports delays or cancellations of projects this year.

"In common with the rest of American industry we're waiting and watching," says W.F. Rockwell Jr., chairman of North American Rockwell Corp. "We hope the result in the long run will be favorable but we just don't know at this time."

Weyerhaeuser Co. says passage of an investment tax credit might prompt it to move expansion planned for 1973 up to 1972. The wood products company has budgeted $1 billion for capital investment over a four-year period, a good portion of which will go toward expansion of paperboard plants in Oklahoma and Arkansas.

The tax credit "could raise the sights for what we might do next," says William Hartman, president of the Grinnell Corp., a subsidiary of International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. But the automatic sprinkler maker says it will spend the same amount in 1971 as it originally intended-$20 million.

Standard Oil Co., of Ohio, Sohio says the administrations' new economic policies haven't changed its plans. Moreover it's still too early to tell how much impact the program will have in 1972, the company says.

News In Brief

ATHENS (AP)-Vice President Spiro Agnew, in the land of his forebears takes a hands-off attitude on the issue of when representative government should be restored to Greece.

•••

BELFAST (AP)-A British soldier dies of ambush wounds, bringing Northern Ireland's two-year death toll to 126, as a troop buildup gets underway.

•••

SAIGON (AP)-Enemy gunners shell U.S. and South Vietnamese fire bases and the allies respond with more air strikes along the South Vietnam-Cambodian border.

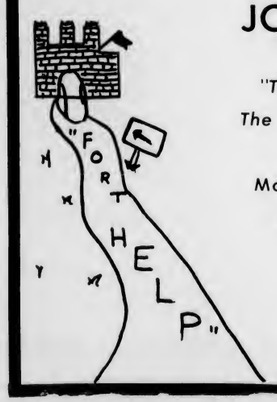
•••

UNITED NATIONS (AP)-The General Assembly opens formal debate today on whether Communist China enters the United Nations now or waits a while longer.

Spectrum

The general interest magazine of University of Massachusetts

We are now accepting Contributions for the fall 1971 issue.



All contributions of fiction, non-fiction, poetry, art, and photography can be left at the spectum office or mailed to:

Spectrum
RSO No. 102
Campus Ctr.
U Mass.

all contributions should be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope

"Dr. Fort is a rare man - he tells it like it is and says what needs to be done"

And, so he has:
— Author of "The Pleasure Seakers," "The New View of Human Sexuality" etc.
— Founder of "Fort Help" in San Francisco, The Center for Solving special social and health problems.

JOEL FORT, M.D.

"THE PLEASURE SEEKERS:
The Drug Crisis, Youth Society"

Monday - October 18 - 8:00
Student Union Ballroom

Coffee Hour: Colonial Lounge
Following Lecture

a dvp sponsored lecture

AMOROSO
The very name means love — where else should you buy your DIAMOND
LOWEST PRICES ANYWHERE
certified appraisals
Call RICHARD AMOROSO 546-4300 anytime.
In Boston Call 542-2226

Cross-District Busing Creates Furor

DETROIT (AP)—The possibility of cross-district busing-swapping suburban and city school children in an effort to achieve racial balance-has generated more tumult in the Detroit area in the last two weeks than any other issue in modern times.

Literally tens of thousands of people are involved in the issue which quickly eclipsed the clamor over busing controversies that developed earlier in Pontiac and Kalamazoo.

Pontiac and Kalamazoo busing involved schools mostly within municipal boundaries. The new plan, in contrast, could involve as many as 68 neighboring suburban districts being ordered to swap pupils with the Detroit District.

The possibility stems from a ruling last month by U.S. District Court Judge Stephen J. Roth in a suit brought by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People NAACP.

Roth ruled that there is de jure, by law, segregation of Detroit schools. The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled such segregation illegal and empowered judges to remedy it.

On Oct. 4 Roth ordered the Detroit Board of Education to prepare within 60 days a plan for further integration of the city's 320 schools.

He also ordered the Board of Education to offer within 120 days a plan of integration that would include more than the Detroit district. Roth said, "It appears to us only a plan that encompasses all or part of the metropolitan district can guarantee the constitutional rights of all the people of the district."

Asked if extensive busing would be involved, he replied, "Busing is only a tool that can be used to integrate the schools, as drawing attendance boundaries can be used."

Roth noted that he has issued no final order nor have any plans been submitted.

Among these who have since come out in opposition to cross-district busing are politicians, suburban school boards and superintendents.

There have been proposals-disavowed by many politicians-for a statewide school boycott in protest on Oct. 25.

Organized opposition thus far, however, has been confined primarily to so-called blue-collar suburbs, although some of these have large white-collar pockets of affluence.

A rally called Wednesday night by foes of busing drew 750 in blue-collar North Dearborn Heights.

Nearly all-white Warren already has dispatched petitions to Washington which it says contained 40,000 signatures in support of a proposed constitutional amendment which would outlaw busing for racial balancing.

Mary Jane Marcozzi, a Madison Heights mother of four, summed up suburban reactions to Roth's ruling thus?

"I can't see how Judge Roth or anybody else has got the right to come in here (her home) and take my kids and do anything they want with them.

"I didn't cause it (Detroit segregation) and I don't see any reason why he's got a right to come in here and tell me my kids can't use the school I bought and paid for.

"In Detroit there's more dope, more robberies, more rapes, more of everything."

Another suburban mother said, "If they want to bus inner city kids out here and our schools have got room that's fine with me. But they're not sending my children into that jungle. Not ever."

Sen. Robert P. Griffin, R—Mich., is sponsoring a proposed constitutional amendment to prohibit cross-district busing and insists that neither courts nor local governments advocating such busing "have the consent of the governed."

Within less than a week after Roth's ruling, Griffin said he received more than 7,000 letters, all but a handful of them opposing busing.

Structual Defects Ground C5

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The C5's latest trouble occurred Sept. 29 as one of the giant four-engine jets taxied onto a runway at Altus Air Force Base, Okla. As the pilot gave it full throttle in a final pre-flight check, the left outboard engine and the mounting pylon holding it to the wing tore off, spun 300 feet into the air and slammed onto the concrete runway in a flaming heap of metal.

Lockheed says it warned the Air Force the engine mounting was 'an area of potential weakness' but that the Altus accident occurred before an engineering proposal to strengthen the area could be carried out.

Eventually all 47 C5's were grounded last week after inspectors found cracks indicating structural weakness in the left outboard engine pylon of a second plane. The Air Force says the pylons, costing $100,000 apiece, will be replaced on both outboard engines of at lease seven C5s with long flying hours. Fixes eventually will have to be made on theother planes but in the meantime they will be permitted to return to the air after clearing inspection.

An Air Force spokesman says the added costs will have to be borne by the taxpayer under a reconstructed contract negotiated with Lockheed by the Pentagon earlier this year.

Under this contract, Lockheed reluctantly agreed to accept a $200 million less on the C5 project which the Pentagon figures will cost the taxpayers more than $4.5 billion when the final plane is delivered in 1973.

The original order for 115 planes at about half the price was cut back to 81 in the face of growing congressional criticism.

Although the C5 project has been singled out for most of the attention in the battle against cost overruns, just about every other major weapon system that has come along in recent years has been plagued by the same problem.

There was the Air Force's F111 fighter and the Minuteman missile, the Army's main battle tank still not ready for production, the Navy's Mark 48 torpedo, and now its F14 jet fighter.

Only last month the Senate Armed Services Committee said these cost increases are threatening national security.

The committee, normally friendly to the Pentagon, said unless costs are brought under control, either defense budgets will have to be cut back sharply or "a sharp decline in force levels and readiness" would have to be made.

"In the more likely case, the share of our national resources taken by the defense will stabilize or continue to decline, and it will thus soon become clear that the present system cannot provide sufficient forces to protect our security," the committee said in a special report.

"If we can afford a permanent force structure of only one-fifth as many fighter aircraft or tanks as our potential adversaries-because our systems are about five times more expensive than theirs-then a future crisis may find us at a sharp numerical disadvantage."

Riots Mar Series

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP)—Waving and cheering, tens of thousands of persons poured into downtown Pittsburgh Sunday, wildly celebrating the Pirates' World Series victory. Police went to a riot footing in an effort to control the situation

They said that one person had been shot and several downtown department stores were being looted.

"We're just fighting a holding action," one police desk sergeant said. "So far, we definitely aren't holding them."

The heart of the celebration was in downtown Pittsburgh, where fire hydrants were opened, store windows were shattered and an undetermined number of cars set afire. Several more cars were overturned.

The crowds created what police said was the worst traffic jam in recent city history. Officers were driving their cruisers on the sidewalks in an attempt to circumvent the massive tieups.

Fire trucks, too wide for the sidewalks, simply were stranded in the street, and in at least one instance a crowd started stripping a pumper.

Pennant-waving pedestrians commandeered at least two police cars, draping them with streamers.

"This is one hell of a mess," one officer shouted over the police radio network above the din of blaring horns and cheering people. "We can't move."

In the city's Market Square area a taxi was overturned and set afire. Two blocks from that, a sedan was overturned. No injuries were reported in either instance.

Other crowds started bonfires in the middle of Liberty Avenue, one of the city's main thoroughfares.

Looting was reported on the same street two blocks away at Richmmond Brothers, a fashionable men's clothing store, and several smaller establishments.

Cosby's Mother Injured In One-Car Accident

PELHAM--For the second time in less than a week, bad luck has struck the Bill Cosby family, who expect to take occupancy of their new home in Shelburne in a few months.

Mrs. Anna Cosby, 59, mother of the TV comedian, was seriously injured in a one-car accident on Amherst Rd. at 8:28 a.m. on Thursday.

According to Pelham Police Chief Curtis Knight, Mrs. William Cosby Sr. was traveling alone in a car, in front of a car being driven by Bill Cosby's wife. They had just taken the Cosby children to the Amherst schools from their temporary home on Main St., Petersham.

Mrs. Cosby, Sr., apparently lost control of her car on a curve halfway up Amherst Rd. on the way to Rte. 202. The curve is marked with a "Danger" sign. Mrs. Cosby was rushed to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in the Amherst Fire Department ambulance.

Her injuries include a fractured arm and fractured pelvis. Her condition was reported "fair" at the Northampton hospital.

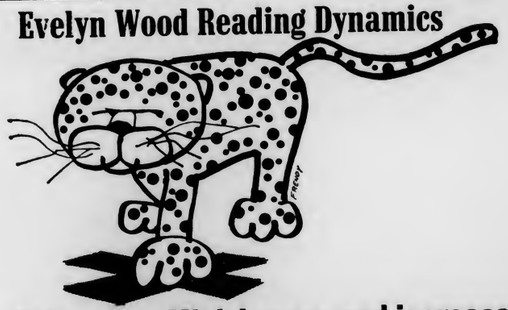
Last Friday, U.S. marshalls attached a writ for $2.4-million dollars to the Cosby home in Shelburne, the result of charges from four companies alleging breach of contract and fraud.

The Cosby family has been living in Petersham until the renovations on their home in Shelburne are completed.

Cosby, himself, is working on special TV programs in California.

"A TRIFLE BIT"
KNIT TOPS
to match any pants-
From $3.95 to $5.95 -
Why Pay More
wear-else
Wearhouse Open Fri. til 9

Student
Activities Day



Thursday, October 21, 1971

9 a.m. - 4 p.m.

Campus Center Concourse Level

COVER THE EARTH with Carter Overalls
$7.49 All Sizes
the closest thing to you
Open Fri. til 9
Wearhouse
wear-else

Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics

Take a free Mini-Lesson and increase your reading speed on the spot!

Know why we invest so much in our free mini-lessons? Brochures and catalogues can't possibly describe what it's like to read a book like Exodus (all 499 pages) in 1 hour and 48 minutes. Or an entire Time Magazine in 35 minutes.

Instead we invite you to spend 60 minutes this week at a mini-lesson. We'll show you why two presidents (Kennedy & Nixon) personally brought the course into the White House so staff members could learn the Evelyn Wood technique.

At a mini-lesson, we actually increase your reading speed on the spot. Just a little, to be sure, but enough so you'll know how it feels. By the way, don't worry about how slowly you read. Everyone comes to a mini-lesson reading slowly.

One last thing, back in 1964 we adopted the following as a national policy: "We promise that you'll read at least 3 times better than when you started or we'll refund your tuition." That policy still stands.

That's it. The schedule of free mini-lessons is listed here.

University of Mass. — Student Union — Room 308 - Berkshire Room

TWO DAYS ONLY
* Mon., Oct. 18 at 4 or 7 or 9 p.m.
* Tues., Oct. 19 at 4 or 7 or 9 p.m.

Paul Murphy 253-2425

Millionth Volume Donated To Library

UMass officials reenact the passing of the campus library's once-millionth volume during informal ceremonies this week. The book was passed from Librarian George Wright (far left) to former Chancellor Oswald Tippo to Acting Chancellor Randolph W. Bromery to Director of Libraries David M. Clay to University Librarian Merle N. Boylan.

The one millionth volume has been purchased for the UMass Library, courtesy of UMass librarians.

A first edition of "The Freedom of the Will" by Jonathan Edwards was chosen as a gift to the library to mark its growth in acquisitions.

At an informal reception this week, the 217-year-old volume was passed along from one dignitary to another. It went from Librarian George Wright to former Chancellor Oswald Tippo to Acting Chancellor Randolph W. Bromery to Director of Libraries David Clay to University Librarian Merle N. Boylan.

During Tippo's tenure as provost and chancellor, from 1964 to this fall, the University Library experienced its greatest expansion in collections and services, and construction of the new high-rise library building was begun.

The author of "The Freedom of the Will," Jonathan Edwards, was one of American's first outstanding philosophers and theologians, and for 20 years a minister in Northampton. First Church in Northampton expelled Rev. Edwards in 1751 because of doctrinal differences between the minister and his congregation. The book was published in Boston in 1754 while Edwards lived among the Indians as a missionary in Stockbridge.

First owner of the volume was John Cleaveland, an Ipswich minister who had been expelled from Yale College.

The book will be available for consultation in the Library's special collections department.

Mirkwood:Do Your Thing!

By STEVE FINE

One event highlighting Homecoming weekend Saturday night was the Mirkwood Coffee House presented for free to an enthusiastic audience of approximately 150 people.

The program included a wide variety of entertainment ranging from Rock 'n' Roll, Acoustic blues, and an original, live facsimile of the movie, "The Wizard of Oz"; (munchkins and all).

Mirkwood was sponsored by the Apple Corps, a part of Orchard Hill Area Government, by Joey Baron and Jim Maltz. When asked who can perform at Mirkwood, Baron replied, "We let anyone perform who requests to perform. You can put on a skit or just make a fool out of yourself if you like."

Baron and Maltz hope to eventually have regulars in the coffee house. They plan to open Mirkwood again for the third weekend in Grayson dorm, which will alternate with Field as a location.

Maltz says performers don't necessarily have to be a member of the UMass student body to play at Mirkwood. 'We got some of the names from Ed Vagris who runs the coffee shop in the Campus Center. The others came from ads in the Collegian, signs, and word of mouth.

Baron and Matlz say anyone interested in performing at future Mirkwoods should call 546-6681 or 546-6573.

Reminder

Monday Class Schedule will be Followed on Wednesday, October 20.

A Great taste to Remember
Bell's Pizza
Open
11 to 2 a.m. Fri. & Sat.
11 to 2 a.m. Fri. & Sat.
1 a.m. Sun. to Thurs.
Free Delivery
Tel. 256-8011 - 253-9051

WE HAVE
uplifting
SOLUTIONS TO EVERYDAY PROBLEMS.

In this instance, we are lifting a complete house to demonstrate a new concept of aerial delivery of assembly line-produced dwellings from factory to homesite.

But... this same Sikorsky® helicopter could have been effecting a rescue mission off a wallowing tanker in a North Sea gale. It could have been airlifting food and supplies to starving villagers in flood-ravaged Tunisia ... or transporting equipment for on-the-spot control of off-shore oil pollution.

Obviously, what we're pointing out is the impressive record and adaptability of our helicopters in solving really important human problems.

There's much more to come in our world of exciting, advanced VTOL aircraft systems. For example, Heavy-Lift Skycranes® and Tilt-Rotor Transports. And just around the corner are our High-Speed Commercial Transports—designed to ease short-haul mass transportation headaches.

Does this kind of engineering attitude stir your sense of responsibility and imagination? Then you should talk careers with us. There's ample opportunity for innovation in: autonavigation systems • avionics • computer technology • electronic test • materials engineering • mechanical analytical design • structures engineering • systems analysis ... and more.

Female, minority group and veteran applicants especially welcome.

Consult your College Placement Office for campus interview dates—or—write to Mr. Leo J. Shalvoy, Professional and Technical Employment.

Sikorsky Aircraft DIVISION OF UNITED AIRCRAFT CORPORATION
STRATFORD, CONNECTICUT 06602 An Equal Opportunity Employer

UMass Prof Attacks Importance of Speling

"The ability to spell well is only slightly above the ability to touch one's tongue," says a UMass professor who is teaching the whats and whys of the English language to future English teachers.

Assoc. Prof. Donald C. Freeman, chairman of the UMass program in linguistics, is disturbed by what he feels is society's basic attitude toward spelling. And that, he says, is: "If you can't find a good reason to put a person down, put him down because he doesn't spell well."

Society in general, according to the professor, equates bad spelling with lack of neatness, morality and intelligence.

"Too many children get reputations in school as being extra intelligent because they spell well; equally, too many get reputations as dummies because they spell badly. These reputations tend to become reinforced by teachers and a relatively mechanical skill thus becomes a crucial prerequisite for success," D. Freeman says.

An expert speller himself, the linguistics professor adapts a quote from the 18th Century German poet Schiller to describe his "campaign" regarding society and spelling. Schiller said, "Against stupidity, the gods themselves contend in vain."

Freeman says, "I've been contending against the stupidity of putting spelling above creative thinking in composition for many years. But I contend in vain. People still make those kinds of judgements."

The connection between good qualities and good spelling began with Dr. Samuel Johnson and his dictionary. "Spelling only became a virtue in the 18th Century," says Prof. Freeman. "Before then, people didn't really care. Spelling was just an attempt to represent pronunciation. Many spelling conventions were introduced by printers."

For example, "The 'h' in 'ghost' is a convention introduced by a printer to show that the 'g' is hard. It's a purely mechanical convention. Before Dr. Johnson's dictionary, in the Renaissance, the way lines of type were set, when the printer came to the end of the line and had space left, he'd arbitrarily insert letters—such as extra vowels—to justify the line."

Given the difficulties of English spelling, and the reasons why some words are spelled as they are, Prof. Freeman advises, "If you don't care whether society cares, fine. But be prepared to accept the consequences. You might not get that job you wrote for; and some people will think you less than intelligent."

To those future teachers of English he is teaching this semester, he will suggest they spend little time teaching spelling to high school students, because unless misspellings interfere with communication—and few misspellings do—adults shouldn't worry unduly about them. High school teachers should spend that little spelling time not x-ing out mistakes or directing "look in the dictionary," but instead explaining the whys of English spelling, he adds.

Reasons for bad spelling are many. Very often, says Dr. Freeman, a person spells a word as he hears it. And because he does not hear it pronounced correctly, he does not spell it right. Take the word "biased." Ever hear someone say, "Mary feels that way because she's bias."? The speaker hasn't heard the "ed" on biased, doesn't think it's there, so is apt to spell it wrong. The linguistics professor has argued with students over this word, as to whether it is "bias", an adjuective, or "biased," a verb.

Another reason, perhaps the main one, for bad spelling in English is a sound linguists call "schwa." Schwa is the unstressed vowel sound in many polysyllabic words. It's the sound of the first letter of "America," and the last sound some speakers—especially in New England—give to "professor."

It's also the sound that causes some spellers to be unaware of the spelling difference in "lessen" versus "lesson." High school teachers correcting such spelling should point out, Dr. Freeman advises, that the two words are spelled differently because they belong to different parts of speech.

"Lessen" belongs to a class of progressive verbs of condition which take the "en" ending. Other words in the class are worsen, redden, and lighten. And "lesson" belongs to an "on" class of nouns—as do melon, prison, sexton, and common. So, words such as these often take their spelling not so much from how they sound as from their function.

In his 10 years of teaching at the college level, Freeman has seen student spelling "growing slowly but steadily worse." And this, he is sure, is because television has replaced books in children's out-of-school hours.

It's an old cry, but one he feels worth repeating. Today's children do not read enough. Therefore, many of them are not "verbally oriented," so have difficulties expressing thoughts in writing, or in spelling correctly.

And that revered educational game, the spelling bee, gets no praise from the UMass linguistics professor. "Spelling bees imply spelling is really important, and it's not. It's important only in so far as society makes it a shibboleth."

Last Day For Nominations

Nominations for Danforth Foundation fellowships close today.

Four years of support for graduate study is provided recipients of these fellowships. Fellows must be candidates for a doctoral degree who intend to enter college teaching as a career. No graduate study may have been pursued prior to consideration for an award.

In these days of tightening support for graduate study, any student of superior academic ability who is interested in college teaching, should investigate these fellowships.

Interested persons should immediately consult with Associate Dean H. Duncan Rollason in South College, who is the Laison Officer for the Danforth Foundation.

Termpapers Unlimited
"WE GIVE RESULTS"
297 Huntington Ave.
Boston, Mass. 02115
(617) 267-3000

Room To Move
Drop-In Center
5-0400, 5-0401

U. Mass. has made life easier for its employees

How?
By making available the Investment Annuity* tax-deferred savings and investment program.
This unique plan reduces your income taxes immediately so you can have more money to spend or invest.
It protects all your investments - in SECURITES, MUTUAL FUNDS, SAVINGS ACCOUNTS, CREDIT UNdelete
It protects all your investments—in SECURITES, MUTUAL FUNDS, SAVINGS ACCOUNTS, CREDIT UNIONS, etc.—with a tax shelter so you pay no taxes on them until after retirement.
And it assures you a retirement income you can't outlive.
If you're ready to enjoy an easier life, mail the coupon today and get full details on your own Investment Annuity.

*Reg. Service Mark

U.M 10/18/71 #1

J. Paul Barry
Main St. Investment Annuity Adm.
P.O. Box 2286 - 276 Hazard Ave.
Enfield, Conn. 06082

Gentlemen:
Without obligation, please send me full details about the Investment Annuity plan for which I may be eligible.

Name_____Telephone_____
Home Address_____Zip_____
School_____
Department_____Telephone_____

NOW! Don't worry anymore about typing errors!

ERRORITE™ is a quality nylon typewriter ribbon featuring a built-in error corrector.

ERRORITE™ eliminates the need to purchase ribbon and correction aids separately.

ERRORITE™ is always in position to make quick, clean corrections... no more fussing with separate paper or fluid correctors.

Purchase ERRORITE™ at your book store.

Sold Exclusively at College and University Book Stores

FILMON PROCESS CORP., 653-659 Eleventh Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10036

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF — Richard C. Hanson
MANAGING EDITOR — David D. Williams
BUSINESS MANAGER — James Gold
EXECUTIVE EDITOR — Barry J. Rubenstein
NEWS EDITOR — Anne C. Stadnicki
SPORTS EDITOR — Earle T. Barroll

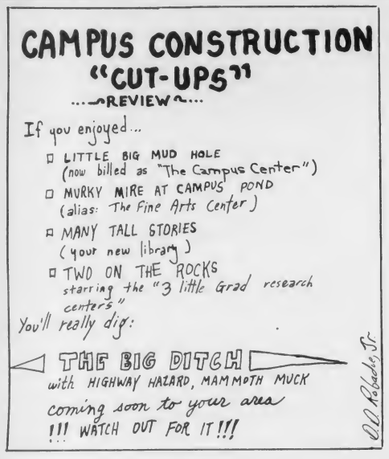

PHOTO EDITOR — Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR — Robert Nesti

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR — Jerry Lazar
NEWS STAFF — Janet Hughes, Jeanette Martineau
SPORTS — Earle Barroll
DARKROOM — Gib Fullerton
AD LAYOUT — Terry Wanczyk
EDITORIAL — Don Glickstein

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administration read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the views of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, and letters represent the personal views of the writers.

Don Glickstein

Svenigorodkan Heritage

I don't know much about my other great grandfather, because he was shot by the Kiev police last century, but Meyer Loiterstein's mother chopped his trigger finger off when he was a little boy so the Russian army wouldn't draft him to fight the Czar's wars.

From what my sketchy notes tell me, Meyer, my great grandfather, lived to be 101, dying about 1901, when my grandma was five. No, grandma wasn't adopted; Meyer was just some kind of guy.

It seems that Meyer had had an exciting life when, in 1880, he decided to settle down and marry a young girl. Meyer left his home, probably around the city of Svenigorodka in the Ukraine, at an early age to become an apprentice to a goy merchant. The two traveled through Poland and Russia and became quite successful. But the merchant received notice that he was drafted or the secret police took him away, and Meyer, at the urging of his parents, returned home. Still grateful for Meyer's services, however, the merchant left him a sizeable bankroll. By his twenties, my great grandfather was a rich man.

Meyer became a leader in the Jewish community, and he came to be respected by both Jew and Gentile. A huge man, Meyer aided many a person and in an era of pogroms and fear, his community was peaceful.

In the March of 1910, my grandma came to this country. On December 22 of that year, she married a good looker, Barney Glickstein, who still jokingly asks me, "Are you a bebe(baby)?" She was fourteen years old.

Now, her children still have their periodic spats, as do any brothers and sisters. And when they're upset because their children and their husbands and wives are sick, my grandma doesn't mind being chastised because she doesn't hear what they say as well as she used to; "I would rather", she enunciates slowly and intently, "I would rather have them take out all their worries on me, than to have them yell at each other."

So much of what my uncle has been is image, so I hope I don't leave anything out. He was an undercover agent for the B'nai Brith Anti-Defamation League in the Thirties, and has an engraved watch from Hitler. He is a composer, a poet, and a public relations man. He made the slogan for the United Fund campaign a couple of years ago. One year, when I was younger and wanted to grow up to be an Indian, he got me into an American Indian exhibition by saying that I was Rex Trailor's son. My uncle reads five papers every day of the week, and because of a fake "reviewing service" he started, he gets all sorts of neat books and magazines for free. I think he also was a radio announcer and a registered pharmacist.

I guess families are dying. According to Durkheim, schools have stopped the parental inculcation of family values and replaced them with the values of mutual culpability and collectivity. There's not much need for a family anymore. The day care center, the television, the cars, the dope, the age which has changed with so much speed has seen to that.

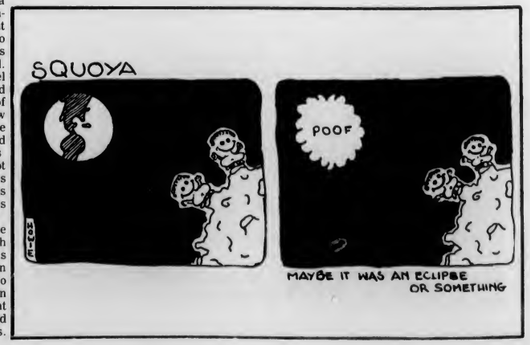
And even though I call Amherst my home, and I'm not going home (oops!) for a Thanksgiving dinner, and home's-a-nice-place-to-visit-but-I-wouldn't-want-to-live-there, it's kind of exciting to know that your family was something, that your great grandfather was some kind of guy.

Sandwen Reports: The Beat Goes On...

By LEE SANDWEN
Student Senate President

This past week I had the opportunity to represent the United States student population (along with about fifteen other Student Body Presidents from around the country) in a three day International (Student Union Conference on Vietnam. It was an interesting experience for a variety of reasons, several of which I feel are important enough to bring back to the campus.

More than twenty national unions of students were represented in Washington--countries as diverse as Costa Rica, Finland, Ghana, Spain, Tunisia, and France to name a few. The first and most striking of all our discussions was how servone of them felt toward the Vietnamese War and the US role in it. They all felt it was the focus point of the United States' imperialistic designs on the whole world, symbolic of the US's attempts to use technology to destroy national movements and national aspirations (Remember "Bomb 'em back into the Stoneage"), and could also see the relationship between the US and their home country as exploitive. In at least four different languages they vowed to carry on the fight against "our" Vietnamese policies in their home countries and each promised national demonstrations on any day the American Anti-War Movement would pick. The last promise is interesting in two ways: (1) it was something the American's were far less optimistic about doing in their own country and (2) for students in several of these countries (like Spain) demonstrations mean really risking life and limb far more directly than here in Amherst. So there is a feeling in many foreign student unions that the United States is not to be trusted and that the Vietnamese should have their strongest support.



Secondly, I found in the foreign students the total disbelief that Nixon is actually ending the war. Like the few remaining vocal American Anti-War people they quoted a variety of statistics that the war is not ending but is just changing in character. It is now an Air War and will soon be the first electronic war. Before Nixon's inauguration 60,000 tons of bombs a month were dropped in Indo-China and 95,000 were driven from their homes monthly in Vietnam alone, while American casualties were significant and the focus of Anti-War concern. Since Nixon came to office, the character of the war was changed to dissipate the anti-war movement, by lowering the number of American casualties and the number of ground troops in Vietnam. With this change however we find 105,000 driven from their homes monthly and 90,000 tons dropped monthly on Indo-China. And civilian deaths are up also. Electronic sensors have been put all over Laos and sections of Cambodia and Vietnam, which send signals to a central computer center which in turn sends out the bombers. Bombing has been so destructive and constant that entire villages all over Eastern Laos live underground. With the improvement of anti-personel weapons, "Electronic battlefields", and pilotless aircraft, the US may in a matter of years be able to remove all but a few thousand technicians (trained in Air Force ROTC programs) to finish the genocide and destruction already begun. And if all this sounds slightly unbelievable, it really is not unprovable. And of course it was sad for us Americans to realize most of our campuses and citizens believed Nixon was pulling us out "honorably".

The reason for calling the conference together was the repression of the South Vietnamese Student Union, although it has been going on for 13 years, the repression entered a new phase two weeks prior to Thieu's "election" on Oct. 3. Saigon University is occupied by government forces after an Army attack which included American made helicopter gunships. Hundreds of "student leaders" have been shot, imprisoned, in tiger cages, tortured, or inducted into the Army and are now listed as "missing". Reading this mid-morning in the Hatch, this must seem very far away and very unreal. When it is told to you by South Vietnamese students and you read it in their letters, it hurts much greater.

My last reflections on the conference were that something has to be done in this country to stop the senseless killing in Indo-China. In law, as I understand it, one prosecutes the murderer after he kills three men, even if he promises not to kill more. We can't just leave "honorably". And if we give the murder weapon to some hired killers, we are at least accessories to the next killing. And if we create a manless "electronic battlefield" that causes the killing to go on we are still guilty of crimes against mankind.

This year is the year of the "Nixon Eviction" according to the last Anti-war activists in Washington. They will try to make it clear Nixon is no longer welcome in any part of this country. Along with that, various national anti-war demonstrations (like Nov. 6 in Boston) are planned.

I'd ask you not to forget the Vietnamese who are dieing because of Nixon's "honorable withdrawal" and to realize that in the final analysis, we as Americans are the only ones who can stop this madness.

Editorial Points

QUOTE OF THE SEASON: "We have four twenty game winners, you know" by Earl Weaver.

***

A hippie is a guy with a beard who you don't know.

***

Baseball and the Series is still the most exciting sports around. At least the scores in baseball aren't 31-3.

***

A well known linguistics professor mentions that the road from Amherst to Belchertwon is the Alimentary Canal.

***

NOTE FROM YESTERYEAR: Mary had a little lamb, the doctors were surprised; it wasn't such a shock to her--she got rammed.

***

Apologies to Women's Lib, but the shag haircuts appearing on many girls on campus are sexy.

***

HINTS FROM HARRY: To avoid parched throats for residents living in overheated Southwest rooms, fill up empty tin cans with water and stick them on the pipes before you go to bed. Also, keep your windows wide open. Be careful, however, when it starts to snow; some windows get stuck and frozen with ice. You might try to aluminum foil the radiators, too. It not only insulates you from the heat, but looks neat. For more information, read the book by Tom Campion, How to Waste Money By Overheating Rooms in Autumn.

***

Orchard Hill is centrally located; it's equally as long to walk from one dining commons as it is to the other.

***

SANITATION AWARD OF THE YEAR: To the Hatch for its donuts made stale and raunchy by not covering them.

***

Isn't it about time that a bench was installed in the 5-College bus stop?

***

When are the ducks and geeses going to be removed from the pond? It's getting kinda cold for our webbed footed friends. Besides, a duck may be somebody's mother. Maybe they can install a rubber duckie for the winter.

***

EAM makes a lot of excuses and prays for it to rain turpentine. In the meantime, the waste baskets in Southwest are still woefully inadequate.

***

Happiness is being acupunctured.

***

MEAL OF THE WEEK: Thursday supper. Hamburgers and meatless chow mein.

***

To identify against is to identify with.--Megawig.

Letters To The Editor

Voting Tips

To the Editor:

The Registration Session held by the Board of Registrars of Voters of Amherst at the Campus Center on Thursday was certainly successful from many points of view and a tribute to the stamina and persistence of Student Senator John Stevens and many others, unsung. As the din of accolades for the Housing Office, the students and registrars wanes, some assessment of the event should be made and some lessons have been learned.

Statistically, in one afternoon, Amherst registered roughly one-tenth of its present voting population (and numerically more than Boston recently). It was done in an efficient, courteous and responsible manner and an appropriate place and with much cooperation between town and gown.

Some students were apparently misled by their own assumptions about the legal import of having registered at a previous residence, another city or town. Town Clerk, Mrs. Matuszko, correctly advised any prospective voter that asked, that the rule in Massachusetts is: A person registered to vote in a city or town who moves to another city or town within the Commonwealth retains the right to vote in the former place for six months at which time the person qualifies to vote and is registered in the new place. (M.G.L. A.c.51 S.1). No student who was registered elsewhere was denied the opportunity to register in Amherst on Thursday, to my knowledge. Nor will any exercise of the vote in the former place, in person or by absentee, lawfully prevent registration in Amherst once you are legally otherwise qualified.

Students wishing to vote in Massachusetts whether or not in Amherst, and who have any question regarding their right to do so (and it is your 26th amendment RIGHT), may consult me or the Registrars in the Town Clerk's Office at the Town Hall in Amherst. That is also where students who missed registering Thursday may go to register. For simplicity sake, if you do go to register, stop by the Housing Office and pick up a letter that will avoid residency hassles if you are eligible.

There is one other point that I commend to every newly registered voter and to the citizens and officers of Amherst. Now that the rolls of votes have been swelled and may well grow again, it is incumbent upon those who know to make every effort to inform those who vote about town political and administrative affairs. It is always incumbent upon those who vote to make every effort to obtain comprehensive information on the people and issues about which their votes will be cast.

Perhaps some of the town political organizations will be in greater evidence on campus, both partisan and non-partisn. When they meet to organize, discuss and act, it is a good time for all citizens of the town to get to know each other.

Richard M. Howland
Student Senate General Counsel

Mr. Energy

To the Editor:

I appreciate the publicity that you have been giving to the Office of the Ombudsman. It is important that members of the University community know that there is such an office to which they can take their problems. I would like, however, to correct an impression that perhaps some readers would derive from the recent story about the Office.

It is true that I prefer not to deal with complaints about grades. I do, however, listen to such complaints, as I do to complaints on any other subject; and sometimes I can be helpful. I cannot, of course, challenge that a student did or did not do, the student deserves an F, there is nothing I can say. If, however, there is a question about procedure--for example, whether or not a student had a legitimate reason for missing a test or turning in a paper late, or whether the instructor may have followed a different grading policy from that which he announced--I can properly intervene and try to mediate the disagreement or clear up the misunderstanding. In some instances a change of grade has resulted.

Ellsworth Barnard,
University Ombudsman

Only The Beginning

To the Editor and the Manager of WMUA:

At this time, I would like to express my thanks to the COLLEGIAN, WMUA, the Student Senate, and the Senate Bus Service for their publicity aid and their understanding during the weeks prior to the Registration day, yesterday.

I would also like to thank these individuals, without whom this registration drive would have certainly failed: Dick Howland (Senate Counsel), Mike Brassman and Pat Callahan from the Young Democrats, Ed Kenicki from the Young Republicans, Bill Keyserling from the National Student Vote, the people from McGovern for president, the University Administration (including the Housing office), and the many others who helped organize the students and faculty of this campus for the registration day. But, still most of the credit belongs to the 616 students who registered to vote in Amherst.

Its only the beginning, but it has been a very fine beginning. We will, in the near future, be calling on you for aid again, but for now, thanks.

Register Your Discontent!
John Stevens

Letters

The MDC will continue to print letters to the editor. The only requirements are that they be typed at sixty spaces, double-spaced and and absolutely no longer than two pages in length. All letters must be signed and the author's address and telephone numbers must be included. No letter will be published without this information. Also, no letters will be printed without the name of the author. Please note this change in policy.

All letters are subject to editing either for content or space according to the judgment of the editors. Also, due to space limitations, we do not guarantee that all letters will be printed.

Photo Credit, page 8: Barbara Brecher, taken at the Cordova Museum.

You're A Good Man, Even If No One Saw You

To the Editor:

There are a lot of things that come and go here at the University. Some of these things are good and some are bad. Some of them are forgotten and some of them will forever be remembered. Last Sunday, there was one of those happenings that will never be forgotten, at least not by those few who witnessed it. Last Sunday, a small portion of the university community witnessed a most unforgetable performance of "YOUR A GOOD MAN CHARLIE BROWN."

I for one found the performance of Charlie Brown both challenging and beautiful. We are all here to get an education in one form or another. For some of us its books: for others its the simple day to day life we are forced to live. Charlie Brown provided for its audience more than a simple performance of a show, it provided the audience with a simplified view of themselves. A view which was self educating. Such an honest view you will rarely see.

The next time you analyse your own education think of it as a massive puzzle with pieces falling into place each day of life. If you missed the performance of YOUR A GOOD MAN CHARLIE BROWN then there is a piece of that puzzle that you will probably never be able to fit into place. Thank you CHARLIE BROWN and sponsor for putting a piece in my puzzle.

Bob Nims

"Le Bourgeoise Gentlehomme"

The acclaimed company "Le Treteau de Paris", returned to UMass Friday night to perform Moliete's classic comedy 'Le Bourgeoise Gentlehomme". Roland Bertin, left photo, played M. Jourdain, shows his gentleness to Dorimene, played by Laureuee Mercier. Above, Jourdain argues with his wife over his daughter's impending marriage. (MDC photos by Gib Fullerton)

Vassar Sued For Allowing Drugs

MINEOLA N.Y. (UPI)-Vassar College has been sued for $1 million by a former coed who claimed she flunked out in the spring of 1970 because her roommate held all-night drug parties in their dormitory room which the college refused to stop.

Raymond Graber of West Hempstead, N.Y., filed suit in state supreme court on behalf of his daughter, Nancy, 20. According to papers filed in the court, Nancy was unable to transfer to another college of her choice after she flunked out because Vassar refused to give her a recommendation

Miss Graber said that when she went to the dean of residence at the prestigious school, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Drouilhet, she was told to "open the windows" if marijuana smoke bothered her. Miss Graber also alleged that the faculty member who resided in the dormitory, Prof. Robert F. Martin, told her he was "powerless to act in drug matters."

Miss Graber said her roommate, named as Pamela, became involved in drugs in February, 1970, and quickly became a central figure in the campus drug scene. Nancy said her roommate invited friends who were on drug trips to use their room and frequently played music or sang throughout the night, preventing Miss Graber from sleeping.

Graber's attorney, Donald F. McCarthy, said that after a mediocre first semester, Miss Graber's grades went downhill during the second semester. Previous to attending Vassar Miss Graber was an honors student at West Hempstead, N.Y., High School, he said.

She now attends Adelphi University on Long Island where she has a 3.8 grade average on a 4 point scale.

Visit
A. J. Hastings
Newsdealer & Stationer
For Fine Looking
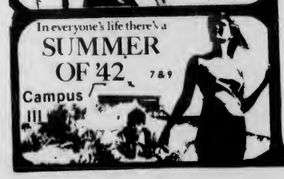
BOOK
RACKS
Made of Wood
45 So. Pleasant St. Amherst



Room To Move
Drop-In Center
5-0400, 5-0401

AUTO INSURANCE
ALL CARS — ALL DRIVERS
BUDGET PAYMENTS
CYCLES — SCOOTERS
Tekoa Insurance Agency
160 Pleasant St. Northampton 586-2742
10 Broad St. Westfield 562-3604

NOW.. YOUR CHOICE OF 5!
Showcase Cinemas
Rt. 5 - W. Spfld.
733-5131
MORE NEW SHOWS!
MORE NEW LOUNGER SEATS!
MORE NEW PARKING!
MATINEES DAILY... POPULAR PRICES
Adults $1.50 Also Thru Fri Mats
1 Summer of '42 (R)
2 Death in Venice (R)
3 The Devils (X)
4 Let's Scare Jessica to Death (GP)
5 Walkabout (GP)
ACRES FREE PARKING
ROCKER LOUNGERS
CHARGE YOUR TICKETS

TUES. IS BLUE GRASS and C&W NIGHT
featuring
DON STOVER
and THE WHITE OAK MOUNTAIN BOYS
ONLY 25¢ 8:30 - 1:00 ONLY 25¢
Blue Wall Cafeteria

Campus Cinemas
256-6411
in the Zayre's Snopping Center on Route 9-Amherst-Hadley Line
MON. NIGHT! LADIES $1.00
Woody Allen's
Bananas
Campus I
&
George Segal in
Where's Papa?

Book Is 29 Years, 5 Months, 10 Days Overdue (Fine is $505.69)

William Manchester, noted author and President of the Trustees of the Friends of the UMass Library, recently asked the Library for information regarding overdue book fines dating from 1942 to the present. After some digging, staff were able to discover and report the dates on which fines changed from 2¢ to 25¢ to 10¢ per day. He was also provided with estimates on how many days in each of the intervening years the Library would have been closed. A first assumption was that Mr. Manchester was gathering data for a faculty-library advisory committee at Wesleyan University, in Middletown, Connecticut.

On Thursday, October 14, the Library received a package from Mr. Manchester containing a Goodell Library copy of Six Plays of Clifford Odets, Modern Library edition (purchase recorded as 83¢, March 29, 1940). In an accompanying letter he explained that the overdue book had turned up in files dating back to his undergraduate days on the UMass campus. and observes, "Twenty-nine years, five months, and ten days overdue."

Mr. Manchester is aware of the $6.00 maximum fine on overdue library books, and that the statute of limitations has long since expired, so he decided to contribute the amount "owed" to the Friends of the Library Trust Fund. As he explains: "Since my delinquency dates from (May 9, 1941) I have no out. Besides, I'm a library trustee. What kind of an example would I be setting? No, there is no loophole for me. Therefore I have calculated my fine at $505.69, and I enclose my check for that amount. Also my apologies."

Mr. Manchester has suggested that his donation might be used toward the expenses of an impending Friends of the Library membership drive, which he is directing.

Coffehouse Successful

Last Friday's Coffeehouse, held in the basement of Crabtree House in Quad, will be repeated every second Saturday of the month.

The Coffeehouse, run by Sogo Wolf and Craig Wischhouse is a non-profit activity sponsored by the Quad's Community Center in order to get the residents of the Quad together. Free coffee and entertainment are offered, in addition to other nominally-priced refreshments. Non-Quad residents are also welcome.

Other activities of the Community Center include a rideboard located in Crabtree's basement, a film co-op, and Cornucopies, a food co-op that provides food at wholesale cost to its members. These projects also are open to all students.

For general information about any of these activities, call Don Chamberlain, the Head of Residence of Crabtree at 546-4543, or Sogo Wolf at 545-2303.

Miss Your Mug Book?

The Freshman Book is finally back on Campus.

Selling is only $1.50.

BUY NOW at:

● Dining Commons - Supper time 4:30 - 6 p.m. Mon. - Thurs.

● Campus Center - Concourse level 9 - 3 p.m. Mon. - Thurs.

Edited & Compiled by the Fraternities & Sororities of U. Mass.

Tanzania Talk Tonight

Professor Ahmed Mouhiddin will give a public presentation on "Ujammaa Socialism--The Challenge of Building a Socialist Society in Tanzania" tonight at 8:00 in 106 Thompson Tower. The lecture is sponsored by the W.E.B. DuBois Department of Afro-American Studies.

RUSSELL JOHNSON

The Unofficial American

- PEACE SECRETARY - American Friends Service Committee
- SOUTH VIETNAM - completed his 11th visit in 1970
- NORTH VIETNAM - traveled extensively and spoke with leaders for 2 weeks in 1967.
- CUBA - a four week visit in 1969 traveling through the six provinces assessing the effects of the Revolution.
- CZECHOSLOVAKIA - 1967, participated in off-the-record discussions with the North Vietnamese and members of the National Liberation Front.
- CHINA - October 1971, completed a four week visit made possible by exiled Prince Sihanouk of Cambodia. The trip included visits in both urban and rural areas including Peking, Yenan, Nanking, Tisnan, and Shanghai.

On Wednesday, Oct. 20 at 8 p.m.

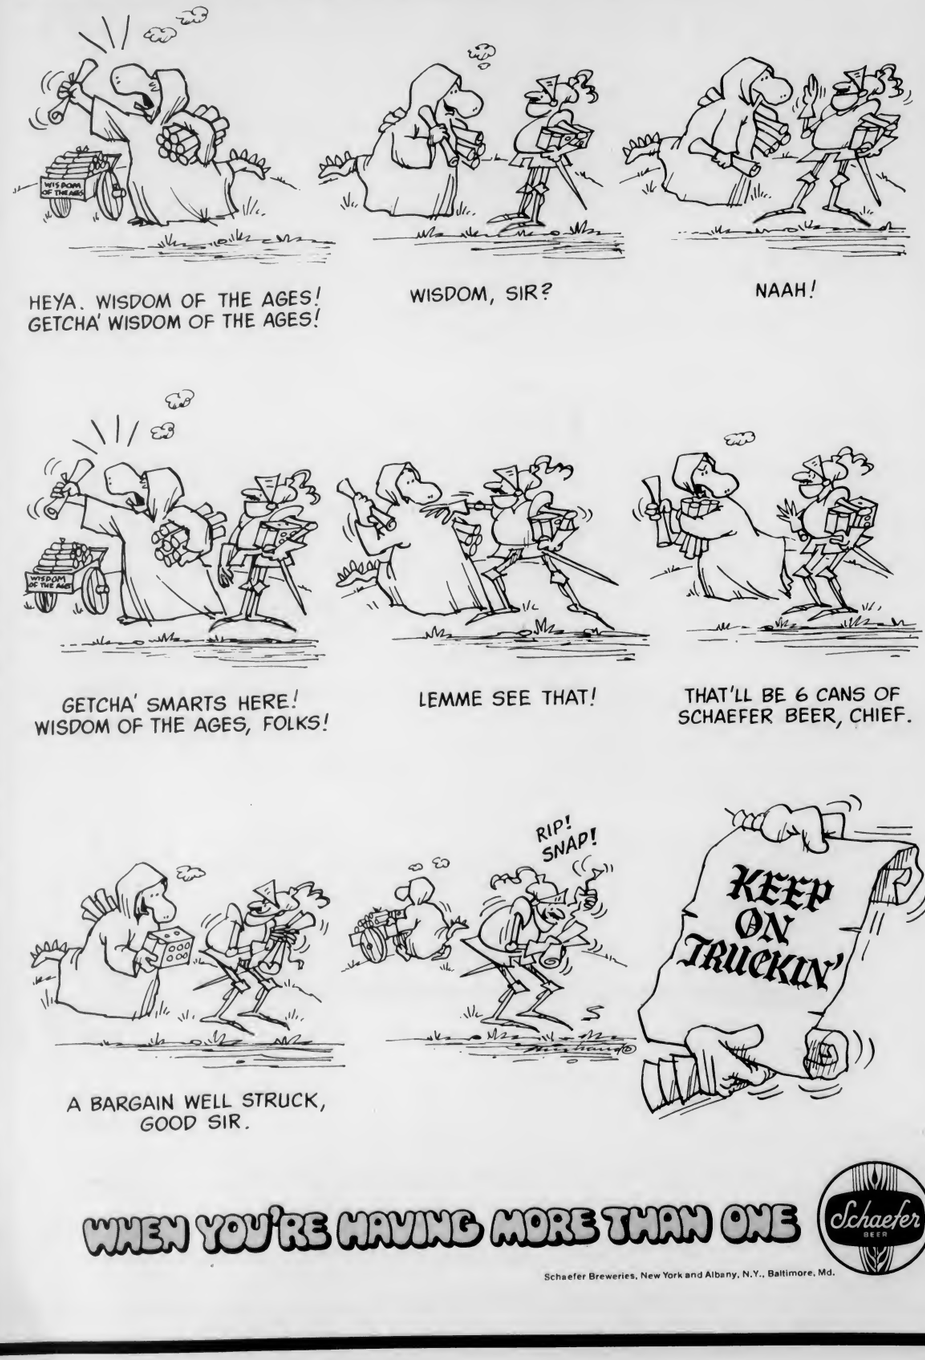
Russell Johnson will deliver a Lecture

in the Student Union Ballroom.

His topic will be,

"U.S./China Policy, A Fresh Start, 1971."

A Coffee Hour will follow the Lecture in Crampton Main Lounge



A dvp Distinguished Visitors Program presentation.

TICKETS: 125 HERTER HALL. TEL. 545-0202

CLAUDE KIPNIS MIME THEATRE

THUR., OCT. 21 8:00 P.M. BOWKER AUD.

MORE THAN ONCE UPON A TIME

WHEN YOU'RE HAVING MORE THAN ONE

Schaefer BEER

Schaefer Breweries, New York and Albany, N.Y., Baltimore, Md.

Marathon Is Coming

Modular Credit Week, also known as the Marathon, will be held November 8-12 at the School of Education.

During the week of November 8-12, the School of Education will suspend all classes. Each day of that week between 8:00 AM and 10:00 PM anywhere from five to eight different events will be staged simultaneously by faculty members, graduate students and invited guests. These events will take the form of lectures, seminars, workshops, film festivals, roleplaying, etc.

Any graduate student or undergraduate student may receive modular credit for attending the events. Fifteen modular credits is recorded on a students record as one University credit. Modular credit forms will be available at the Marathon.

Any faculty member, graduate or undergraduate student wishing to lead an event or make a presentation should contact Tom Paquin in the School of Education, Room 222-B, 5-1572. People not in the School of Education are welcomed and encouraged to participate.

Meeting Tonight To Free Prisoners

By ANN DRANGINIS

The Emergency Defense Committee to Free the Bay Area Prisoners is holding a meeting tonight for students who want to work in their dormitories to free the political prisoners of the San Francisco Bay Area (the Soledad Brothers, Angela Davis, and Ruchell Magee).

November has been designated Prisoner Solidarity Month by the Emergency committee. Many activities, fund-raising events, and speeches are being planned. Projected ideas for dormitory work include: canvassing teams to collect money and signatures on petitions, seminars and speeches in dorm lounges, leafletting teams, and committees to publicize the speakers being brought to campus by the Emergency Committee.

The Emergency Defense Committee is a coalition of black and white organizations of the five college area who plan to raise money for the defense of these prisoners, and publicize the issues involved in their cases. Michael Thelwell, chairman of the DuBois Department of Black Studies, is temporary chairman of the Committee.

The meeting for dormitory workers will be tonight at 8:00 in room 802 of the Campus Center.

Monday Class Schedule will be Followed on Wednesday, October 20.

Notices... Notices... Notices... Notices

BELCHERTOWN VOLUNTEERS:
Tonight there will be a brief meeting of all volunteers interested in organizing a field trip to Quabbin Reservoir. If you are interested you must attend or call Betty at 549-6033. The meeting is at 8 p.m. in Rm. 168 CC.

Learn to Drive
AMHERST AUTO SCHOOL
34 Main Street
256-6066

COLLEGIATE FLYING CLUB:
Ground school--213OZ CC. 162; SBJ-WX AND WX information. Test on owners Manuals for c-150.

EMERGENCY DEFENSE FUND:
There will be a meeting for all those interested in helping raise money for the legal defense of political prisoners in California by canvassing and doing publicity in the dorms.

ENGLISH MAJORS:
English Dept. Undergraduate Council meets in student-faculty lounge of Bartlett lobby at 7:30 Monday. All English majors invited. To be discussed, elections of officers, recruitment campaign.

FIVE COLLEGE COORDINATING BOARD:
Five college information booklets are now available in the Student Union and the Campus Center.

FLIGHT FOUNDATIONS:
Oct. 15, 1971, 9 p.m. Paul Duma and his constant companion "Milikia" (Love Angel) left for the mid-west on the second of many adventures. Fly onward and may we see you all soon.

FLYING CLUB:
FAA rules and navigation seminar. Hasbrouck 201 at 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. tonight.

HEYMAKERS SQUARE DANCE CLUB:
This will be the last week that new members are able to join. If interested in learning how to square dance, please attend Tuesday.

MEDIA CENTER:
Important Media center, students only, meeting is happening Wednesday at 8 p.m. in CC 805-809. For further information head down to center.

NIADS:
Please read Naiad's bulletin board in WOPE to note schedule change. Composition work to begin Monday--sign up for compositions, if you haven't already.

OUTING CLUB:
Meeting Monday 6:30 Rm. 165 CC. Slides; upcoming trips; Halloween party at Knox Cove; rock climbing; equipment sales; etc.

An Evening of Authentic Country Music

25¢ BLUE GRASS NITE 25¢

TUESDAYS

at the BLUEWALL CAFETARIA CC with

Don Stover

and the White Oak Mountain Boys

(as the only act, Stover's Band will play all evening)

8:30 - 1:00

My wife my wife
she puts me down.
The house is too cold
the baby cannot sleep
Her swollen breast aches
she bites her lip.
I bite my lip too
worrying about words.

from Crying in the Cheap Seats
by Bill Tremblay
University of Massachusetts Press
Cloth $6.00, paper $2.50, 96 pages

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

Volkswagen Bus, completely reworked and liveable in, $725. Call 253-9968, ask for Chris, Rm. #3.
tf10-18

1968 VW Fastback, $1100, good car and value. 545-6965.
tf 10-21

'68 VW Camper, white, exc. cond., fact instld. gdyr. polyglass widetrds., 2 new studded snowtires, new valves/rings 40,000 miles, $2400 - 863-9240.
tf10-18

1964 Chevy Impala, 3 speed, burst shifter with A 283 cu. in. Engine runs well, dependable excellent radio, $150. Call Jeff at 546-9813.
tf10-18

1971 Buick Opel wagon red AM-FM, 18000 mi., excellent condition, asking 2295 will talk. Call 863-9066 after 6 p.m.
tf10-18

70 MGB exc. running cond. Must sell. 249-8892.
tf10-20

1968 Austin Healy Sprite - 38,000 miles, $600. Must sell. Call 253-2548. Ned after 9 p.m.
tf 10-18

1965 Dodge Coronet 440 Conv P.S. Auto. Very good condition. Best offer. Call 253-9653 after 6 p.m.
tf 10-18

65 Mustang, conv. 35p., good mechanical cond., straight six, 30 miles per gal., $250 or best offer. Call 549-1013 bet. 6:30 p.m.-10:00 p.m.
tf10-20

64 Chevy Belair, 6 cyl. auto trans., radio, 4 door, good gas miles, some new parts, $200 or best offer. Call Russ at 665-3412 anytime.
tf 10-19

65 VW bug, excl. con., no rot, undercoated, new engine, on warranty, radio and heater (works) new tires $800.00, 65000 mi. Call Steve 546-5305, exc. wkend.
tf 10-22

67 Buick Skylark, creampuff. 1 owner, financial crises. Worth much more, but first offer over $950 takes. 253-2890.
tf 10-22

63 Chev. van. Runs but could use work. Price negotiable & cheap; have to sell. Call 253-7984.
10-18

MOTORCYCLES FOR SALE

1968 Bultaco 360cc Elbandito. New eng., new clutches, Excel. shape. Must sell, $350 or best offer. Call 584-0066 anytime.
tf 10-15

Honda CL350, need money somewhat desperately - 6k exc. engine. Asking $400 flat. Call Ed B-9 Baker 546-6965.
tf 10-20

FOR SALE

Seasoned Firewood. Sale and delivery. Call 665-3031.
tf10-20

1967 MG Midget '70 engine. Call 69762.
tf 10-22

Fender jazzmaster pre cbs old style square pickups, orig. neck, in perf. cond. $175 frm. Call 06541 after 8. 438 Gorman Central.
tf 10-22

We underseell all, any and all top name appliances, stereos, radios, refrigerators, anything. Call Larry 6-5090, 356 Cance.
tf 10-22

9' x 12' Tent; Sleeps 4-5 comfortably. Used one season. Asking $35 or make offer. Call Xavier 5-0858.
tf 10-19

65 Chevy with '69 rebuilt engine; new tires snd shocks; runs well. Priced to sell fast; $450 or make offer. Call Xavier 5-0858.
tf 10-19

Kenwood 140-X Amp For Sale 200-Watts out used one year. List new $400. Will take best offer. Call Rich 253-6363.
tf 10-18

Guild F35 and F47 with hard cases. Call 6-9332.
tf10-21

Honeywell Pentax Spotmatic, 55MM., one year old, $165. Call 253-9968, ask for Chris in room #3.
tf10-18

200 MM Nikkor lens brand new, must sell immed., only $125 includes guarantee, and leather case. Call 549-6411.
tf10-19

Fiat 68, Spydr, sell as parts, 327-6625.
tf10-18

Custom built amp, 100 wts. plus hatchingiwin spks. 12". Both beautifully constructed!! Can be seen at Guitar wkshp. in Northampton $250.
tf10-19

Foreign Auto Parts Pirelli, Michelin, Bosch, Lucas, Metric Hardware, Alfa Romeo spares, wheels, snow tires. Call Herb 256-8781
tf 10-19

Yamaha Classical guitar w/case. Exc. Cond. $80 Call Artie 201 Chadbourne 5-2640 or 5-2641.
tf 10-18

Bumper sticker - your words printed on 3 x 12" red or green sticker for $1, copies .25. The Snide Co. Route 1, Box 93 Blaine, Wash. 98230.
tf10-18

Ski boots, Koflach expo-masters, mens size 10, cost $109, perfect condition, sell fast $50. Call Frank 6-7064.
tf 10-21

HELP WANTED

$50 for one day's labor. Roofing experience helpful. Roof a one story shed/tar paper & sealer. Call 533-0654 (Holyoke).
tf10-21

Ski instructors, weekends for co-ed "teen" ski camp, Shaker Village ski group, New Lebanon, New York. Reply to: Jim Hoe, 416 Newtown Turnpike, Weston, Ct. 06880.
tf 10-19

WANTED

Individual who can compose music for lyrics. Have attractive offer for the right party. Ralph Hayward, P.O.B.75, Erving, Mass. 01344.
tf 10-22

RIDE WANTED

To Baltimore or Washington D.C. Oct. 21 or 22, will share expenses. Call Susan 6-1474.
tf10-19

MODELS WANTED

Female models needed for film production class, 10 dollars per hour, mostly outside shots. Call 253-9283 Mon. and Tues 5-7 p.m. only.
tf 10-19

ROOMMATES WANTED

Roomate needed share 2 Bdrm. apt. Cliffside, 1 yr. lease, must be 21 m. or f. Call Jake Day 545-0438.
tf 10-20

FOR RENT

One bedroom Apt. Available Nov. 1. $150 a month includes utilities. Call after 5 p.m. 665-2641.
tf 10-20

Town House Apt. to share with another girl in Amherst. Own room possible. Call 584-2275.
tf10-21

Furnished one bedroom apt. available for female walking distance from campus. $95 per month, including utilities. Call 253-5958 after 6:00 p.m.
tf 10-19

APT. AVAILABLE

Ideal for advanced female grad. student, room snd board, in lieu of assistance with 2 schoolage children 549-3653.

PERSONAL

Happy Birthday MA - No. 1 son.
10-18

And you thought we didn't know - Happy Birthday Ronni from the 11th floor.
10-18

Melville Basement invites James Basement and 4th floor to a party Friday night at 8.
tf10-21

SERVICES

Prevent this, send $1, name, address, phone to: Buddy Dog Tags, P.O. Box 82 Wellesley Illtis, Mass. 02181.
10-18

Silkscreening course offered in Leverett. Building of screen included, starts Wed. Oct. 20. Call 549-3631.
tf 10-19

TYPING

Expert typing done at home. Previous experience in theses work. Electric typewriter. Call 584-3377, Mrs. Orsini.
tf 10-18

Typing - theses, dissertations, etc. Fast, accurate; have Greek alphabet, math & chem. symbols. Call 253-3681.
tf10-18

Will type papers quickly, accurately, & inexpensively!! Call Steffi 6-8024. Please keep calling.
tf10-19

MUSICIANS

Versified good drummer w exp. Looking for estab. rock type band. Have place to practice! Call Scott 253-7210 nights.
tf10-19

ENTERTAINMENT

MARLON BRANDO — ON THE WATERFRONT, WINNER OF 8 ACADEMY AWARDS, WEDS. OCT. 20 AMHERST FOLKLORE CENTER FILM STUDY, 7:15, 9:30 (in back of Lord Jeff).
tf 10-20

LOST

Reward! Blue & green afghan in David's bag. Lost in C.C. Please return to "Lost & Found".
tf 10-20

GIVE AWAY

Three beautiful puppies, lab mother, unknown father, weaned ready to go. Call 256-8881.
tf 10-20

Notes still available in Bot 101, Gov 100, HD 270, Phil 105, Psych 270, 280, 325, Soc 256 and many others. Rm 318 S.U. Lobby.
tf 10-20

Patriots Bombed By Dolphins, 41-3

MIAMI (AP)—Miami's Bob Griese fired two touchdown bullets apiece to Paul Warfield and Howard Twilley Sunday and the Dolphins rollicked to a 41-3 victory over the New England Patriots.

Griese connected for touchdowns on three consecutive passes before a crowd of 58,822 as Miami churned to a 21-0 first-quarter lead. It was 31-3 by halftime against a Patriot team that is yet to score a first-half touchdown this season.

It was the fewest points allowed by the Dolphins in their six-year history.

Twilley caught five passes for 98 yards, including touchdown shots of 22 and 12 yards. Warfield's scores came on passes of 31 and 14.

New England's Jim Plunkett was smothered six times by Miami's pass rush. He completed 11 of 34 passes for 140 yards and was intercepted twice.

Skins Win 5th In Row

WASHINGTON (AP)-Elusive Larry Brown rambled for 150 yards and linebacker Jack Pardee intercepted three passes Sunday as undefeated Washington crushed St. Louis 20-0 for its fifth straight National Football League victory.

Brown carried 25 times as he broke his own single fame rushing record. The three-year veteran from Kansas State paced the awesome Redskins' ground attack to a total of 229 yards though the porous Cardinal defense.

St. Louis was held to only 25 yards on the ground as Washington's alert defense intercepted four passes and recovered three St. Louis fumbles.

Curt Knight's 16-yard field goal opened the Washington scoring in the first period. Charley Harraway's one-yard plunge and Bill Kilmer's three-yard keeper helped give the Redskins their first 5-0 start since 1940.

The Skins' defense, dubbed the over-the-hill gang because of their ages, repeatedly stopped the Cards' attack as a capacity crowd of 53,041 roared approval.

It was the first shutout for the Skins since they clipped Cincinnati 20-0 a year ago.

Saints Upset Cowboys, 24-14

NEW ORLEANS (AP)-The New Orleans Saints, capitalizing on Dallas mistakes to the very end, upset the Cowboys 24-14 here Sunday in a National Football game before 83,088 fans.

Running back Dave Kopay, playing his first game for the Sanits, recovered Cliff Harris' fumbled punt reception on the Dallas three-yard-line with less than two minutes to play and quarterback Archie Manning ran over for an insurance touchdown three plays later to preserve the Saint upset.

The victory lifted the Saints' season record to 2-2-1 and dropped the Super Bowl-hopeful Cowboys to 3-2 for the season.

New Orleans jumped to a 17-0 half time lead on a 29-yard pass from Manning to running back Tony Baker, a 36-yard field goal by Charlie Durkee and a 14-yard scoring run by Manning.

Durkee's field goal was set up by a 60-yard pass interception return by cornerback Delles Howell and Manning's 13-yard touchdown run came on the second play after Al Dodd returned a Cowboy field goal attempt 77 yards to the Cowboy 15.

A swarming Saint defense harrassed quarterback Craig Morton in the first half, but it appeared quarterback Roger Staubach might rally the slumbering Cowboys in the second half. Staubach connected on a 41-yard scoring pass with wide receiver Gloster Richardson in the third quarter and a 16-yard TD pass to Bob Hayes in the final period.

MARLON BRANDO
in
"On The Waterfront"
Film Study
WEDS., OCT. 20
7:15 — 9:30
AMHERST
FOLKLORE CENTER
(behind the Lord Jeff)

Davis Leads Jets

NEW YORK (AP) — Third-string quarterback Bob Davis, making his first start led the NewYork Jets to more points than they had scored all season and a 28-17 National Football League victory Sunday over the winless Buffalo Bills.

The Jets, who had managed only 24 points while dropping three of four previous starts, struck for a pair of touchdowns less than two minutes apart late in the first period and added one in each of the last two quarters to take their home opener before a crowd of 61,948.

The Bills, 0-5, came within four points at 14-10 and 21-17 but each time the Jets pulled away again, thanks to scoring drives of 70 and 56 yards behind the passing of Davis and the running of Emerson Boozer and John Riggins.

The Jets scored the first time they had the ball, covering 51 yards in nine plays, all on the ground,

Coed Places 3rd In X-Country

UMass Sophomore Charlotte Lettis ran up with the big kids Saturday to place 3rd in the 1971 Liberty Invitational proving that she can run with some of the best runners in the country. Mrs. Francie (Kraker) Johnson won the race in 12:58 over Janet Bristol of Burlington Vt.

Mrs. Johnson was a member of the U.S. 1968 Olympic Team and Bristol finished 5th in last year's national women's cross-country meet. Mrs. Sara Mae Berman, mother of three, finished one place behind Miss Lettis. Mrs. Berman until last month had the women's world best marathon mark.

Miss Lettis said she found her self in 3rd place after a quarter of a mile with Miss Bristol just ahead of her and that the places remained that way until the finish of the race.

The 2-1/2 mile course included grass playing fields, several hills and a woods loop with a 3 foot high tree across the path that had to be negotiated. Miss Lettis was the only runner to completely hurdle the tree the others had to place one foot on it or run around.

Miss Lettis explained that she felt strong enough to hurdle the log because of the training she does. Only last week she ran across most of the Mt. Holyoke range from the Notch to Skinner park.

Over 60 women completed the race under the colors of The Liberty A.C., the sponsors of the race, The Cambridge sports Union Falmouth High School, and Alfred University. Miss Lettis ran unaffiliated with any of these clubs. Her time for the 2-1/4 miles was 13:33 or about 5:30 per mile.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

The late Albert Einstein, a Pisces, had more than a passing interest in astrology. He believed there was order in the universe, perhaps as symbolized by the solar system. The great scientist and philosopher expressed his belief succinctly, declaring, "God does not play dice with the world."

***

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Spotlight on public activities. Means what previously may have gone unnoticed now is accented. You are able to obtain pulse of public. You will, however, encounter some with opposite idea.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Pace yourself. Take care if you don't, no one else will either. Stop looking for excuses to break medical-dental appointments. Complete basic chores. Avoid the sensational. Build bridges of friendship.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Favorable lunar aspect now coincides with love, activity connected with children, numerous changes. Spotlight the creatives. Don't follow crowd. Set own pace. Adhere to individual style.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Study Gemini message. Build on solid base. Be wary of one who advocates get-rich-quick schemes. Stick to basics. One close to home knows what is good for you. Don't let pride stand in way of progress.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may move about more than is your custom. There is air of excitement within family circle. Fine for entertaining at home. Change routine. You have a right to be optimistic. Show it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Perceptive approach necessary especially where money is concerned. Protect valuables. Fine for adding to special collections. Visit to hospital, museum, library would prove fruitful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Lunar cycle coincides with time when your efforts meet with enthusiastic response. Press demands. Take initiative. Show side of yourself that some suspect but seldom witness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Much occurs in quiet, subtle manner. Action is under cover, behind scenes. You have greater desire for freedom could involve travel. Key is to tie loose ends. Finish projects. Advertise, spread message.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on friendships, fulfillment of hopes, desires. Occupational income is stressed. Originality is your ally. Means be willing to try something new. Includes dining habits. Highlight personality.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis is on ambition, ultimate goal. Some of your innate qualities are appreciated. Professional superior could pay meaningful compliment. Avoid undue modesty. You deserve break.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Fine moon aspect illuminates chance to learn, expand horizons. Break away from from foolish restrictions. Refuse to be tied down to outmoded concepts. You can grow emotionally do so.

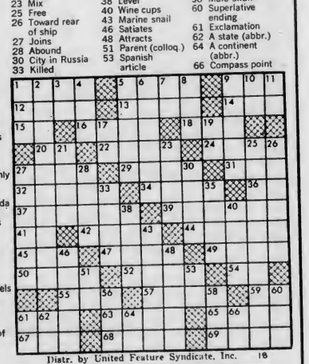
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Some secrets, affecting financial status, could be revealed. Obtain co-operation of mate, business partner. Not wise to try going it alone. Be thorough, aware of apparent minor details. Dig deep.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have quality which attracts confidence. Others are willing to confide. You can aid those in difficulty. In fact, you often are more skillful at helping others than at giving yourself a lift. New contracts made this year are due to bear fruit.

Copyright 1971, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS



1 Repetition
5 Free ticket
9 Container
12 Spoken
13 A continent
14 The self
15 Man's nickname
16 Fluff from yarn
18 Mountain pass
20 Prefix: not
22 Evergreen trees
24 European capital
27 Single item
29 Roman statesman
31 Bitter vetch
32 Titles
34 Unit of Italian currency
36 Near
37 Emphasized form of "it"
39 Tell
41 Note of scale
42 Liquefy
44 Nocturnal mammal
45 Dawn goddess
47 Section of hospital
49 Principal
50 Break suddenly
52 Weary
54 Saint (abbr.)
55 Chinese pagoda
57 Soapstone
59 Faroe Islands whirlwind
61 Hail!
63 Winter precipitation
65 Burden
67 Possesses
68 Shallow vessels
69 Choicest

DOWN

1 Fish eggs
2 Conferring of holy orders
3 Symbol for tantalum
4 Cloth measure
5 Overpowering fright
6 Pertaining to the stars
7 Spanish for "yes"
8 Algonquian Indian
9 Put a false appearance upon
10 Symbol for silver
11 Proceed
17 Supposing that 19 Conjunction
21 Edges
23 Mix
25 Free
26 Toward rear of ship
27 Joins
28 Abound
30 City in Russia
33 Killed
35 Turkish flag
38 Level
40 Wine cups
43 Marine snail
46 Satiates
48 Attracts
51 Parent (colloq.)
53 Spanish article
56 Snake
58 Male swan
60 Superlative ending
61 Exclamation
62 A state (abbr.)
64 A continent (abbr.)
66 Compass point

Answer to Friday's puzzle

SOP STRAP VIE
EAR LOTTO LLK
CREDITS LADLE
POPE LIKE
SPAT STATIONS
CARES OVEN IT
ORE MAKES SHA
RE CAGE TAPIR
ESCULENT SALT
HELD HAIR
CLOSE RETARDS
AAR SHAME EON
PIE TAMES DRY

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc. 18

Pirates: World Champs

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates won their first World Series in 11 years Sunday, edging the Baltimore Orioles 2-1 in a spine-tingling seventh game behind the four-hit pitching of nervous Steve Blass.

The victory in the stomach-churning game gave the Pirates the Series four victories to three and placed them in the record book as one of only six teams to come back from an 0-2 deficit and win baseball's most cherished prize.

But it was anything but easy despite Blass' second strong pitching performance, a home run by Roberto Clemente that got the Pirates started and Jose Pagan's run-producing double in the eighth inning.

Before Blass sealed it down for all the spunky Pirates and cigar-chewing Manager Danny Murtaugh, he had to pitch out of a tension- filled situation in the Orioles' half of the eighth inning when the defending champions broke through for their only run.

Blass, who admits, "I get nervous before a big game," came into the decisive seventh game having spun a three-hitter that began the Pirates on the road back in Game No. 3.

And when he strode out to the mound to face the Orioles in their half of the eighth he had allowed just two hits, despite heated and unsettling protests by Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver about his stance on the mound.

Then the Orioles marshalled their forces for their only major threat as Ellie Hendricks and Mark Belanger poked consecutive singles with none out. Pinch-hitter Tom Shopay moved them up by a base by sacrificing as Luke Walker and Dave Giusti began to warm up in the Pittsburgh bullpen.

But it was Blass' show under the gloomy skies surrounding Memorial Stadium-and he put one on by retiring Don Buford on a grounder to first, as Hendricks scored, and getting Dave Johnson on a grounder to short that ended the uprising.

The Pirates threatened briefly in the ninth but failed to score and Blass went back to work, facing the heart of the Baltimore line-up as the Orioles came to bat with one more chance to win it and satisfy their dynastic aspirations.

"Charge" yelled the Baltimore-oriented crowd of 47,291 in unison, drowning out the few Pittsburgh fans on hand, as big Boog Powell stepped to the plate to face Blass.

And how they howled when he tagged a 1-1 pitch down the right field line, only to see it curve foul. Then one pitch later he tapped a high bouncer to second baseman Dave Cash, who threw him out.

Now it was Frank Robinson. He couldn't wait to get at the 29-year-old right-hander and swung at the first pitch. But it was a short pop up to center field that shortstop Jackie Hernandez camped under without difficulty.

Merv Rettenmund was next, the only man between Blass and victory, the only man who could give the Orioles life.

Blass came around with the right arm, fired and plate Umpire Nester Chylak signalled strike and suddenly the Pittsburgh voices in the crowd were drowning out the Orioles rooters.

Then Blass reared back-pitch No. 108-and Rettenmund hit it up the middle. Hernandez ranged over behind second, scooped it up, fired to Bob Robertson at first and it was all over.

Blass, a 15-game winner during the regular season, thus finished with a four-hitter, walking only two and striking out five as the Pirates became the only team in this Series to win a game away from home.

But Blass was far from their only hero. No one who was here this day-or saw any of the seven games-will forget the performance of Clemente, the Pirates' aging right fielder.

Clemente continued his Series-long heroics, providing Blass with the first run of the game when he tagged the first pitch to him in the fourth inning by Mike Cuellar far over the left-center field wall for a homer.

It was Clemente's 12th hit of the Series, one short of the record. But despite the fact he didn't get the record, there was little question as the disappointed crowd trooped home that he was the outstanding player in the 1971 World Series.

It remained 1-0, with Cuellar matching pitches with Blass, until the eighth inning when Willie Stargell, in a horrendous slump, led off with a single for the Pirates. He immediately raced home on Pagan's double.

Cuellar got out of further trouble but left for a pinch hitter in the bottom half of the inning, having allowed just four hits. But it was his second loss of the Series, being his misfortune to face Blass two times.

And so they went to the bottom of the eighth. The rest will be history-and it will record that Blass had it when he faced his most serious challenge.

The defeat suffered by the Orioles couldn't but tarnish their attempt to label the team of the Robinsons and Powell and McNally as a dynasty.

Winners of the American League title four of the last six years, they have bowed to the National League champions in two of the four World Series in which they have participated.

And not even Weaver, who called the Orioles the best team in baseball history, was able to pull it out for Baltimore, despite protests insisting that Blass was not pitching with his feet on the rubber.

The Pirates, meanwhile, became the sixth team to make World Series comeback history. Only five previous teams have been able to battle back from a 2-0 deficit-the 1965 Dodgers, 1958 and 1956 Yankees, the 1955 Dodgers and the 1921 Giants.

The Giants did it in a nine-game series. The others were accomplished when the Series was a seven-game showdown.

Clemente finished the Series with 12 hits in 29 trips, clouting two homers, both on first pitches, a triple and two doubles. He wound up with 22 total bases, just two shy of that record.

The other hitting star for the Pirates was catcher Manny Sanguillen, who collected 11 hits.

But there were busts too-and the big ones were Stargell and Powell. Neither hit a homer and each drove in just one run.

F. Robinson: "Better Team Lost"

BALTIMORE (AP)—Outfielder Frank Robinson, contending the better team had lost, said Sunday he would give up his players' share of the World Series money if Baltimore could have repeated as world champions.

"You don't play for nothing," Robinson said after Pittsburgh won the final game of the seven-game series, "but you don't just think of money. "Pride and prestige means a lot. When you lose the series, everyone seems to forget you had a great season just to get there."

Manager Earl Weaver, soon after receiving a telephone call from President Nixon, suddenly interrupted a postgame interview to blurt out: "We're still the best damn team in baseball, and we'll prove it by winning 100 games again next year to become the only team ever to do that four seasons in a row."

After relaying the gist of the telephone call to the Orioles Weaver yelled out: "We're going to win 100 next year, right?"

But there was no response from the players, who sat quietly in front of their open lockers. Plastic curtains, which would have been used to protect clothing in a clubhouse celebration, remained atop the lockers.

Weaver praised the great individual performance by Pittsburgh right fielder Roberto Clemente, but added, "Without Blass, we might be popping the corks."

Steve Blass, who beat the Orioles 5-1 with a three-hitter in game No. 3 after Baltimore had won the first two, permitted just four hits in Sunday's 2-1 victory.

All of the Orioles said Blass was not as sharp as he was in the third game, but they weren't able to connect safely.

Weaver contended the fourth game relief job turned in by 21-year-old Bruce Kison probably turned the series around.

"But I can't give the series to him," Weaver said. "It all boils down to Blass, to pitching being 90 per cent of the game."

Murtaugh Shuffled Lineup

BALTIMORE (AP)—Manager Danny Murtaugh of the Pittsburgh Pirates pulled a last-minute lineup switch before the start of Sunday's decisive seventh game of the 1971 World Series against the Baltimore Orioles.

Murtaugh dropped slumping slugger Willie Stargell, from the No. 4 slot to the sixth in his lineup. Bob Robertson, who had two homers earlier in the series, was moved into the cleanup spot and Manny Sanguillen, who had nine hits in the first six games, batted fifth. Stargell, the major leagues' home run leader during the regular season, suffered through an 0-14 slump during the National League playoffs against San Francisco and had just four hits and one run batted in in 20 at bats against the Orioles.

Heavy clouds hung over Memorial Stadium and the lights were turned on before the start of the game.

The defending champion Orioles, who squared the series at three games each with a dramatic 3-2 victory in 10 innings Saturday, sent Mike Cuellar to the mound while the Pirates countered with Steve Blass.

Blass, 15-8 during the regular season, beat Cuellar on a three hitter in the third game of the series-Pittsburgh's first victory after the Orioles had taken the opening two games.

Manager Earl Weaver of the Orioles stuck with the shuffled lineup that won Saturday's vita game, keeping second baseman Dave Johnson in the No. 2 slot Danny Murtaugh, manager of the Pirates, went with his right-handed lineup, inserting Jose Pagan a third base and Gene Clines in center field against the left-hand Cuellar.

Blass' "Cup of Tea"

BALTIMORE (AP)-The champagne rain didn't do anything for Pittsburgh Pirate Manager Danny Murtaugh, but it was Steve Blass' cup of tea.

Murtaugh calmly stood in the Pirate locker room while champagne splattered and said: "There was more pressure in the third game because if we had gone down three games it would have been nearly impossible to come back."

As his teammates drenched him with champagne, Blass said:

"We don't have any spectacular pitchers, only pitchers with a lot of experience.

"We have a no-name pitching staff, but I imagine it will have a name now."

For his part, Blass disagreed with Murtaugh about the seventh game pressure, but then reversed himself.

"There was more today. I felt like I could jump of the Monongahela wharf."

"I knew I had to forget about the pressure of the World Series and concentrate on the game," said Blass. "I was afraid if I let it get the best of me, I'd be a physical wreck and embarrass myself and my teammates."

"From that standpoint, the World Series was actually easier for me," he said.

Murtaugh said the emotion in the dugout during the game was a crescendo beginning from the opening pitch until Roberto Clemente hit his fourth inning homer.

"Then it was like an explosion in there," Murtaugh declared.

Birds Winged

Pittsburgh	ab	r	h	bi	Baltimore	ab	r	h	bi
Cash 2b	4	0	0	0	Buford lf	3	0	1	1
Clines cf	4	0	0	0	DJohnson 2b	4	0	0	0
Clemente rf	4	1	1	1	JPowell 1b	4	0	0	0
BRoberton 1b	4	0	1	0	FRobinson rf	4	0	0	0
Sanguillen c	4	0	2	0	Rettenmd cf	4	0	0	0
Stargell lf	4	1	1	0	BRobinson 3b	2	0	0	0
Pagan 3b	3	0	1	1	Hendricks c	3	1	2	0
Hernandez ss	3	0	0	0	Belanger ss	3	0	1	0
Blass p	3	0	0	0	Cuellar p	2	0	0	0
Total	33	2	6	2	Shopay ph	0	0	0	0
					PDobson p	0	0	0	0
	IP	H	R	ER	BB	SO	McNally p	0	0	0	0
Blass W, 2-0	9	4	1	1	2	5		29	1	4	1
Cuellar L, 0-2	8	4	2	2	0	6	Total	000	100	010	2
P Dobson 2-3	2	0	0	0	1		Pittsburgh	000	000	010	1
McNally 1-3	0	0	0	0	0		Baltimore

T 2:10. A-47,791

E-B. Robertson. DP-Pittsburgh 1. LOB-Pittsburgh 4, Baltimore 4. 2B-Hendricks, Pagan. HR-Clemente 2. S-Shopay.

CollegeMaster Salutes
Senior of the Week
Outstanding Against Rhode Island This Weekend Was Senior Bob Cabrelli
Fidelity Union Life Insurance Co.

Take your Lunch to the Game
Football Bag Lunch
Cold Cut Grinder
Brownie
Potato Chips
Pepsi
99c
"BITES & PIECES"
"CATALYST"
Hampden Commons
Worcester Commons

Rhode Island Spoils Homecoming

Redmen Drop Third Straight

By EARLE BARROLL

Last Thursday UMass head coach Dick MacPherson cited the ability of his team's defense in stopping Rhode Island quarterback Bob Ehrhardt as the key to his team's chances in Saturday's Homecoming game.

As the final score of URI, UMass 3 indicates, the defense did not do its job and the Redmen went down to their straight defeat before a poor Homecoming crowd of 13,000.

"I'm extremely disappointed with the performance of the defense," said a disheartened MacPherson after the game. "Ehrhardt had no pressure to throw under, due to the injury to Bill DeFlavio just before the half and I'd like to think that this was the reason that their (URI) offense looked so good."

Ehrhardt was indeed overwhelming throughout the afternoon in engineering the Ram offense to 509 total yards in their first win at UMass since 1959 and their third win of this season against a couple of setbacks.

The senior quarterback, who led the Rams to an upset win one year ago at Kingston riddled the UMass secondary for 300 yards in the air on 19 of 30 completions and two touchdowns.

The big URI backfield of Ehrhardt, Molly McGee, Warren Houston and Danny Weed bulldozed their way to 209 yards on the ground and gave the UMass defense all it could handle in a fine all around Ram attack.

The Redmen amassed 293 total yards, but were unable to dent the URI defense early in the game which put them in a hole they were unable to escape.

Quarterback Mary Evans was under constant pressure while he was in there and completed 13 of 31 or 112 yards, many on the wobbly and hurried side.

The offensive line which was struck with the loss of Bob Donlin three weeks ago and has seen its ranks weakened through constant minor injuries was unable to cope with the hard-charging Rams defensive line.

Questioned after the game as to the ineffectiveness of his offensive line, MacPherson responded, "I'd better be happy with them, they're the best men I have."

URI opened up a 24-3 half time lead on the strength of a big 21 point second quarter.

John Brickley put the Rams on the board in the first quarter on 25 yard field goal on the Rams' second series. By the end of the quarter Ehrhardt was chewing the Redman defense to shreds and five seconds into the second quarter hit split end Kim Conlee with a perfect strike over the middle for a 28 yard score.

After a Ram interception on the next UMass series Ehrhardt went to work again and six plays later he hit his big tight end Mike Forbes between Dennis Keating and John O'Neil for a 24 yard scoring play.

Mark Palau, who won fame during the spring as an all-New England third baseman for UMass put UMass' only points of the game on the board midway in the stanza with a 36 yard field that just climbed over the cross bar.

URI came right back after the ensuing kickoff and drove down the field on seven plays with McGee capping the series off with an 11 yard slash off tackle for the final Ram score of the half.

In the second half the visitors put up one more score in the fourth quarter on a three yard skirt around the end by Houston, set up when UMass gave the ball on downs.

The loss dropped the Redmen into a second place tie in the conference with Vermont, UConn and New Hampshire, each with one loss. Next week the Redmen play at UConn in the only conference action.

In looking to the coming week MacPherson made his intention known, "we have some real cleaning up to do. We have to keep the mistakes from breeding mistakes."

PUSH HIM THAT WAY-UMass fullback Rich Cronin (35) moves behind teammate Dick Etna's block on a Ram lineman. Cronin romped for considerable yardage on one of the few dents in the Ram defense. (MDC Photo by Barbara Brecher.)

Booters Blank Rhody

By LAURA NANICELLI

Impregnable? Yes, the UMass soccer team appears to be something of the sort, as in five games they have recorded five shutouts, their latest victims being URI, as the Rams fell 3-0 on Saturday morning.

The Redmen combined another superb defensive effort, with a first quarter scoring spree; a spree that produced all three of the Redmen goals, inside of 12 minutes.

In chalking up their third straight Saturday morning Conference win, UMass wasted little time, and at the 7:05 mark of the period, it was 1-0 UMass.

The eventual game winner began with Munir Kagwagy at mid-field, as he sent a short pass on the left side to Tom Coburn. Coburn fed Lindo Alves, who was racing downfield and the foot race began. It was Alves, trailed by two defensemen, about to meet the goalie, and as the four of them closed in, Alves dribbled around Hartley, the URI goaltender, and with a good bounce here, and a good bounce there, the ball trickled into the right-hand corner. The Redmen were set for the day.

But the Redmen appeared to be anything but assured of victory, as the wet and slick field saw both offenses at their finest in that first quarter. UMass goaltender John Kiah was busier than he cares to be, as URI charged and charged, but was unable to put on their touches.

URI nearly broke the four game shutout string in the first five minutes as Kiah slipped and fell, having come out to grab the ball. Had a URI lineman simply lofted the ball above his head, the Redmen would have lost their chance for five in a row. But the Rams blew this chance, and numerous others.

There was an angled shot by star URI forward Joe Hooks that Kiah dove for, as it appeared headed for the far corner. But too wide it was and the UMass bench could again rest easily. Then came the scare of their lives, as a long cross field pass left a Ram forward all alone in front of Kiah, some 10 feet in front of the net. Kiah came out and flustered his opposition, slamming it against the side post; the URI forward had muffed the perfect setup and UMass still had their one goal lead.

Thus insurance seemed mandatory for UMass, and forthcoming it was as 10 minutes after goal number one, the duo of senior Alves, and freshmen Coburn put number two away. Alves shot a long lead pass to Coburn, who dribbled up the middle, and veered off to the right side, as two defenders to his left forced his from the goal area. But somehow, swinging his right foot around, Coburn angled the ball past the diving goalie, past the two defensemen, right into the far left-hand corner, and the freshmen had his second tally of the year.

More insurance was on the way, as less than three minutes later Coburn, looking more and more like a seasoned pro, drove the left side and nearing the end line, shot a left-footed pass across the goal mouth. Jeff Hague converted the pass, slamming it home for a 3-0 UMass lead.

For the last three quarters of scoreless ball, UMass penalties dominated the action. Nearly 40 times whistles were blown calling Redmen infractions, and it led one to believe that maybe its the Redmen's aggressiveness that makes them such a potent force defensively.

"This was a real team effort, everyone was hustling," summed up Coach Berryman. "I thought that everyone was moving towards the ball well, and I'm sure that these one week rests haven't hurt."

In handing URI its first shutout of the season, the Redmen came closest in this contest, to losing that long, long string of scoreless minutes. Throughout the second half the Rams came within a hair, and although outshot, URI played a game well representative of the eighth ranked team in New England.

The Conference win pushed UMass to 3-0-0 in YanCon action, and put them at 4-0-1 overall, Rhody lost their first game in YanCon action Saturday, and 2-1-0, they now hold a 3-2-0 overall mark.

HE MUST BE KIDDING-Scoring against the UMass soccer team is like trying to squeeze blood out of a rock. This Rhode Island attackman finds this to be a fact of life for UMass opponents in this scurry in front of the Redman net. (MDC Photo by Bob Medeiros.)

Runners Topple BC

By JAY NESTOR

The UMass cross country team went to Franklin Park, Friday, to test the strength of Boston College. When they returned to campus a complete metamorphosis had taken place.

The harriers soundly beat the highly touted Eagles with a decisive 25 to 34 score. Oh so suddenly, the team will never be the same. Their potential has been realized and the Redmen have emerged from the lowly status of a rebuilding team, to a threatening contender.

Frank Zabel of BC pulled away from Doug O'Connell in the last quarter of a mile to snatch the first spot. This was the climax to an interesting battle for the individual honor.

For four miles it was a seesaw tussle between O'Connell and the Eagle's Dick Mahoney. When Mahoney faded at this point, Zabel met the challenge and resumed the battle with O'Connell for top spot. Freshman Bill Gillin of UMass showed great ability and maturity by overhauling the tiring Mahoney.

Behind Mahoney, Redman Paul Segersten came through with his best race of the season, beating BC's Charlie Diehl to the line by six well-earned seconds. Redman depth poured in after Diehl. This contingent was lead by Roger Nasatka and included Don Dunsky, Bob Sullivan, Peter Crisci, and Mike McCusker in that order. These men spelled the Eagles' downfall, pushing the BC backup men far behind in the standing. A combination of fine front running and strong depth secured this victory for the Redmen.

It is a tried, tested, and matured team that can be seen training around the UMass campus. At the beginning of the season, Coach O'Brien accurately predicted that the BC meet would be the turning point of the season. This was the meet to make or break the Redmen and they responded remarkably. The team now holds five wins against three losses.

The Freshmen scored an impressive sweep against the little Eagles even without the presence of Bill Gillin, Randy Thomas and Bruce MacLean. Steve Brown took up the slack and lead the Redmen to their second sweep of the season. He was followed by Paul Albini, Rick Vose, Tom Wilson and Devon Croft.

UMass faces Springfield Tuesday for a duel meet which will test the consistency of the Redmen.

Pirates Win Details
Features On Inside Page

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather: Rainbows over Newark; promiscuous leprechauns late in the day.

VOLUME XCIX, ISSUE 29 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS TUESDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1971

W.E.B. Dubois Speaker

Mouhidden Urges Socialist Tanzania

By GEORGE WEISSLITZ

AHMED MOUHIDDEN

The attempt to build a prosperous and united Tanzanian society under the auspices of socialism was the subject of a lecture delivered by Professor Ahmed Mouhidden last night in Thompson 106. The lecture, entitled "Ujamaa Socialism---the challenge of Building a Socialist Society in Tanzania" was sponsored by the W.E.B. DuBois Department of Afro--American Studies and drew a crowd of about seventy.

Professor Mouhidden, who is presently a senior lecturer in political science at McGill University, was introduced as one of the class of "young black Africans who are both intellectual and activist, and who are very aware of the problems confronting Africa today."

Professor Mouhidden described himself as being committed to Africa and African values and began his lecture by delving into the concept of Ujamaa. "Ujamaa" was described as both a political philosophy and a way of life. Ujamaa emphasizes Tanzanian self-reliance and implies a sense of brotherhood and fellowship among Tanzanians.

The concepts of Ujamaa were developed with a knowledge of traditional African society, and with regard to Africa's experience with European civilization. He then went on to speak about socialism in Tanzania which, he said, was nothing new.

Instead he asserts that what is new brings vitality to modern day Tanzania is the idea of self-reliance. In order to meet the challenge of tomorrow, Mouhidden stressed that Tanzanians must be developed by Tanzanians. They must rely on tools and means which are controlled or available to Tanzanians. And finally, that outside help should only act as a catalyst to augment conditions led by Tanzanians themselves. He said that this will be the only means by which Tanzanians can maintain their own political and economic independence, create their own cultural identity, and have a sense of national pride.

After explaining his initial concepts of Ujamaa and Tanzanian self-reliance, Professor Mouhiddin spent the greater part of his lecture developing the history of Ujamaa. He said that the basis of Ujamaa socialism in Tanzania had its roots in a pamphlet written in 1962 by J. Nyere. Nyere who is now the president of Tanzania, was then president of the Tanganika African National Union. His pamphlet purported to demonstrate that the traditional African values were associated with Ujamaa socialism. These values included common ownership of land, all people belonging to the community, no rigidly defined class structure, no exploitation of human resources or employer-employee relationships, and the ethic of sharing. In this traditional African society, authority was based on tradition, rather than class.

However, according to the pamphlet, this traditional society was lacking in that its people were very poor, and that there were often various degrees of violence and brutality within the society. Thus, concludes the pamphlet and Professor Mouhidden, while some of the traditional values are worthwhile, there must also be changes. Professor Mouhidden said that the question then becomes, "Changes by whom?" To J. Nyere and Professor Mouhidden the answer was clear--the changes must be made by the Africans themselves. Mouhidden said that as Tanzania became independent, it was presented with rare opportunity for the African to structure his own society, and for the African to make a contribution to create his own civilization. Thus, to Professor Mouhidden, Ujamaa is the answer to the challenge of Tanzania's future, and hopefully the people of Tanzania will rise to meet this challenge.

A question and answer period followed the lecture.

DVP

Drug Abuse Solution Explained By Fort

By BOB McWILLIAMS

Doctor Joel Fort set forth a plan to solve drug abuse in America by a four point program insisting on the banning of alcohol and tobacco farmers, beginning a new approach to drug education based on honesty and objectivity, and treating drug abuse as a medical-psychological problem rather than a criminal problem. He spoke last night to a standing-room only crowd at Student Union Ballroom, sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program.

Speaking on the subject of "hard drugs" Fort defined them as those which produce "death or disability." Alcohol, tobacco and legally manufactured pills, were named as the statistically "hardest" drugs.

Fort was very critical of the alcohol and tobacco manufacturers. He pointed out that they spend two million dollars daily, in advertisements which stress sexuality, eternal youth, and happiness which supposedly can be found in drugs. He feels this has caused institutionalization by the mass media.

"The least-able person govern our society and...we move from day to day, from crisis to crisis without a vision," he said, citing this as the reason people spend drugs.

"The proper focus of criminal law should be on anti-social behavior...the laws which deal with private behavior have an ultimately destructive effect. Today's drug laws are really soft on drugs but hard on people. The drug problem must be seen as a human one which cannot be solved by simplified pseudo-solutions."

He cited cocktail parties as an example of how adults communicate through the use of mind altering substances. "The best host is the one who induces his guests to drink the most", asserted Fort.

After the main speech, Fort answered questions about the success of the methadone program. "Methadone can work in some specific cases with psychiatric treatment," he concluded, but "is another example of simple pseudo-solutions."

DR. JOEL FORT

On The Inside:

● Student Counseling See page two
● Pittsburgh Explodes See page four
● Letting It Bleed See page eight

Counseling Services Boon To Students

By LINDA J. LaVINE

For many seniors, as well as others, what to do after graduation has been a dilemma few students can avoid. For this reason The Career Planning and Placement Service has been founded and is located in Room 239, Whitmore Administration Building. The director of this service is Mr. Robert Morrissey.

The Career Planning and Placement Center has four main functions; the first is career counselling for freshmen through seniors. The service gives aid in judging for yourself the right career. This service to the student body is particularly important to freshmen and sophomores in picking the right curriculum for certain majors and graduate schools. Seniors and juniors are also urged to register with the placment office in order to establish a placement file. It is important that job placement begin as early in the senior year as possible. The second function is to provide career literature. The department has a well stocked library with directories, pamphlets, and catalogues. These may suggest all types of careers for every major.

To provide a program on the campus is the third service given. Seniors have the opportunity to take advantage of the campus interview program to learn about specific employment opportunities. The last service is to provide the campus with follow-up information on the graduates of UMass. Also aid is given to the alumni in making career changes and in finding jobs after military service.

When interviewing Mr. Clarkson S. Edwards, a placement officer in the field of Business Administration and Arts and Sciences, certain questions were answered about Grad schools and jobs. One of the most asked questions is "what are the starting salaries of the different professions?" With a Bachelor's degree one can expect to start anywhere from $6,800 to $7,000 for teachers to $10,000 a year for accountants.

Director of Placement and Financial Aid Robert U. Morrissey. The office serves students in a number of different ways from their freshman year through graduation.

When considering a Grad school you should have not less than a 2.5 cum. At UMass the Grad schools insist on at least a 2.7. But most important is personal contact with Grad school itself. When applying to a Grad school first stop in at the Placement office and discuss your particular situation, such as geography, type of school, etc. The Placement Service has information on many openings in both Grad schools and jobs and many times have made contacts with various places.

A bulletin is put out by the Placement office called CAREER NEWS to help with career planning and placement. It tells of certain test dates and interviews on campus. This pamphlet is posted on all bulletin boards on campus as well as mailed to sororities, fraternities, and commuters. It can also be picked up in the Career Planning and Placement Office in 239 Whitmore. For aid in career planning call or come in any time Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. for an appointment with one of seven placement officers.

Another department is the Counselling and Guidance Center, headed by Dr. Southworth, located in 243 Whitmore. This department offers guidance in private matters mostly, but also helps students develope educational and career plans that commensurate with their abilities and desires. Psychological tests and inventories are available to assist the student with this. However, before any of these tests may be given you must speak with a counsellor first.

This department is not made up of academic advisors, but rather trained counsellors and professional psychologists. However, as a service to the students of this university, as well as any other students from the surrounding colleges, the Counselling Center does administer the various graduate tests. In order to take these tests you do not need an appointment with a counsellor, but simply to pick the packet of your choice up at the Counselling office. The office is open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

The following is the 1971-72 testing schedule administered by the Counselling Center. Questions about any of these programs should be referred to the Counselling Center, 243 Whitmore, 545-0333.

November 13, 1971	National Teacher Examination	104 Thompson Hall
November 20, 1971	Veterinary Aptitude Test	169 Whitmore Hall
December 4, 1971	Professional Qualification Test	104 Thompson Hall
December 11, 1971	American College Testing	169 Whitmore Hall
December 11, 1971	Graduate Record Examination	104 Thompson Hall
December 18, 1971	Law School Admission Test	104 Thompson Hall
January 8, 1972	Dental Admission test	372 Morrill
January 15, 1972	Graduate Record Examination	104 Thompson Hall
January 29, 1972	National Teacher Examination	104 Thompson Hall
February 5, 1972	Adm. Test for Grad. Study in Bus.	104 Thompson Hall
February 5, 1972	Grad. School For. Lang. Test	106 Thompson Hall
February 12, 1972	Law School Admission Test	104 Thompson Hall
February 26, 1972	American College Testing	169 Whitmore Hall
February 26, 1972	Graduate Record Examination	104 Thompson Hall
April 8, 1972	National Teacher Examination	104 Thompson Hall
April 8, 1972	Law School Admission Test	106 Thompson Hall
April 15, 1972	Grad. School For. Lang. Test	104 Thompson Hall
April 22, 1972	American College Testing	169 Whitmore Hall
April 22, 1972	Graduate Record Examination	104 Thompson Hall
June 24, 1972	Adm. Test for Grad. Study in Bus.	104 Thompson Hall
July 22, 1972	Grad. School For. Lang. Test	104 Thompson Hall
July 29, 1972	Law School Admission Test	104 Thompson Hall

Culturnatives Rap Session This Thursday

An experimental CULTURNATIVES Rap Session will be held Thursday, October 21, at 2:30 p.m. in the Lounge on the ninth floor of the Campus Center.

CULTURNATIVES is a weekly column appearing each Wednesday in the MDC, and written by Gil Salk, the campus draft counselor. The column deals with cultural alternatives, alternative life styles, and alternate perspectives. Previous columns have dealt with the Attica massacre, women's liberation, drugs and drug legislation, and similar issues.

The purpose of the Rap Session, according to Salk, is to provide feedback on the ideas presented in the columns, to open a forum where others may present their own ideas, and to suggest material for other columns. Salk also hopes that the spirit of CULTURNATIVES, a suggesting of new approaches rather than a dogmatic presentation of "the only answer", will predominate the Rap Session.

The Rap Session will be open-ended, depending on the number and interest of those attending. Although Salk assumes that the subject of his most recent column will provide the major topic of conversation, he hopes that other ideas will also be brought forth.

If the Rap Session seems to attract enough interest, Salk says that he will try to make it a regular event. He urges all those who read his column to attend, whether they agree with his ideas or not.

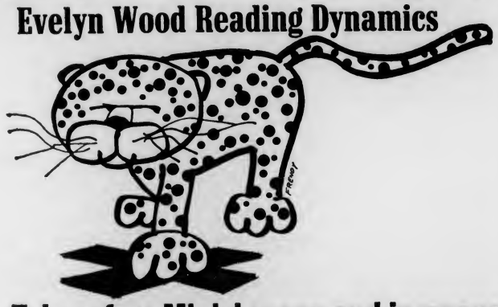
Freeing All Political Prisoner

Meeting of the Emergency Defense Committee to Free Bay-Area Prisoners (i.e. in San Francisco)
Meeting in Campus Center at 7:00 p.m.
Purpose: to get people to work in their dorms for this cause.

BUY DIRECT AND SAVE!!

Why run all over town looking for pants, corduroys, or blue jeans when we have the areas largest and most complete selections - all at the lowest prices around. And we're just up the street...

the closest thing to you is



WEARHOUSE (wear-else?) Open Fri. till 9

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN are on the second floor of the Student Union on the University campus, zip code 01002. Phones are 545-2550 (news), 545-0344 (sports), and 549-1311 (editor).

Second class postage paid at Amherst, the DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes five times weekly Monday through Friday during the academic year except during vacation and exam periods, three or four times a week following a vacation or exam period or when a holiday falls within a week. Accepted for mailing under the authority of the act of March 8, 1879 as amended by the act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester, $10.00 per year.

Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics

Take a free Mini-Lesson and increase your reading speed on the spot!

Know why we invest so much in our free mini-lessons? Brochures and catalogues can't possibly describe what it's like to read a book like Exodus (all 499 pages) in 1 hour and 48 minutes. Or an entire Time Magazine in 35 minutes.

Instead we invite you to spend 60 minutes this week at a mini-lesson. We'll show you why two presidents (Kennedy & Nixon) personally brought the course into the White House so staff members could learn the Evelyn Wood technique.

At a mini-lesson, we actually increase your reading speed on the spot. Just a little, to be sure, but enough so you'll know how it feels. By the way, don't worry about how slowly you read. Everyone comes to a mini-lesson reading slowly.

One last thing, back in 1964 we adopted the following as a national policy: "We promise that you'll read at least 3 times better than when you started or we'll refund your tuition." That policy still stands.

That's it. The schedule of free mini-lessons is listed here.

University of Mass. — Student Union — Room 308 - Berkshire Room

TWO DAYS ONLY

* Mon., Oct. 18 at 4 or 7 or 9 p.m.
* Tues., Oct. 19 at 4 or 7 or 9 p.m.

Paul Murphy 253-2425

Nader Style Group Forms Charter

And Given Onto Us It Came

BY THE SHORES OF GITCHIEGOOMIE "...and Coldwell led his people out of Copley Square, for which they yearned so deeply, and brought them to the Point of Columbia, which sat in a foul and putrid bay. And Coldwell stopped them and he raised his arms and spake thus to them: 'Yea, though my chieftains walk in the shadow of the elms, I am dissatisfied and the trees must go.' And the people squatted on that land, and it was good." (Photo by Alan Chapman)

WMPIRG (Western Mass. Public Interest Research Group), a Nader-style group being formed by the twenty colleges in the Connecticut Valley area, held its second regional meeting Sunday, October 17 at Hampshire College. The main items covered were the committee reports and acceptance of the group proposal, or charter.

In the committee reports, the Publicity Committee took suggestions from the floor for the creation of a coordinating poster to be used on all twenty campuses during the petition drive. This committee also reported that two leaflets explaining just what WMPIRG is and how it will be funded and run will be distributed on the campuses this week and next. The Coordinating Committee was instructed to begin looking for prominent speakers to help with the campaign and a Finance Committee was set up to work out and handle the group's budget.

The proposal which was accepted suggests that each individual school strive for the figure of four dollars per student per year in the form of a refundable student tax to fund WMPIRG once the group is established and research is started. It also calls for the formation of a Regional Board of Directors of a supervisory and coordinating nature, each school having one representative for each three thousand regularly enrolled students who are WMPIRG members. Each school will have at least one representative. Members of the student-run, student-funded WMPIRG are defined as those students who pay the fee, though those who cannot pay it will not be excluded from participation in the various projects sponsored by the organization.

It was announced that space will be made available in the office of the Connecticut Valley Committee, which is initially funding WMPIRG, for a student-manned information center. The center will be located at Hampshire College and will be open for a certain number of hours each day to answer questions pertaining to WMPIRG. This week, the various colleges are being contacted to help in setting up and staffing the office.

The next Regional meeting of WMPIRG will be held Thursday, November 11, here at UMass. In the meantime, each school will be holding local meetings to get support for WMPIRG on that campus in whatever manner it finds most effective.

The next local UMass meeting will be held Wednesday night, October 20 in the Campus Center (watch Collegian notices for room number). There are positions open on all committees and a lot of help is needed if the drive is to be successful.

Chancellor Committee

More Than 45 Apply

By JUDY PITTMAN

More than forty-five students have applied for the six undergraduate seats on the committee authorized to search for a permanent chancellor for UMass. Amherst.

Members of the committee will be chosen to insure "the greatest representation of the student body", Larry Ladd, Student Senate Vice-President, said in an MDC interview. He stressed that the students' power to determine the choice of the next chancellor rests on the commitments of each student committee member.

"We don't know whether the committee will last two weeks or two years", said Ladd. The members will probably be mostly sophomores and juniors, he added. He hopes that the membership will include females and blacks.

Ladd attributes the unusually large number of applicants to a "Super Star" glamour that has become associated with the Search Committee. He said that a high proportion of the respondents are students who have never participated in any other campus affair.

Senate President Lee Sandwen will make the six appointments with the advice and consent of the Senate. The names will be read on the Senate floor Wednesday night.

The purpose of the eighteen-member Search Committee is to nominate at least five names, as stipulated by the Board of Trustees, for the position of chancellor. Ladd said that it will be very difficult to find, in a reasonable time, five men who will satisfy the needs of the chancellorship. Ladd said that it would be more realistic to nominate fewer men.

Free Message Services Offered

By MARILYNN MARTIN

From 1:30-3:30, in front of the University Store, on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, there will be an opportunity for people to place Free messages to anywhere in the United States, South America, Israel, and Liberia, as a service of WIPOU (sometimes known as HAM operators), a member of the University of Mass Amateur Radio Association.

Speaking with Ladd Hull, emergency coordinator of the system, he emphasized that the operation was saving the student body money. Making an example of Western Union he said that it would cost perhaps $4.00 to send a message by Western Union where WIPOU would send it free of charge and often get it to its destination when many other systems such as Western Union would be unable to.

All that is needed to relay these messages is the person's name, address and helpfully, their telephone number. Each message, consisting of 25 words or less, will be sent out at 7:00 on the same evening, and if the message is sent to somewhere in the U.S.A. it will probably be received on that day. If it is an emergency message, it will reach within hours.

Hull mentioned that about forty messages had been sent already since the operation started. There was one, he recalled, that had been sent to Israel and during the Collegian interview, a message was taken for Hondurus. Messages can also be taken for Vietnam and sent by way of their APO address.

When asked where this idea had originated, Hull said that it started with Amateur Radio and is a concept widespread throughout the United States now. Its late arrival to UMass was due to a shortage of students interested in helping with the system and limited funds.

Financed by the Student Senate, WIPOU's funds have been cut from $3,200 to $700.00 a year, according to Hull, and the system is afraid that it will be subject to cutting again soon. The money alloted previously was used to pay for a transmitter and receiver. However, Radiogram paper and other necessities must be paid for by the members of the operation itself as no outside funding can be approved except for that allocated by the Student Senate. The system now needs money for a tape recorder and has placed a bill before the Senate.

Concerning new people to help with the organization, Hull referred to the fact that meetings, open to anyone interested in Amateur Radio are held in the East Engineering Lab (Rm. 106) every Wednesday night at 7:00. The President, Leonard Humina, and other licensed operators are equipped to teach, so that anyone unaware of what radio is all about would be trained. Anyone interested could contact Radio Club II at 52784.

The table for sending these messages will be set up in the Campus Center, just outside the University Store from this week on.

Spiro In Greece

ATHENS AP—Vice President Spiro T. Agnew concluded three lengthy conferences with Greek Premier George Papadopoulos Monday with American criticism of the Athens regime in the background, and North Atlantic Treaty Organization matters their only announced topic.

But it seemed certain that the controversy in Congress and elsewhere over the Greek dictatorship must have come up during talks that lasted some 6-1/2 hours.

Agnew's spokesman, Victor Gold, refused to discuss that. He said only that it was fair to assume the vice president's attitude in private was what he has expressed in public: That it is not up to the United States to impose a timetable for the return of representative rule in Greece.

"The vice president and the premier today discussed matters relating to Greece's role in NATO," Gold said.

Present at the final formal session were First and Second Deputy Premiers Stylinos Patakos and Nicholas Makarezos, as well as U.S. Ambassador Henry Tasca.

Papadopoulos, Makarezos and Patakos were former colonels who led the army coup in Agnew and Papadopoulos 1967 that suspended democracy in Greece.

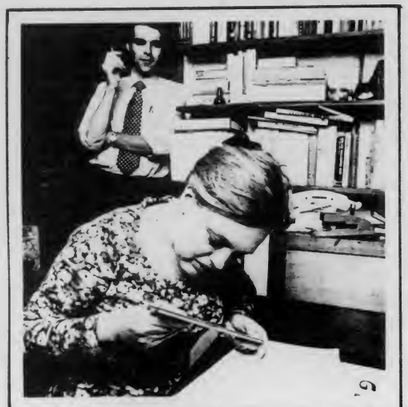
Gold said the meeting was a continuation of one Sunday, when Agnew slipped away unannounced to the Papadopoulos' suburban home. NATO also was the only announced subject of their initial meeting Saturday.

Harvard Offers New Program

The John Fitzgerald Kennedy School of Government of Harvard University announces a new graduate program in Public Policy. Ph.D., Master's or joint Master's-professional school degrees offered. Applicants should be interested in policy analysis and be at ease in both the world of words and the world of numbers. Write Dean Harry Weiner, Littauer Center, Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts 02138 for catalog and application.

MARLON BRANDO
in
"On The Waterfront"
Film Study
WEDS., OCT. 20
7:15 — 9:30
AMHERST
FOLKLORE CENTER
(behind the Lord Jeff)

EVERY WEDNESDAY,
STAMPEDE NIGHT
"A touch of the far west has come to New England..."



Our Cowgirls, in western garb, armed with water pistols filled with Vodka, will serve your custom sliced western steer beef by the ounce.--45¢ per ounce for prime sirloin, 70¢ per ounce for fillet mignon, and 35¢ per ounce for a rib of broiled beef.
Keep our Friday night buffet in mind.

The Lord Jeffery
30 Boltwood Ave. AMHERST, MASS. 253-2576
RAOUL DIETRICH, INNKEEPER

TONITE
BLUEGRASS
WITH DON STOVER
and THE WHITE OAK MOUNTAIN BOYS
only 25¢ 8:30-1:00
BLUE WALL CAFETERIA

In The Nation And The World

UN Debate On China Opens

A NEW BREED OF EXECUTIVE WIFE-Security analyst Barbara Rieck Morrow does some figuring with slide rule as husband, Eric, looks on. She is typical of a new breed of executive wife, who is not simply an adjunct to her husband's career. Morrow, in fact, gave up a job on the West Coast so that his wife could find a good job in New York. She now makes more than he does. (AP Wirephoto)

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The United States made an impassioned plea Monday to keep Nationalist China in the United Nations despite warnings that this might delay solution to the 22-year-old controversy over Chinese representation.

U.S. Ambassador George Bush addressed the 131-nation General Assembly after Albania's foreign minister, Nesti Nase, had opened the crucial debate with a declaration that Peking would have nothing to do with the world organization as long as the Nationalists remained.

Nase charged that the U.S.-backed "dual representation" plan was aimed at creating a deadlock and preventing Red China from taking a seat, even though a substantial majority has gone on record as favoring Peking participation.

Bush said "no one knows for sure how Peking will react" to the adoption of the proposal for seating the mainland government in the assembly and the Security Council, while preserving the membership of the Nationalist delegation.

The Albanian foreign minister and other pro-Peking diplomats, however, quoted from the Aug. 20 statement by the Peking government barring participation under any sort of two Chinas or one-China, one-Taiwan plan. The pro-Peking group also had the Peking policy statement circulated in full as a U.N. document.

The debate is expected to continue through the remainder of this week, with a vote coming early next week.. The intense interest in the discussion was reflected in the presence of all but four or five delegations in the blue and green assembly chamber as the debate got under way. The public gallery was nearly full.

Among those present, besides ambassadors and their aides, were Chow Shu-kai, the Chinese Nationalist foreign minister; Aiichi Kiichi,, former foreign minister of Japan; and Princess Ashraf Pahlavi, twin sister of the shah of Iran, who heads her country's delegation.

Chow, speaking at the afternoon session, said it would be "a tragic and irreparable mistake" if the assembly should replace his delegation with one from Peking.

The Albanian foreign minister appealed for support of the so-called Albanian resolution calling for the expulsion of the Taiwan delegation and the seating of Peking.

"There is only one Chinese state in the world today," Nase said. "There is no place for the Chiang Kai-shek clique."

Nase described the U.S. policy as "hostile to the People's Republic of China."

"Any attempt to block the restoration of the lawful rights of the People's Republic of China," he asserted, "is doomed to defeat."

Bush contended that the only fair solution was to keep Taiwan in the United Nations. In this way, he said, "all the people of China would thus be represented in the United Nations by the governments which over 20 years have actually governed them."

Noting that the world organization hall never in its history expelled a member, he said: "Let us remember with realism that, once expelled, the likelihood of the Republic of China being admitted to the U.N. as a separate member, under whatever name or label, would be approximately zero, given the fact that under the charter a proposal for its admission could be vetoed by the People's Republic of China."

Bush said that in his view "a vote for the Albanian resolution is a vote against universality" of U.N. membership.

The U.S. ambassador urged support for a second U.S.-backed resolution which would declare the expulsion of Nationalist China an "important question" and thus require a two-thirds majority.

"The one and only question involved here," he said, "is explusion. Are you for it or against it. It is just that simple."

He repeated that U.S. contacts with Peking would not be at the "expense of any other party"- presumably the Soviet Union.

"Let us welcome a large and dynamic reality to our midst," he declared, "but let's do it not on its own terms but on the U.N.'s terms."

Series Aftermath

Pittsburgh Went Beserk

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP)-A massive World Series victory celebration exploded Sunday night into a rampage of destruction, looting and sex-in-the streets.

Newsmen reported two apparent assaults-some of them in full view of hundreds who cheered the assailants-and displays of public lovemaking, nudity and drinking.

At the height of the melee a police desk sergeant said he had calls reporting about a dozen rapes. But officials denied today that they had such reports.

"This isn't a riot. It's a god-damn orgy," a motorcycle policeman said during the disturbance which left the downtown area in shambles.

More than 100 persons were injured and 300 others were arrested in the melee, which erupted after an estimated 100,000 poured into the downtown area.

There was scattered shooting, but only one reported wounding. Hundreds of explosions caused by fireworks often were mistaken for gunshots.

At least 30 stores were looted and 30 or 40 more were damaged. More than a dozen cars were overturned and in some cases burned.

Newsmen counted another 30 autos with roofs that had been crushed by the destruction-bent crowds.

The melee ended 10 hours after it began when flying wedges of riot-equipped police, some with dogs, slammed head-on into the crowds and drove them from the downtown section.

The rampage was triggered by the Pittsburgh Pirates' 2-1 victory Sunday over the Baltimore Orioles in baseball's seventh and deciding game of the World Series in Baltimore. It began as a jubilant but nonviolent celebration, but quickly turned into a full-blown riot.

The wild celebration created the worst traffic jam in the city's history. At its height, cars were backed up for eight miles on one major freeway into the city and for six miles on another. Police finally sealed the downtown area in an attempt to relieve the tieups, but it was four hours before it had any effect.

At least two police cruisers were commandeered by rioters during the outburst, and police reported that a fire truck was stripped. Several other police cruisers were abandoned after crowds shattered their windows.

One man whose car was demolished was John E. Demko Jr. of Cleveland, Ohio. Demko, accompanied by his wife and two children-one 9 and the other 13-said he became trapped in a crowd that rocked his car and shattered its windows.

"They climbed on the car like a bunch of animals," Demko said. "They tried to turn the car over-they wouldn't even let the kids out. The kids were sitting in the back when they broke the windows."

Finally, Demko said, he and his family fled from the car. All escaped unhurt.

Elsewhere, a crowd tried to overturn two city buses, but settled for breaking their windows. Seven taxis were destroyed.

At least three telephone booths and a corner newsstand were ripped from their foundations and thrown in the streets. And streetlight poles were toppled like goal post uprights after a championship football game.

So wild was the rampage that the Pirates canceled a planned midtown victory parade. But some of the players, apparently unaware of the cancelation, somehow got downtown anyway and were mobbed.

One of those taken to a hospital was Mrs. Joseph Walton, daughter of Pirates Manager Danny Murtaugh. Mrs. Walton, about four months pregnant, was overcome as officials were trying to organize the victory parade. Hospital officials described her condition as good, but said she was being kept overnight for observation.

In addition to setting cars afire, the crowd ignited bonfires in the middle of confettistrewn Liberty Avenue, one of the city's main downtown thoroughfares. Most were extinguished quickly by water gushing from broken firehydrants.

Of the injured, most were treatec in hospital emergency rooms, then released.

Police reported the situatior under control at 2 a.m.

Rap Brown Placed In Tight Security

NEW YORK (AP)—At least 20 detectives and uniformed policemen stood guard today over H. Rap Brown at Roosevelt Hospital where the black militant was being treated for wounds suffered in a gun battle with police.

The 28-year-old Brown, once quoted as saying violence is as "American as cherry pie," was reported in fair condition.

He and three other men were captured by police after they allegedly tried to rob the Red Carpet Bar on West 85th Street early Saturday. Police said they came upon the scene as the robbery was in progress, and a fierce shootout erupted.

Brown, who first came to national attention when he succeeded Stokely Carmichael as chairman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee in May 1967, was held in lieu of $150,000 bond each on charges of attempted homicide, robbery and possession of dangerous weapons.

A witness had phoned police at 3 a.m. and reported that robbers were stripping 25 patrons and employes of money and jewelry.

Six cruisers raced to the scene, police said, and the robbers came into the foggy darkness guns ablaze. Patrolman Gary Hunt, 21, was wounded in the ricocheting fusillade of bullets.

Two of the gunmen were seized, but Brown and another made it into a nearby apartment building, police said. As his companion was seized, they said, Brown took the elevator to the "penthouse" although he was already hit. He dragged himself up a flight of steps to the roof, leaped 18 feet to a terrace below and was captured, police reported.

TONIGHT
COMPARATIVE LITERATURE FILM SERIES Presents
HIROSHIMA, MON AMOUR
A RADIOACTIVE ROMEO AND JULIET
Shows at 8 and 10 in Thompson 104
Season tickets, $3.00 for six films, available and single tickets, $.75 on sale at entrance.

11TH FLOOR C.C. LOUNGE
Sue O'Neill
Sings & Plays
TUESDAYS
8:30 - 12

Draft Counselor's Corner

Courage Needed To Fight Draft

By GILBERT J. SALK

As a draft counselor, I'm constantly confronted by young men who are trying to find an easy way out of the draft. Ways exist, but there is a real moral hassle caused by using that approach to help people "solve" their draft problems.

I am totally opposed to the military and every other system which uses violence. As a direct corallary to this, I am also irrevocably opposed to the draft. This is in part because the draft provides cannon fodder (my brothers) to the military. More importantly, it does a constant, more subtle violence to nearly everyone of draft age. It forces people to lie to and about themselves. It destroys their freedom of choice by setting up an option which is undesirable to most and intolerable to many. Thus, it channels people into courses they might not even consider otherwise.

So what is the problem? Simply that I don't want to continue helping the draft teach people not to confront themselves. This means that I rebel against helping people find an easy out. Instead, I prefer to help them find their way through the system in a way which preserves their personal integrity.

This means work. It's more work for me, and it's more work for the individual involved. But the real point that makes the extra work worth-while is political. As people come directly to grips with the systematic machinations which are working them over, they understand first the ones they are confronting and, through them, many of the others which are controlling their lives. They also learn that the system can be beaten in a direct confrontation.

Thus, they learn more about themselves as individuals and more about the system as an oppressor. Each individual who finds the courage and the energy to confront the draft as an oppressive system weakens that system's ability to oppress others. Each individual who works through the hassles of applying for a conscientious objector's status weakens the ability of his board to ignore CO's, legitimizes the CO position for others, and bears personal, solitary witness to our government that war is wrong, and that he will not, under any circumstances, be forced or persuaded to lend support to it. The CO, more than any others, is responding to the plea for individual refusal to participate in war's policy-killings voiced in Buffy Saint-Marie's UNIVERSAL SOLDIER.

People who find an easy out stop allowing themselves to feel the oppressiveness of the draft, and as a result leave their brothers standing alone. If, on the other hand, they confront the system and demand that it deal with them as human beings with individual lives to lead, the battle they face makes them aware that others are in the same boat and need the same help that they received.

Basically, I want to see myself out of a job as soon as possible. I am not concerned particularly with getting you out of the draft for the sake of getting you out of the draft. I am concerned with helping you free yourself from the draft so that you can begin to confront other systems with your humanity. I am concerned with helping you free yourself from the draft so that you can help others free themselves, so you can help end the draft, so you can help end the war, and so you can help abolish the army.

That's my basic concern as a human being, and my bias as a draft counselor. Your responses to this, and your problems as registrants in the Selective Service System also concern me. I'd like to know what you think. Free draft counseling is available in Room 923, Campus Center. PEACE.

UMass Professor Wins Teaching Award

The Western Electric Fund Award for excellence in teaching engineering students was presented this fall to an associate professor of electrical engineering and speech at UMass, Dr. Ian B. Thomas.

Dr. Ian B. Thomas

The $1000 fund award is given each semester to honor the recipient and serve as an incentive to make further significant contributions in teaching.

Dr. Thomas was cited for "outstanding contributions to both undergraduate and graduate education in electrical engineering" and "significant professional contributions in his particular area of research and in his many committee activities both on and off campus."

He is one of two teachers in the New England district to receive the award. Presentation was at the University of Bridgeport Friday (10/15).

Dr. Thomas' undergraduate students have rated him the best teacher for three consecutive years. He received one of the three UMass Amherst Distinguished Teacher Awards this year. At the graduate level he has supervised five M.S. research theses and has five more in progress plus the direction of two Ph. D. dissertations.

In the past four years at the University he has developed several new courses in the area of acoustics and speech processing and revitalized several of the existing courses.

Dr. Thomas has designed electronic instruments that display speech patterns visually and is nationally-known for his work in sound, speech and problems of the deaf.

S.W.A.P. Seeks Students

A new site has been chosen for this year's Student Workshop on Activities Problems (S.W.A.P.) Conference. Stratton Mountain in Stratton, Vermont described as an "alpine resort" in the brochure, will host the UMass faculty, administrator, student conference on November 19-21.

What exactly is S.W.A.P.?? A conference, an exchange of ideas, a way to spark interest in change for UMass , a chance for students, faculty, and staff to get to know one another and to learn more about each other as individuals and as members of groups, an impetus to bring proposals and problems back to campus and before the community for action, and A GOOD TIME! S.W.A.P. is all of these and more! If you are a person interested in the crisis and problems, major and minor, facing UMass and other Universities, you owe it to yourself to join this year's S.W.A.P. Conference.

This year's conference will focus on three major themes: 1. The Role, Duties and Selection of a Chancellor, 2. The Interface Between the University and Society, and 3. The Structures and Functions of the University. The first is somewhat self-explanatory, the second and third deserve a brief explanation. The interface between the University and society may sound like your roommate's topic for her Sociology 390 report, but in actuality this theme will provide for discussion of the University's impact on the town of Amherst, and on the Commonwealth. Conversely, what impact does the Commonwealth's expectations for its principal university have on our role. Structures and functions of a University will provide for discussion of details regarding policy and operations. The theme is a good one for communication, much can be learned, many misconceptions could get cleared up, and it's a good chance for students to "get it off their chests" and to gain support for changing what's wrong or what could be so much better.

HOW CAN YOU PARTICIPATE? Pick up an application form in the R.S.O. Office in the basement of the Campus Center. This must be turned in by Friday, October 29th. There will be two pre- S.W.A.P. meetings which all delegates must attend. The first will be Sunday, November 14th in the evening, and the second will be on Thursday night, November 18th on the 10th floor of the Campus Center. This is the night before the busses leave for Stratton, Vermont. It is expected that after the weekend, the conference will be brought back to the campus through delegate groups who will continue to work to see their proposals implemented and to involve others in this throughout the semester. The conference will have TASK orientation.

The fees for S.W.A.P. are $7.50 for undergraduate students and $40.00 for faculty, staff, graduate and Stockbridge students. Instructors, assistant professors, and members of Dr. Bromery's and Dr. Gluckstern's staffs should contact Miss Rosemarie Fischer (5-2554) and about a 50% subsidy. Other staff members should contact the heads of their departments. For further information call 5-2351 (R.S.O.) and someone should be there who can answer your questions.

The cost for students is low. The experience is valuable, worthwhile and fun. You don't have to be a leader, all you have to do is care.

Kipnis Mime Group This Thursday

Claude Kipnis and his Mime Theatre will present a four-part theatrical production Thursday, Oct. 21, at the UMass-Amherst.

The 8 p.m. performance in Bowker Auditorium, Stockbridge Hall, will be sponsored by the UMass Fine Arts Council.

The production feature "Opus Blue...is Pink" will be highlighted by a presentation of Hungarian composer Bela Bartok's "The Miraculous Mandarin" which was staged by Mr. Kipnis and performed when he was director-in-residence for the Boston Opera Company.

The other three pieces of this production will be "The Crowd," presenting man and his struggle for individuality; "Point of View", demonstrating the futility of war; and "Au Clair de la Lune," concerning man's conquest of outer space and his landing on the moon to find the surprise of a lifetime.

Combining the worlds of theater, dance and classical music, Mr. Kipnis is soloist, performer and director of his own company. He has performed in New York at the Theatre de Lys where he presented "Men and Dreams" with the New York Philharmonic during the spring Promenades, and at the Chicago Ravinia Festival.

He is artist-in-residence at the University of Illinois and a fellow at that University's Center for Advanced Study.

Tickets for the performance are available at the Fine Arts Council Ticket Office, 125 Herter Hall. Telephone 545-0202.

Keep It Under Your Hat!!
A coat from WEARHOUSE. We have all kinds from denim (lined, unlined, fur collar) to leathers (flight, bomber), to parkas, and hunting jackets. Look around and compare! Best selections and best prices always.
The Closest Thing To You...
WEARHOUSE (wear-else?)
Open Fri. til 9

AUTO INSURANCE
ALL CARS — ALL DRIVERS
BUDGET PAYMENTS
CYCLES — SCOOTERS
Tekoa Insurance Agency
160 Pleasant St. Northampton 586-2742
10 Broad St. Westfield 562-3604

DRAFT BEER IS BACK!
for T.O.L. club members & guests
11:30-2:00
Blue Wall Cafeteria 4:00-6:30

Keep It Under Your Hat.
A Coat from Wearhouse.
We have all kinds from denim (lined, unliked, fur collar), leathers (flight bomber) to parkas and hunting jackets.
Look around & compare! Best selection & best prices always the closest thing to you.
WEARHOUSE wear-else
Open Fri. til 9

WHY IS A P.I.R.G. COMING?

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF — Richard C. Hanson
MANAGING EDITOR — David D. Williams
BUSINESS MANAGER — James Gold
EXECUTIVE EDITOR — Barry J. Rubenstein
NEWS EDITOR — Anne C. Stadnicki
SPORTS EDITOR — Earle T. Barroll

ASS'T MANAGING EDITOR — Nathan Gorenstein
PHOTO EDITOR — Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR — Robert Nesti

TODAY'S STAFF

NEWS STAFF — Bob Nesti
SPORTS — Earle Barroll
EDITORIAL — Barry Rubenstein
DARKROOM — Jim Leurakas
AD LAYOUT — Jerry Lazar

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administration read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the views of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, and letters represent the personal views of the writers.

The Real Truth

Art Buchwald

Nixon's Revenge

WASHINGTON--The one thing you have to admire about the United States Senate is the spirit of brotherhood and loyalty the members have for each other. When Sen. Robert Byrd's name came up as a possible Supreme Court nominee, even a liberal such as Sen. George McGovern found it an outstanding suggestion.

The fact that Byrd never even passed his bar exams or ever practiced law has not bothered too many senators. The Senate is a gentlemen's club and a gentleman never questions the qualifications of another gentleman.

One only has to walk through the halls of the Capitol to see how proud the senators are that one of their own has been suggested to sit on the highest court in the land.

"A stroke of genius," is what one senator called the Byrd trial balloon. "Since Byrd has no experience he will be able to judge cases on their merits instead of some stupid legal consideration. Besides, if he goes to the court I may get his office."

Another senator said, "Nobody deserves the seat more than Bob. There should always be one place on the court for former members of the Ku Klux Klan."

A third senator denied that the issue of mediocrity would be raised if Byrd was truly Nixon's appointee. "It's one thing to call an appointee outside the Senate 'mediocre,' but we would never do that to one of our own. If we started that sort of thing, the public might get the idea that there are a lot of mediocre men in this body, and we wouldn't want people to think that so near the elections."

"Do you really think Byrd would be the best man for court?" I asked.

"It depends on what you mean by best. If you mean best in the sense that he would be the wisest, then the answer is obviously no--but if you mean best in the sense that no one would dare raise his qualifications as an issue, then the answer is yes. President Nixon is sick and tired of the American Bar Assn. and Congress and the law schools questioning his appointments. Naming Byrd could be his way of getting even with them."

"But isn't that a little tough on the country?"

"No, it's a good joke. Everyone says that President Nixon doesn't have a sense of humor. Well, the idea that he's even considering Byrd proves that he does."

"I thought the President was looking for a strict constructionist. How can Byrd be one if he has never practiced law?"

"The President's definition of a strict constructionist is anyone that he wants to appoint to the court."

"Some people may say Bob Byrd doesn't know much about the Constitution. Other people may say Bob Byrd doesn't have a sharp enough mind. Still others may say he has little sympathy for the underdog. But it should be remembered that there is nothing in the Constitution that says you have to know anything to be on the Supreme Court.

"The President tried to prove this once to the American people with Carswell, and now he may try to prove it again by giving the American people the Byrd."

Copyright 1971, Los Angeles Times

PointBlank

Early Convention Challenge

By KENNETH BODE

It is logical to assume that delegates to the Democratic National Convention represent just Democrats. But the Democratic National Committee takes a different view.

Last February the Committee adopted a formula for the 1972 Convention, which apportions 54% of the delegates on the basis of the Electoral College. Since the College is based partially on population, the formula, in effect, gives representation to Republicans, independents, members of minor parties, as well as people not even eligible to vote.

And to the extent that the Electoral College is based on state units, the formula disregards people altogether and represents geographical entities. As the Supreme Court has pointed out in its landmark apportionment decisions, this is tantamount to representing trees, rivers, and cornfields.

The Center for Political Reform in Washington has gone to court in an attempt to force the Democratic Party to change its current apportionment plans and adopt a formula based solely on Democrats. The lawsuit, now on appeal to the Supreme Court, charges that the present formula is unconstitutional and invidiously discriminates against large numbers of Democratic voters.

Under the Democratic National Committee's formula, the votes of some Democrats are substantially weaker than the votes of others. For example, a National Convention delegate from New York represents 14, 534 Democrats back home, while a delegate from Alaska represents only 3,652. Each of these delegates has one Convention vote; yet the New Yorker represents almost 11,000 more Democrats than the Alaskan. The voting power of New York Democrats is thus severely diluted.

Specifically, an Alaskan Democrat who participates in his party's presidential nominating process has 3.98 times the voting power of a New York Democrat. (Other strongly Democratic states suffer the same discrimination. For instance, the Alaskan has 3.58 times as much voting power as a California Democrat and 4.24 times the power of a Democrat from Massachusetts.)

The Center for Political Reform contends in its lawsuit that the Democratic National Convention is an integral part of the presidential election process and must, therefore, conform to constitutional requirements. Drawing upon a long line of apportionment decisions, the Center argues that the Supreme Court has clearly established the principle of one man, one vote. The Court has consistently read the Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to mean that the power of one man's vote cannot be diluted by the greater power of another's.

In Gray v. Sanders, Justice Douglas explained the Court's position: "Once the class of voters is chosen and their qualifications specified, we see no constitutional way by which equality of voting power may be evaded." The "Class of voters" in question for the National Convention is Democrats. And as noted, the present Convention apportionment formula makes some Democratic voters much more powerful than others.

The Democratic Party counters that the Center is asking for the impossible. How would the Party adequately define a Democratic voter? Is he someone who registers as a Democrat, or votes for a Democratic Governor, or for a Democratic President?

Despite such protests, the Party has always been able to define a Democrat satisfactorily for the purposes of apportionment. Forty-six percent of the 1972 Convention delegates are now apportioned on the basis of Democratic strength--figured by averaging Democratic presidential vote in the last three elections. By simply figuring the entire apportionment formula on this basis, the Party could eliminate the discriminatory effects of the current mixed formula.

From a political point of view, the current formula underrepresents large urban (and traditionally liberal) states like New York and California to the benefit of small (traditionally Republican) states like Wyoming and Vermont.

In addition, the South--which gave only 25 of its 128 electoral votes to Hubert Humphrey in 1968--is greatly overrepresented at present. The eleven southern states have a total of 595 Convention votes. Under the one-Democrat, one-vote formula, they would have 158 less votes--for a total of 434.

If the Supreme Court should decide that Democratic strength must be used as the only constitutional basis for apportionment, the 1972 Democratic National Convention could be a considerably more liberal gathering than now seems likely. As a recent article in the Wall Street Journal speculated: "Sometime in the next few months, the Supreme Court will help pick the next President of the United States."

Copyright 1971 by Kenneth Bode

Kenneth Bode is Director of The Center For Political Reform in Washington D.C. He first became active in politics in 1968, working first for Eugene McCarthy and, then, serving as floor coordinator for George McGovern at the Chicago convention. In 1970 he directed voter registration drives for various antiwar candidates.

The Name Is The Game

By MIKE ROYKO

Imagine for a moment what the public's feelings might be for a President named Kennedy-any first name will do-who managed to accomplish the following by the end of his third year in office:

Took a full-blown war left over from two previous administrations and whittled it down, with a possible end in sight.

Came to grips with an inflation left over from two previous administrations by imposing the most far-reaching government controls since the days of FDR.

Tried to improve relations with China by sending an emissary there and planning to make a visit himself.

I imagine that if a President named Kennedy had done these things, his followers would be singing songs from "Camelot," while the workmen began carving his handsome likeness into Mt. Rushmore.

On the other hand, try to imagine how people would feel about a ski-nosed President named Nixon if he did any or all of the following:

Backed an invasion of Cuba that was foolish in the first place, and fell flat on its face in the second place.

Sent troops in growing number to take part in a civil war in Southeast Asia.

Failed miserably to get a legislative program through Congress.

Appointed his own brother as U.S. attorney general.

If someone named Nixon built that kind of record, his name might not even show up in the polls.

As it is, he is not doing very well, despite a surprisingly good three years. (They must have been fairly good, because the right wing is upset with him.)

His support has fallen since the beginning of this year, and he was barely getting by even then.

At the same time, Sen. Edward Kennedy has taken the lead in the polls as the Democrats' choice to run for the Presidency next year.

Mr. Nixon's problem has never changed. He is still the man who can't be trusted, regardless of what he does. Only this week, a new book came out, written by Phillip Roth, the author of "Portnoy's Complaint."

The book, a satirical study of somebody known as "Trick E. Dixon," is called "Our Gang," and the dust jacket says:

"The hero - or villain - of 'Our Gang' is Trick E. Dixon, self-pronounced legal whiz, peace-loving Quaker,' and somehow President of the United States. 'Tricky,' as imagined by Roth, is a hypocritical opportunist..."

Which the real Trick E. Dixon may well be. It is hard to forget that he made it into Congress through scurrilous campaign tactics, built his name in the Senate by Red-baiting, and has gone in for such things as a "Southern Strategy."

Presumably, he has never changed, because a man never changes, unless his name is Kennedy, in which case he can change faster than Clark Kent.

Thus, John F. Kennedy, a lazy, girl-watching senator, whose only known position on most issues was to be absent from roll call, suddenly was trotted out as a tower of statesmanship as he used his old man's dough to blitz one state primary after another.

His brother, Robert, whose Red-baiting credentials included a stint working for Sen. Joe McCarthy, didn't have the stomach to take on President Johnson until Eugene McCarthy landed the first blow. Then Robert Kennedy became an instant symbol of courage and hope.

And now we have Sen. Edward, and he appears to be another in the line of late-blooming Kennedys.

In 1968, when he hadn't really done anything except sit there and look handsome, he could have had the Democratic nomination for the asking. That might be the situation again in July of next year.

Unlike Mr. Nixon, Edward Kennedy is considered capable of great change and growth.

Mr. Nixon has been viewed with more contempt for having been an eager, but incompetent, football player at Whittier College than Edward Kennedy has for cheating in some of his college exams.

And you still hear some people asking if you would buy a car from somebody like Mr. Nixon.

I wish that the same people, just once, would ask if you would ride in a car with Edward Kennedy.

(Reprinted from Chicago Daily News 10/11/71)

FRONT RUNNER

Editorial Points

An interesting observation made about the crowds going to see Fellini's Satyricon was that the queue for the early show went from the ticket office straight out the door of the Union while the line for the 9:30 show curled from the ticket office into the TV room. Perhaps the reason is that the news was on at 6:00.

*****

If you don't believe there are two sides to everything consider the fact that while you're enjoying all the beautiful colors in the area, there's some poor people who have to spend the next few weeks raking up the damn leaves.

*****

Last time Metawampe was seen around these parts he was beginning to think about starting hibernation a bit early this year. Maybe Yogi Berra could take his place?

*****

Doesn't Veteran's Day fall a bit early this year? Or maybe we're just a bit later than usual.

*****

One wonders if Nixon ever considered Louise Day Hicks for the Supreme Court?

*****

Acting Chancellor Bromery's decision to forego his chances for nomination to State Secretary of Education makes you wonder if he thinks this campus needs more help than the state education system. If that's true, we're in big trouble.

*****

It's getting so bad that it's not even safe to walk the streets of Ottawa in broad daylight. Ask the next Russian you see.

Letters To The Editor

Paradise It Isn't

To the Editor:

As residents of the Sylvan area we read with considerable interest Mr. Polomba's remarks in "Life is Sweet in Sylvan" in last Friday's MDC. We should like to add that it was with an equal amount of disbelief given the idyllic picture he painted. We would like to balance some of his comments with a few facts:

(1) that there are 900 freshmen in a more or less concentrated area should give some indication of the nocturnal activities one has to suffer through. Why the University hasn't realized the folly of forming all freshman dorms escapes us.

(2) for $350 a semester one finds little compensation for the higher rent--smaller rooms, practically no recreation and kitchen facilities and a basic design little conducive to interaction on the corridor level. Mr. Polomba failed to mention that corridor meetings are the only alternative given the fact that there simply isn't adequate space for large meetings.

(3) the joke that Sylvan is practically "off-campus" isn't far from the truth; that Herter-Bartlett-Boyden walk should be a real winner when the snow starts to fly!

OK, we've knocked the place--now what? We think Sylvan can be shaped into a viable community if something could be done about the composition of students. Mixing graduate students and freshmen is asking for a lot from both sides, especially when they're in separate buildings. We're more than willing to tutor within our majors and we're sure there are many others of the same disposition. It would at least be the first step toward a realistic dialogue. Paradise it isn't, paradise it won't be, but something can and should be undertaken. The haphazard filling of Sylvan, the building design and articles such as Mr. Fine's can only retard attempts at improvement.

Richard Stevens
Mark Gerstein
Bruce Ingber
Jonathan Runaldue

Spell Bound

To the Editor:

Ladies and gentlemen, I've been misquoted and maltreated. First off, no one is going to have any faith in my carefully nurtured image as an "expert speller" if in your columns it appears that I disregard the command of that son of Amherst, Noah Webster, that "judgment," on this side of the Atlantic south of the 49th parallel, shall be spelled with only one "e".

Second, you dropped a line in your lead. Everyone can touch his tongue. But not everyone can spell well. What I said was that the ability to spell well is only slightly above the ability to touch to tip of one's nose with one's tongue. And that's hard to do tongue in cheek.

Donald C. Freeman
Associate Professor of Linguistics

P.S. It's worse than I thought. That well known linguistics professor you're talking about in "Editorial Points" actually mentions that the road from Athol, not Amherst, to Belchertown is the Alimentary Canal. He learned this from a much better known botany professor. He now knows it because he lives at one end of the Alimentary Canal. Guess which one.

A Novel Idea

To the Editor:

Several weeks ago, I read a letter in the Collegian from a rather distraught student who had attempted to sell his used books through a fraternity. Having finally found the time to write this letter, I would like to share a possible solution to a problem this student and many others have--the selling of used books.

Would it be possible that at the beginning of next semester the Collegian could feature a section entitled "Used Books for Sale"? You could organize all the ads from students by putting them under general categories such as math, English, etc. I think the ads could be as short as; book title, price, and phone number.

I am not sure how all this sounds but I think this is an excellent yet efficient method for students to sell their used books. It would also take away the thousands of papers, plastered all over the campus, that are advertising used books.

Thank you for your cooperation.

Normund Strautin

Stay Home

To the Editor:

With disappointment we look upon President Nixon's proposed trip to the Soviet Union. The President apparently feels that only international discussions on such topics as SALT, Berlin, and biological weapons are vital to the world security. The plight of the three million Soviet Jews has slipped his mind. There are no Yeshivas in operation, no rabbinical seminaries, few or no Hebrew books printed, no Yiddish newspapers. The chief rabbis of Kiev and Moscow have retired because of ill health; no replacements are permitted. Soviet Jews are not permitted to emigrate. Judaism is the only religion in the entire Soviet Union that is discriminated against.

World pressure has influenced Soviet policies, though. Jail sentences have been cut in half, for example. The Russian leaders are sensitive to world opinion and will make concessions in the face of embarrassment.

Therefore, we ask that President Nixon cancel his travel plans in support of Soviet Jewry. We ask that the issue of Soviet Jewry be brought before the United Nations and productive action be carried out. We ask that Secretary General U Thant change his "noninvolvement" policies. We ask that Pope Paul use his influence to help Soviet Jews as did Pope John XXXIII for Jews during the Holocaust. SOVIET JEWRY WILL NOT BE FORGOTTEN.

Jeffrey R. Cossin

Love, Grace, Peace

They've covered me with leaves and left me there to die in mosses-soft, and moist, and green-and music...
And all I want to know is who you are.
Not who you're going to be, nor who you've been.
Curled and sleeping on a distant star...
The throbbing mind of, now, immortal man.

My new master; My poison pen; The author of my future; The mourner of my past; The slayer of my mind.

The cremator of my soul.
T. David Barrett

As in previous years the MDC will continue to print letters to the editor. The only requirements are that they be typed at sixty spaces, double-spaced and absolutely no longer than two pages in length. All letters must be signed and the author's address and telephone numbers must be included. No letter will be published without this information. Also, no letters will be printed without the name of the author. Please note this change in policy.

All letters are subject to editing either for content or space according to the judgment of the editors. Also, due to space limitations, we do not guarantee that all letters will be printed.

THE EDITORS

From Boston

Farewell, Dr. Tippo

We Bostonians should be concerned by the dramatic departure of UMass/Amherst Chancellor Oswald Tippo, for it signals the first round in the debate of campus autonomy, versus presidential control, a debate having implications not only for our campus, but for its constituent colleges. How far down the line administrative control will extend is a question no one is yet ready to answer conclusively.

Central to the issue, though not necessary, is the question of money, for money means control. How much money should the President's Office reserve for itself? More importantly, who decides how much: Who decides from whence it comes? And who can appeal these decisions?

An interesting case in point is the interest earned on trust funds held by the Trustees, including the Student Activities Trust Fund. Rather than hold the balances of these funds in checking accounts, the University Treasurer places them in various interest-bearing ones. Citing "prudent management" as justification, the Trustees later allocate these funds as they see fit, not necessarily to the campus from which the funds came. We think we should have something to say about the interest earned on our money, "prudent management" or not.

Oswald Tippo's resignation was a sign that he feels the President's Office is extending its hand too far into the affairs of the individual campuses without giving them the opportunity for debate. The Daily Collegian agrees. "On top, at least theoretically, of our University," it editorialized last week, "is a man who many have found to be tooslick,too autocratic and most of all, too willing to make fast changes and exercise the power of executive discretion when consensus might be more appropriate."

The University has lost a man highly regarded by his faculty and highly respected by his students. Whatever the circumstances are, that departure in itself is cause for concern, cause enough to force us to examine the President's role on this campus.

The debate, ultimately, revolves around the question of who controls the University? Is it Robert Wood? Is it Oswald Tippo or Francis Broderick? Is it Joseph Healey and the Board of Trustees? Or is it us? Is it the students, and faculty, who make up that university, without which there would be no University at all? It is a question that needs answering.

(Reprinted from the Mass Media 10-12-71)

"I'm Still In Phase Zero"

The Bleeding Rose

Steal This University

By BOB ZELMAN

Abbie Hoffman recently wrote an infamous book entitled "Steal This Book" which is about how to live for free in American cities off the fat of the land.

This is about how to live for free - well, almost - at UMass.

But before I reveal any secrets, I want to ask, why do people only care for each other in emergencies? During the big Strike there were free food kitchens and even free dope was handed out in the Student Union. Now things are back to "normal". Yet there are still hungry poor people right here on campus. We're having trouble stopping the war - but you can feed the people who are hungry in the Hatch.

FREE HELP FOR YOUR HEAD - This is especially important in this crazy place. Of course there is the Counseling Center in Whitmore and the Mental Health Center in 303 Machmer which offer you trained professionals to help you with problems about school, jobs, your love/sex life, - broadly speaking any problems with your head. They offer individual and group therapy. (Do not feel that you have to be crazy or insane to go to these places. Everyone has problems which they might want to talk about with someone who can be objective.)

There are limitations to the bureaucracy - unless it is an emergency, you must make an appointment to see these people.

However there is a place where you can phone or go to 24 hours a day. The Room to Move Drop-In Center is located directly across from the post office on the bottom (near the Hatch.)

I believe that people have a wrong conception of what the Center is about. There are students there who are trained in counseling people through bad drug trips. But they are there to rap with you about anything that hassles you. You better believe that if they can help people on bummers that they can certainly help you if you're straight and hassled. Someone is there 24 hours a day. At night you can get into the building through a door to the left of the front of the Student Union and down a ramp. Or you can call at all times at 545-0400 or ask the operator.

They are good people there. I love and trust them.

FREE MONEY - You've paid your student fees, so now your money is sitting in a Student Senate budget waiting to be used by you. I want to emphasize the fact that it is YOUR money.

If you start an R.S.O. group (Recognized Student Organization) you get money for a budget. Clubs can be based on a specific kind of activity such as flying or dancing or any kind of politics, etc. But they can also be amorphous and thus all-encompassing.

For years I have participated in a now defunct group called "Smile." This was the group you could go to when no other group would financially sponsor you. We did things like buy candy and give it away for free, and free rock concerts, films, dances, parties, lectures, etc.

It's very easy to become an R.S.O. group and then spend your money. I mean, why let other people spend your money on trivia. Spend it on your own trivia.

See the people in the R.S.O. office in the basement floor of the Campus Center.

FREE LEGAL ADVICE - Dick Howland is a lawyer who was hired by the Student Senates to advise you on your legal problems.

He is presently helping students with everything from problems with landlords, divorce, to introducting bills before the State legislature for students who want to cnange the laws. He is available for consultation Mon.-Fri. from 10 to 4 in the Campus Center R.S.O. office. In the event of an emergency, e.g. a bust, you can reach him at any time of the night through an answering service at 256-8448. He will also be glad to advise you of your legal rights in case of a bust.

FREE DRAFT COUNSELING - This can be found in Room 923 of the Campus Center from 9 to 12 Mon.-Fri., from 1 to 3 on Mon., Wed., and Fri. and from 1 to 4 on Tues. and Thurs. (By the way, Gil Salk who works there said he will give people free photographs of themselves if you will model for him.)

FREE FILMS - These are not exactly free, but... After the people on the program council pick their favorite flicks they are more or less at a loss as to what else to bring to the S.U. Ballroom and the C.C. Auditorium. Tell them what you want to see. They can get almost any movie you might want. Leave your suggestions in the R.S.O. office. You might also suggest how you would like them to spend your money for concerts, lectures, dances, etc.

FREE MUSIC - Perhaps most people know by now that there is a music listening room on the main floor of the Campus Center. It has earphones so that you can listen to music of your choice which is on tape. They have a broad selection of all kinds of music and they are trying to keep up with brand new records, e.g. they have the new albums by the Who and John Lennon on tape. You can also make suggestions for tapes which they could buy.

FREE CONCERTS - Speak to your class and area governments about which groups you want them to hire. For instance last year Al Kooper and many others did a series of free concerts in May. Don't leave the decisions as to how your money should be spent up to others.

FREE MEDIA (NEWSPAPERS) - If you want to reach 20,000 people with what you have to say, write for the Collegian. They are always looking for good writing whether it be complaining about something (as usual) or poetry, news reporting, an ongoing column about anything, etc.

FREE RADIO - WMUA is the college F.M. radio station. They will be glad to hear your suggestions about what to put on the air. I know friends who have gotten to M.C. shows on the air when they brought the lack of a certain type of thing to the people's attention. I myself did a rebuttal to ex-Chancellor Tippo's Convocation speech last year. All I had to do was ask... Free speech only makes sense if you take advantage of the media to reach people in large numbers.

FREE ME - I need your help. If you know of other free deals which I haven't mentioned please write to me c/o the Collegian and I will print the information.

I would also like to see people go to the Student Senate for money for an Abortion fund and a bail fund. It makes no sense to have to hassle with nickel and dime collections in the midst of an emergency. When will we learn that there are always new emergencies and that we must provide for ourselves?

FREE YOU - Free yourself so that you are able to give. Don't be afraid to do it. You can give people free copies of a poem that you like if you xerox it (it's cheap), or free candy, free songs, music and dance, celebrations, etc.

Free yourself to care, to smile, to love, to be.

The list of what you can get for yourselves and do for others is endless. I especially like a piece of graffitti which was written all over the walls of France during the big strike a few years ago: ALL POWER TO THE IMAGINATION!

MDC Classifieds Pay

RUSSELL JOHNSON

The Unofficial American

- PEACE SECRETARY - American Friends Service Committee
- SOUTH VIETNAM - completed his 11th visit in 1970
- NORTH VIETNAM - traveled extensively and spoke with leaders for 2 weeks in 1967.
- CUBA - a four week visit in 1969 traveling through the six provinces assessing the effects of the Revolution.
- CZECHOSLOVAKIA - 1967, participated in off-the-record discussions with the North Vietnamese and members of the National Liberation Front.
- CHINA - October 1971, completed a four week visit made possible by exiled Prince Sihanouk of Cambodia. The trip included visits in both urban and rural areas including Peking, Yenan, Nanking, Tisnan, and Shanghai.

On Wednesday, Oct. 20 at 8 p.m.

Russell Johnson will deliver a Lecture

in the Student Union Ballroom.

His topic will be,

"U.S./China Policy, A Fresh Start, 1971."

A Coffee Hour will follow the Lecture in Crampton Main Lounge

A dvp Distinguished Visitors Program presentation.

Students Visit Sturbridge

William Goss and Keith Kaneta, Amherst Jaycee Co-Chairmen, report that the annual Amherst Jaycee trip to Old Sturbridge Village attracted over 60 foreign students from the UMass, Saturday, October 9. Countries represented in the group were India, Taiwan, Malawi, The Netherlands, Japan, Germany, The Philippines, France, Israel and Spain. Pictured above are four students from Malawi relaxing after a picnic lunch provided by the Amherst Jaycee Wives.

UT To Present Ionesco Play

On Thursday, 8:30 PM, October 21st, in Bartlett Auditorium UMass Theatre will open its 10th consecutive season with Eugene Ionesco's, modern classic, EXIT THE KING.

It often happens that all of Eugene Ionesco's plays are dismissed with the tiresome cliche, "theatre of the absurd." This is somewhat understandable. After all Ionesco, author of such works as THE BALD SOPRANO, THE CHAIRS, and THE RHINOCEROS, does have some pretty absurd things happening to some pretty absurd people in his plays. But "theatre of the absurd" by definition, deals with the human condition surrounded by a world with constantly changing values. All is mutable, and man performs absurd acts against this world exit the king on the surface does appear to be such a play. King Berenger 1st, in his crumbling throne-room, is informed by one of his two Queens that he has but one hour and a half to live. As the king weakens his kingdom begins to deteriorate about him. Strange things happen: "Frogs rain from the sky." "Thunder is transfixed in the heavens." "Great cracks appear in the earth." "Streams dry up."

Here we can see all the trappings for a rousing absurdist play. But EXIT THE KING IS not about a world falling apart. These are only decorations. It is about a man who is dying. And in dying he learns about life. Ionesco wrote. "The longer I live, the more tied I feel to life. I sink ever deeper into it." This is the essence of EXIT THE KING. Though the King has but a short time to live, he begins to "sink into life." EXIT THE KING is then a paean to life. This is hardly the stuff that absurdist drama is made of. For what is more immutable than life, and for that matter death.

The Book of Common Prayer has the following sentence in it. "In the midst of life we are in death." EXIT THE KING says in the midst of death we are in life.

EXIT THE KING will be this years entry into the American College Theatre Festival by UMass Theatre. Last year UMass Theatre won the Festival with its production of THE CLOUDS.

Director is Doris Abramson; with costumes by Elizabeth Weiss Hopper, lights by Nicholas Scott, and sets by Jeff Fiala.

Reserved seats are available at the Bartlett Box office 10:00 AM to 4:00 PM plus evenings of performance. Phone reservations maybe made by calling 545-2579. Prices are $1.50 for UMass students with ID and $2.00 for all others. EXIT THE KING can be seen Thursday through Saturday evenings 8:30 PM, October 21-23 and 28-30 at Bartlett Auditorium.

Hollander Impressive In UMass Appearance

By ED JANUSZ

Piano virtuoso Lorin Hollander kicked off another Fine Arts Council Celebrity Series last Tuesday night in Bowker.

The 27-year-old Hollander has attracted considerable notoriety by his concerts in Fillmore East and in East Harlem, but proved himself a master even without such publicity in his UMass appearance.

He opened Tuesday night with Schubert's "Fantasy" Sonata in G. This is angry, disturbing Schubert, especially in the long first movement. Hollander kept the composer's fluid, folk-like sound without sacrificing this sonata's rare dramatic impact.

Maurice Ravel's "Gaspard de la Nuit" was equally intriguing. The three movements were patterned after three poems by Aloysius Bertrand, a contemporary of Ravel's. "Gaspard de la Nuit" is another name for Satan, and the eerie music is as disconcerting as only the presence of spirits can be, especially in the frantic final movement, where Hollander was dazzling on what is considered to be one of the most difficult pieces of piano music there is.

"Impulse," a composition of Lorin Hollander's own hand, followed. On a very simple surface compared to the Ravel, it sharply juxtaposed fairy-tale type music with sharp atonality, contrasted in a very startling manner and much more poignantly than the effect of many strictly atonal compositions.

The one encore was Satie's "Gymnopedie no. 3," a malancholy but lighter, less unnerving piece than any of the others. Lorin Hollander proved on this as well as on the tense and sometimes diabolical shifts of mood in the three pieces in the regular program that he has to be counted one of the most involving performers on the concert tour these days.

There's something special in

Bell's Pizza

it tastes better.

Open
11 to 2 a.m. Fri. & Sat.
1 a.m. Sun. to Thurs.

Free Delivery

Tel: 256-8011 - 253-9051

Poor Richard's

Poor Richard's, the weekly magazine of the MDC, is looking for contributors. If you are interested in submitting longish pieces of fiction or working on feature articles and reviews of any sort (films, theater, records) see either David Williams or Bob Nesti in the MDC office.

Learn to Drive
AMHERST AUTO SCHOOL
34 Main Street
256-6066

Student Activities Day

Thursday, October 21, 1971

9 a.m. - 4 p.m.

Campus Center Concourse Level

Spectrum

The general interest magazine of University of Massachusetts

We are now accepting Contributions for the fall 1971 issue.

All contributions of fiction, non-fiction, poetry, art, and photography can be left at the spectum office or mailed to:

Spectrum
RSO No. 102
Campus Ctr.
U Mass.

all contributions should be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

70 MGB exc. running cond. Must sell. 249-8493. tf10-25

65 Mustang, conv. 35p., good mechanical cond., straight six, 30 miles per gal., $250 or best offer. Call 549-1013 bet. 6:30 p.m.-10:00 p.m. tf10-20

64 Chevy Belair, 6 cyl. auto trans., radio, 4 door, good gas miles, some new parts. $200 or best offer. Call Russ at 665-3412 anytime. tf 10-19

65 VW bug, excl. con., no rot, undercoated, new engine, on warranty, radio and heater (works) new tires $800.00. 65000 mi. Call Steve 546-5305, exc. wkend. tf 10-22

'65 Ford Fairlane, most major parts, recently redone plus extras. Price negotiable. Call 584-2777 evenings & weekends. Keep trying. tf 10-22

'69 VW Bug, $1200 or best offer. Tel. 665-4187 after 5:30, exc. tues. tf 10-26

67 Buick Skylark, creampuff, 1 owner, financial crises. Worth much more, but first offer over $950 takes. 253-2880. tf 10-22

MOTORCYCLES FOR SALE

Kawasaki 500. I need $700 so this 1971 Mach III is going. Call George at 253-6348. tf 10-21

Honda CL350, need money somewhat desperately - 6K exc. engine. Asking $400 flat. Call Ed B-9 Baker 546-8005. tf 10-20

FOR SALE

Seasoned Firewood. Sale and delivery. Call 665-3031. tf10-20

1967 MG Midget '70 engine. Call 60762. tf 10-22

'61 VW Bus, 63 engine. $40. Great for parts. 665-4781. 10-19

1968 VW Sedan, always kept in very good condition. R & H plus snow tires. $900. Call Kent after 5:00 at 253-7538. tf 10-22

1967 BMW 1800, best offer over $1200. Call 253-2139. tf 10-25

Sleeping bag by Baxer, best in world, 6 lb. goose down, good to 20 degrees below zero, cost $120 new, still new, your cost $70? Call 256-8432. tf 10-22

Snow tires (2) 165-14 Semperit radials mounted on MGB disc wheels, $50 pr. Call 549-6087. tf 10-22

63 Chev. van. Runs but could use work. Price negotiable & cheap; have to sell. Call 253-7084. 10-18

Fender jazzmaster pre cbs old style square pickups, orig. neck, in perf. cond. $175 frm. Call 66541 after 8. 420 Gorman Central. tf 10-22

We undersell all. any and all top name appliances, stereos, radios, refrigerators, anything. Call Larry 6-5090, 350 Cance. tf 10-22

9' x 12' Tent; Sleeps 4-5 comfortably. Used one season. Asking $35 or make offer. Call Xavier 5-0858. tf 10-19

65 Chevy with '69 rebuilt engine; new tires and shocks; runs well. Priced to sell fast; $450 or make offer. Call Xavier 5-0858. tf 10-19

Guild F'35 and F'47 with hard cases. Call 6-8332. tf10-21

200 MM Nikkor lens brand new, must sell immed., only $125 includes guarantee, and leather case. Call 549-6411. tf10-19

Custom built amp, 100 wts. plus hatchingtwin spks. 12"; Both beautifully constructed!! Can be seen at Guitar wkshp. in Northampton $250. tf10-19

Foreign Auto Parts Pirelli, Michello, Bosch, Lucas, Metric Hardware, Alfa Romeo spares, wheels, snow tires. Call Herb 256-8781 tf 10-19

Ski boots, Kofiach expo-masters, mens size 10, cost $100, perfect condition, sell fast $50. Call Frank 6-7064. tf 10-21

HELP WANTED

Ski instructors, weekends for co-ed "teen" ski camp. Shaker Village ski group, New Lebanon, New York. Reply to: Jim Hoe, 446 Newtown Turnpike, Weston, Ct. 06880. tf 10-19

WANTED

Individual who can compose music for lyrics. Have attractive offer for the right party. Ralph Hayward, P.O.B.75, Erving, Mass. 01344. tf 10-22

RIDE WANTED

To Baltimore or Washington D.C. Oct. 21 or 22, will share expenses. Call Susan 6-1474. tf10-19

MODELS WANTED

Female models needed for film production class, 10 dollars per hour, mostly outside shots. Call 253-9283 Mon. and Tues 5-7 p.m. only. tf 10-19

ROOMMATES WANTED

Roomate needed share 2 Bdrm. apt. Cliffside, 1 yr. lease, must be 21 m. or f. Call Jake Day 545-0438. tf 10-20

FOR RENT

One bedroom Apt. Available Nov. 1. $150 a month includes utilities. Call after 5 p.m. 665-2641. tf 10-20

Town House Apt. to share with another girl in Amherst. Own room possible. Call 581-2273. tf10-21

Furnished one bedroom apt. available for female walking distance from campus. $95 per month, including utilities. Call 253-5958 after 6:00 p.m. tf 10-19

PERSONAL

How many dates has the mug book got for you? tf 10-20

Aren't you glad the mug book is back? tf 10-20

SERVICES

Typing-theses, dissertations, etc. Fast, accurate; have Greek alphabet, math & chem. symbols. Call 253-3601. tf 10-29

Silkscreening course offered in Leverett. Building of screen included, starts Wed. Oct. 20. Call 549-3631. tf 10-19

TYPING

Will type papers quickly, accurately, & inexpensively!! Call Steffi 6-8024. Please keep calling. tf10-19

MUSICIANS

Versified good drummer w exp. Looking for estab. rock type band. Have place to practice! Call Scott 253-7210 nights. tf10-19

ENTERTAINMENT

MARLON BRANDO — ON THE WATERFRONT, WINNER OF 8 ACADEMY AWARDS, WEDS. OCT. 20 AMHERST FOLKLORE CENTER FILM STUDY. 7:15, 9:30 (in back of Lord Jeff) tf 10-20

LOST

Reward! Blue & green afghan in David's bag. Lost in C.C. Please return to "Lost & Found". tf 10-20

GIVE AWAY

Three beautiful puppies, lab mother, unknown father, weaned ready to go. Call 256-8881. tf 10-20

LECTURE NOTES

Notes still available in Bot 101, Gov 100, IID 270, Phil 105, Psych 270, 280, 325, Soc 256 and many others. Rm 318 S.U. Lobby. tf 10-20

Notices

CAMPUS CRUSADE FOR CHRIST
Christians help man book table; pass out Student Actions, today CC 9-4, College Life, Wednesday 8 p.m. Colonial Lounge all invited.

CVSP
Meeting Tuesday night for all Psych majors concerned with the psych dept. and their curriculum. 7:30 p.m. in the Graduate student lounge--Bartlett basement.

EQUESTRIAN CLUB
There will be a meeting at Grinnell Arena, Thursday at 6:30 p.m. Draft horse and pony harnessing will be shown.

FENCING CLUB
Steven Rostas, retired professional fencer and coach will be at the practice this Thursday night, 7-9 p.m. WOPE fencing room.

FLYING CLUB
Rules and Navigations seminar. Hasbrouck 201, 7-10 p.m.

GAMMA SIGMA SIGMA
There will be no meeting this week.

GEOGRAPHICAL ASSOCIATION
Meeting tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Morrill 258. Short business agenda and discussion of group project on Pioneer Valley. All invited.

HEYMAKERS SQUARE DANCE CLUB
This is the last week that new members can join and have fun square dancing. The regular square dance will be held tonight at 7:30 in the CCA.

HUMAN RELATIONS CENTER
12-2 p.m., Oct. 19 CC Aud. Human systems Doctoral Program and internships, special courses, field work discussed. Members from N.Y. School of Psychiatry present.

MAROON KEYS--SCROLLS
Pumpkin Sale: Oct. 20-29 from 10-4 p.m. in front of the Student Union.

NEWMAN CLUB
Come hear about the Marathon House drug program, tonight at 7:30 in the Newman Center Social Lounge.

Meeting tonight at 7 p.m. for those interested in helping out with a party at Belchertown State School.

PSYCHOLOGY STUDY 8
Headaches, stomach aches, pains, nausea! If you suffer from any of the above or similar disorders and would like to participate in a study of psychosomatic problems please call 5-0943 Wed. & Thurs. 3-5 p.m.

SCHOOL OF NURSING
All graduate and undergraduate students of the school of nursing are invited to attend assembly Oct. 27 at 7 p.m. in Shattuck Aud., Public Health Bldg. Subject: Student-Faculty Collaboration Through Committee Structures.

SKI CLUB
Fund raising committee meeting for Thursday Raffle is tonight at 7 p.m. in the Hatch, by the ice cream. All members welcome.

UNDERGRADUATE ECONOMIC LIASONS COMMITTEE
There will be a meeting of the undergraduate liason committee at 7 p.m., 10th floor Thompson, Tuesday.

WMPIRG
Publicity meeting tonight, Rm. 808 CC--7:30 p.m. General meeting Wednesday at 7 p.m. in CC. Everyone interested please attend or call 546-6551 Rm. 175 CC.

LOST
Orange male cat, 3 years old, answers to "Tramp", he looks just like Horris, missing since 10/8/71, a male Siamese, with a collar, a year old, answers to "Snowy" missing since 10/9/71. Both from Puffton. Call 549-6786.

Black and white beagle and Terrier. Answers to Drifter. Call collect, 562-5728 after 6 p.m.

A Faher-Castell slide rule in a green plastic case and the book "Electrical Circuits" by Manning. Call 545-2418 and ask for Tom in 214.

A wallet in S.W. Saturday night containing money and phoney ID's. Call John Hern, 331 MacKimmie 546-9802.

Columbus HS ring with initials DJC. Call Dan 6-8789.

Set of important keys, in town, on a round hand-painted key chain. Please call 546-8276, ask for Vicki.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

Astrology does not advocate a fatalistic attitude. Instead, the purpose of this scientific art is to provide the "stop" and "go" signals of life. It is up to each individual to either heed or ignore those signals or cycles.

* * *

ARIES (March 21-April 19): New moon coincides with better public relations, a chance to regain lost ground. See beyond the immediate or obvious. Long range view will bring benefits. Ignore one who has little faith.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Lunar position coincides with chance for you to complete basic chores. Be meticulous; take nothing for granted. One who performs special service deserves recognition. Dependents, pets demand attention.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): New approach is likely to succeed. New moon position coincides with relationships with young persons. Affairs of heart also tend to dominate. Give full play to creative endeavors. Make changes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Display ability to protect home, property. Build self-esteem. Think highly of yourself; others will follow example. What appears major obstacle is probably a minor hurdle. Act accordingly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Short journey is on agenda. Dealings with neighbors, relatives multiply. Don't confuse issues. Set sights on goal. Pisces person could play prominent role. See situation in light of reality. No self deception.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New deal has favorable effect on finances, income. Your position is strengthened. Views are vindicated. Capricorn person can lend helping hand, accept. Collect what you need. Refuse to be stalled.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Favorable news comes from afar. Be available. Check correspondence, calls, express yourself. Get point of view across. Do so in forceful, confident manner. Display charisma. Organize priorities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): What was hidden now may be revealed. Truth sees light of day. Know this and be prepared. Cooperate in charitable project. You gain most by working quietly, perhaps in backstage role.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): New romantic interest could surface. Your intuitive intellect serves as reliable guide. Don't risk security on whim. Be willing to learn. Avoid any tendency to be stubborn. Stress flexibility.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): New romantic interest could surface. Your intuitive intellect serves as reliable guide. Don't risk security on whim. Be willing to learn. Avoid any tendency to be stubborn. Stress flexibility.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23-Jan. 19): Climb upward; make room for yourself at top. No false modesty; assert self-express desires. One in position of authority offers new deal. It is to your advantage. Know this; proceed accordingly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Abstract ideas can be effectively utilized. Don't be discouraged by individual who is overly materialistic. Your spiritual values are enhanced. Stick to them; exhibit pride of accomplishment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on desires affecting finances, business transactions. Means you come face to face with genuine opportunity. Be strong enough to take advantage of it. Scorpio person plays important role.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are due for greater freedom of thought, action. What has been an emotional burden will be removed. You have cause to celebrate. If single, marriage opportunity is on horizon. Married or single, social status is elevated. By December, there will be numerous beneficial changes.

Copyright 1971, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Sweet Charity's
presents
the biggest & best in the East
RALPH
from Seranton, Pa.
15 Musicians playing the best Rock & Blues
Mon., Tues., Wed.,
Oct. 18 - 19 - 20
Come as you are to the area's only music spot for real people.
Positive I.D. Required
Admission - 1.50
1270 Memorial Ave.
W. Spfld.
Across from Big E

Belchertown Nurse Wins Award

Mrs. Marjorie J. Sullivan, a nurse at Belchertown State School, has received the Region Ten Annual Distinguished Service Award of the American Association for Mental Deficiency.

Making the presentation at the State School Thursday, Oct. 14 was Dr. William A. Fraenkel, Assistant Commisssioner for Mental Retardation in the Commonwealth and former interim superintendent at Belchertown.

Dr. Fraenkel had originally received the Region Ten award on behalf of Belchertown at the AAMD's Northeastern Regional 18th Annual Conference last week at Grossinger's Hotel in Liberty, N.Y. The Region Ten area includes New York state, New England and Canada.

In receiving the award from the association, Dr. Fraenkel said, "We at Belchertown State School are gratified that Mrs. Sullivan is so honored. A beginning has been made to transform Belchertown into a more modern treatment and training center for the mentally retarded. All the staff at Belchertown is proud of Marge."

Also present at the ceremony at Belchertown was Joseph G. Sneider of Newton, a member of the Governor's Mental Health and Retardation Advisory Council.

Mrs. Sullivan, who serves as R.N. Supervisor at Belchertown, resides with her family at 35 Hadley St., South Hadley and is a graduate of Amherst High School (1942) and Springfield School of Nursing (1947).

Mrs. Sullivan's plaque is inscribed "by her colleagues in recognition of her outstanding service and contributions in the field of mental deficiency."

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 In music, high
4 Candle
9 Pigpen
12 Man's nickname
13 Incline
14 Edible seed
15 Ceremonial
17 National hymn
19 Organ of hearing
20 Tally
21 Alpine wild goat
23 Chapeau
24 Irritates
27 Lair
28 Remuneration
29 Squandered
30 Spanish article
31 Succor
32 Possessive pronoun
33 Babylonian deity
34 Passageway
36 A state (abbr.)
37 Label
38 Native of Latvia
39 Sesame
40 Diminish
41 Having branches
43 Cut of meat
44 Visigoth king
46 Commemorative march
49 Drink slowly
50 Hindu guitar
52 Base
53 Footlike part
54 Look fixedly
55 Before

DOWN
1 Man's nickname
2 Game at cards
3 Soup dish
4 Former Russian ruler
5 Everyone
6 River in Italy
7 Excess of solar over lunar year
8 City in Nevada
9 Globe
10 Golf mound
11 Sweet potato
16 Man's nickname
18 Journeys
20 Declare
21 Symbol of perfection
22 Misrepresent
23 Possessed
25 Mix, as dough
26 Platform
28 Baker's product
29 Music: as written
31 Place for worship
32 Sick
35 Strips of leather
36 Be ill
37 Mexican dish
39 Implied
40 Distant
42 Unmarried woman
43 Rabbit
44 Snake
45 Falsehood
46 Equality
47 Click beetle
48 Female sheep
51 Symbol for tantalum

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

ROTE PASS BAG
ORAL ASIA EGO
ERLINT COL
IRFIRS RIGA
UNIT CATO ERS NAMES LIRA AT ITSELF RELATE TIMELT LEMUR
EOS WARD MAIN
SNAP TIRE ST
TAA TALC OE
AVE SNOW ONUS
HAS PANS BEST

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc. 19

Kiah Gives Just A Little More Than He Was Asked

By MARTY KELLEY
MDC Staff

To be stingy is to be greedy and there probably isn't a more redeemable trait that any given coach would like to see personified in front of the goalmouth where life insurance is noted to be a prized commodity.

When the Redmen booters host Coast Guard at 2 p.m. today, one of the more greedier goalies in recent years will don the horizontal stripes for the Redmen. His name is John Kiah and if you had to play a word game with his name this instant, the logical synonym would be "shutout".

In starting earlier season exhibitions, Kiah has garnered an amazing five straight shutouts as the Redmen booters have fabricated a 4-0-1 record. The closest Kiah came to default came on the astroturf at Nickerson Field a couple of Friday night's ago. Although hard pressed for a shutout, Kiah helped the Redman hold off the tenacious Terriers in a 4-0 standstill.

"I'd have to say that confidence has been my biggest attribute so far", reiterated Kiah as he explained his success story. Also a vote of confidence from his co-captain and the stellar play of the Redman defense didn't hurt.

"Lindo (Alves) asked me this summer if I could be consistent in team. But he knew the team needed a goalie," commented Kiah. Apparently the Junior from Springfield has been just a shade better than consistent.

You can always use the old adage that a good defense makes a goalie. But when affronted Kiah has handled himself well. So has the Redman defense.

"We use a 3-3-3-1 or a 3-4 with "Whale" (Dave Ouellette) as the sweeper. If anyone gets by we've always got that last man to help out," explained Kiah. Defensively the personnel that make up Kiah's successful shield are Dick McCarron, Paul Slack, Todd Buck, and Ouellette the sweeper.

Don't let Mr. Kiah's early season prowess fool you, the road to success has not been easy for the rookie goalie out of Springfield Trade High School. His freshman and sophomore years, the versatile athlete played in the shadow of Bill Leary who, with three shutouts last year, was to return this autumn. But his absence has hardly been missed.

"I almost hung up the spikes in favor of hockey," sighed Kiah. "I've always made arrangements with Coach Broaca that if I wasn't playing, I could start hockey." This Sunday when the puckmen take to the ice for the first time, Mr. Kiah will not be there.

In terms of vocation, John Kiah has always been a goalie. Ever since eighth grade he's been active as a soccer and hockey goalie. Coach Canniff will count heavily on Kiah's services in the net trio of regular P.J. Flaherty and Peter Erickson.

Thus with years of experience behind him, the unscathed goalie has not found the transitions from hockey to soccer, or vice-versa, too taxing. "In soccer you can get burned a lot because of the size of the area. My biggest problem in soccer is trying to cut down the angle by moving out quickly."

In adding other tidbits to his trade the Phys. Ed. major added that often times you can get stuck alone in the goalmouth. But when that fast break gets ignited you've got to be ready. Early at Maine Kiah had such a one on one break that he was able to turn away.

Of the over abundance of problems that has plagued the Redman soccer team this fall, finding a goalie was one, but adjusting to a new coach was another. "Coach Berryman is just a great guy to go and talk to anytime you have problems. He's always receptive and he listens to your problems," highlighted the Number One goalie.

One thing soccer critics must realize is that this unbelievable streak of netminding will come to an end. It may terminate in a variety of ways. Perhaps its vulnerability will succumb to a one on one breakaway, a deflected shot, a perfectly placed "blue darter", or how about a penalty shot.

There's no question that John Kiah is a realist. "I know very well the streak will come to an end sometime. But I'll prolong it as long as I can. I'm always trying to shutout the opponent. But if someone scores, I'm not going to change my style. I'm just going to play to win."

Hopefully, today's crowd at the Boyden Athletic Fields will stop and think and realize that there's a man in the nets with a funny stiped shirt that's giving just a little bit more than asked.

Will Danny Murtaugh Manage The Pirates Next Year?

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Will Danny Murtaugh return as manager of the world champion Pittsburgh Pirates next year?

I'll decide in the next month or so if I'll return," the 54-year-old manager had said during the World Series.

Murtaugh, looking pale and tired after the final game, says a decision would be made only because of his health.

Murtaugh resigned because of a heart ailment four years after the Pirates won the World Championship in 1960. But he has returned twice since-in 1967, only for one year because of a second heart attack, and last year when he led the Pirates to a division championship.

"Even if I don't return," Murtaugh said, "I won't say it will be permanent, like I did the last two times."

Murtaugh says he won't make the decision alone.

"We'll have a family meeting and discuss it," he said. "My daughter and two sons and their spouses will sit down with my wife and me and vote on it.

"Of course my vote will be the deciding vote."

If Murtaugh should step down, his likely replacement would be Bill Virdon.

Virdon, the Pirate batting coach and former centerfielder for Pittsburgh, conducted the Pirate clubhouse meetings during the regular season.

He also was interim manager when Murtaugh was hospitalized, again for a heart problem.

General Manager Joe L. Brown has said openly that Murtaugh is his manager as long as he wants the job, but he is not as free with his endorsements of the Pirate players.

There are very few untouchables on the Pirate club and Brown can be expected to be ready to trade for players he believes will strengthen his club.

"I'm always ready to deal if I think we can improve ourselves," said Brown. "And when you're a winner, your players are even in greater demand."

NFL Standings

American Conference

Eastern Division

	W	L	T	Pct.	Pts.	OP
Balt.	4	1	0	.800	132	24
Miami	3	1	1	.750	93	54
N. Eng.	2	3	0	.400	53	84
N.Y. Jets	2	3	0	.400	52	86
Buff.	0	5	0	.000	79	157

Central Division

	W	L	T	Pct.	Pts.	OP
Clev.	4	1	0	.800	119	88
Pitt.	2	2	1	.500	74	71
Cin.	1	4	0	.200	101	105
Hous.	0	4	1	.000	49	117

Western Division

	W	L	T	Pct.	Pts.	OP
Oak.	4	1	0	.800	135	66
K.C.	3	1	0	.750	81	50
Denver	1	3	1	.250	62	103
S. Diego	1	4	0	.200	84	120

National Conference

Eastern Division

	W	L	T	Pct.	Pts.	OP
Wash.	5	0	0	1.00	116	49
Dallas	3	2	0	.600	141	101
N.Y. Gnts.	2	3	0	.400	86	141
S. Louis	2	3	0	.400	80	84
Phil.	0	5	0	.000	34	157

Central Division

	W	L	T	Pct.	Pts.	OP
Detroit	4	1	0	.800	150	96
Minn.	4	1	0	.800	89	46
Chicago	3	2	0	.600	75	76
G. Bay	2	3	0	.400	135	127

Western Division

	W	L	T	Pct.	Pts.	OP
L.A.	3	1	1	.750	101	76
SanFran.	3	2	0	.600	112	63
New Orl.	2	2	1	.500	95	120
Atlanta	1	3	1	.250	103	128

Powder Puffers Head Into Playoff Action

In the last week of final league play the Dwight Ducks defeated the Roaring Twenties. It was a close game with the Ducks pulling through by a score of 32-24. It was an important game for both teams, with the winners capturing second place and thus qualifying for the playoffs.

It was mostly an offensive game with each team taking turns getting touchdowns. Two safeties by the Ducks, however, made the big difference.

The Ducks entered Monday night's game with the impressive Mushrooms hoping to crush them. See Thursday's Collegian for the results of that contest.

In the most exciting game of the season, Chi Omega vs. Alpha Chi Omega, the Chi O's pulled through in the final second of the game to eke out an 18-13 win over the favored Alpha Chi team.

The first score of the game was a 40-yard run by Alexis Klein in the first quarter to give Alpha Chi a 6 point lead. But not for long. Soon after, in the second quarter, Kacey Cearnal, snatching a lateral pass from quarterback Broadway Jungle Fumia, charged through the Alpha Chi defense to tie the game.

Early in the second half, Sue "Cagey" Coyle made a spectacular interception at the Alpha Chi 40 yard line, to race 60 yards to the goal, putting Chi o ahead 12-6.

Chi O bogged down in the fourth quarter, had difficulty putting together a strong rush, while Alpha Chi's powerful offense was successful in obtaining another touchdown and extra point, despite Chi O's determined defense.

With only seconds remaining, tension mounted, since Alpha Chi seemed determined to retain their one point lead. It appeared that they would be successful. However, in the last fleeting second, on a fourth down play, Chi Omega's offense withstood the pressure. Terry Glass pitched off to Jungle Fumia, who, assisted by linemen Jan Comeau and Mary Lou Sullivan, scampered 40 yards, millimeters from the sideline to score the final TD for the Chi Oties, thus dictating the outcome of an unpredictable game.

The Wheeler Trojans once again displayed their dominance on the field as they defeated Mary Lyons 15-13 to up their untarnished record to 3-0. Wheeler, always quick to start, jumped to a 15-0 lead. Mary Lyons battled back with 2 TD's but Wheeler's tenacious defense held on the all important P.A.T. attempt which would have tied it up. Mary Lyons had a later drive thwarted on Wheeler's 1 yard line.

Quarterback Joan Hluchan was once again the heroine for Wheeler. Her passing hand injured, she took to the ground; her 2 TD runs left the opposition dazed. Moe Crowley boomed one PAT through the crossbar and Gail Sanborn caught a Hluchan pass for the other.

A National Geographic photographer who claimed that he was preparing an article on the Connecticut River Valley was present at the game (we think that he's either scouting for the New England Patriots or doing an article on trainer Saul Appel, the missing link.)

Coach Carl Bessone was mobbed by reporters after the game. In between puffs on his victory cigar, he said, "The girls weren't up to par but everything'll be put together for the playoffs." Owner Ralph Simonds was unavailable for words after the game. He rushed to the dorm to set up the cider and donuts for (Hluchan's (21st!!) birthday party. Last Thursday night, the Field Goals played their last regular season game against the Johnson Jocks. The final score was 12-6, but the score did not reflect the actual play.

Field had come to the game with the idea that Johnson was a tough team, but a relatively easy 12-0 first half changed that concept. The field Goals noted for their outstanding defense, were led by the unconquerable Debbie Kirchmer who smashed her way through Johnson's inadequate front line. Backing Debbie up were Liz "Killer" Reagan, and Mim "SS" Kaizer (Superstar) who froze up the middle. Johnson's passing game was completely crushed by Donna Bell, Helen Monte, and Donna "Mike Curtis" Blasko. (When asked to comment on unnecessary roughness, Donna just said, "So what!" It's rumored that she is M. Curtis's daughter.)

The offense scored on a brilliant mixture of running and passing plays, with Donna Blasko scoring the two touch downs. Her scores were made possible because of the blocking of backs Helen Monte and Ronda "Paul Warfield" Factor; and ends Paula Cunningham and Lynne Zoino.

Field slackened for a moment in the third quarter, and Johnson scored. This seemed to awaken The Goals and they went back to their fine disciplined form. This was evident as they were able to control the ball for all but 2 minutes of the 4th quarter.

As the Powder Puffers entered play-offs this week only three of the ten qualifying teams survived league play with unblemished records. These were the Wheeler Trojans in the Residence Hall Division, Gamma Sigma Sigma in the Sorority Division and the Mushrooms in the Independent Division. Thus two of these teams must be favored to appear in the Campus Championship game. However, the other seven teams, consisting of Tri Sigma, Sigma Kappa, Alpha Chi Omega, Kumquats, Field Goals, Whalers and Ducks, have all improved tremendously since the season began and therefore the Campus Champion will not be the shoo-in. The Championship Game is slated for next Wednesday or Thursday and should be an exciting contest.

Kron Wins Weekly Race

Brad Kron of Springfield won the weekly Recreational Cross Country race on Sunday with a time of 15:05 over the 3-mile course. Pete Stasz finished second. In the women's division Sandy Woschiewiez ran her best time. Charlotte Lettis ran with her giving encouragement and advice. They finished together in 23:25.

The top ten and their times:

Brad Kron	15:05
Pete Stasz	15:33
Duane Johnson	17:22
Jim Lapreli	17:33
Dave Bradford	17:49
Den Bysiewicz	18:31
Tim Smith	18:37
Jim Heeren	20:02
John Murnane	20:14
Sandy Woschiewiez	23:25

Varsity Cross-Country coach Ken O'Brien and members of the Cross Country team plan to hold a race with prizes and refreshments next Monday night. More will be announced on that later.

Will Broaca Show?

Booters Host Coast Guard

BY LAURENCE ABRAMS

If you were at the UMass-URI soccer game last Saturday and thought that game was physical, come this afternoon across from Boyden Gymnasium and watch the UMass-Cost Guard clash make Saturday's fray look like a shoving match between two year olds.

At 2 p.m. today, the most physically fit team on the Redmen schedule, boots off with UMass in what looks to be a game of many whistles. Last year Coast Guard dropped a 5-1 decision to UMass, and probably the biggest question of the day is whether or not the Redmen, and John Kiah, can make it six shutouts in six games.

Joey Czerniawski, the all-conference fullback from UMass who is out for the season with a broken leg, commented that Coast Guard should be "no trouble." Czerniawski recalled last year's four goal winning margin, and added that he thought last year's game should have been a shutout as Coast Guard managed very few shots at the Redmen net.

Whether or not the game goes as scheduled will have to do with what kind of shape Ray Cieplik's boys will be in. The head soccer coach at Coast Guard, Cieplik worked under former UMass coach Peter Broaca three years ago, as he coached the freshmen squad at UMass. Oddly enough both Redmen soccer coaches now have head coaching jobs at Coast Guard.

Seven games are behind today's visitors, but results of only four are available. Of those four, two were against teams ranked in the top 10 in New England, as decision to 9th ranked New Haven and 3rd ranked Wesleyan went against the academy by the same 3-1 score.

Coast Guard's sole win came against Clark University by a familiar 3-1 score. Central Connecticut handed them their third lose by way of 2-1, thus in four games with results in, the Coast Guard is two games below .500.

Gary Heil, Coast Guard's leading scorer, will be assisted on the front lines by Bill Weissman, as these two forwards will be just about the only thing preventing UMass from their sixth shutout in a row.

UMass, in vying for their fifth win of the year, will be taking a break from YanCon action, after having taken over sole possession of first place on Saturday. Having been tied with both New Hampshire and Rhode Island at 2-0-0, UMass is now 3-0-0 against the 2-1 marks of both UNH and URI. Along with the Redmen felling the Rams, the Catamounts of Vermont eked by UNH, making for a three way tie for second place at 2-1-0.

As the undefeated Redmen host their third opponent of the season, the scoring chores will be left to Lindo Alves, Ton Coburn and Jeff Hague, who has managed 10 of the team's 12 goals this season. Alves leads the squad with nine points, by way of five goals and four assists. Hague has scored thrice, two of his scores coming off of Alves' feeds, and the other off of a Coburn centering pass.

Freshmen Coburn rounds out the trio of goal scorers as he has chalked up one in each of his last two games (both from Alves passes) and has been credited with one assist, as Coburn is beginning to blend in beautifully with the experienced seniors and juniors on the front line.

Today's game...A physical contest all the way, as UMass has already been called one of the most aggressive teams around by a referee, and the Coast Guard Academy is known for its hitting ability. And between the whistles we'll see if UMass can do it again, and give Kiah his sixth of the year, while Alves, Hague and Coburn are connecting down at the other end.

Booter Babblings: Will Peter Broaca make the scene? Be there this afternoon and see.

THE TRUE ART OF SOCCER-UMass booters Mike Nugent (in background), Dick McCarron (21) and Tom Coburn (5) display the artistic beauty of the sport of soccer in this action against Rhode Island on Saturday..."Will somebody please turn around and look at the ball?" Today these three will join the rest of the teammates against the Coast Guard Academy which promises to a rugged match. (MDC Photo by Bob Medeiros)

Harriers Run At Springfield As Conference Meet Nears

When the UMass cross country team encounters Springfield College today, it will find itself in the same position as when it faced Boston College. Like BC, the Chiefs boast a fine combination of three top runners.

The duo of Ed Walkwitz and Charlie Duggan is known throughout the region for their early season successes, and John McLeod is never too far behind.

The Redman strategy will have to be based upon breaking up this top three, and piling in three or four men before Springfield's fourth and fifth men can finish.

Coming away from the BC meet, where UMass utilized this strategy, the Redmen are riding the crest of a winning streak.

Since a tri-meet defeat was suffered at the hands of Harvard and Providence, the harriers have downed UConn, Rhode Island, Vermont, and BC, showing marked improvement in every meet.

This is a young team, but they seem to learn their lessons fast. If they continue to progress at their current rate, big things can be expected.

The Yankee Conference meet looms a short eleven days away from today's meet, and the Redmen are hungry for that one. If they remain consistent in their running, the team stands a good chance of defending last year's championship.

The Redman depth is now their strongest factor. If the backup men can succeed in lowering their time twenty seconds, the team could virtually be termed a powerhouse.

An interesting point about the team is that no one runner is firmly established in his respective position. It is true that Doug O'Connell has been top man quite consistently, but he does not clearly dominate the team as a few threats such as Bill Gillin and Tom Derderian loom close behind.

The backup spots are constantly changing among four or five runners. This is a beneficial, competitive situation, and should help the team in the upcoming championship meets.

Ehrhardt Heads YanCon Picks

Rhode Island quarterback Bob Ehrhardt (Flushing, N.Y.) Connecticut cut safety Bob Warren (E. Norwich, N.Y.) and New Hampshire defensive end Tim Colton (Hyde Park, Mass.) have been chosen as the top offensive, defensive and sophomore players in the Yankee Conference for their performances last Saturday.

Ehrhardt, a 6'0 185-lb. senior, completed 19 of 30 passes for 300 yards & 2 TD's, ran for 50 more and averaged 40 yards punting to spark URI to a 31-3 win at UMass. They key win put URI into a first place tie in the YanCon with UConn and UNH, all with 2-1 records.

Warren, a 6'0 184-lb. senior, returned a punt 30 yards for a TD, intercepted a pass and tackled the kickoff return runner on the Main 5 to start the second-half, which set up the tying TD as UConn gained a share of the YanCon lead with a 21-7 win.

Colton, a 6'1 205-lb. sophomore, made 5 tackles, trapped the qb for a loss and caused a fumble on another play to lead UNH to a 28-7 YanCon win over Vermont.

Other nominations were: Offense-SE Dave Paul (Maine), FB Don Zweig (UConn), FB Joe Wilson (Holy Cross), HB Bob Rodger (Vermont), HB Paul Metallo (UMass), OT Bill Gathright (Boston U.) & HB Ken Roberson (New Hampshire); Defense-DE Steve Furness (Rhode Island), LB Pat Ladd (Maine, LB Dan Harper (Holy Cross), LB Doug Bull (Vermont), safety John O'Neil (UMass), LB Ken Sinclair (Boston U.) & DT Nelson Cassavaugh (New Hampshire); Sophomores-QB Doug Lentz (Maine), QB Bob Robustelli (UConn) & HB Steve Coon (Vermont).

NOTE TO MEDIA: Although new Yankee Conference members Holy Cross and Boston U. do not play enough league games to qualify for the Conference championship their players will be listed in the weekly award winners and statistical rankings.

Sports Notices

INTRAMURALS-Bowling and basketball entries will be accepted up until 5 p.m. today.

Anyone interested in officiating intramural basketball games, please sign up in Room 215 Boyden. There will be a meeting of all those signed up next Wednesday night (Oct. 27) at 7:30.

NAIADS-Univ. Aquatic Art Club announces the following schedule of rehearsals for the March performance. Monday, 4:45 Finale, 6 p.m. Stroke Combinations; Tues. 5 p.m. Zodiac and Counterpoint, 6 p.m. Jazz; Wed. 3:30 Mixed Duet and Trio Thurs. 3:45 Deviations of a Line and Mixed Group. The club is badly in need of men. If interested call Pres. Kathy McNerney, 665-2952 or leave a message in WoPE.

Bosox Castoff...

Dick Williams Named Manager Of The Year

NEW YORK (AP)-Dick Williams of the Oakland A's, fired two years ago by Boston because "I was too mean," was named Monday as The Associated Press' Manager of the Year in the American League.

Williams, who in his first year as manager of the A's guided them to a runaway 16-game margin in the AL West with a 101-60 record, received 107 votes in nationwide balloting by sports writers and sportscasters.

Bob Lemon of Kansas City finished second with 66 votes, with Earl Weaver of Baltimore third with 59. Chuck Tanner of the Chicago White Sox was fourth with 36 and Billy Martin of Detroit fifth with 12.

It was the third straight year Weaver, whose Orioles have won three consecutive pennants, failed to win the award. Ted Williams of Washington won in 1969 and Ralph Houk of the New York Yankees won it last year.

"I knew the voting went in before the playoffs, so I figured I had a chance," said Williams who also won in 1967 when he managed Boston to a pennant.

"It's a wonderful honor."

"I know Earl has to be upset because he deserves recognition with all his pennant and World Series winners," Williams said at his home in Riviera Beach, Fla. "I feel sorry for him, but I feel happy for myself."

Told of the outcome of the balloting, Weaver said in Baltimore, the day after his team's loss to Pittsburgh in the World Series: "Maybe some of them voters will get to see a major league game, other than on television, some day. I hope so."

But he also said, "Dick Williams did a tremendous job. He deserves it."

The 42-year-old Williams spent 10 full seasons and parts of three others in the majors as a utility player with Brooklyn, Baltimore, Cleveland, Kansas City and Boston and became a big league manager in 1967 with Boston.

After getting the Red Sox into the World Series where they lost in seven games to St. Louis, Williams managed them to a fourth place finish in 1968 and then was fired late in the 1969 season as they finished third in the East.

J.V. Booters Victorious

By JIM PINSKY

The UMass J.V. soccer team engineered a 4-2 victory over Worcester Polytechnic Institute at Worcester Thursday. Leading the entire way the J.V. booters upped their season's mark to 2-1.

UMass opened the scoring in the first period with a goal by Demitris Antoniou. Antoniou who started the season with the varsity, doubled up on his first score later in the same period to give the Redman a 2-0 advantage. Worcester came back with a goal in the second quarter and went into half-time trailing 2-1.

Jim Vollinger opened up the scoring in the second half to make it 3-1 UMass and then added another in the fourth. Goalie Barry Lutchen had another fine game limiting Worcester to only a late goal in the second half to bring the score to its final margin 4-2.

Jekanowski was pleased with the way the team rebounded following their loss to UConn. "We played much better in all aspects of the game. I was very pleased with the team."

Intramurals

TUG O WAR

PIT	TIME	TEAMS
1	7:00	Hustlers vs. Stoufers
2		Trojans vs. Terrors
1	7:15	Lovers vs. Lemons
1	7:30	Slouts vs. Munchkins
2		Civ. Eng. vs. BX
1	7:45	Mavens vs. Musketeers
2		Browns vs. Dutchmen

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather: Rain.

VOLUME XCIX, ISSUE 30 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1971

Canadian Jews Embarrass Kosygin

OTTAWA (AP)—Thousands of Jews marched Tuesday in a continuing campaign to embarrass Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin. The ranks stretched over 10 city blocks and caused massive traffic backups in downtown Ottawa.

Police said 10,000 persons took part in the parade.

Hundreds of city and provincial police cordonedoff the Rideau Club, where Kosygin lunched with Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau. Hundreds more, plus Soviet KGB men, ringed a five-block radius from the Soviet Embassy in preparation for the arrival of at least 110 busloads of protesters from other cities.

The marchers cheered when a light plane flew overhead trailing a sign reading "Let them live as Jews or let them leave"-a reference to alleged mistreatment of Jews in the Soviet Union.

When Kosygin left the luncheon, a spattering of applause from a small crowd was mingled with hoots, jeers and chants.

As the parade formed Tuesday morning, waiting for the call to march from the traditional ram's horn, Kosygin held another round of what were described as solidly businesslike discussions with Trudeau and other Canadian leaders.

On the public front, the only Canadians who seemed to take notice of the visit were those with protests to make and axes to grind, and they have created a nightmare for both Soviet and Canadian authorities.

Security was visibly far tighter Tuesday because of the attempt by a young Hungarian to assault Kosygin the day before.

There have been no large crowds of well-wishers waiting to greet the visitor in the first two days of his eight-day tour. On the contrary, most who turned out seemed to be there not to cheer but to jeer.

The protests may dog the trip in other cities. Busloads of protesters already have been heading toward Montreal, where Kosygin is due Thursday for an overnight stay, and other demonstrations are promised for Edmonton, Vancouver and Toronto.

A ram's horn signaled the beginning of the Ottawa march. The protesters formed up behind a group of rabbis and started toward a semicircle of several hundred police.

Young parade marshals formed a barrier in front of the police to insure no contact with the protesters. A sprinkling of young men carried blue and white flags bearing a clenched fist inside a star--the insignia of the militant, New York-based Jewish Defense League.

Rabbi Meir Kahane, leader of the league, and six companions were turned back to New York after arriving in Montreal.

Men with megaphones led chants--"Let our people go," and "Free Soviet Jewry." But the crowd was more picnic than protest in atmosphere, despite the chant and the placecards. The atmosphere was friendly.

One Montreal-bound convoy of 55 buses was halted for a check by Quebec provincial police, who said they were tipped there were bombs aboard. None was found and the buses were permitted to go on to Montreal for what organizers say will be nonviolent protests against Soviet treatment of Jews.

As Kosygin left his hotel for his second business session with Trudeau, about 50 Jewish youths greeted him with chanted slogans.

After his business session, Kosygin was taken to the swank Rideau Club, directly across the street from the Parliament Building, where he was host at a luncheon for the Canadian prime minister. Again, in front of the club, there were pickets, a relatively small knot of men with placards and chanted slogans.

Geza Matrai, the 27-year-old Hungarian accused of assaulting Kosygin on Monday, is being held in custody until his case comes up next week.

Two Montreal men charged with illegal possession of explosives after a dynamite bomb was found in a car near the Soviet Embassy were remanded in custody without plea until Oct. 26.

Kosygin's continuing talks with Canadian leaders again focused on international affairs and included a long exchange of views on the Middle East. Both nations support the United Nations' 1967 resolution calling for Israel's withdrawal from occupied Arab territories.

Spokesmen said there was no discussion of either Vietnam or Red China, nor did either side mention the current Canadian grievances against the United States because of Washington's economic policies.

POLLUTION WHERE YOU LEAST EXPECT TO FIND IT—The White Mountains in New Hampshire, with it's miles and miles of natural forests and rushing rivers, is not without problems created by man. This sign stands in mute testimony to the effects of man's technological progress - which has reaped many benefits but in the process has destroyed many gifts of nature. (MDC photo by Bob Callahan)

Fears Political Upset

Japan Favors Two China U.N.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Japan expressed fear Tuesday that the proposed expulsion of Nationalist China from the United Nations would upset a "favorable trend" in the political atmosphere of the Far East.

Speaking as "a close neighbor of China," Japan's former foreign minister, Kiichi Aichi, joined the United States in urging that Red China be seated in the world organization with the Taiwan delegation remaining.

He addressed the 131-nation General Assembly as the China debate went through its second day without any surprise switches which might throw light on the outcome of voting next week.

The Japanese noted that the situation in Asia "seems to be undergoing a change for the better," but declared that approval of the Albanian resolution "would be likely to entail an abrupt change" in this delicate situation.

The Albanian plan calls for seating the Peking government and outright expulsion of the Nationalists. The rival U.S.-backed resolution would keep both Chinas in the organization and give to Peking the permanent seat in the Security Council that the charter allots to China.

Pro-Peking speakers continued to hammer at the theme that Red China would have nothing to do with the United Nations as long as the Taiwan government remains in it.

The Indian Ocean country of Mauritius backed the U.S. demand that the assembly invoke the two-thirds rule by declaring expulsion of Nationalist China an "important question." The ambassador, Sir Seewoosagur Ramgoolam, added a new note by urging the Taiwan government to renounce its claim to be the government of mainland China.

Japan stressed that the dual representation plan was not a two-Chinas plan, but simply a transitional phase which eventually might lead to a settlement between Peking and Taipei.

"It is our profound belief," Aichi declared, "that by adopting our draft resolutions, the United Nations will open the path to reconciliation and peaceful dialogue, and will promote peace and stability in Asia."

The United States continued behind-the-scene consultations to line up support. A U.S. spokesman said the mission was receiving 400 to 500 letters a week, mostly on China and about 95 per cent against the expulsion of the Nationalists. Asked whether many favored a cutoff of U.S. funds for the United Nations in the event the expulsion is voted, he said: "Not so many."

The spokesman said Saudi Arabia's amendments to the Albania resolution were a surprise. The main amendment submitted Monday by the Saudi Arabian ambassador, Jamil Baroody, would eliminate the expulsion provision of the Albanian proposal and instead call for recognition of Peking's right to represent mainland China and Taipei's right to represent Taiwan.

Will Cover Dividends, Post-Freeze Fines

Nixon Asks Congress For Broader Economic Powers

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon asked Congress Tuesday to broaden his economic-control powers to cover interest rates and dividends and to set a stiff new civil fine of $2,500 for punishing violators of the post-freeze program.

The White House sent legislation to Capitol Hill that would extend for one year to April 30, 1973, the Economic Stablization Act under which Nixon imposed the 90-day wage-price-rent freeze and the controls to follow.

But Treasury Undersecretary Charles Walker told newsmen the one-year time limit doesn't indicate the actual length of time the post-freeze controls will remain in effect.

The controls will last as long as "it takes to break the back of inflationary expectations and to make meaningful progress to bring down the cost of living," Walker said.

Nixon has no plans to clamp controls on interest rates and dividends, he said, pointing to what he called a "dramatic decline" in interest rates.

Although the controls over wages, prices and rents bar them from rising any higher than their level of May 25, 1970, the bill does not use that date on interest rates and dividends as a ceiling.

"Interest rates were closest to the highest level in 100 years at that time," Walker said. The bill would empower the President to stabilize interest rates and dividends at "levels consonant with orderly economic growth."

In addition, Walker said, the Cost of Living Council is setting up closer monitoring of interest rates to insure that more up-to-date figures are on hand.

The bill, as reported earlier, would set up a temporary emergency court of appeals to handle wage-price cases, to be named by Chief Justice Warren Burger.

It would be composed of three or more federal District or Circuit Court judges and would have the exclusive power to rule on the constitutionality of the law itself or any government order or regulation dealing with the post-freeze controls. But wage-price complaints by the public would still flow through District Courts first.

The civil penalty of $2,500 for each violation of the controls was a surprise provision of the bill. Officials said that, if passed, it could make enforcement of the controls easier.

Now, the law provides for a criminal penalty of $5,000 for each violation, a fine the government is reluctant to seek since it involves seeking a criminal conviction. The government would retain its power to seek court injunctions to bar and punish violations.

As anticipated, the new legislation would extend subpoena powers to the board and commission.

Walker said the administration strongly opposes requiring members of the Pay Board and Price Commission, the two bodies that will pass on wage and price increases, to be confirmed by the Senate.

The standby controls are delegated by the Cost of Living Council, he said, most of whom were confirmed to the jobs they were named to before being put on the council as well.

Rep. Wright Patman, D—Tex., chairman of the House Banking Committee, said hearings will begin on the bill Thursday. He said he feels the Pay Board and Price Commission members should be subject to Senate confirmation.

Patman said also he doesn't like a provision in the bill which would ratify the previous decisions and rulings by the government dealing with the wage-price freeze.

"The committee has in the past taken a dim view of retroactive statutes and we would need to move carefully on any proposals which might arbitrarily wipe out the legal rights of any individual or group," Patman said.

Government Internship Program Continued

By EDWARD BURK

Robert A. Shanley, Assistant Professor of Government and co-ordinator of the University's Undergraduate Legislative Internship Program, has announced the continuation of that program for the Spring semester of 1972, thus marking the third year of its existance.

The program, co-ordinated through House Speaker David Barkley's office, enables three selected Junior or Senior political science majors to couple their academic studies with practical experience at the State House in Boston.

According to Shanley, the value of the program rests primarily with the fact that the student "can augment his academic studies with the practical experience of working with legislators.

Under the provisions of the program, the student continues to carry a nine credit workload at the University of Massachusetts Boston campus while at the same time working as a part-time aid to an appointed state legislator; the internship worth an additional six credits.

Through the program, every effort is made to match up the particular interest of the student with legislators and committees whose primary concern may center in the same area.

The program provides invaluable experience to the government or political-minded student in that the theories of the workings of government are witnessed in the practical sense.

"The student can perhaps better understand the legislative process," stated Shanley. "He is given a greater sense of direction and develops a greater interest in politics."

In addition to the minimum requirement of a 2.5 cumulative average in government courses, it is also desirable for the respective applicant to have previously worked in some sort of political campaign.

"We want students to have an appreciation of the problems of politicians and legislators and to develop that appreciation so that they may understand the workings of government to a greater degree," said Shanley.

He also urged any students interested in applying for this program to contact him in 202 Thompson Tower.

Overall, the program has been successful according to Shanley.

"The Speaker's office has been quite pleased with the work of prior students and is quite willing to continue with the program."

Common Cause

Party Spending Violations Cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — Common Cause asked U.S. District Court Tuesday for a speedy ruling against what it said were admitted campaign contributions and spending violations by the major political parties.

The motion for summary judgement was filed in a long legal battle in which Common Cause, a citizens' lobby, has won most of the rounds so far.

Common Cause said both parties, in their answers Oct. 1 to a District Court ruling, conceded collecting more than the $3 million limit for individual contributors and spending more than the $3 million limit on a party in any calendar year.

"There can be no doubt that defendants' admitted practices are prescribed by these provisions," the motion said. "Indeed, these practices lie at the very heart of the abuses that the legislation was designed to prevent."

Common Cause contends that these practices, linked to the rising cost of campaigning, have made the parties, and to an extend officeholders, captives of large campaign contributors.

The Democratic and Republican national committees acknowledged raising and spending money beyond the limits but argued there was nothing illegal about it because of the methods used.

Common Cause said the admission by the parties of the questioned practices left no issues of fact to be resolved and the court should decide quickly without trial.

"For too long have we observed the spectacle of national political parties conducting campaigns in which they ask to be entrusted with federal elective office at the very moment they are violating specific federal laws governing the conduct of elections to such offices," Common Cause said.

"This spectacle breeds cynicism in the electorate," the motion added.

Expert Questions Antibiotics

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Despite the use of antibiotics for more than 25 years, the incidence of infections in persons with wounds from injury or operations has not decreased, a leading expert on infection reported Tuesday.

In fact, he said, antibiotics therapy may actually have increased the number and complexity of problems of infections.

The study of infection was reported by Dr. William A. Altemeier, a bacteriologist and surgeon, to the 57th annual clinical congress of the American College of Surgeons. He is a member of the Center of the Comprehensive Study of Trauma at the University of Cincinnati Medical School.

"After the general use of modern antibiotic therapy for more than a quarter of a century," Altemeier said, "it has become apparent that the overall incidence of infection in the trauma wound or injury patient has not been decreased, that many related problems are still with us, and that the pattern of surgical infections is changing."

One estimate of the cost in dollars alone of wound infections in this country during 1967 was a minimum of $9.8 billion, he said. But the effort to combat the problem, he said, has been "minimal and inadequate."

In 1967, Altemeier said, an estimated 18.8 million operations were performed in American hospitals. Infections developed in 1.4 million cases-7.4 per cent of the operations, he said.

A major aspect of the problem is the growth of the number of infections caused by "gram-negative" bacteria, which once were considered to be less virulent than "gram-positive" bacteria, which caused most infections before antibiotic therapy. The antibiotics have not been as successful in controlling gram-negative infection.

New Artificial Kidney Studied Here

An artificial kidney utilizing the microencapsulated enzyme technique is being developed at UMass by Professor Stanley Middleman of the chemical engineering department.

The research is supported by a $5245 grant from the National Institutes of Health through the University's Biomedical Sciences Support grant program.

"Many biochemical processes occur through the chemical intervention of enzymes. The development of engineering systems utilizing enzymes has proceeded slowly because of the expense of using enzymes as a raw material. In most cases, the enzymes are soluble in the process stream and must be continually replaced in the processing system," Dr. Middleman explained.

"In recent years a technique has been developed for encapsulating enzymes by enclosing them within a thin Nylon membrane. By forming extremely small, Nylon-enclosed droplets of enzyme solution it is possible to design a reactor which could, for example, remove toxic materials from blood, a function normally performed by the kidney. The encapsulated enzyme can be retained in the system and continually reused," he said.

Dr. Middleman joined the UMass Amherst staff in 1969 as professor of chemical engineering, with a joint appointment in the polymer science and engineering program. His research interests lie in the field of fluid mechanics and in the application of chemical engineering to problems in medicine and biology. He has authored books in both of these fields.

Gorman Parking Lot Re-Zoned

The Parking Ad Hoc Committee has recommended that parking in front of Gorman House be included in the campus master parking plan.

The area in front of Gorman House will be designated as a continuous portion of "H" lot for students.

All unregistered vehicles and vehicles assigned to another area, parked in front of Gorman House will be tagged after November 1, 1971.

Faculty Senate Lauds Tippo

At its 180th Regular Meeting, October 14, 1971, the Faculty Senate of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst adopted a resolution concerning Oswald Tippo that read in part:

That: The Senate wishes to go on record expressing its deep appreciation of the many services which Chancellor Oswald Tippo contributed to the growth, in quality and in stature, of the University of Massachusetts and fully endorses the resolution to the same effect which was overwhelmingly passed by the general faculty meeting of October 7, 1971.

That: The Faculty Senate reaffirms its belief that the autonomy of individual units of the University will remain as important for academic excellence in the future as it has been in the past.

Water Pollution War Begun

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation changing the course of the federal war against water pollution by setting a 14-year deadline for industrial polluters was approved Tuesday by the Senate Public Works Committee.

Weaving the objective of ending by 1985 the discharge of all pollutants into navigable waters into present programs, the bill charts also a $14 billion grant program to build sewage treatment plants from coast-to-coast.

Authored principally by Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, the bill is an acknowledgement that previous legislation relying on the setting of water quality standards has not worked.

The new bill sets up a three-phase program, requiring polluters to use the latest technological advancements available-but always with the goal of ending all dumping into lakes, rivers and streams.

In Phase I, current water quality standards are required to be implemented by the mid 1970s. In the second phase, beginning in 1976, a polluter will be required to show whether he can implement the no-discharge standard.

If he cannot meet that standard, he would be required to use the best available control techniques, with those controls being upgraded every five years.

The final deadline was set at 1985.

Prof Is Fellow

Dr. Charles P. Alexander, of the UMass Department of Entomology, has been named a Fellow of the California Academy of Sciences in San Francisco. The announcement was made by the Chairman of the Board of Trustees and is "in recognition of unusual attainments in science." Dr. Alexander becomes one of the 300 life-members.

Michele Goldman, of 215 Thoreau, was the winner of a drawing held last week at the Campus Center Bookstore. She won a 24-volume set of the new edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN are on the second floor of the Student Union on the University campus, zip code 01002. Phones are 545-2550 (news), 545-0344 (sports), and 549-1311 (editor).

Second class postage paid at Amherst, the DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes five times weekly Monday through Friday during the academic year except during vacation and exam periods, three or four times a week following a vacation or exam period or when a holiday falls within a week. Accepted for mailing under the authority of the act of March 8, 1879 as amended by the act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester, $10.00 per year.

DON'T WAIT!!
Get Your CALENDAR PAD
For '72
NOW
from
A. J. Hastings
Newsdealer & Stationer
45 So. Pleasant St.
Amherst

AUTO INSURANCE
ALL CARS — ALL DRIVERS
BUDGET PAYMENTS
CYCLES — SCOOTERS
Tekoa Insurance Agency
160 Pleasant St. Northampton 586-2742
10 Broad St. Westfield 562-3604

R.I. Declares Playboy Obscene

PROVIDENCE (AP)-Rhode sland Atty. Gen. Richard J. Israel Monday night declared tha newsstands or other businesses displaying the November issue of Playboy magazine "are running the risk of prosecution" under recently enacted obscenity laws.

Although the attorney general's office had handed down no formal ruling that specifies magazines violating the new anti-smut laws, Israel said, "I think Playboy does fit the description."

"If you own a newsstand and you're displaying with photographs of nudity, which I recall the November issue is, you're running the risk of prosecution," he said.

Israel pointed out that newsstands or other businesses frequented by minors under 18 years of age are prohibited under state law from displaying indecent publications, pictures or articles.

The statute, enacted last May 7, imposes fines ranging up to $1,000 or imprisonment up to two years, or both, for violation.

Aimed at preventing pornography from falling into the hands of minors, the law forbids the display of materials consisting "of pictures of nude or partially denuded figures posed or presented in a manner to provoke or arouse lust or passion or to exploit sex."

Explaining his interpretation of the statute, Israel noted that the November issue of Playboy contains "still shots from X-rated movies" and the cover displays a partially denuded figure.

Israel acknowledged having received a letter from Local 1203 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, urging him to rule recent issues of Playboy obscene.

The Pawtucket, R.I., local spearheaded a move in the state legislature last spring for stronger anti-smut laws.

Cop Squeals

Harlem Boon To Crooked Cops

NEW YORK (AP)-A crooked cop who turned informer testified Tuesday that every plain-clothesman in New York was on the take, and that an assignment to Harlem was worth at least $1,000 a monthin payoffs from numbers racketeers.

As the first witness before the Knapp Commission's public hearing into police corruption, plain-clothes patrolman William Phillips was asked how many plain-clothesmen in the city received payoffs.

"To my knowledge, every one," replied Phillips, whose role as a bagman in the handling of payoffs to other cops was revealed in tape recording played during Monday's opening of the commission hearings.

The Knapp Commission, headed by Wall Street lawyer Whitman Knapp, was set up by Mayor John V. Lindsay 18 months ago to investigate corruption in the 31,500-member police force, the nation's largest.

Payoffs, Phillips said, came not only from gamblers, but from tavern owners, contractors, tow truck operators and foreign embassies. And it was simple to find out who was on the take, the witness added.

"In this department," Phillips continued, "you could make a phone call and in five minutes you could know who the individual is, what his hobbies are and if he takes money."

The police department issued a statement later saying that all allegations coming out of the hearings would be investigated immediately and the men involved would be reassigned to the office of the chief investigator until the case was disposed of.

Dockworkers Walk Off Despite Injunction

PHILADELPHIA (AP)-Philadelphia longshoremen obeyed a court order and returned to the docks Tuesday but refused to remove cargo from 13 vessels in port when clerks, checkers and timekeepers defied the injunction and remained off the job.

About 1,000 dockworkers reported to work under an injunction signed Sunday by Common Pleas Court Judge Edmund B. Spaeth Jr. although shippers had asked for less than 200 men. Philadelphia has 5,000 longshoremen.

The work gangs walked off the ships moments after boarding when foremen said the men could not work without the clerks, checkers and timekeepers who later voted to remain off the job in defiance of the court order.

The Philadelphia longshoremen joined the East and Gulf Coast dock strike on Oct. 1 as an act of solidarity with New York dockworkers who want to maintain a contract provision guaranteeing them 40 hours' work every week of the year.

On the West Coast, a strike that began July 1 has been interrupted by a court-ordered return to work under the Taft-Hartley law, one of two striking unions settled Tuesday.

The International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers ratified a new contract with the Master Stevedore Association at the Los Angeles-Long Beach area. The workers will receive a $1.65 an hour raise over three years. Ratification was by a vote of 82 to 52.

The major body of West Coast strikers, the 15,000 members of the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, continued working under the court order of Oct. 9. Officials said there was no evidence of slowdown as they tackled the backlog of cargo-laden vessels.

No negotiations were scheduled in the coal strike, which has idled 100,000 miners in 20 states and resulted in widespread layoffs among railroad and steel workers.

Eskimo Claim Before House

(AP)--With the price tag escalated from $7.2 million to $925 million, the House began debating Tuesday for the first time a perennial bill to settle aboriginal land claims of Alaska natives.

The bill would pay 55,000 Eskimos, Aleuts and Indians $425 million in cash over a ten-year period and $500 million in royalties from mineral production on Alaska public lands. It also would give them 40 million acres for village expansion.

The House is expected to vote Wednesday.

Proponents of the bill said that the federal administration once recommended settlement of the land claims for $7.2 million, the amount the United States paid Russia for Alaska in 1867.

The proposed settlements grew more liberal during the quarter-century that landclaims bills have been before congressional committees, said Rep. Wayne N. Aspinall, D-Colo., until the present administration recommended $1 million and 40 million acres.

Aspinall, chairman of the Interior Committee which wrote the present House bill, said that the proposed settlement has nothing to do with Alaska oil promotion.

Picasso Exhibit on Campus

Starting Feb. 29, and running through to Mar. 19, The Campus Center Program Council, assisted by the American Federation of Art, will offer a "traveling exhibit" of Pablo Picasso originals. The exhibit will consist of small sculptures, ceramics, and posters, and will be held in the Student Union Gallery.

The Picasso display is only one of a series of showings hoped for by the program council. Russ Vieira, a council member, said that the council is trying to develope a regular schedule of showings for the spring semester. Considered for display will be some of the councils own acquisitions,posters by Salvador Dali, and works coming from local talent.

A selection of interesting prints is now being displayed in the S.U. gallery. Those of you who rush on visuals will find the display a pleasant break in your daily routine of hustle and clatter.

Complete information on the Picasso exhibit is not available at this early date because a good deal of planning remains, including security measures to be taken.

Cosby In Breach Of Contract Suit

A $2.4 million writ of attachment filed at the Franklin County Registry of Deeds against the Shelburne home of actor Bill Cosby is an outgrowth of a breach of contract suit filed in U.S. District Court in Boston.

Martin E. Greenblatt, a Boston attorney, said Sunday he filed a seven-page bill of complaint with the district court.

The writ filed in Franklin County is the only portion of the action that involves this area, he said, adding that all hearings in the case will be held in the Boston court. No papers will be filed here in Superior Court, he said.

Greenblatt said he was hired to file the action for four firms, Acrite Industries, Inc. of New York, Richards Packing Co. of Minnesota, Frigitemp Corp. of New York and Billy Cosby Foods, Inc. of New York.

According to Greenblatt, Cosby had entered a contract with the four firms to set up a national chain of restaurants, with the franchise to be known as "The Underground Railroad," and a business marketing frozen food products under the Cosby name.

The suit claims that after receiving a $100,000 advance payment, Cosby refused to let his name be used. The suit also alleges that Cosby refused to return the $100,000.

The suit, filed Sept. 22, seeks a writ of attachment against all properties owned by Cosby in Massachusetts. Greenblatt said that, as far as he knew, the Bardwell's Ferry home recently purchased by Cosby in Shelburne is the only attachment made by U.S. marshals.

Greenblatt said the Boston court, to the best of his knowledge, is the only one in the country in which the suit was filed.

Paul Markham of Boston, former assistant U.S. attorney, will defend Cosby in the action. Greenblatt said he was informed of this Sunday afternoon.

Cosby was reported to be still in California Sunday. He is scheduled to enter the University of Massachusetts for graduate work in education.

The Shelburne home, purchased for $65,000, is currently undergoing renovations. Mrs. Cosby and the children reportedly are staying in the Amherst area until the work is completed.

Don Stover and the White Oak Mountain Boys were featured at the Blue Wall Cafeteria last night. Over 150 people listened to their repetoire of really good music, jokes, and fun. (MDC photo by Jim Reardon.)

"COME TO WHERE THE ACTION IS"
DIALTONE
Route 5 West Hatfield
Band Every Nite
9 p.m. - 1 a.m.
*Good Music *Lively atmosphere
Ladies' Night Every Night Drinks ½ Price

Tonite!
DON'T FORGET
THE WEDNESDAY NITE
COFFEEHOUSE
featuring
Mike Cataldo
Charlie Ortolani and others
blue wall cafeteria 8:30-1:00

In The Nation And The World

"An Affair Of Family, Village and State"

Agnew Reunited With Greek Kin

GARGALIANOI, Greece, (AP)-Kinfolk all, the Agnews and the Anagnostopouloses embraced Tuesday in a sentimental homecoming.

It was an affair of family, village and state, spilling thousands of Greeks through the narrow streets of Spiro T. Agnew's ancestral home.

The emotion of the vice president's visit to the place where his father was born was evident in his face as he stood in a sand-floored soccer stadium and spoke of his Greek heritage.

It could be read as he placed a wreath draped in American flags at a family gravesite, and as he visited the Anagnostopoulos family home, a narrow two-story building of white stucco.

Near the arched doorway he dedicated a plaque "at my great grandfather's home in commemoration of my origins here and in honor of the Greek inheritance in which so many other Americans proudly share."

It was a day of flag waving, folk dancing in the village square, and a luncheon of roast veal and fruits in honor of the vice president.

Along with the sentiment, there was evidence of the political aspects of Agnew's visit to Greece. Premier George Papadopoulos flew with him by Air Force jet and helicopter to the village overlooking the Ionian Sea.

An Agnew aide who was present during the vice president's talks with Papadopoulos in Athens said no commitments on U.S. military aid to Greece were reached there.

The aide said the discussions did not cover such specific items but were a general discussion of the need for a strong alliance in the North Atlantic's Treaty Organization.

The population of Gargalianoi is listed at 7,000 but many times that number flooded the stadium, streets, balconies and squares of the town.

Agnew shook hands, smiled and waved. He speaks no Greek, but the sentiment was clear in any language.

It was perhaps most evident as Agnew spoke of his late father, born in Gargalianoi as Theofrastes Spyros Anagnostopoulos. He anglicized his name after emigrating to the United States, 69 years ago. He died in 1963.

Agnew was accompanied by his wife, two daughters and a cousin, Olga Agnew from Towson, Md.

Papadopoulos and two deputy premiers were with the Agnews as they toured the village.

Agnew went to an orphanage, which once was a convent founded by his great-aunt. He met with two recipients of scholarships set up by him and Greek-American donors.

He left in Gargalianoi a gift of the village, a silver flowered vase. He turned a symbolic spade of earth to plant a tree "as a living and fruitful symbol of the warm and enduring bonds between the Greek and American nations."

Indian Rights Lack Protection

WASHINGTON (AP)-Indians told a Senate subcommittee Tuesday they've been robbed of land and water rights while their supposed guardian, the federal government, didn't protect them and many times helped the encroachers.

"The taking of Indian land and water and the infringement of Indian rights did not end in the last century," Sen. Edward Kennedy, the Judiciary subcommittee chairman, said in an opening statement.

"The lawlessness and immorality perpetuated by the government continues right now and it will continue tomorrow unless the United States does more than pay lip service to its sacred treaty obligations to Indian tribes."

Kennedy said the Northern Paiutes see Pyramid Lake shrinking, the Agua Calientes see ground water disappearing, the Navajos see their clean air clouding, and the lower-Colorado River tribes see their reservations shrinking.

"And all the while the Indians' trustee, advocate and protector-the U.S. government-stands idly, if not menacingly, by," Kennedy said.

Angelo Butterfield, a Lummi Indian from Idaho, said that during World War II "the Army came out to our reservation and told the leaders it was their patriotic duty to allow them to build an air base right within the reservation, without going to Congress for permission."

The chiefs trusted the military men's promises that their property would be returned even more valuable than before, she said.

"Our leaders were deceived," she said. "At the end of the war, the two communities on the edge of the reservation came to Congress to fight over who'd get the Indian lands. The city of Pocatello got it for $1."

Mel Tonasket, chairman of the Coleville Tribal Council in Washington state, said a few years ago a dam was built blocking a river running across the reservation.

"The Bureau of Indian Affairs superintendent told the Army Corps of Engineers that salmon wasn't very important so there was no sense in putting in 'ladders'," Tonasket said.

He referred to a canal of steps built around a dam to enable salmon to move upstream to spawn.

The Bureau of Reclamation was called the villian in the deterioration of the Paiutes' Pyramid Lake outside Reno, Nev.

The lake depends on replenishment from the Truckee River. It was dammed in 1905 by the Reclamation Bureau, diverting more than half of the river's flow away from the lake. The lake's level has shrunk 70 feet destroying the tribe's main livelihood, a fishery.

Bishops Uphold Priestly Celibacy

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Conservatives scored a victory in the World Synod of Bishops as debate on the priesthood ended Tuesday with massive opposition recorded against ordaining married men.

Liberal proposals to allow either national bishops conferences or the Vatican to permit limited numbers of married men become priests were left "without a prayer," said one synod source.

Strong support has emerged, however, for welcoming back into the Roman Catholic community priests who defected to marry. Many speakers asked that the Church show no vindictiveness toward these men and allow them to be "laymen in good standing."

Eighteen Killed In Air Strike Mistake

SAIGON (AP)—U.S. Air Force investigators are trying to learn what fatal slip turned an air support mission near the Cambodian border into a mistaken bombing tragedy.

Eighteen South Vietnamese paratroopers died and seven were wounded seriously Monday when an Air Force A37 jet dropped two 500-pound bombs on its assigned target, the U.S. Command reported Tuesday.

The command said "additional soldiers received lesser wounds," but did not elaborate.

It was the bloodiest air strike mistake since American bombs and napalm killed 36 South Vietnamese participating in the Laotian campaign March 5.

U.S. spokesmen said preliminary investigation indicated that the spot where the bombs hit near a government paratroop base at Thien Ngon 60 miles northwest of Saigon had been cleared by the South Vietnamese ground commander in the area and had been marked by an American forward air controller.

Such procedures are customary in almost all air support actions in order to prevent accidents.

A U.S. Command spokesman said the twin-engine A37 Dragonfly had been part of a two-plane mission called out "in support of friendly forces" against the enemy's border offensive, now in its fourth week.

The second plane was called off the target without dropping its bombs after the mistake became evident, the spokesman said.

No major ground fighting on the border front was reported. But allied spokesmen said North Vietnamese gunners kept up attacks on South Vietnamese outposts and on Fire Base Pace, the only American-manned post in the sector. It was shelled for a 25th straight day. No casualties were reported in any of the fire attacks.

Mexico Opposes Surtax

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico appears to be opening a quiet campaign for special exemption from the 10 per cent surtax President Nixon imposed on imports.

The Mexicans apparently hope to enlist the aid of Canada to get special status to the two nations which border the United States.

State Department officials report no plans to give any nation an exemption. But Mexican sources say behind-the-scenes maneuvering has convinced them there is a good chance of success when the smoke clears from Phase 2 of Nixon's economic plan.

An exemption for Mexico would be of major political advantage to President Luis Echeverria. He is under criticism from businessmen and industrialists for what they feel is a leftward drift in his 11-month-old government. By winning an exemption Echeverria could stimulate his country's lagging economy and ease the business-industry complaints.

About 70 per cent of this country's exports go to the United States. The U.S. Embassy calculates one-fourth are directly affected by the surtax. The Mexicans say $500 million worth of trade is affected, with Mexico losing perhaps $80 million a year.

Mexican officials generally support Nixon's other moves to improve the U.S. economy because the two economies are closely linked.

EVERY WEDNESDAY,
STAMPEDE NIGHT
"A touch of the far west has come to New England..."

Our Cowgirls, in western garb, armed with water pistols filled with Vodka, will serve your custom sliced western steer beef by the ounce.--45¢ per ounce for prime sirloin, 70¢ per ounce for fillet mignon, and 35¢ per ounce for a rib of broiled beef.
Keep our Friday night buffet in mind.

The Lord Jeffery 253-2576
30 Boltwood Ave. AMHERST, MASS.
RAOUL DIETRICH, INNKEEPER

Special for U. Mass. Students!

N3 AIR FORCE STYLE
PARKA

Flying Jacket, TypeN3B
Shell-100% Nylon
Lining-100% Nylon
Interlling-100%
Bonded Polyester
Hood Trim-Canada or Alaska Wolf Fur
Hood Lining-100% Orlon Acrylic Face
100% Cotton Back
Knit-100% Wool
Color-Sage
Sizes:S,M,L,XL (add 10% for XL)

Reg. $49.95 To $60.00

A DEMAND ITEM WITH HIGH SCHOOL & COLLEDGE TRADE

N3 PARKA DESIGNED FOR SERVICEMEN IN ARCTIC AREAS. WARMEST JACKET THERE IS! Heavy Duty Front Zipperwith double protection button-over flap.

Low Introductory Price -- Men's Sizes Only $37.50
N3BY -- Sizes 8-18 For Boys and Girls $34.50

LAST YEAR'S PRICES WERE AT LEAST 20% HIGHER!!!
Call Al at 549-0814 COME SEE A SAMPLE!
!Orders Taken For Less Than 10 Day Delivery!

Norwich Hill Stable
ENGLISH AND WESTERN STYLE RIDING
TRAIL RIDES
INSTRUCTIONS
Prices - Weekdays
Couples - $5.00 an hr.
Singles - $3.00 an hr.
Weekends -
All $3.00 an hr
Lessons - $5.00 an hr.
up Rt. 66 to Cutlers Road Huntington, Mass.
Tel. 1-413-667-3018

Worldwide Recession Spreads

U. S. Foreign Trade Position Stronger

NEW YORK (AP)—A worldwide recession, spreading and getting worse, is strengthening the United States' bargaining position on foreign trade.

From West Germany to Tokyo, jobless rolls are growing, national production is off and stock markets are falling. The recession is even reaching into underdeveloped countries whose raw materials exports are bringing in less cash.

The recession is felt in America, too, of course. But it has less influence on this country's foreign trade. The United States puts only about 4 percent of its national output of goods into foreign trade. Germany in comparison, sells about a third of its production overseas.

That means that Germany and Japan must export if they are to come out of their recession. The United States, less dependent on foreign markets and suppliers, can get out of its jam by its own efforts. But the need to trade to live puts pressure on the industrial countries-except France-to strike a bargain with the United States to open the American market to easy imports.

"I don't think people realize how bad things are over there," said William Wolman, a vice president of First National City Bank. "What is going on in the Common Market, for instance, would be called a recession anywhere else." And things could get worse unless they are repaired, in the view of E. Douglas Howard II, president of the Niagara Share Corp., a $100-million mutual fund.

Although the slowdown is most marked in the industrial countries of the world, it is felt by their neighbors and in the underdeveloped countries. As short-time working spreads in Germany, for instance, the foreign workers in that country have less money to send back home. This reduces the cash income of those countries who have sent their workers abroad-Yugoslavia, Spain, Portugal and the North African countries.

The countries producing the world's raw materials are nearly as badly off. Since Aug. 15, when President Nixon took economic steps that altered the world money system, the prices of raw materials are down an average of 8 per cent.

Lagging industrial activity is reflected in the stock markets of the richer countries. Since Aug. 15 stock averages have declined in every country except Britain. They are off 13 per cent in Japan, 9 per cent in Germany, and 7 per cent in Italy.

Even France, which exports only a small portion of her production to the United States, is not entirely in the clear. While her relative independence of trade has helped, her unemployment is the worst in recent years and wages are rising twice as fast as prices. This means trouble unless the disparity can be reduced.

Country by country, here is how the world's trading partners are faring:

West Germany-new orders are tailing off, workers are being put on short time, jobless rolls are growing. The revaluation of the mark and the U.S. import surcharge has hurt the exports industries such as automobiles and steel.

Belgium-Price controls are fighting to keep down the cost of living, but there are no controls on wages. "It seems likely there will be trouble in store," says the Financial Times.

France-Things are pretty good and may stay that way if consumer prices do not rise.

Italy-"The economy is well on to its way into a recession," says one observer. Strikes have cut industrial production by a third, unemployment is the highest since the war and growth rate this year is expected to be zero.

Britain-Inflation and industrial stagnation are squeezing the country and unemployment is the highest since 1945. Manufacturing goods production is the same as a year ago.

Japan-The government had already put in measures to control inflation when the U.S. trade restrictions were put on. The U.S. and Japanese actions worked in tandem to turn the economy down. The government has just changed its predictions of growth from a rise of 10 per cent to only 5 per cent for this year. There is a shortage of labor in many fields, but restrictions on textile exports are expected to cost many jobs.

Africa-The countries relying on oil are all right, but most of the others are suffering from low prices for raw materials.

South America-Budding industries are feeling a slowdown, in some cases because of a fall in foreign investment. Only Brazil reports a bright economic picture as prices for coffee and sugar remain good.

From New York

Irish Officials Seize Illegal Guns Aboard QEZ

CORK, Ireland (AP)—Customs officials seized six trunks full of arms shipped into the Irish Republic Tuesday from New York aboard the British liner Queen Elizabeth 2.

The load of submachine guns and hand grenades, apparently destined for the Irish Republican Army, was part of what British army intelligence sources claimed is a steady stream of arms for the IRA.

The customs men stumbled on the arms at Cobh Harbor near Cork when they became suspicious of the weight of the trunks, which had not been claimed.

It was the second load of arms involving the IRA to be discovered in the last four days. Dutch police seized more than three tons of Czech-made weapons aboard a Belgian plane at Amsterdam Airport Saturday.

When the trunks' contents were uncovered, Irish police immediately sounded an alert and blocked roads around Cork in a hunt for the passenger in whose name the trunks were consigned aboard the liner.

The man disappeared when he landed from the ship, which anchored in the harbor en route to Southampton in England.

In Belfast, capital of Northern Ireland, a military intelligence spokesman said the discovery "confirms what we've always suspected-that arms are being smuggled to the IRA from the United States."

The British army has long believed that money from Irish-American IRA sympathizers was used to buy arms for the gunmen who want to unite Northern Ireland, which is mainly Protestant, with the predominantly Roman Catholic republic.

In Dublin, the head of the Irish-Czech Society said the two-man Czechoslovak trade mission in the Irish capital helped organize the shipments seized in Amsterdam.

"I'm convinced they're helping organize the arms-and the trouble-in Ireland," said Barry Hardy.

In Amsterdam, Dutch police said the arms seized there had the official clearance stamp of the Czechoslovak airport customs on their bills of lading.

In London, debate in the British Parliament continued on allegations that British troops in Northern Ireland have tortured and brainwashed detainees suspected of being IRA men.

Home Secretary Reginald Maudling, the Cabinet minister responsible for the province, said a government committee under Sir Edmund Compton is investigating the charges, but stressed that "intelligence is of enormous importance in defeating the gunmen."

Bernadette Devlin, the Northern Irish opposition member, said attacks on police in the province were increasing because people believe "these men are engaged in the torturing of people in internment."

House Blocks Indochina Deadline Vote

WASHINGTON (AP)—House leaders blocked a straight up-or-down vote on the Senate's six-month Indochina war deadline in a stormy session Tuesday-and then interpreted a procedural vote as rejection of the deadline.

Sparking angry floor speeches, Republican Whip Leslie C. Arends of Illinois averted a direct showdown by moving that the House reject five Senate amendments including the war amendment in a $21-billion weapons bill purely on the ground they violated House germaneness rules.

"Today young Americans are getting their guts blown out in Vietnam," said Rep. Charles W.Whalen Jr., R—Ohio, who had planned to move for the straight vote. "And we're sitting here in the House debating germaneness."

An effort to override Arends with a procedural motion to permit the up or down vote was rejected 215 to 192-and House leaders then called that vote House rejection of the six-month deadline.

So did the White House Deputy press secretary Gerald Warren told reporters that President Nixon "appreciates the majority support and vote of confidence for his initiatives for peace through negotiation as represented by the 215-192 vote today."

House Armed Services Chairman F. Edward Hebert, D—La., told newsmen that the vote sends him to a House-Senate compromise conference on the $21 billion weapons bill with a House mandate not to accept the Senate war deadline.

"That's the only vote that counts," Hebert said.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montana, author of the amendment requiring U.S. withdrawal from Indochina in six months if American prisoners of war are released, said "that's their business' when asked about the House action.

But he said his amendment "is not going to be swept under the rug. It is going to be brought up again and again."

Conferees will be senior House and Senate Armed Services Committee members who overwhelmingly oppose the six-month war deadline although the Senate conferees are required to try to win acceptance of the Mansfield amendment.

Bolles...invites you to see our fall '71

SHOES and HANDBAGS

If you have the daring - we have the style

BOLLES
8 Main Street, Amherst 253-5598

MONDAY CLASSES TODAY

No Paper Monday
OCTOBER 25
Ad Deadline For Oct 26
4:00 PM THURSDAY

Miss Your Mug Book?

The Freshman Book is finally back on Campus.

Selling is only $1.50.

BUY NOW at:

● Dining Commons - Supper time 4:30 - 6 p.m. Mon. - Thurs.
● Campus Center - Concourse level 9 - 3 p.m. Mon. - Thurs.

Edited & Compiled by the Fraternities & Sororities of U. Mass.

Hawkins Company To Appear At Smith

On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, October 21, 22, and 23, the Department of Theatre and Speech of Smith College and the National Endowment for the Arts will present three dance concerts featuring the Erick Hawkins Dance Company. These concerts will represent the culmination of a six-day residency of the Company at Smith College. The first three days of the residency, which will begin on October 18, will be occupied with Lectures, Master Classes, and Lecture-Demonstrations, to be conducted by Mr. Hawkins and members of his company.

In addition, the Hawkins group will be accompanied at two of their performances by the American Brass Quintet. Miss Lucia Dlugoszewski, who has worked as a composer with Mr. Hawkins on many previous occasions, has composed the score for a new dance, "Angels of the Inmost Heaven," especially for the Quintet. "Angels" will be presented on Thursday and Friday evenings.

Erick Hawkins, the Company's leader and founder, is perhaps the most American of our new dancers. Where his contemporaries have formed international cliques of art in an effort to refresh their ideas, he expresses the fierce individualism of America's pioneer spirit by continuing to demonstrate in his work that there is still something uniquely American to contribute to world culture.

It is significant that much of his thorough training in dance technique came from George Balanchine and Martha Graham, two giants of American Dance. From the beginning of his dancing career he was a choreographer as well as a dancer. After his first solo concert of his own choreography, Alfred Frankenstein singled him out as "one of the greatest American Dancers of the present day." It was on the strength of his first choreography for Ballet Caravan called "Show Piece" that Balanchine spoke of him as his most gifted choreographer.

Martha Graham was so impressed with "Show Piece" that she invited Erick Hawkins to be her principal male partner. In his earliest appearances with her it became clear to critics and audiences alike that this was a new kind of American male dancer. More than any other, he has brought back the beautiful spirit of an American man's dancing to American dance. It is no wonder that Claudia Cassiday wrote, "Erick Hawkins looks more like a Yankee Clipper Ship than the popular conception of a male dancer."

Hawkins is not merely a great American dancer, but one of the greatest American artists in any field. His spiritual sensitivity has been compared to Emerson, his adventurous passion to Melville, his poetic flamboyance to Poe, his daring originality to Frank Lloyd Wright; and only something warm, sensuous, and richly subtle from the Southwest crystallized these various facets of genius into the mold of dancer.

For ticket information and reservations, please call the box office of Theatre 14, in the Center for the Performing Arts at Smith College, 584-2700, extension 840.

Policeman Killed In Wild Shooting

BELLEFONTE, Pa. (AP)-Two local police officers were felled by rifle fire in a wild shooting in this central Pennsylvania community Tuesday while one of the officer's wives looked on. Police said one of the men was dead and the other in "very serious condition."

The officers were felled by rifle fire from a passing auto, police said.

State police said a massive hunt was launched for three men in a late model, brown sedan last seen speeding toward Interstate 80, a major east-west highway across central Pennsylvania.

The shooting occurred in front of the G.C. Murphy department store in the center of town, police said. Two bullets smashed through store windows, but no one inside was hit.

The dead officer was identified by police as Ronald Seymore. Officers said he had five children.

LET'S SAVE IT. PEACE BY PEACE.

NASA Photograph Courtesy of Hasselblad

Helping people build a better life
THE EQUITABLE

The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, New York, N.Y. An Equal Opportunity Employer, M/F

For a free 18" x 24" poster of this advertisement, write: The Equitable, Dept. P, G.P.O. Box 1170, New York, N.Y. 10001

TICKETS: 125
HERTER HALL.
TEL. 545-0202

CLAUDE KIPNIS MIME THEATRE

THUR., OCT. 21
8:00 P.M.
BOWKER AUD.

Don't Call Us...

UMass To Receive Western Electric Gift

UMass and Amherst College are among 600 specially selected colleges and universitities benefiting from a program sponsored by Western Electric.

Western Electric and Bell Laboratories donate more than a half million high quality electronic components to 600 colleges and universities annually through Western Electric's College Gift program. Both Western and Bell Labs are units of the Bell System.

The department of physics at Amherst and the departments of physics and electrical engineering at the University of Massachusetts will receive the electronic gifts.

The items offered to the schools include industrially outmoded gear, such as oscilloscopes and transistors or surplus meters, resistors and capacitors.

The program is designed to encourage engineering education through donation of usable equipment that stimulates scientific investigation. Often the equipment donated allows a college to pursue projects that otherwise would be impossible.

Although the program, in its 44th year is unrivaled in size and scope, heavy demand limits the number of schools that can participate. Thus schools applying must meet certain eligibility requirements.

The program began with the donation of 18 surplus oscilloscopes to several northeastern schools in 1927. It now distributes more than half a million items a year, requires an annual catalog to list available materials, and has 13 storerooms across the country in which the equipment is gathered.

The catalogs list a total of 2,255 items on 118 pages, ranging from electron microscopes to rubber gloves.

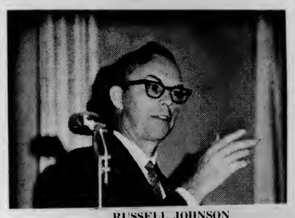
Every January, complete storeroom inventories are forwarded to Western Electric headquarters in New York City, where the college gifts group compiles a complete list of available merchandise. In May, the free mail order catalogs are mailed to the participating schools and in less than a week, order forms start to come in. After all order forms have been received, the job of distribution is started.

As the number of items given away has grown, so has the demand for them. Last year, 425 requests were received for a single piece of equipment – an electron microscope. It was donated to Texas A&M for student research into the molecular structure of metals.

Several colleges have built entire laboratories around the donated equipment. For example, the electronic components in the semiconductor lab at a Virginia College came almost exclusively from the program.

Many upperclassmen and graduate students are able to pursue independent research due to the equipment donated through the Western Electric College Gift program.

Russell Johnson China Talk Tonight



"U.S./China Policy, A Fresh Start, 1971," will be the topic of a lecture to be given tonight at 8:00 in the Student Union Ballroom by Russell Johnson.

Johnson has recently returned from a four week tour of the People's Republic of China. While in China, he visited and met with people in many areas, both rural and urban, including Peking, Yenan, Nanking, Tsinan, and Shanghai.

Johnson presently serves as Press Secretary for the New England office of the American Friends Service Committee, where he is deeply involved in the movement for social change. The primary purpose of his trip to China was to explore possible ways in which the Quakers could be of assistance in increasing communication between the societies of east and west.

He has also traveled extensively in Cuba, Africa, and especially in Southeast Asia, where he served for four years as the Quaker International Affairs Representative for the AFSC. He formed many contacts while there, and has been an important member of many international conferences.

Tonight's lecture, sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program, will be followed by a Coffee Hour in the Main Lounge of Crabtree.

RUSSELL JOHNSON

NO PAPER MONDAY OCT. 25
DEADLINE FOR TUESDAY 4PM THURSDAY

Rep. Linsky On Focus Tonight

Tonight on WMUA's "Focus" program at 10 P.M., Ken Mosakowski's special guest will be State Representative Martin Linsky (R—Brookline). Linsky, first elected to the Massachusetts House in 1966, represents the 13th Norfolk District and holds the position of Assistant Minority Leader.

The discussion on tonight's live, 60-minute forum is expected to center on Massachusetts politics with special emphasis on the effect of the 18-year-old vote and the involvement of young people in political activism.

Rep. Linsky's appearance on tonight's program is one of a series of events scheduled during his week-long stay at UMass as "Politician in Residence."

BLANK CASSETTE BLITZ!
AT RADIO SHACK
OF
AMHERST

MEMORE CHROMIUM DIOXIDE

	Regular Price	SALE PRICE
C-60	$3.95	$2.99
C-90	$5.75	$3.99

BASF Low Noise, High Output
Buy two C-90's, get one C-60 FREE

STEREX

	Regular Price	SALE PRICE
C-60	$1.09	89¢

Thursday, Friday, and Saturday Only: Oct. 21-23

318 COLLEGE St. - Rt. 9
256-8368

Mon.-Wed. 10:00 - 5:30
Thurs. & Fri. 10:00 - 8:00
Saturday 9:00 - 5:00

Campus Cinemas
256-6411
AMHERST-HADLEY LINE

Monday Nights
Ladies $1.00

CAMPUS III
Start's 7:15

Grove Press presents a new film experience
S-M
a documentary about sado-masochism for those who love it and for those who are "curious."

Tricia's Wedding
An American romance starring THE COCKETTES
"Hilarious, utterly outrageous"—L.A. Times

UN CHANT D'AMOUR
JEAN GENET'S legendary and long suppressed film.

Three Shows
-In One-

CAMPUS II
At:
7:00
9:00

FINAL DAYS
-Ends Tues.-

THE HIT OF '71.
SUMMER OF '42

CAMPUS I
Rated R-
At: 7:15 & 9:15
Jacqueline Susann's
THE LOVE MACHINE

Right In The Zayre's
Shopping Center - Rt.-9-

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF — Richard C. Hanson
MANAGING EDITOR — David D. Williams
BUSINESS MANAGER — James Gold
EXECUTIVE EDITOR — Barry J. Rubenstein
NEWS EDITOR — Anne C. Stadnicki
SPORTS EDITOR — Earle T. Barroll

ASS'T MANAGING EDITOR — Nathan Gorenstein
PHOTO EDITOR — Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR — Robert Nesti

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR — Emory Rounds
NEWS STAFF — Jan Auman, Charlie Berkow, Dennis Foley, Connie Maranto, Jamie Williams, Bob Callahan
EDITORIAL — Barry Rubenstein
SPORTS — Steve Gershwin
DARKROOM — Gary Alpaugh, Jim Reardon, Terry Wanczyk

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administration read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the views of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, and letters represent the personal views of the writers.

"Observe Closely, Senator, The Curve Of The Wing, The Thrust Of The Engine, The Roundness Of The Wheels — "

Art Buchwald

Phase 2

WASHINGTON--I was putting a Phase 2 sticker in my living-room window to prove I supported the President's economic game plan, when my wife came by.

"What are you doing?" she demanded to know.

"Read it. It says, 'WE FIGHT INFLATION--WE SUPPORT THE U.S. ECONOMIC PROGRAM.'

"It means that as loyal Americans we have joined a volunteer army of wage earners, executives, bankers and consumers to fight the godless hordes of inflation."

"We have?" she asked.

"Yes. Don't you remember the other night the President said that we should look at his program, not as Democrats or Republicans, workers or businessmen, farmers or consumers, but as Americans? Fighting inflation is everybody's business, he told us. Well, showing this sticker is the first step."

"But I don't understand how showing a sticker will fight inflation."

"It is a warning to everyone from the milkman to the Avon lady that we're willing to lay down our lives for the President's game plan. When they come to the door we will say 'No, thank you, we shall not contribute one dime to the spiraling forces of inflation that have been unleashed all over this land."

"I thought the President wanted us to spend money so there will be jobs and a strong economy."

"He does," I said. "But at the same time he is asking us all to show restraint. He says, buy things but don't expect higher wages, because if you get a raise that means prices will have to rise, and the whole thing will be self-defeating."

"How can we spend more money if we can't get more money to spend?" My wife demanded.

"Now you're thinking like a Democrat," I said disgustedly. "We can get more money by going to the banks and borrowing it. Then we can buy things, which will perk up the economy and make it possible for factories to tool up, people to be employed and stockholders to get dividends."

"You mean stockholders are going to get dividends?"

"Of course. You don't expect stockholders to make sacrifices during a wage-price freeze, do you?"

"Why should people who work be frozen, but people who clip coupons be allowed to make all the profits they want to?" she asked.

"Because, my dear, the only incentive business has is profits. If you take profits away from people, they won't go out and buy stocks. Then the stock market will suffer, and that could be very bad for the country."

"Well, what am I supposed to do?"

"Increase your productivity. Instead of doing two washloads a day, do three. Instead of vacuuming one room, vacuum two. Drive the kids to nursery school four times a week instead of three."

"Is that going to lick inflation?" she wanted to know.

"Maybe yes, maybe no, but it is sure going to scare the hell out of the Japanese.

"You mean if every American woman did twice the number of chores she does now, the Japanese will be worried?"

"Right on. If they see our women are willing to make sacrifices to increase their productivity, it will have a fantastic psychological effect on the Japanese yen."

"And what are you going to do?"

"I'm going out and fight inflation in the streets, so I'll never have to fight it in my home."

Copyright 1971, Los Angeles Times.

A Matter Of Convention

By MATT TACKEFF
EDITORIAL STAFF

This past week, UMass Student Senate President Lee Sandwen attended what was billed as an "International Student Union Conference on Vietnam," a billing grandiose enough that one might get the impression that any resolutions the conferees might have passed would constitute inspired revelations. However, Mr. Sandwen's report to the UMass community in Monday's Collegian indicate that this important sounding convention was probably little more than a get together of schoolboy Lenins, the type one would find on any college campus any day of the week.

Despite the convention's billing, Mr. Sandwen's own description of it indicates that nothing new or significant was accomplished by it. "Everyone felt it (the war) was the Focus (sic) point of the United States imperialistic designs on the whole world, symbolic of the U.S.' attempts to use technology to destroy national movements and national aspirations. Remember "bomb 'em back to the stone age.'"

....Sandwen's rhetoric speaks for itself. His report of the goings on is more of the same old leftist gobbillygoop that we are spoon fed day after day after day. But the never-ending gobbillygoop is not what is outrageous....one can tolerate as much as they care to dish out, just like one can tolerate the Osmond Brothers on the Hatch jukebox. What is really outrageous and revolting is Sandwen's pretention that he went to this convention to "represent the United States Student Population." That pretention, I submit, is a sham.

No doubt many people agree with Sandwen's views on the war. It is most likely that most of the students at UMass agree with or don't care what Sandwen has to say. Mere numerical superiority is irrelevant. What is important is that those who disagree with him, no matter how few in number, stand up and tell it like it is: that Lee Sandwen has NO DAMN RIGHT to take an ideological stand in the name of the "United States Student Population." His ideas, including his political convictions, are exclusively his to determine and cannot be delegated to or prescribed by anyone else. This is not a matter of representation but of individual rights. The whole thing is about as ludicrous as placing the issue of the war on a campus-wide referendum, as engineered yearly by the "anti-war" activists. Quite properly, the majority of students, regardless of their views, find no need to participate in that annual hoax.

It is important that those students who value their independent convictions, pro or con, demand that the next time Lee Sandwen attends one of his "conventions", he speaks FOR HIMSELF and ONLY HIMSELF.

Keep The Faith

Every American heart must surely be beating more proudly today after the steadfast stand our leaders have been taking in defending our gold.

Despite extreme pressures from the other 117 members of the International Monetary Fund, we have stalwartly refused to raise the price of our gold from its traditional $35 an ounce.

A few ignorant laymen may feel our leaders are making a mistake. After all, we still have close to 10,000 tons of gold buried away in Fort Knox.

"Why not jack up the price to $39.95 or even $42.50 with Green Stamps," the ignorant laymen will say, "and really stick these stupid foreigners?"

SUCH SUGGESTIONS show an appalling lack of knowledge of international monetary affairs. For ever since Mr. Nixon announced his New Economic Plan, it's been illegal for us to sell our gold to either Americans or foreigners for any amount of dollars.

Thus it would be a terrible mistake to increase the number of dollars a person would have to pay for the gold we won't sell him. As it is now, we have more than $10 billion worth at Fort Knox. If we increased the price only 10 percent, we'd have more than $11 billion.

This, it's plain to see, would give us another billion dollars worth of gold that we don't know what to do with.

That we don't know what to do with the 10,000 tons we've got is obvious. We can't sell it and we certainly can't give it away. It's government property. You can't give away government property.

ON THE OTHER HAND, keeping it entails a tremendous waste. Have you ever seen Fort Knox? Think of all those guards and machine guns and police dogs and electronic devices on vigil around the clock preventing thieves from stealing this stuff we don't know what to do with.

True, gold is good for filling teeth. But 10,000 tons is roughly 320 million ounces. And you can fill 30 teeth with an ounce. So we have enough gold on hand to fill 9.6 billion teeth. This is not only more cavities than we've got; it's more teeth than we've got.

It should come as no surprise, then, to learn that most forward-looking economists now feel we should throw our gold away. If you merely consider the expense of keeping it, this makes sense. But there are two drawbacks.

For one thing, when you think of all the sweat and callouses and toil that went into digging it up out of the ground so that we could rebury it under the ground, throwing it away seems a shame. Secondly, say what you will about gold, it isn't biologically degradable. Scattering 20 million pounds of it around the countryside is going to create an awful mess.

BUT THIS SUGGESTS the solution: disposable gold plates and no-return gold beer cans.

The increasing use of paper plates is a drain on our timber resources. Manufacturing aluminum cans requires vast amounts of hydroelectric power, which in turn means damming our wild rivers.

Thus we see that disposable gold plates and no-return gold beer cans would be a giant ecological advance — particularly if we can convince housewives to turn them in for recycling rather than throwing them away.

So let's stop going around with long faces, saying our 10,000 tons of gold isn't good for anything.

I hope this clears up any confusion you may have had about the international monetary system. Meanwhile, if you have any paper dollars in your pocket, keep the faith.

(Reprinted from the Boston Herald-Traveler 10/19/71)

"There's An Art To Analyzing Statistics"

'HOWEVER, UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES, I DON'T HAVE MUCH ALTERNATIVE . . . .

Letters To The Editor

Funds For Fiction

To the Editor:

I have just finished reading Bob Zelman's article "Steal This University," and I would like to comment on the section "Free Money."

I have been treasurer of the UMass Science Fiction Society for three years now, and I can assure you that anyone who thinks that they can get money for an R.S.O. group just by asking for it is in for a big surprise. We maintain a 4,000-volume library, publish our own magazine, and send delegates to an annual convention--with absolutely no money from R.S.O. (The Student Senate did give us $300 once--in 1966--to send three people to a convention in Cleveland.)

Our Student Activities tax? With 50 members, at $40 each, we have paid $200 this semester alone in taxes, and we never see any of it.

I'm not blaming R.S.O., since they don't allocate funds. No, it's the Student Senate who is to blame. I resent having to pay for Spectrum which is of no interest to me, when the magazine that I am interested in can't get a dime.

How do we get money? We spend our weekends putting up posters for our movies. We have to charge dues, after we have paid an "Activity Tax."

The Student Senate is not totally disinterested, however. We still have to follow their financial procedures, their rules, and their policies. If we don't, they can disband us, and to top it all off, they would get all the books and supplies that we paid for.

So, Mr. Zelman, if it's so easy to get money, where can we get some? Certainly not from Student Senate--they just don't care.

Evelyn Chimelis

The Home Front

To the Editor:

By now most students on this campus realize and are aware that the push is on to register those 18 and older to vote. As a resident of Leominister, Mass., I wish to encourage and remind those on campus here at Amherst to register in their hometown. Those from Leominster, especially the ones recently graduated from Leominster High School, cannot help but know and be disgusted with the many serious problems that confront our city: overcrowded schools, a lack of facilities for young people, pollution from our plastic shops, low income housing shortages, and the conditions of our public roads are only a few of the difficulties that the next elected officials must cope with. There are over 100 students on this campus from Leominster. You can have an influence. Your vote and your parents' votes can make the difference. The time remaining is short. The election is Tuesday, November 2. If you have not registered to vote in Leominster and want to know how, or if you wish to vote by absentee ballot please do so soon. If you need more information please call Joe McMilleon at 228 Moore house, the phone number is 546-5340.

Monday and Wednesday nights
Tuesdays & Thursdays 9:30 a.m.-11 a.m.; 1:30 p.m.-5 p.m.; 6:30 p.m. on Friday all day except 12:00-2:30 p.m. Keep trying to reach me. YOUR VOTE CAN MAKE A DIFFERENCE.

Joe McMilleon

Letters To The Editor

As in previous years the MDC will continue to print letters to the editor. The only requirements are that they be typed at sixty spaces, double-spaced and absolutely no longer than two pages in length. All letters must be signed and the author's address and telephone numbers must be included. No letter will be published without this information. Also, no letters will be printed without the name of the author. Please note this change in policy.

All letters are subject to editing either for content or space according to the judgment of the editors. Also, due to space limitations, we do not guarantee that all letters will be printed.

THE EDITORS

When Peter Shot The Sky

In the Africanian jungle, darkly, wet, and hopelessly...
Dampness, steaming from the leaves, from Peter, from Pooh, and from me...
Cawing, distant, with screams, and lost drums panting down...
The sun was gone three days ago.
Gone to search some safe way out of here.
The cold fires we had tried to make were chased by morning glows.
The many distrusting and hungry eyes...
you could feel their pupils grow.
We were not molested, though,
for we were demons here,
and our presence was not quite.
Celebrities known to none in the jungle night.
It was not right.
We became deep shadows, soon,
and did our private deeds.
Peter, with his tiny bow,
to shoot the clouds with honey seeds... and Pooh to set his pots below the trees
to catch the sweet rain.
And me, with my little papers,
and my long-stem pipe, and matches,
all searching for the land of tea,
we dreamt, all three.
One day, there appeared a native friend,
all green and honey gold.
Eyes withdrawn deep in his head,
so dark, from whence an orange smoke unrolled.
And from his ears were growing, nicely,
patches or orange mold.
He spieled us tales of flowers, tall and mellow...
and pointed through the trees.
Taught safaris, of none returned,
where tea was growing free.
The Land of Tea.
A tiny bag tied 'round his waist...
come suppertime, the four of us became three...
the three of us, two...the two of us, me...
My mind was lost forever that evening.
Peter and Pooh kept gently time.
Four days passed, and we were led upon a stairway of stone.
Up and up the tower-way
we drifted, and were gone.
Atop the tower-way did stretch sweet fields or orange loon.
Tall and precious, we observed,
and higher than the moon.
The jungle grew high all around...
The Land of Tea we'd found.
Helpless all the rest of our lives for as long as our hearts would pound.
Running down the tower-way beneath the stars, flying over the jungle trees and eyes.
Years and years and years we reigned and kept our kingdom dry.
Only honeyed water flowed...
when Peter shot the sky.

T. David Barrett

Editorial Points

One student who recently withdrew from the University reported that he was asked to turn in his football tickets. We wonder if the Cashier's Office has been following the exploits of the Redman football team this year.

* * * * *

As opposed to the New York Times which prints all the news that's fit to print, The Collegian prints all the news that fits. And makes up the rest.

* * * * *

It was reported that when Vice-President Agnew asked the dictator in Greece why the country was no longer a democratic state, the leader responded, "It's Greek to me." And Plato turned over in his grave.

The Quaker Vigil

WASHINGTON—It is cold these nights and I wake up at 3 a.m. and snap on the electric blanket. Then I try to get back to sleep. Mr. Nixon is going to Peking and to Moscow and everything is all right with the world. But then I think about those antiwar young people huddled on the stone pediment of the fence before the White House. That does it. One minute past three. It must be cold under the yellow street lamps with the occasional car and the guards with radios changing place every four hours, and the fountain. What are they doing out there? What am I doing here in bed?

They are the last remnants of the anti-war demonstrations. They keep their vigil 24 hours a day, rain or shine, hot or cold. They have been at it about 150 days now. They are quiet; they don't cause disturbances. They are under the auspices of the Quakers but most of them, I think, are not Quakers. They are uncouth enough, about as uncouth as college students, and most of them wear jeans, and the boys wear long hair mostly, and some have beards that make them look like Sophocles or Jove or Jesus. Some wear sandals and they might be hippies except what hippies would stay out in front of an iron fence night and day for some preposterous cause?

A group of 30 or 40 or so. They take turns in shifts, maybe six or eight hours each. There are no rules; it is all voluntary; they can come or not as they want; they sleep at a friendly settlement, or over at the William Penn House, 515 East Capitol. It is called the Quaker Vigil. People like this always take contributions. Their flier says make checks out to William Ralph Walker, whoever he is.

"The worst time is when it rains," says Paul Goodwin. He is an ex-sergeant from Vietnam and wears an army fatigue jacket. "When it's cold you can walk around. But rain!—we had a dozen or so one night when it rained. We only had ponchos for a few. Well, we just got wet."

"Any pneumonia?"

"No, just a sniffle or two."

As I lie in my bed with the warmth coming up now from the electric blanket I wonder about them. Sensible people don't act that way. It must be something they feel; something important. They hate war. They imagine they are doing something about Vietnam.

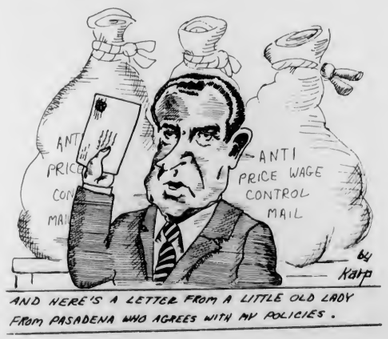
The cops don't bother them. Further along is a man with a sandwich board protesting some incomprehensible wrong by the government, and down by the place where the tittering tourists come out is the comic with a sign demanding equal rights for husbands. He laughs and they laugh and everybody laughs.

This morning I talked to a boy with red hair that hasn't been cut, I guess, for half a year, who said, "Just call me Mike." He has been hitchhiking from California. Has been on the road a long time but came to a half here. He liked it—men, women, blacks, whites—they seemed to respect each other.

The sun was shining across on Lafayette Park with the fountain playing on the White House lawn and the acorns popping down on the sidewalk. The group had a few signs: "Dear Mom and Dad—Your silence is killing me...in Vietnam, on campus, in the streets." The longest one was spread out like a scroll and began, "We utterly deny all outward wars and strife..." It was signed "George Fox, 1st Quaker; year 1661.

How silly can you get? Let's see, that was 310 years ago, and wars haven't stopped since and they won't either. I turned over in bed but I couldn't get to sleep. There was the boy who said his name was "Gypsy." He had troubled eyes.

"Your first name?" I asked.



"Just 'Gypsy'," he said brusquely, as though it was none of my business, which it wasn't.

He was down from Montreal, he said, aged 17. He looked as though something inside hurt him; he said his brother had come back from Vietnam and they were all so glad to see him, only one of his arms stopped at the wrist. He glared at me. "I'm here for him," he said shortly, and turned away.

Next month Mr. Nixon is expected to announce plans for withdrawal of all the ground combat forces in Vietnam, ending next Spring, leaving only residual forces and helicopters and those Daisy Cutters, and he is probably turning the unused defoliants—a couple of million gallons of them—over to the South Vietnamese. They are pretty toxic but it hasn't actually been proved that they produce sterility and cancer. So...back to sleep. What if a still, small, protest continues at the White House with a candle? Why can't those kids grow up?

Dammit, the electric blanket is unplugged.

Reprinted from Boston Globe 10/19/71.)

AND HERE'S A LETTER FROM A LITTLE OLD LADY FROM PASADENA WHO AGREES WITH MY POLICIES.

School of Ed. Announces Modular Credit Offerings

(Editor's Note: The following is a partial list of modular credit offerings of the School of Education. Any Student regardless of major is eligible to receive credit for the experiences. 15 modular credits equals one University credit. For more information, contact the Modular Credit Office, 227C, School of Education.

In addition to participating in the listed modular offerings a student may also arrange modular independent study.

All modular independent study proposals must be relevant to the discipline of education. Normally, they require prior approval from the Modular Credit Office and must be done under the direction of a qualified supervisor.)

NAME OF THE OFFERING: Creative Utilization of TV in the Classroom
DESCRIPTION: Abstract, practical and future role of television as educator will be examined. Hopefully, technical appreciation as well as technical competence will be combined with critical thinking and sophistical awareness of the educational potentials of television with the combination resulting in innovative research designs.

LAB: Students will be introduced to videotape machinery and the technical world of closed circuit television. After that, they will have an opportunity to create and technically produce a series of closed circuit broadcasts.

SEMINAR: An outgoing group will be established to probe, analyze and discover why television is a unique educator. Some of the many issues that will be raised are: nature and enrichment of sensory judgment; self concept and motor development of preschool children; identify and image agreement or conflict-mass media or other media, etc.

NUMBER OF MODULES: LAB 1/2 mod per hr
SEMINAR 1 mod per hr
PROJECT-INDEPENDENT STUDY 30 mods per project

SCHEDULE: The Television Laboratory will be open 4 hours a day, 5 days a week to begin Fall 1971.

TIME AND PLACE: To be arranged with the instructor
For further information, please contact Nat Rutstein, S-1597, in Room 22.

NAME OF THE OFFERING: Still Photography in the Classroom
DESCRIPTION: Photography is one of the most important means of visual communication today. This course is designed to give students fundamental knowledge which they will be able to use in their classrooms in the future.

LAB: The laboratory will examine basic photographic phenomena such as what happens inside a camera and what happens in a darkroom. Students will learn how to process and print black and white film, and fundamentals of color photography.

SEMINAR: Students will discuss applications of what they have learned in the lab, to what they can do in a classroom.

PROJECT/INDEPENDENT STUDY: Following the lab and seminars, students will be expected to produce project(s) which can be used in classroom situations. These projects will be negotiable in terms of modular credit.

NUMBER OF MODULES: LAB 1/2 mod per hr
SEMINAR 1 mod per hr, (20 hours strongly suggested)

SCHEDULE: Contact Leigh Svenson-545 1599(office) 253-2412(home)

NAME OF THE OFFERING: Film Making for Classroom Teachers
DESCRIPTION:

LAB: This lab will explore the fundamentals of film making: use of Super 8 mm film cameras, editors, splicers and projectors. Techniques of photographing and editing film to make clear statements will be examined. A special section of the lab will deal with film animation. Miss Carol Somes, a graduate of the workshop, will lead the animation section.

SEMINAR: This will follow up the laboratory and explore the potentials of the film for use in the classroom. These lab sessions will last for four weeks. This will be the culmination of the lab seminar experience. The student is expected to prepare a script or storyboard for a film that meets stated educational needs or that explores the potential of film for use by elementary or high school students. A completed film is required to obtain credit

INDEPENDENT STUDY:

NUMBER OF MODULES: LAB 1/2hr per mod
SEMINAR 1 mod per hr (20 hrs strongly recommended
Project/Independent Study 30 mods per project

SCHEDULE: Contact Juan Caban Room 22B 545 1597.

NAME OF THE OFFERING:
DESCRIPTION:

LAB: Reading and Listening

This experience will involve an overview of what happens in a Reading Program. Discussions, observations and practical experiences will be provided in traditional and innovative techniques; the other major topic will be discussion of the process of learning to read and listen.

SEMINAR: This will follow up the laboratory experiences and will be completely individualized. Seminars will last for four weeks; students will be admitted to the seminars by having a proposal accepted by the instructor.

INDEPENDENT STUDY: This will be the culmination of the lab/seminar experience. A student will be expected to have a research design and proposal prepared for a research study, or a clearly defined proposal for a curriculum development project or other development plans before he is admitted to this stage.

NUMBER OF MODULES: LAB 1/2 mod per hr
SEMINAR 1 mod per hr
Project/Independent Study 45 mods per project

SCHEDULE: Project/Independent 45 mods per project Study
The Reading Center will be open 4 hours a day, 5 days a week, to begin Fall 1971

NOTE: For further information on any of these four Media Offerings please contact the Media Office, Room 22.

NAME OF THE OFFERING: Media Research and Analyses-Measuring the Communication Effectiveness of Television Network News Broadcasting.

DESCRIPTION: This modular experience will incorporate a study currently being conducted by the Media Center. The tools of research are a cross coupled questionnaire and telephone interviewing. Evaluation of responses across a wide range of variables and an on going critical examination of the study will also ensue. WNET-Channel 13 in New York has expressed considerable interest regarding the project and some help and guidance from them will be forthcoming. Both graduates and upper level undergraduates will be accepted pursuant to a brief interview with Robert Antil or Nat Rutstein. Students should gain knowledge about the tools and techniques of media research and analysis. Additionally, a thorough knowledge of journalism will ensue. Each student's contribution to the project will be evaluated, and each student will be expected to contribute some written analysis of group and project results.

NUMBER OF MODULES: 50 mods for the project; time requirement twice a week, three hours each, throughout the semester.

SCHEDULE: Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday 6 p.m. Media Center.

For further information, contact Bob Antil in the Media Center, or call 584 3926.

NAME OF THE OFFERING: Modular Topics in Principals and Methods in Teaching Mathematics in Elementary Schools

DESCRIPTION:
2. October 21 Exploring the Use of Metric Rods in Elementary School Mathematics
3. October 28 Exploring Basic Computation and Structure in Elementary School Mathematics
4. November 4 Exploring Geometry in Elementary School Math
5. November 18 Exploring Measurement in Elementary School Mathematics
6. December 2 Exploring Graphs, Relations, and Functions in Elementary School Mathematics
7. December 9 Independent Exploration Lab Session a chance to explore many of the best available materials and books for Teaching and Learning Elementary School Mathematics
8. December 16 Independent Exploration Lab Session a chance to explore many of the best available materials and books for Teaching and Learning Elementary School Mathematics

One mod for each experience Thursday, 1:00 p.m. 3:30 p.m., in Room 228.

The experiences are limited to approximately 20 students. Interested students should sign up with Dr. Bill Masalski in advance to avoid disappointment.

NUMBER OF MODULES:
SCHEDULE:
NOTE:

Mini-Course Tutoring

NES, an inner city EOEO delegate agency in Springfield, wants people who are really enthused by a subject, craft, or activity to gear their knowledge to kids in Springfield and share his enthusiasm by teaching "mini courses" to groups of one to three pupils. Students may choose the age group with which they want to work. It is hoped that a commitment will be made to teach one session per week. To receive credit, the student must complete a lesson plan form, spend an hour teaching the course in one of the NES centers in Springfield (NES is seeking transportation for tutors), and submit an evaluation of the session to the NES and faculty supervisors. Open only to undergraduate students.

NAME OF THE OFFERING:
DESCRIPTION:

NUMBER OF MODULES: 2 mods for each session (4 hours)

SCHEDULE: To be arranged with the instructor. Contact Jim Theroux through his mailbox in Room 126.

NAME OF THE OFFERING:
DESCRIPTION:- Alternative Forms of Education
How do you establish an alternative within a school? Will discuss the community pressure, administrative pressure and pressures you'll have to endure to maintain your integrity. Will also discuss alternative staffing and curriculum, teacher training, community involvement, funding, resource allocation suggestions of various ways in which you can get involved.

NUMBER OF MODULES: Variable: 1-15, according to the contract.

SCHEDULE: To be arranged with the instructor. Please call 545 1538, or drop in Room 100.

NAME OF THE OFFERING:
DESCRIPTION:- Theater Group Workshop
Part A. Tuesday and Thursday evening will be devoted to developing a repertoire of exercises useful to teachers interested in the effective domain of the whole person with special emphasis on body awareness. The objective of the experience is to counteract alienation though the use of theater games, Yoga and other related physical exercises. Once the techniques are learned, students will teach in special workshops for the Humanistic Education Center and others who ask for assistance.

Part B. Meets with the people above, plus Saturdays, to develop a close knit troupe of actors, capable of creating out of the workshops, a performance which we hope to take on tour. (we have a business manager) also perhaps a puppet show for kids.

Part C. Open workshop on Sundays for anybody who wishes to get their toes wet participating and teaching newcomers. There will be no credit for this group. It is more of a community service and recruitment for the other groups.

NUMBER OF MODULES:
SCHEDULE:

Tutoring at the Crocker Farm School (Open for both graduates and undergraduates)

One modular credit will be offered for every two hours spent by a University student, under the guidance of the school teacher in tutoring individuals and small groups at Crocker Farm. The teacher would prepare the lesson to be taught by the student. In addition, each student would be expected to meet weekly for a brief discussion with the counselor. The tutoring area might be reading, math, science, etc., and would be determined by the need of the student(s) being tutored. Prior to being accepted, the student must present himself to the principal and the counselor for an interview. Beyond these requirements for consistency in schedule and carrying out lesson plans, there are no other responsibilities for successful completion of the modular offering.

One mod for every two hours of work
To be arranged with the teacher at the school.
For further information, please call Ella Cochrane at 756-6726.

Masters Degree Program in Systems Engineering at Boston University Interviewing
November 10

Happy Nite
Every Thursday
on the bandstand
THE SABER MEN
(Rock Band)
The most exciting entertainment of Handsome Musician.
Quonset Restaurant
Hadley, Rt. 9
From TP91 - Exit 19

CHINA
中美外交
七-年的新開始
RUSSELL JOHNSON
AMERICAN FRIENDS SERVICE COMMITTEE
Recently back from the People's Republic of China after visiting Peking, Yenan, Nanking, Tsian and Shanghai.
"U.S. China Policy, a Fresh Start, 1971"
Wednesday, October 20, 8 p.m.
Student Union Ballroom
a dvp presentation
中 王

At Mount Holyoke:

Award-Winning Author to Discuss Autobiography

Arna W. Bontemps, Florence Purington Visiting Lecturer at Mount Holyoke College for the fall semester, will present his second lecture, "Some Notes On An Autobiography (With Readings)," tomorrow at 8:00 p.m. in Sidney D. Gamble Auditorium.

Mr. Bontemps' "Readings and Remarks" on October 7 included selections from his own writings and readings from the works of his fellow artists of the Harlem Renaissance interspersed with extemporaneous remarks. In his second lecture, he will turn to his latest work, his autobiography, which is "in the typewriter." He has published more than 30 books, but he has put aside the story of his own life until now.

A native of Louisiana, Mr. Bontemps calls himself a Californian, although he now lives in Tennessee. He graduated from Pacific Union College, and with his new degree left for New York in 1924. His participation in the Harlem Renaissance was substantial, and the publication of his first novel in 1931, "God Sends Sunday," is said by some to mark the end of the "upsurge of creativity." The book was later adapted for dramatic and musical productions.

For Arna Bontemps, "God Sends Sunday" marked a beginning of a succession of publications including such novels as "Black Thunder." "Drums At Dusk," histories, biographies, anthologies, and books for young people. Some of his best-known works, "Story Of The Negro, "100 Years of Negro Freedom," and "American Negro Poetry," have received a variety of awards.

Mr. Bontemps later received a Master's degree from the University of Chicago and was honored with an L.H.D. from Morgan State Collee. He was librarian at Fisk University and taught at the University of Illinois, Chicago Circle Campus. He has served as visiting professor and curator of the James Weldon Johnson collection of Yale University.

Mr. Bontemps has twice been awarded fellowships by the Julius Rosenwald Fund, and he later served as literary advisor and member of the Committee on Fellowships for the fund. He received a John Simon Guggenheim Fellowship in 1949 which coincided with his sabbatical leave from Fisk University. Under a grant from the African Universities Program of the Ford Foundation, Mr. Bontemps visited east Africa in 1960 where he spent most of his time at Makerere College in Kampala, Uganda.

At Amherst:

"Films For Intellectuals"

A "Films for Intellectuals" film series, open to the public without charge, will begin at Amherst College tomorrow.

Sponsored by the College's Lecture Committee, all films in the series will be shown at 7:30 p.m. in the Converse Assembly Room, Converse Hall, at the college.

The film schedule is: "Breathing Together: Revolution of the Electric Family" by Morley Markson, tomorrow; "Branches" by Ed Emschwiller, October 28; "Finnegan's Wake" by Mary Ellen Bute, November 4; "Duet for Cannibals" by Susan Sontag, November 18; "Antonio Das Mortes" by Glauber Rocha, December 2; "The Hour of the Furnaces" by Octavio Getino and Fernando E. Solanas, Part I: "Neocolonialism and Violence," December 15; Part II: "Act of Liberation," December 16; Part III: "Violence and Liberation" and "Black Panthers: A Report" by Agnes Varda, December 17.

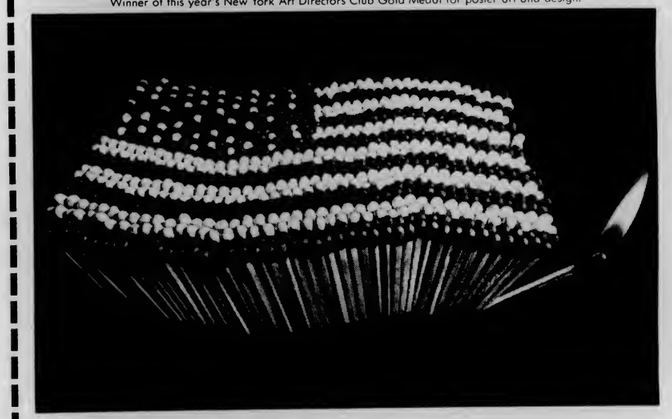
The first film in the series, "Breathing Together: Revolution of the Electric Family," is a "commentary on where America is today and where it may be going in the future." Key personalities in the recent student protest movement, including Jerry Rubin, Abbie Hoffman and Allen Ginsberg, are featured in the film.

Recipient of the Ann Arbor Film Festival's Grand Prize, Markson's film was also a selection of international critics at the 1971 Cannes Film Festival.

At Hampshire:

Computers

Dr. Herman H. Goldstine of IBM Corporation will speak on "Science, Policy and Computers" at Hampshire College tomorow at 8 p.m. in the East Lecture Hall of the Academic Building.



Dr. Goldstine worked extensively with John von Neumann on the development of the first computers. He was assistant project director of the electronic computer project at the Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton, from 1946 to 1954, and was acting project director 1954-57. He is a permanent member of the Institute's School of Mathematics, and is now an IBM fellow.

During his distinguished career Dr. Goldstine has served as a consultant to various government and military agencies. In 1967 he was elected to the Board of Trustees at Hampshire College for a five year term.

Dr. Goldstine's lecture is the fifth event in the series sponsored by the School of Natural Science and Mathematics to foster the exchange of ideas on the relationship between scientific achievements and public policy.

"A TRIFLE BIT" KNIT TOPS
to match any pants-
From $3.95 to $5.95 -
Why Pay More
wear-else
Wearhouse Open Fri. til 9

PROTEST
HIGH HOTEL RATES IN NEW YORK CITY
Stay at the world-famous Hotel Roosevelt for just $10 A DAY SINGLE
$15.00 Double
$ 3.00 for 3rd person in room
Veteran's Day - Reserve now for a gala 3-Day Holiday weekend.
Get into it on the East Side, the best location in the city. You're within walking distance of famous shops, boutiques, popular East Side pubs, the U.N., the Main Library, Museums and those great little restaurants from every country in the world.
The Roosevelt HOTEL
For reservations call FREE
800-522-6449 New York State
800-221-2690 All other States
Madison Avenue & 45th Street
New York, N.Y. 10017
A REALTY HOTEL

GIANT 30 x 40
FULL COLOR POSTER
ONLY $2.50
Winner of this year's New York Art Directors Club Gold Medal for poster art and design.

CHOPPY PRODUCTIONS, INC., P.O. Box #32, Lenox Hill Station, New York, New York 10021
Enclosed is my check (or money order) for $_____. Please send me _____ flag poster(s) at only $2.50 each (including postage and handling). Please include sales tax where applicable.
NAME_____
ADDRESS_____
CITY_____ STATE_____ ZIP CODE_____
Sorry, we cannot handle Canadian or foreign orders.

Culturnatives

The Roles That Men Play

By GILBERT J. SALK

Last week the topic of this column was women's liberation. I ended by saying that part of women's lib involved the liberation of men. I'd like to take some time today to explore that theme a little further. Too few men are cognizant of the societal pressures that act to force them into certain roles. Let me note at the beginning that the roles themselves are not necessarily bad, but the fact that the pressures exist is bad.

The problem, as with the role of women, is that men find themselves trapped at times, without even being aware that they have been trapped, that choices have been made for them, that their futures are predetermined to fall within certain clearly defined boundaries.

One of the most obvious examples of this is the draft. Men are to be soldiers. The role of fighting, killing, and dying for their country is assigned to them, and they have little or no voice about whether they will serve in such a capacity or not.

A corollary to this role is the defining of masculinity in terms of physical strength and combativeness. Is it really true that a man who is unwilling to fight is less masculine than the guy who goes out, gets drunk, and picks a fight with the first person who happens by? Is the dude who goes into the Army really more masculine than the one who decides that killing, for any reason, goes against his moral code and refuses to put on a uniform, in spite of the massed social pressure against his stand? Is the guy who beats his wife or girlfriend proving his manhood? What about the guy who feels he must be better than his wife or girlfriend intellectually, in sports, in games?

The culturally-defined male role forces most men into certain male-female and male-male behavior patterns which may or may not be comfortable.

Men are supposed to be sexually aggressive, so they feel that they must try to get a girl into bed if there is any opportunity at all. This attitude affects which girls he wants to meet, which he wants to get to know better, how he will relate to any woman he gets to know, and what will be on his mind while he is talking to her. Sex is fun, but does it really have to be the major factor in every male-female relationship?

Our society tries to make us believe that the answer is yes. Things sometimes reach the absurdity of pushing men to try to go to bed with a woman solely because they are afraid that she will think of them as less than men if they don't try.

As sex becomes more casual, as coed dorms and other similar living situations become more common, this problem lessens in impact, but it still exists.

The affect of role definition is perhaps even more strongly felt in male-male relationships. Most of us find touch a very important method of communication, but we are afraid to use touch to communicate with our male friends. Our fear is that we may be called "queer," that it would compromise our male image. (Many men are so afraid of this, in fact, that they feel that it is necessary to attack those who exhibit signs of homosexuality, in order to reassure themselves about their own masculinity.)

Our culture defines the male as the breadwinner of the family. The man must give up forty hours every week to get the money his family needs to live. He must also meet their demands for luxuries. If he fails to do this, he has not fulfilled his masculine role. In such a role, however, his freedom, his chances to grow as an individual, his ability to relate to his wife and children, all get sacrificed.

There's no easy solution to this problem. The subjugation of women augments the subjugation of men, which increases the subjugation of women, and the circle just keeps going round. It is easy to say that the answer is human liberation, but none of us have ever been liberated enough to have any idea of what that means. We have to experiment: that much is obvious. Men have to recognize that the average level of consciousness of women about human liberation is higher, because more of them have recognized that they are not free and have a jump on the men in terms of starting to explore ways of breaking the chains.

Perhaps the place for people to start is to simply sit down together and spend some time bitching. Then get below the bitching to an analysis of what's wrong. Then give support to each other's attempt to make changes in their own lives, and get support as you try to change yours.

Remember one thing. The shit always seems to get heavier when you're really starting to move out from under it. Support can make the shoveling easier.

NOTES

There's been some favorable response to the idea of a CULTURNATIVES Rap Session, so let's try one tomorrow and see what happens. It'll be Thursday at 2:30 in the lounge on the ninth floor of the Campus Center. If you can't come on time, come late. We'll talk about your reactions to the column, and whatever else comes up. If it works, maybe we can do it as a regular gig. Try to come.

I'd like to mention Mother Earth News one more time. It's a fine magazine about doing the changes many of us are just thinking about. I have copies of it which you can look at and/or buy. Drop by the draft counseling office in 923 CC to check it out.

PEACE.

Spanish Poetry At Mt. Holyoke Tomorrow

Professor Bernardo Gicovate, Chairman of the Department of Spanish and Portuguese at Stanford University, will present a lecture on Spanish poetry tomorrow at 8:15 p.m. in the New York Room at Mount Holyoke College.

Born in Brazil, Professor Gicovate studied at the University of Buenos Aires before coming to the United States. He received his B.A. degree from Bowdoin College, an M.A. degree from the University of North Carolina, and completed his Ph.D. degree at Harvard University.

Prof. Gicovate taught at Randolph-Macon Women's College, Boston University, the University of Oregon, and was a visiting professor at the University of California at Berkeley before he was named professor of Spanish and Portuguese and Director of the Center of Latin American Studies at Tulane University. At Tulane he was a professor of Joan E. Ciruti, professor of Spanish and Dean of Studies at Mount Holyoke. In the late 1960's Prof. Gicovate was appointed to his present position at Stanford University.

Prof. Gicovate is the author of publications including Julio Herrera y Reissig and the Symbolists, La Poesia de Juaa Ramon Jiminez, Ensayo de exegesis, and Conceptos fundamentales de literatura comparada. Until recently he, along with Miss Ciruti, was a contributing poetry editor for the "Handbook of Latin American Studies." His research in poetry and comparative literature has produced other works dealing with the literature of both the Spanish peninsula and Latin America.

PUMPKIN SALE

Sponsored by Maroon Keys & Scrolls

October 20 — 29

10 a.m. - 4 p.m.

In Front of the Student Union

WE'RE ALL FAMILIAR WITH . . .

PHYSICAL EDUCATION

DRUG EDUCATION

AND

SEX EDUCATION

BUT WHAT ABOUT . . .

EMOTIONAL EDUCATION!

Read

HOW TO GROW UP

and

HOW TO HELP OTHERS

GROW UP EMOTIONALLY

PRICE $8.00 BY: R.H. TURCOTTE M.D.

Available at:
PHOENIX BOOKSHOP
JEFFREY AMHERST BOOKSHOP or send check to:
Institute for Advancement of Mental Health
25 Main St. Northampton, Mass.

Fabricworld

EVERYTHING FOR SEWING ENTHUSIASTS AND ENTHUSIASTIC BEGINNERS!

Sale Ends Saturday October 23rd

FABRIC SAVINGS BY THE YARD

MACHINE WASHABLE BONDED SWEATER KNITS 2.88 YARD VAL. to 4.50 54" WIDE

54" WIDE HAND WASHABLE NYLON FLEECE 99c REG. 1.99 YARD

GOTTSCHALK'S COTTON SUEDE 2.49 YARD REGULAR 3.99 MACHINE WASH 'N DRY 54"

PERFECT FOR LOUNGE WEAR & POPULAR COLORS

MACHINE-WASH ORLON® PILE 1.99 REG. 2.99 YD. 58/60" WIDE

• MASTER CHARGE • BANKAMERICARD

• SHOP-AT-HOME FOR CUSTOM-MADE DRAPERIES

*AMHERST 1 Pray St. Open Daily 9:30 - 5:30 Fri. til 9:00 Tel. 549-1058

*NORTHAMPTON 21 Pleasant St. Open Daily 9:30 - 5:30 Thurs. til 9:00 Tel. 584-6306

Should TV Inform or Entertain?

Brinkley Supports Congressional News Scrutiny

WASHINGTON (AP)—Many complaints against broadcast news come from Americans unfamiliar with serious journalism who think television exists to entertain and not inform, NBC commentator David Brinkley said Tuesday. And he supported congressional scrutiny of broadcast news.

"There are never any complaints about bias and slanting when the news is good," Brinkley told a Senate Judiciary subcommittee investigating freedom of the press. "They appear only when the news is bad, and nowadays it often is."

News broadcasters are on the same tube as a succession of "comedians and jugglers," Brinkley said, consequently, "when a face comes on that is not wearing a toothpaste smile and says there's been another riot and more war casualties and taxes are going up...it looks even worse by comparison."

Brinkley said every time television airs pictures of urban arson and looting, for example, he gets hundreds of letters asking why the networks "glorify and dignify this kind of unspeakable conduct" by televising it.

Brinkley said many in the audience want to know about the bad news or "ought to know about it" while the complainers are mainly "listeners who have never until recent years been exposed to anything like serious journalism."

Brinkley told Chairman Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D—N.C., and Sen. Roman Hruska, R—Neb.,-only subcommittee members present that he does not think there is any intimidation of broadcast news by critics even though some witnesses have testified in the past that the government is intimidating television news programs.

Brinkley said he supports the contention of Rep. William L. Springer, R—Ill., that Congress should continually survey television news and documentary programs and publicly criticize the networks when the lawmakers think a subject has been presented unfairly.

C.A. McKnight, editor of The Charlotte N.C., Observer and president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, told the panel he is deeply concerned about recent developments he said could threaten freedom of the press and, consequently, the public's opportunity to get information.

McKnight cited the Supreme Court's recent split decision allowing The New York Times and other papers to publish the so-called Pentagon Papers about the origins of the Vietnam war. He said he was appalled at the government's attempt to restrain the newspapers from printing the reports and disturbed that some Supreme Court justices' decisions lifting the injunctions were not more absolute in defending the newspapers.

McKnight also said the ASNE believes newsmen have a constitutional right to refuse to disclose their news sources. He said government subpoenas of newsmen and their unused notes and film clips have a chilling effect on news organizations.

For All You Mothers

NEW YORK (AP)—The "Sesame Street" people have done it again. Now comes a new show that makes reading interesting and fun.

"The Electric Company," which premiers Monday on 200 public television stations and 12 commercial stations, seems certain to do for reading what "Sesame Street" did for the alphabet and numbers among preschool children.

Subtle humor, outrageous puns and skits performed by a repertory company-among then Bill Cosby, Rita Moreno, Judy Graubert, Morgan Freeman, and Skip Hinnant-are used to coax viewers to read words, phrases and sentences flashed onto the screen. The show has its own rock group, the Short Circus.

This half-hour daily program is aimed at school children 7-9 years old, and particularly those with a reading problem. Its makers believe it also may benefit functionally illiterate teen-agers and adults.

"It's almost a contradiction to use television to teach reading," said David D. Connell, executive producer for the Children's Television Workshop. "But the general agreement was that it was worth trying. And it was agreed that we should use the cafeteria system of using elements from a number of different reading methods.

"This show stretches the technical capabilities of television. It's an extremely difficult show to write. It's tough enough to write a comedy sketch, but one that teaches the 'fr' consonant blend, for instance, is really tough."

Samuel Y. Gibbon Jr., one of the original producers of "Sesame Street," spent a year on a study to see if a reading show was possible. Work on the show itself began early this year.

The $7-million budget for 130 shows was put up by the U.S. Office of Education, Ford Foundation, Carnegie Corp., Corp. for Public Broadcasting, and Mobil Oil Corp.

Arabic Language Lessons

NATIVE SPEAKER TUTOR

Reasonable Charge for Students

Call SEIF SHALABY 546-1045, 7 - 9 p.m.

WMUA

TONIGHT ON 91.1

7:00 pm NEWS - 30 minutes with a five minute recap at 7:25. Area news reported by WMUA NEWS is featured.
7:30 pm - 8:00 VIEWPOINT - a 30 minute public affairs program concentrating on various issues on campus and in the world.
8:00 pm - 11:00 pm UJAMA DRUM - black programming with jazz, soul, poetry, and black views. Also contains news compiled by the news staff of Ujama Drum and a black audio network.
11:00 pm NEWS - another 30 minute report with world, national, regional and local news.
11:30 pm ERIC BENJAMIN SHOW - Eric plays progressive rock til 3:00 am.

Ad Deadline For Tuesday, Oct. 26 Issue 4 PM Thursday

No Paper Monday, Oct. 25

MARLON BRANDO in "On The Waterfront"

*Winner of 8 Academy Awards

TONIGHT - Weds. - 7:15 & 9:30

AMHERST FOLKLORE CENTER (in back of the Lord Jeff)

MDC CLASSIFIED

AUTOS FOR SALE

MGB-1965, rebuilt engine (1800 cc.). Good tire, fine body condition. $400, call 256-8709.
tf10-20

VW-Super Beatle, 1971. Perfect condition. Still on warranty. Call 256-8709.
tf10-20

1959 Mercedes 219 Leather Inter., low mileage. Flawless in all respects, $1300. 546-8788.
tf10-22

1965 Ford Country Sedan Wagon. Light blue, power steering, automatic transmission, reasonable 253-2162.
tf10-22

Jaguar, 1965 black new paint job, 3.8 engine, brakes, tires and exhaust, Call 546-5905 ask for Van or Tony.
tf10-26

1961 Chevy Imp. 4dr., blue V8 good tires, 2 snowtires, new heater fuel pump winterized auto. trans. not abused $400, 6-5035 - 527-2561.
tf10-27

70 MGB exc. running cond. Must sell. 219-8103.
tf10-29

65 Mustang, conv. 35p., good mechanical cond., straight six, 30 miles per gal., $250 or best offer. Call 549-1013 bet. 6:30 p.m.-10:30 p.m.
tf10-20

65 VW bug, excl. con., no rot, undercoated, new engine, on warranty, radio and heater (works) new tires $800.00, 85000 mi. Call Steve 546-5305, exc. wkend.
tf10-22

65 Ford Fairlane, most major parts recently redone plus extras. Price negotiable. Call 584-2777 evenings & weekends. Keep trying.
tf 10-22

'69 VW Bug, $1200 or best offer. Tel. 665-1197 after 5:30, exc. tires.
tf 10-26

67 Buick Skylark, creampuff, 1 owner, financial crises. Worth much more, but first offer over $950 takes 253-2040.
tf 10-22

MOTORCYCLES FOR SALE

Kawasaki 500, I need $700 so this 1971 Mach III is going. Call George at 253-9318.
tf 10-21

Honda CL350, need money somewhat desperately. 4K exc. engine. Asking $400 flat. Call Ed H-9 Baker 546-6003.
tf 10-20

Honda 305 Dream runs good, asking $250. 546-9158 anytime.
tf10-21

1966 Honda 305 Scrambler. Excellent cond. Rebuilt engine, custom paint job, sissy bar and many extras. $375 call 546-8789.
tf10-22

FOR SALE

Seasoned Firewood. Sale and delivery. Call 665-3031.
tf10-20

AM car radio less than 1 yr. old-excellent condition. Call Kathy 665-4777, $40.00 or best offer.
tf10-21

2 KLH33 Speakers list for 100 ea. Now 150 for the pair. Call 253-3860.
tf10-27

Custom built amp and 2 12" spks. worth $400; selling for $250 or best offer. Call 527-6636 or go to Guitar Wkshp. ideal for guitar.
tf10-22

Banjo 5 string Gibson. Long neck. Prime cond. case inc. Call 253-2681.
tf10-22

10 spd. English Racer, very good cond. used only slightly. Call Peter 546-5194.
tf10-26

For $50 pair of Reiker Buck Boots. Fur lined size 7. Call 369-4891 after 6.
tf10-22

1967 MG Midget '70 engine. Call 69762.
tf 10-22

1968 VW Sedan, always kept in very good condition. R & H plus snow tires. $900. Call Kent after 5:00 at 253-7538.
tf 10-22

1967 BMW 1800, best offer over $1200. Call 253-2139.
tf 10-25

Sleeping bag by Bayer, best in world, 6 lb. goose down, good to 20 degrees below zero, cost $120 new, still new, your cost $70? Call 256-8432.
tf 10-22

Snow tires (2) 165-14 Semperit radials mounted on MGB disc wheels, $50 pr. Call 549-6087.
tf 10-22

Fender jazzmaster pre cbs old style square pickups, orig. neck, in perf. cond. $175 firm. Call 66511 after 8. 139 Gorman Central.
tf 10-22

We undersell all, any and all top name appliances, stereos, radios, refrigerators, anything. Call Larry 6-5090, 250 Cance.
tf 10-22

Guild F35 and F47 with hard cases. Call 6-8332.
tf10-21

Ski boots, Koflach expo-masters, mens size 10, cost $100, perfect condition, sell fast $50. Call Frank 6-7064.
tf 10-21

HELP WANTED

Come to a meeting and demonstration to find out how you can make good money as a full or part time salesperson for Shaklee Products, 100% organic cleaners cosmetics and Vitamins. Wednesday night Oct. 20, 7:30 at the Lord Jeffery Hotel for further information call Sharon at 253-2,31 or come to the meeting tonight.
10-20

WANTED

Individual who can compose music for lyrics. Have attractive offer for the right party. Ralph Hayward, P.O.B.75, Erving, Mass. 01344.
tf 10-22

Looking for girl to work part time in shoe store. Hours limited, wages good. Call 253-7777 evenings between 6-7 p.m.
tf10-22

RIDE WANTED

Ride wanted to and/or from Cambridge on Wednesdays; arrival by noon, return after five. Call 545-2661 days.
tf10-22

ROOMMATES WANTED

Roommate needed share 2 Bdrm. apt. Cliffside, 1 yr. lease, must be 21 m. or f. Call Jake Day 545-0478.
tf 10-20

Female housemate needed to share 10 rm. house in Belchertown, $80/mo., communal meals & housekeeping. Grad student pref. Call 323-6631.
tf10-22

Male roommate wanted. Large apt. own room your $67/mo. includes all come to 103 State St. Northampton nights by Nov. 1 2nd floor.
tf10-22

Roommate wanted Mt. Toby Apts. Sunderland. Call 665-1420 after 5 p.m. Mon. thru Friday.
tf10-22

FOR RENT

One bedroom Apt. Available Nov. 1, $150 a month includes utilities. Call after 5 p.m. 665-2641.
tf 10-20

Town House Apt. to share with another girl in Amherst. Own room possible. Call 584-2273.
tf10-21

PERSONAL

How many dates has the mug book got for you?
tf 10-20

Aren't you glad the mug book is back?
tf 10-20

Will the person who ripped off my keys & clothes in Boyden Sunday please get keys back to me reward no question. Call 549-8793.
tf10-21

The Chopping Block staff is available for free hair care instruction for any mens or womens group. The Chopping Block, 26 Main St., 253-9293.
tf10-27

Planning to go to Grad School in Psch? Attend meeting on Oct. 20 at 8 p.m. in Hert 231 for full info. from Psych. faculty.
10-20

The grapes of wine are best in 309 Brown. The little ole Winemaker.
10-20

Beware! "Ha Ha Herman" will call again!! Tel. U-TTSR.
10-20

SERVICES

Lost your dog? Prevent this, send $1 name, address, phone to: Buddy Dog Tags, P.O. Box 82 Wellesley Hills, Mass. 02181.
10-20

Candle-making supplies and hand-crafted items. People's carft co-op 49 S. Pleasant St. (over Hastings). Other supplies soon.
10-20

Protect your car from winter ice and salt professional simonizing $8.95 satisfaction guaranteed by appt. only. Call 253-7210.
tf10-22

Fix bicycles cheap. Expert. 546-9783.
10-20

Typing-theses, dissertations, etc. Fast, accurate; have Greek alphabet, math & chem. symbols. Call 253-3601.
tf 10-20

ENTERTAINMENT

MARLON BRANDO — ON THE WATERFRONT. WINNER OF 8 ACADEMY AWARDS. WEDS. OCT. 20 AMHERST FOLKLORE CENTER FILM STUDY. 7:15, 9:30 (in back of Lord Jeff).
tf 10-20

LOST

Reward! Blue & green afghan in David's bag. Lost in C.C. Please return to "Lost & Found".
tf 10-20

Reward! Lost light golden Labrador Amherst License No. 526. Answers to Conan if found call 253-3018.
tf10-26

Male orange cat, 3 yrs. answers to "Tramp", looks like "Morris", Male Siamese, 1 yr. answers to "Snowy", gone from Puffton 108. Call 549-6786.
tf 10-22

GIVE AWAY

Three beautiful puppies, lab mother, unknown father, weaned ready to go. Call 256-8881.
tf 10-20

LECTURE NOTES

Notes still available in Bot 101, Gov 100, HD 270, Phil 105, Psych 270, 280, 325, Soc 256 and many others. Rm 318 S.U. Lobby.
tf 10-20

STUDENTS BOOK MATCHING

Register your book in S.U. Rm. 318. Every student with your course next semester will need your books save $ money, sell direct.
tf-sem.

NEEDED FOR PSYCHOLOGICAL STUDY

Headaches, stomach aches, pains, nausea. If you suffer from any of the above or similiar disorders and would like to participate in a study of Psychosomatic problems please call 5-0413 Wed. or Thurs. 3-5 p.m.
tf10-21

NOTICES

VIET NAM VETERANS AGAINST THE WAR:
Tactical meeting: Main floor lounge, Cance house (SW) at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday--Very important that all registered members attend to vote on proposed actions.

COMMITTEE ON NUTRITION AND HUMAN NEEDS:
Open meeting tonight at 7 p.m. in Rm. 165 CC. Members urged to attend. Interested persons welcome.

DAMES CLUB:
Attention all Dames--Tonight at 8 p.m. in Farley 4-H house is our wine-tasting party. Be sure to come and bring your husband too.

EQUESTRIAN CLUB:
There will be a meeting with a hayride and refreshments at Grinnell Arena at 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

FLYING CLUB:
Ground school 7 p.m. in 162 CC. Test on instrument. Start navigation.

FOOD CONSPIRACY:
Organizational meeting tonight at 8 p.m. in 67 McClellan St. Amherst. Please come if you want to help.

FREE U.
Film on T'ai Chi Chun. Free showing at 8, 8:45, and 9:30 p.m. at CC Rm. 170, 172.

HEALTH SERVICES STUDENT ADVISORY BOARD:
Health services wants students to advise, evaluate and propose. Come see what we have to offer. Wednesday in Rm. 802 CC.

HUDSON BAY OPERATION:
Tuesday, 10/26, Field lounge 5th floor North, 7 p.m. Everything must go, come and see, open to all. Code name AssRheim.

INTERNATIONAL CLUB:
Coffee House at 8 p.m. in CC 168-170 today. Two films on Denmark will be shown. "Five Thousand Islands" and "Tivoli Rhythms" are the films to be shown.

MAROON KEYS:
Meeting tonight at 8:30 in Rm. 803 CC. Much important. Attend.

MEDIA CENTER MEETING:
Remember--Very important, students only, meeting of center at 8 p.m. in CC 805-809 tonight. Come! Help yourselves and your brothers and sisters. Peace.

NORTHAMPTON VOLUNTEERS:
Bus will leave tonight from Hasbrouck Lab at 6:30; from Patterson House at 6:35. Everyone is welcome, please join.

PRE-LAW STUDENTS:
All students interested in applying to law school contact Harvey Stone, pre-law advisor, E-22 Machmer. It is especially important that seniors in the process of applying to law school see Mr. Stone as soon as possible.

SCUBA CLUB:
Short meeting Wednesday, 7 p.m. in 12 Curry Hicks Bldg. Followed by co-ed swim till 9 p.m. (no cut-offs). Dives being planned.

SPANISH CLUB:
The Spanish Club will hold its weekly "Tertulia" on Wed. in Herter Hall-4th floor lounge from 2:30-4 p.m. Anyone interested in chatting in Spanish is welcome.

UMASS VOLLEYBALL ASSN:
Volleyball meeting. Anyone interested in high-level volleyball competition contact Red Dwyer 586-3739.

WOMEN'S LIBERATION:
All women invited. Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in Rm. 904 CC.

LOST:
An 8-page typewritten review of a Tom Wolfe book and a set of keys for VW car, house and office keys. If you found either please call Collegian 545-2550, or SES 545-2683 or Frank 256-6032.

Brown shoulder bag, green wallet, red address book. ID: Miller or May. Irreplaceable bits of information. Please return. Call, keep calling, leave message 545-0041 or 665-3266.

2 pair of wire rimmed glasses in a tan case. Return to CC lost & found or call 6-7609.

Brown wallet containing ID's, Mass license and registration under the name of Valerie Bedford. If found please call Warren at 6-7814.

Off-white woolen poncho in CC Aud. Saturday nite. Sentimental value--If found please call 546-6734.

FOUND:
Girl's 3-speed bicycle found in pond. Located in CC lost & found. License #357.

A series of yellow index cards on a boy named JEREMY ARKES. Call Sue at 6-1431.

A pocketknife about 3 weeks ago in Central dorm area. If you lost one, call Sue at 6-1431.

Dorm room key on Pink & Black woven trimming, Friday Oct. 15. Call John or Brad 546-4407 in evening.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SYDNEY OMARR

"Astrology is deeply rooted in the human soul, and today out of the social deeps it knocks at the doors of the universities from which it was banished some 300 years ago." Carl Jung

.....

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Dig deep for factual information. Money is involved. Reject superficiality. Get to heart of matter. Spotlight on financial dealings with mate, partner. Mystery could be unraveled. Accept truth.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can afford to wait. Some persons, lacking knowledge, may advocate otherwise. Key is to get your own ideas across. Do what is best for you. Avoid extremes. Check diet. Increase rest, recreation periods.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Routine tasks may seem to multiply. Key is to take one thing at a time. Obtain valid hint from Taurus message. Stick close to home base. Do what is familiar. Leave far out schemes to others.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good lunar aspect coincides with love, creative endeavors. Association with opposite sex are intensified. Express yourself. Pull out of any emotional rut. Welcome romance. But don't fool yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Older individual may appear intransigent. Refuse to be distrubed. Maintain moderate pace, one that suits your style. Those who disagree will display change of heart. Know this, keep the faith.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent on getting around, putting across ideas, developing concepts. Gossipy neighbor should not be permitted to cause depression. Throw off burdens not rightly your own. Be self sufficient.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent on new approach which results in money gain. Stress independence. Encorage innovations. Fine for adding to special collections. Gain shown through hobby, special interest.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't hesitate; follow through on desires, special mission. Take initiative. Study Libra message. You will be going places, doing things. Shake off any tendency toward lethargy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Separte illusion from fact. Encourage creative imagination. But shun tendency to brood, to engage in wishful thinking. You succeed by participating in club, group activity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Some friends are filled with information-misinformation. Key is to appreciate sincerity, but not to mistake it for gospel. You will understand. Be discriminating, selective. Choose quality.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Communicate with one you admire, respect. Applies to professional and personal areas. Key is to accept changes. Also, be willing to revise opinion when presented with necessary facts.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Good moon aspect coincides with cycle of travel, learning. Long distance message is featured. Taurus and Libra individuals play prominent roles. Be sure you are being correctly quoted.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have special appreciation of music and good food. You are basically gentle, but when aroused can provide formidable opposition. Recent social whirl has resulted in some fine contacts. To reach greatest potential, overcome tendency to brood about past.

Copyright 1971, Gen. Fea. Corp.

Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Meadow
4 Symbol for tantalum
6 Showy flower
11 Native American
13 Tidier
15 Note of scale
16 Operator
18 Symbol for calcium
19 A state (abbr.)
21 Entice
22 Part of fireplace
24 Mohammedan commander
26 Unit of Italian currency (pl.)
28 Devoured
29 Title of respect
31 Lustful
33 Spanish article
34 Projecting tooth
36 Profound
38 Court (abbr.)
40 African antelopes
42 Domain
45 Exist
47 Places
49 Distance measure
50 Challenge
52 Soaks up
54 Note of scale
55 Man's nickname
56 Notwithstanding
59 Parent (colloq.)
61 Crave
63 Climbing plants
65 Lavishes fondness on 66 Teutonic deity
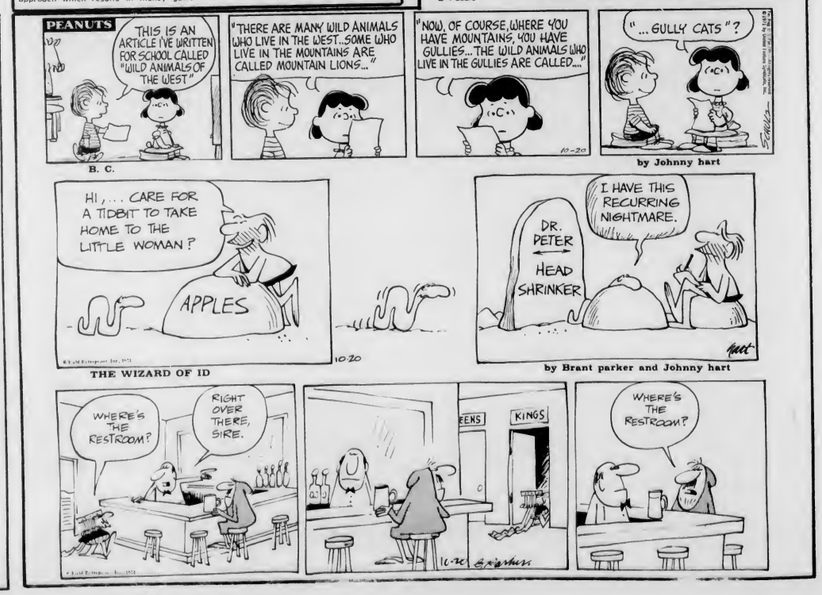
67 Worm



DOWN
1 Illuminated
2 Puzzle
3 Paid notice
4 Afrikaans
5 Cancel
6 Provoked
7 Observe
8 Sailors (colloq.)
9 Latin conjunction
10 Read
12 Negative prefix
14 Badgerlike mammal
17 Seed coating
20 Helps
23 Parent (colloq.)
24 Printer's measure
25 Tolled
27 Pitcher
30 Provides crew
32 Think
35 Estimates
37 Bucket
38 Confined to an enclosure
39 Bartered
41 Cease
43 South American animals
44 Pronoun
46 For example (abbr.)
48 Support for dock
51 Prepare for print
53 Mix
57 Before
58 Babylonian deity
60 Beast of burden
62 Conjunction
64 Compass point

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

A	L	T		T	A	P	E	R		S	T	Y
L	O	U		S	L	O	P	E		P	E	A
F	O	R	M	A	L		A	N	T	H	E	M
			E	A	R		S	C	O	R	E
I	B	E	X		H	A	T		I	R	K	S
D	E	N		P	A	Y		S	P	E	N	T
E	L		A	I	D		I	T	S		E	A
A	I	S	L	E		A	L	A		T	A	G
L	E	T	T		T	I	L		F	A	D	E
		R	A	M	A	L		H	A	M
A	L	A	R	I	C		P	A	R	A	D	E
S	P		S	I	T	A	R		L	O	W
P	E	S		S	T	A	R	E		E	R	E

Distr. by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Sweet Charity's
presents
the biggest & best in the East
RALPH
from Scranton, Pa.
15 Musicians playing the best Rock & Blues
Mon., Tues., Wed.,
Oct. 18 - 19 - 20
Come as you are to the area's only music spot for real people.
Positive I.D. Required
Admission - 1.50
1270 Memorial Ave.
W. Spfld.
Across from Big E

Commentary

Sox Deserve A Cheer For A Gutsy Trade

By STEVE GERSHMAN

The Red Sox deserve a big cheer for a very gusty trade to say the least. Realizing they were going nowhere with their present team, they made a major change in personnel and attitude.

George Scott, Joe Lahoud and Jim Lonborg were all very popular in Boston, and it took a lot of courage to trade them. Scott has a great amount of talent, but he spent more time sulking than a two-year-old losing his favorite toy. After a great year in 1967, Scott was unhappy and troubled with the Sox and never produced effectively.

Joe Lahoud is a fine young outfielder, but he was never in love with the Sox and was a headache for manager Eddie Kasko. Lahoud tagged along behind Yaz and Reggie like a youngster following the older gang on the street. This bothered Kasko and kept Lahoud from his work.

Billy Conigliaro was on his way out during mid-season when he aimed a totally absurd, out of line accusation at Yaz and Smith. I am not sorry to see Billy go as he has been nothing but a crying disaster area with the Sox, and had little to back him up. Billy is a fine hitter, but in the field possesses the finesse and range of a three-legged elephant.

Jim Lonborg may still be able to win 10 games or so, but is of little value to the Sox who need a more consistent pitcher. Obviously the Sox were tired of Jim's annual comeback which never came about. No longer possessing his great fastball, Jim relies on control which he doesn't always have. Give him credit, he gave his all, but will never be the pitcher he once was.

Ken Brett was another disappointment for the Sox after being billed as a can't miss pitcher. Since his appearnce in the 1967 World Series, Ken has done little to help Boston. I can't blame the Sox for running out of time and patience with Brett and so this was the time to trade him.

In Don Pavletich's case, it was an act of mercy to trade him, as he sat on the bench all season. Don deserved a better fate than this, and so the trade was a blessing to him.

What it all comes down to is that Boston gave up three headaches, two disappointments and a throw in. In return, they got three quality professionals and a minor league outfielder.

Marty Pattin should be the starting pitcher the Red Sox need so desperately. Last season he was an all-star with a good E.R.A. of three and a 14-14 record while playing for a poor team. Pattin possesses a good fastball, an excellent slider and above all a fine attitude. He is a quiet efficient hard worker who gives his all, something the Red Sox players should take notice of.

Tommy Harper is a very underrated outfielder, who is also a hard worker and lets his statisitics do his talking. With the Sox push for speed, Tommy fits in perfectly; stealing 76 bases two years ago. This was a feat unaccomplished since the days of Ty Cobb in the American League. Being a strong pull hitter, Harper should be perfect for Uncle Tom Yawkey's palace. In 1970 Harper hit 31 homers and had a .296 average, while playing well in the outfield.

Lew Krause is the sleeper in the trade and may turn out to be an important acquisition. Last season he ended up with a fine 2.9 E.R.A. while winning five of his last six starts, despite the lack of support from his teammates. With a team like Boston he could conceivably win 14 and be the desperately needed long reliever and spot starter they needed.

The Red Sox gave up some talent to get these players, but to get, you must give. The players they traded wouldn't do any more for them next season than they did this year. The trade certainly won't hurt the Sox, even if it backfires which it well may. But, praise the Sox for their courage to admit their weaknesses and try to improve. Juding from reaction so far, most fans are upset by the trade. Nevertheless, I can't help but like this trade and feel it should help the Sox in more ways than one.

Aging Middlelinebacker Pardee Named Defensive Player of Week

NEW YORK (AP) — "It's not fair to single any individual out...I got my interceptions because the quarterback threw the ball to me," said Washington linebacker Jack Pardee, whose three pass thefts gained him honors Tuesday as the National Football League Defensive player of the Week.

Pardee's outstanding performance led an airtight defensive unit that paved the way to the unbeaten Redskins' 20-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Sunday, their fifth in a row.

The 14-year veteran, a 6-foot-2, 225-pounder from Texas A&M, topped New Orleans cornerback Delles Howell and Baltimore linebacker Ted Hendricks for The Associated Press award.

His Washington teammates awarded him a game ball for the third time this season. And on Monday he got something better-a greeting from President Nixon.

Pardee and his wife, Phyllis, and their children, along with linebacker Maxie Baughan and center George Burman and their families, appeared at the White House for a special tour of the executive mansion and ended up in a brief meeting and picture-taking session with the President.

Pardee insisted he shouldn't be singled out for his work against St. Louis, "not when cornerbacks Mike Bass and Pat Fischer shut out John Gilliam, Mel Grey and Jackie Smith" of the Cards. "And when the line is putting on a good rush, the linebackers can drop and try for the interception."

His three thefts were his best single-game showing as a pro, raising his total for the year to five, one less than his all-time high in 1967 when he was with the Los Angeles Rams. The 'Skins now have 13 interceptions, only two below their entire 1970 total.

Pardee was among the raft of Rams who followed their coach, George Allen, to Washington this year. Allen, carefully molding a defensive unit which, because of its high average age, has been dubbed the "Over-the-hill Gang," has sent the Skins off to their best start since 1940.

Also earning nominations were Willie Lanier of Kansas City, who made nine unassisted tackles and five assists in the Chiefs' 38-16 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers, and Jack Gehrke of Denver, who recovered a pair of fumbled punts inside the San Diego 10-yard line as the Broncos edged the Chargers.

Dave Smith Was All Alone In The End Zone, But...

Associated Press Sports Writer

There was Dave Smith, all alone on the 20-yard line, carrying the football like a loaf of bread and romping to a sure touchdown.

Then, suddenly, there was Dave Smith, all alone on the goal line, looking frantically for the ball that had squirted out of his grasp when he began celebrating a bit prematurely.

The young wide receiver of the Pittsburgh Steelers had gathered in a Terry Bradshaw pass and headed toward the Kansas city end zone in Monday night's National Football League game.

As he crossed the five-yard line, he raised his arms in jubilation. But at the three, Smith went one way and the ball went another.

In panic, Smith wheeled to his right, looking for it. Then he spun back-just in time to see the ball twisting and bouncing out of the end zone.

No touchdown-just a touch-back that gave the ball to the Chiefs, who led 31-9 en route to a 38-16 victory before 49,533 fans at Kansas City's Municipal Stadium and millions of viewers on national television.

It was a bit of showboating that Smith-and undoubtedly a lot of coaches and other players-won't soon forget.

It isn't the first time such antics have proven costly. A while back, Travis Williams of Green Bay rocketed toward the goal line and fired the ball to the turf in exultation-three yards shoit of paydirt.

The NFL has a rule about heaving the ball into the stands after a touchdown but nothing covering flinging it skyward or to the ground, a practice begun several years back by former New York Giants and Cleveland star Homer Jones and quickly picked up by others.

Neither do the teams-but the coaches, if not discouraging it, presume their players will have enough sense to do it at the right time.

"If a guy were particularly happy about it sometime and wanted to slam it down, I don't see anything wrong with it," says new Packers Coach Dan Devine. "Teams I've coached never made a practice of it. If a guy sometime wanted to do it when he was real happy, I'd understand-but he'd better not toss the ball up in the air on the five-yard line."

Bob Hollway of St. Louis agreed. "I think it's very precarious for a player to do anything with the ball when he's near or in the end zone."

And Baltimore's Don McCafferty put it even more strongly. "I don't believe in it," he said. "I think the player should hand the ball to the official."

Said New York Jets' Coach Weeb Ewbank: "I've never been in favor of any kind of 'hot-dogging.' We don't want any of this stuff."

Alex Webster of the Giants was a little more easy-going in his views. "We have a policy," he said. "Make sure you're well into the end zone before you let it go. It's just a common sense thing."

Intramurals

TUG-O-WAR

		Position
1	6:30	Athenian 1 vs. 2
2		3 vs. 4
2	6:45	5 vs. 6
1	7:00	SPE vs. TEP
		Position: Southwest 1 vs. 2
1	7:15	3 vs. 4
2		5 vs. 6
1	7:30	Lemons vs. Pipers
2		Lovers vs. Maroons
1	7:45	Trojans vs. Hoovers
2		1 vs. 2
1	8:00	3 vs. 4
2		Lovers vs. Redwoods
1	8:15	Trojans vs. Pipers
1	8:30	Hoovers vs. Maroons
2

Cosell To Hang Up Mike For Dramatic Career

(Reprinted from Springfield Daily News)

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)-Looks as if ABC will have to find a new man to call the NFL plays next TV season.

Howard Cosell, the Brash-is-Beautiful commentator of the Monday Night Football games, plans to be out of the sports announcing business within the next year.

Howard is getting in his sample kicks in the areas he plans to tackle in '72: a recent "Nanny and the Professor" acting assignment, a role in Woody Allen's "Bananas" and guest host stints on the Dick Cavett and David Frost Shows.

"I'd like a talk show of my own," said the sportscaster they refer to as Mr. Controversy, "but not every night."

That not-nightly reservation is one reason he wasn't interested in recent CBS feelers that Howard take over the Merv Griffin show in December. Another: "I wouldn't leave ABC in mid-season. They've been too good to me."

Will he feel any regrets about leaving the sportscasting field, which has paid him so handsomely since 1953?

"Not on your life!" insisted the outspoken Cosell. "I'm not crazy about sports, I never have been!"

And, he assured, his wife won't find him glued to the TV set each weekend watching games reported by someone else.

"They get pretty boring," admitted the guy who's made the plays seem so fascinating for millions of others.

"Let's face it, one game looks pretty much like another," said Cosell in what could be considered heresay by football buffs.

"Someone wins, someone loses, and the next day, so what?"

It's not the game but the players that create the real excitement in sports, he said. At least some of them who've become off-the-field stars.

"Like Muhammad Ali and Joe Namath. They live life the way they think best, stand up to the establishment and get away with it. As for Ali, he's about the most morally brave man I've ever met."

As for Howard, it might take some sort of bravery for him to meet his next exciting challenge.

"I'll be shooting, 'What you've always wanted to know about sex but were afraid to ask' in December, and so far Woody Allen won't tell me what I'll be doing, or anything about the movie except it's going to be terribly dirty."

Eat First Class
Eat Bell's Pizza
Open
11 to 2 a.m. Fri. & Sat.
1 a.m. Sun. to Thurs.
Free Delivery
Tel: 256-8011 - 253-9051

Track Physicals

All candidates for indoor and outdoor track physical examinations are tomorrow from 5:30-7:30 p.m. at the Infirmary. Any conflicts or questions call Coach O'Brien.

New Penguins Make History...
...and important, practical reading in other subjects

Penguin announces The Pelican History of the United States, a new, eight-volume series covering American history from colonial times to the present. Specially commissioned by Penguin, these books aim to revive the excitement of the past without romanticizing it. In achieving this goal, they transcend events to impart an understanding of each epoch and of its contribution to the making of contemporary America. Now available:

UNITY AND CULTURE. H. Wayne Morgan. A survey of America's growth into an increasingly unified nation between 1877 and 1900. $1.95

RISE TO GLOBALISM. Stephen E. Ambrose. A searching review of American foreign policy between 1938 and 1970. $2.45

Other new Penguins on sale now at your campus bookstore

BEFORE NATURE DIES. Jean Dorst. A look at man's devastating impact on nature. Shows that to continue as we have done in the past will render the earth uninhabitable, and suggests new ways of meeting this challenge. Illustrated with photos. $2.45

MEN WHO PLAY GOD: The Story of the Hydrogen Bomb. Norman Moss. The first complete account of how the hydrogen bomb was developed and how the world has come to live with it. $1.65

USE AND ABUSE OF STATISTICS. W. J. Reichmann. A practical and readable introduction to the world of averages, probabilities, percentages, indexes, and trends. $1.75

MODERN VEGETARIAN COOKERY. Walter and Jenny Fliess. Approximately five hundred recipes cover soups, sauces, juices, sandwich spreads, desserts—everything from Borscht to Lemon Soufflé. $1.75

PENGUIN BOOKS INC
7110 Ambassador Rd.-Baltimore, Md.21207

Shutout String Ends

Victory Streak Extended to Six

By STEVE FERBER

Scoring in every period highlighted the UMass-Coast Guard soccer clash yesterday, as the Redmen came up with win number five on the season by a 6-2 score. But the big story of the day was that Coast Guard scored two goals, the first two to be scored against the Redmen in six games this season.

For UMass six different players chalked up goals, as the Redmen led from the two minute mark of the first quarter, all the way until the end. At 2-1, the halftime score, things looked best for the visitors, but two rather quick goals put things out of reach for the academy.

Much like the Rhode Island affair last Saturday, UMass began their scoring early, as Lindo Alves banged in number one of the day with only 1:42 gone in the game. Alves' score had come off of a Jeff Hague pass to Vinny Grandonico, and it was Grandonico who set up Alves beautifully on the left side of the goal.

Then with 11:50 gone, Steve Blanchette tallied his first of the campaign. It was a beautiful maneuver by Alves that set up the second score, as he beat the Coast Guard defenseman around the right end, after having passed through the fullback's legs to himself. Then a strong shot towards the far side was deflected out by the goalkeeper, but Blanchette was right there waiting, and hitting the bottom of the crossbar the ball bounded in for a two goal lead.

Letting down, as has happened in the past, was the Redman's problem as quarter number two began, as Kiah was getting a good workout, jumping frequently to grab high floating direct kicks from way out near mid-field. UMass began merely booting the ball out of their territory, and the Redman passing attack was seemingly non-existent.

Then it happened. Something that hadn't happened in five games this year. The opposition scored. There was a UMass infraction called, obstruction it was, and as Coast Guard's forwards prepared for the boot on the right side of the nets, UMass lined up for the in-direct kick, not more than five feet from the goal line. Crossing everyone up, Gary Heil, the visitors leading scorer, lofted the ball ever so gently over the heads of the UMass players, up into the right-hand corner. Everyone was looking for a cross the goal shot but as the referee pointed out, "It was a perfect indirect kick—just a really nice touch."

Thus after five games and one quarter Coast Guard had broken through the impregnable UMass defense. And the funny thing was that it took 489 minutes for someone to score one goal off of the Redmen, and only 18 minutes for number two.

But by the time Coast Guard scored their second one, UMass held a 4-1 lead and was safely on its way home. Augie Calheno gave the home team a 3-1 lead, as he scored on a simply fantastic "blue darter." Alves again was in on the play as he centered a bouncing pass to Calheno, who turned and rifled a shot into the left corner. Before the goalie had time to move it was by him. Just a tremendous shot, as Calheno's foot was really getting hot.

Hot it was minutes later as Calheno boomed a direct kick deep into Coast Guard territory, and as three Redmen converged on the goalkeeper, Hague knocked the ball by for a 4-1 lead and the Redmen had equalled their highest output of the year.

Penalty kicks were the story as quarter three neared its end, and a Heil penalty kick into the right corner cut the Redmen lead to two, with more than 25 minutes to go. The Redman infraction leading to the penalty kick came after one of the most thrilling scrambles in front of the nets, as goalie John Kiah was keeping that ball out every which way. Jumping and batting it away, diving on the ground, making a hockey like save while sprawling on the turf, Kiah was doing another excellent job, as both Coast Guard scores came off of UMass infractions deep in their own territory.

LINDO...DEKES—UMass' Lindo Alves scored a goal and had three assists in yesterday's romp over the Coast Guard Academy. Goalie John Kiah also had his unbelievable shutout streak stopped as the Academy scored two goals. (MDC Photo by Ed Mangiaratti)

Grandonico and Coburn finished up the scoring as the two early fourth quarter goals gave UMass all the insurance they needed. Grandonico's first score of the year came off of a Coburn drop kick, as he found the right side of the nets, and Coburn was a superb shot into the right side. Alves again assisted on the play, and hitting Coburn on the left side, the freshman wheeled and left-footed it past the startled goal tender.

Harriers Run Over Chiefs

By JAY NESTOR

The UMass harriers traveled to Springfield College yesterday, looking for their fifth consecutive win and they returned quite satisfied, 24-36.

Springfield's top man, Ed Walkwitz missed this meet, and the highly praised freshman, Charlie Duggan took the helm while setting a new course record. Redman Doug O'Connell took second to Duggan's record breaking run. He was followed closely by John McLeod of Springfield.

It was a long time before another Chief crossed the finish line, and in the meantime, seven UMass runners poured in. Paul Segersten led the attack in another of his consistently good performances.

Unpredictable Tom Derderian placed fifth with Rick Barry one second behind. This was Barry's best performance to date, and he seems to have reached last year's form.

Mike McCusker likewise ran his best race while placing seventh. Peter Crisci, Bob Sullivan, and Don Dunsky took the backup spots and completed the top ten finishers.

Again as at BC, the Redmen depth was overwhelming. Coach O'Brien was pleased with the depth and the fine twenty second team split. However, reflecting upon the upcoming New England championships, his opinion is that the backup men must improve at least twenty seconds for the team to be tough.

This meet seemed to be a typical victory for the UMass harriers as they succeeded in breaking up the front runners and then pushed the Springfield backup men far back in position.

The UMass freshmen went on a record setting spree while crushing the Springfield frosh. Bill Gillin and Randy Thomas sat out this one, but Steve Brown filled the void with his second straight win. This was no ordinary victory, however, as Brown smashed the course record by twenty seconds.

Devon Croft and Paul Albini followed suit beating the record by ten and seven seconds respectively. Tom Wilson and Rick Vose completed the overwhelming Redman sweep. Bruce MacLean and Bob Cabral also ran well for the Redmen.

The Frosh have jelled into an extremely well knit running unit and show promising signs for the future.

The next meet will be Saturday in Worcester, when the harriers encounter Holy Cross. the Crusaders are no pushovers and should prove to be worthy opponents of the Redmen.

Supreme Court Will Hear Curt Flood

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court agreed Tuesday that professional baseball enslaves its players-a judicial move which could point the way to ending the exemption from antitrust laws now enjoyed by this sports business.

Former Justice Arthur J. Goldberg will argue for the one-time all-star centerfielder at a hearing now tentatively set for mid-January. A final ruling is expected by June.

This is the first time in 18 years that the court has been willing to consider a legal attack on the structure of professional baseball. The sport currently enjoys immunity from both federal and state antitrust laws, an exemption the court has been unwilling to grant football, basketball or any other professional sport.

Flood and Goldberg center their attack on the so-called "reserve system," which binds a player to the team that holds his contract. Once a player signs with a team, he can play only for that team unless it chooses to trade or sell him. All clubs use the same contract. A balking player has only the option of quitting the game if he does not like contract terms. Flood calls this a form of slavery.

Flood began the suit when the St. Louis Cardinals, for whom he had starred, swapped him in 1969 to the Philadelphia Phillies in a multiplayer deal. He refused to report and sat out the 1970 season while two lower federal courts rejected his claim.

Flood played briefly for the Washington Senators last spring but with his skill diminished he abruptly left the team and is believed to be living now in Majorca, Spain.

HOMECOMING ACTION-UMass took its bruises on Saturday against Rhode Island in the annual Homecoming game. But an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth...and the Rams had a bruise or two themselves. On the left Joe Sabulis (52), Doug Winslow (in background), and Jack O'Neil (45) converge on URI tight end Mike Forbes to administer some UMass hospitality.

On the right O'Neil readies to unload one of his better than forty-yard average punts that resulted in a scurrying of bodies, the exploding of inner tensions and a multitude of bruises. (Both MDC Photos by Gib Fullerton)

New England's Largest College Daily

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

Weather: The temperature in Dallas was 80 degrees yesterday. Ahhh, sunshine!

VOLUME XCIX, ISSUE 31 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS THURSDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1971

THAT TIME OF YEAR AGAIN-Yes, folks, it's that time of year when the hourlies are just around the corner. And to start off the mad rush back to the books with a soft mushy squish, the Scrolls and Maroon Keys are selling pumpkins for you all to put on top of your radiators so they can get moldy and gross. (Photo by Bob Callahan)

Gun Control Main Senate Topic

By DON BISHOP

The usage and control of guns on the UMass campus was the major issue of debate in last night's meeting of the Student Senate. Briefly stated, the Senate urged that the "no gun" policy on campus initiated during the Student Strike of two years ago be continued, and that the Campus Police refrain from wearing guns, except in those times when injury to life would exist."

Nominees for Chancellor Selection Committee See P. 3

Three separate motions on the gun control question were considered. The first two motions were passed, the third was defeated. As written these motions were:

1. "Be it resolved that the Student Senate strongly recommend to the Acting Chancellor that he continue the "no gun" policy first articulated and implemented by former Chancellor Tippo."

2. "Be it resolved that the Chancellor and the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs implement a "no gun" policy for Campus Police, except in those times where injury to life would exist."

3. "Be it resolved that the Student Senate recommend to the Acting Chancellor that he authorize the University Rifle Team and Stockbridge Rifle Team to store their rifles in a secure place on campus and that the director of security be charged with maintaining the security of those rifles."

The first motion was introduced by Treasurer Richard Verrochi who stated that it would merely urge a continuation of the policy instituted during the 1970 Student Strike. Negative debate against this proposal was very limited and the measure passed easily.

The second motion was likewise introduced by Verrochi, but unlike the first, it encountered considerable opposition. As he had debated this issue in the past, Verrochi maintained that the carrying of guns by the Campus Police creates more tensions and problems than their wearing could justify. Only when human life was at stake did he feel that the carrying of guns was warranted.

Debate against this proposal centered on its practicality and legality, and as to the likelihood of it's eventual adoption.

Senators LeRoy, Waters and Chiller were against the motion, holding that in the case of an emergency, it might very well be too late if the police had to wait for the arrival of guns. Senator Chiller brought up the question of crime in the campus parking lots, where he felt that campus police need to be armed in dealing with thieves who are working there.

Senate President Lee Sandwen felt that the likelihood of unarmed police on campus becoming a reality was very small at this time. As members of a union, he believes that the Campus Police would fight this issue all the way to the State House.

Nonetheless, the majority of Senators felt that approval for this measure should be granted and final approval for it was given.

The third gun control motion would have asked the Acting Chancellor to authorize the Rifle Team to store their rifles in a place deemed secure, under the supervision of the Director of Security.

The sponsor of this bill: Senator Skip Olmstead stated that the bill's intention was not to prevent the Rifle Teams from using their weapons. Rather, they would be allowed to do so off campus.

Opposition to the measure was considerable, some Senators holding that the teams should be allowed to keep using the rifles as they are presently, others felt that in keeping with the intent of the two previous bills these guns should be abolished from campus altogether.

Continued on page three

On The Inside:

● Six Picked For Search Committee See page three

● Johnson On Red China See page three

Business Waxes Hot In JQA

By DANIEL KULESCO

If you ever find yourself wandering around the fourth floor of John Quincy Adams tower, chances are that you'll see a sign saying "CANDLES" on an otherwise inconspicuous door. It goes without saying that Diana Taylor and Donna Waskiewicz who live behind the door make candles.

"We've always loved candles but they were too expensive back home in Ludlow," explained Donna, "so we learned how to make them from other candle makers, articles in magazines, and sometimes just trial and error."

Diana and Donna were quick to point out the advantages of using candles instead of any other kind of illumination.

"Candles are very soft and homey, they bring an intimate atmosphere to a room," said Diana, "they make really nice gifts because they're very decorative and they're much prettier than light bulbs."

"People who buy candles are usually attracted to the unusual, so we try to make candles that are pretty and unusual."

A quick glance around the room tells that Diana and Donna produce a variety of unusual candles. There were candles shaped like mushrooms, pigs, pumpkins, lions, bears, grapefruit etc. The variety seemed endless. There were large vanilla scented ones that were shaped like milk shakes and even had straws in them.

Although the process of making candles differs from one kind to another, there is a basic pattern that must be followed. First the wax must be melted and the scent, dye and stearic acid is added. Then it is mixed, a wick is inserted, then it is poured into the mold.

Diana and Donna do not limit their aesthetic endeavors to candles, they also make smile mobiles that are made with "plastic goo" and wires that are bent into circles. The circles are dipped into the plastic which later hardens into a glossy film. Smiles are then painted on and the circles are hung on a wire construction that is suspended from the ceiling.

"Business is pretty good," said Diana, "our room is empty by the end of the week so we have to make a new batch of candles. Whatever profit we make goes towards buying things for our room."

Although the girls are satisfied with the amount of business they have, they confessed a temptation to pull out the wires in their dorm to improve sales.

If you're ever in a candle buying mood keep the dilligent girls who live at 417 John Q. Adams tower in mind. Their entire dorm would appreciate it.

THE BUTCHER, THE BAKER, THE CANDLESTICK MAKER-These two charming young ladies have themselves set up in business somewhere in JQA selling candles. If you want a little light in your life, stop by and procure a few. (Photo by Jim Lavrakas)

Assault Case To Go Before Superior Court

In connection with an incident which allegedly took place last April in a UMass dorm, Gregory Jackson was expected to appear in Hampshire County Superior Court yesterday.

Jackson, 19, of Oakland, Calif., is accused of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, assault with intent to commit rape, assault and battery, and committing unnatural and luscivious acts.

All other action in Superior Court was expected to deal with drug cases.

RIGHT YOU ARE IF YOU THINK YOU ARE
By Luigi Pirandello
Directed by Fontaine Syer
Opening Tomorrow at the Laboratory Theatre
Mount Holyoke College, South Hadley
Will play through Sunday and also October 28-31
Curtain time is 8:15 p.m.
Students $1.00; all others $2.00
For reservations call 538-2406 from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. Sunday.

POINT BLANK
LEE MARVIN
FRIDAY'S FOLLIES
OCT. 22 7:00+9:00
CAMPUS CENTER AUD

Campus Center Program Council Presents
A BOOGIE
with "Fat"
and
"Cricket Hill"
Monday Oct. 23
S. U. B. Admission 75¢

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Office of the DAILY COLLEGIAN are on the second floor of the Student Union on the University campus, zip code 01002. Phones are 545-2550 (news), 545-0344 (sports), and 549-1311 (editor).

Second class postage paid at Amherst, the DAILY COLLEGIAN publishes five times weekly Monday through Friday during the academic year except during vacation and exam periods, three or four times a week following a vacation or exam period or when a holiday falls within a week. Accepted for mailing under the authority of the act of March 8, 1879 as amended by the act of June 11, 1943. Subscription rates are $6.00 per semester, $10.00 per year.

Johnson Describes Life In Red China

By BOB CALLAHAN

In an attempt to help people rid themselves of misconceptions which they may have concerning Red China, Russell Johnson of the American Friends Service Committee, discussed life in mainland China as he viewed it this summer.

In last evening's D.V.P. sponsored lecture held in the Student Union Ballroom, Johnson called himself a "30-day-expert" on the conditions of life in China.

During the four week trip made possible by Johnson's friendship with Prince Sihanouk of Cambodia, he visited rural and urban areas in China. The thing that impressed him most of all was the way in which the inspiration of Chairman Mao-Tse Tung and the Party have mobilized the people.

Talking about his observations, he said that the peasantry are given a feeling of importance. "Mobilization has had a large impact on them," he said.

Mobilization of the people has reaped a large amount of benefits for the Chinese. Their work has resulted in the production of an abundant supply of food to feed the people. Johnson mentioned such projects as the conversion of sand dunes into productive farms and the building of an irrigation system as two ways in which the people have joined together to help make China a better country.

Speaking about family life in China, Johnson said that the family is the basic unit in Chinese society. "Many people live in their own homes," he said in trying to clear up the misconception that most of the people live in communes. In mentioning the size of Chinese families, he said that they are about half the size they were a generation ago.

Throughout his trip, Johnson saw many pictures and statues of Mao wherever he went. He said that Mao's contribution has been made to the Chinese and his inspiration lives on. Johnson added that many of the posters of Mao are being gradually removed from public view. The Chinese are trying to do-emphasize Mao's physical presence because it is suspected that because of ill health Mao will not be around much longer.

In closing, Johnson said that the people of China are people who have the same basic ideas as Westerners. He said that "it will be great when we find that we all have cleared ourselves of the misconceptions that we have and learn to live together."

RUSSELL JOHNSON, AMERICAN FRIENDS SERVICE COMMITTEE (Photo by the illustrious Steve Schmidt)

Senate Picks Six For Committee

Continued from Page One

In the final role call vote, the measure was defeated by 44 to 22 with 6 abstentions.

In other business later in the evening the Student Senate passed a resolution denouncing the current practice of freezing grades for non-payment of parking tickets. They "demanded" that the Vice-Chancellors of Student and Administrative affairs stop suing this "tactic" in regard to payment of both parking and all non-academic fees.

The Senate also approved a motion which would limit the number of admissible absences for Student Senators to 2 1/2 a semester. The number had previously been 5 per year. It is hoped that this change will better indicate those newly elected senators who will lose interest in the Senate and don't intend to stick around. With this new policy, replacements for these Senators can be elected in January.

At the time of the Collegian deadline, the Student Senate was debating the granting of more funds to the SWAP program.

MDC NEWS HOTLINE 5-2550

Search Committee Nominees

Nominees for the Chancellor Search Committee:

Patty Asack-'73, 30 Puffton Village, 549-6235-Co-chairwoman, Women's Committee, Student Senate; Former Chairwoman Senate Social Action Committee; Former Chairwoman Strike Steering Committee.

Jackie Berryman-'73, 50 Meadow St., Apt. 67-549-1377-Vice Chairwoman Distinguished Visitor Program; Treasurer Harambee; member 5-College Black Studies Executive Committee.

David Dunkin-'72, Pierpont, 6-4507-Residence Director Pierpont House; former Treasurer Commuter Assembly; Project 10; Free University; Executive Council Class of 1972.

Robert J. Padgett-'72, 405 Webster 6-1725-Member Steering Committee, Black Cultural Center; CCEBS Counselor; Selection Committees for Heads of Residence and Health Services; Harambee; Drum; Colloquium teacher, Campus Crusade.

Phoebe Pepper-'75, 204 Dickinson, 6-6556-Member, SWAP Committee

Robert Sprague-'73, 27 Colonial Village, 253-9367-Member Student Senate; member Senate Academic Affairs Committee; member 5-College Academic Planning Advisory Council.

MDC Classifieds Pay

CRISP AUTUMN BARGAINS
Frank Zappa 200 Motels
Ike & Tina Turner
What You Hear Is What You Get
All Traffic

C 4.98 List 2.89 D 5.98 List 3.39 E 6.98 List 3.99
THE LISTENING POST AUDIO CENTRE
25 So. Pleasant St., Amherst
Open Evenings till 9 p.m.
186 Main St., Northampton
Open Thursday till 9 p.m.

Happy Nite
Every Thursday
on the bandstand
THE SABER MEN
(Rock Band)
The most exciting entertainment of Handsome Musician.
Quonset Restaurant
Hadley, Rt. 9
From TP 91 - Exit 19

Program Council Presents
MICK JAGGER
IN
"NED KELLY"
October 21 3 Shows - 7, 9, 11 p.m.
Campus Center Auditorium
50¢

In The Nation And The World

Advertising Industry Knocked in FTC Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — An associate director of Consumers Union told the Federal Trade Commission Wednesday the advertising industry spends so much time and money researching consumer motivation that it ignores the potential danger of its message.

Warren Braren said some advertisers use psychological interviews and brain-wave response tests to measure the effects of some ads.

Instead of examining what is necessary for child development or educational values, Braren testified, advertisers are interested in "what it is that grabs the child."

But Andrew Heiskell, board chairman of Time Inc., defended advertising, calling it an important adjunct to a free press.

The two men testified on the first of 20 days of hearings in which the FTC is to hear from a broad range of witnesses, among them ad executives, consumer advocates, politicians, educators, and psychiatrists, to find out what makes advertising tick.

"Without even considering the host of other product and service categories, it becomes clear that companies through advertising enjoy almost a virtual monopoly on the kind of information made available to consumers," he said.

"Additionally, consumers are not exposed to contrasting points of views through advertising and thus are often deprived of a diversity of opinion necessary for informed choices in the market place."

Braren cited a recent ad campaign for the vitamin supplement Geritol which he said contains no parent factual deception but "achieves through picture and association a host of meanings to the consumer...including the implication of lasting good health and rejuvenation..."

He accused the FTC of allowing cigarette advertisers to wipe out the effect of health warnings on cigarette packs through their magazine and newspaper ads. The warnings and tar and nicotine content disclosures "are so camouflaged as to be rendered inconsequential in the total context of the ad," he said.

Industry Spokesmen Rap FCC Fairness Doctrine

WASHINGTON (AP) — Broadcasters who say the government intimidates broadcast news operations are wrong and crying wolf, two members of the Federal Communications Commission said Wednesday.

FCC Chairman Dean Burch and Commissioner Nicholas Johnson defended the regulatory powers of the commission over radio and television.

They appeared as separate witnesses on the final day of three weeks of hearings on freedom of the press before the Senate subcommittee on constitutional rights headed by Sen. Sam J. Ervin, Jr., D-N.C.

However, despite the "noble purpose" of the FCC broadcast regulations, an industry spokesman later told the subcommittee, they have "spun a web of supertechnical and seemingly contradictory legalistic concepts which boggle even the shrewdest legal minds."

Because of the FCC's so-called fairness doctrine, said Richard Barron, president of the North Carolina Association of Broadcasters, radio and television stations avoid airing controversial issues. Such programs can result in FCC or that a station give equal time to spokesman for the other side of the issue, he said.

Johnson said there have been a lot of complaints that the FCC is intimidating radio and television in enforcing the fairness doctrine. "Frankly," he said, "I think the broadcasters are crying 'wolf' again."

Johnson and Burch stressed that the FCC purposely avoids acting on complaints that a station or network has slanted the news or aired an issue in a biased way, except in any case where newsmen were instructed by their employers to present an unbalanced account.

But, they said, the FCC does concern itself with seeing that stations carry out equal-time provisions for candidates for office and spokesmen for controversial issues.

MDC
NEWS HOTLINE
5-2550

White House To Name Members Of Wage-Price Control Boards

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration moved closer Wednesday to announcing the members of two new boards that will administer wage-price controls, with a Texas educator apparently due to be appointed chairman of the Price Commission.

The White House is scheduled tentatively to disclose the names of the Pay Board and Price Commission Thursday, sources said, although that date could change.

When named, the 22 members, all nongovernmental persons, will have an extremely difficult governmental task to perform in a short time.

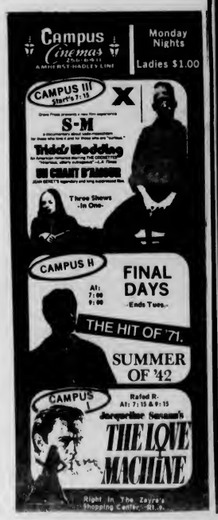
Government sources said that Dr. C. Jackson Grayson, dean of the School of Business at Southern Methodist University, has been selected as chairman of the Price Commission.

Donald Rumsfeld, director of the Cost of Living Council, would neither confirm nor deny Grayson's selection. But Grayson left SMU Wednesday to fly to Washington. The Dallas Morning News also said Grayson had been named Price Commission chairman.

Congress Ready For Pesticide Fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is ready for a conflict over a plan to write new rules for the way America wages chemical warfare against the pests that threaten its food supply.

The argument centers on whether a bill written by the House Agriculture Committee and backed by the Nixon administration or a substitute endorsed by several major environmental organizations would set up the most effective new method of protecting the earth while killing the bugs.



The committee's version "is not a farmer's bill, not a manufacturer's bill, and not an environmentalist's bill," argues Chairman W. R. Poage, D-Tex. "It is rather a mixture of each, a composite of all..."

William D. Ruckelshaus, head of the Environmental Protection Agency, says the committee's legislation provides enough authority "to protect the environment and the health of the nation| against the misuse and overuse of pesticides."

But Rep. John G. Dow, (D-N.Y.), who will offer a substitute measure with the support of such groups as the Sierra Club and Friends of the Earth, says the committee bill "fails to establish a balanced approach to the problem of pesticides."

SPECIAL
55 piece serving set for 8, only $19.95
from "everyone's favorite jeweler"
BAKER-WINN
JEWELERS
31 S. Pleasant St. - Amherst

"COME TO WHERE THE ACTION IS"
DIALTONE
Route 5 West Hatfield
Band Every Nite
9 p.m. - 1 a.m.
* Good Music * Lively atmosphere
Ladies' Night Every Night Drinks ½ Price

Today is
STUDENT ACTIVITIES DAY
9 a.m. - 4 p.m.
Campus Center
Concourse Level
Sponsored by Program Council

SWAP: Getting To Know U(Mass)

Interested in spending a weekend with fellow students, administrators, staff and graduate students getting to know one another and discussing changes and implimentations for UMass? Then attend this year's Student Workshop on Activities Problems (S. W. A. P.) the weekend of November 19-21.

S.W.A.P. was first held in 1959. Its original purpose was to work with various Recognized Student Organizations to improve their effectiveness. Recently, as the issues facing our community have changed, the concerns of the S.W.A.P. conferees have turned more to general problems affecting students. S.W.A.P. provides an opportunity to exchange and promote ideas on all areas affecting this community.

This year's topics to be considered include the following:

"The Role, Duties and Selection of a Chancellor" - The recent resignation of Amherst's first Chancellor brought to the surface a number of important philosophic and operational aspects of the position of Chancellor of a major university campus. The Committee hopes that this theme will provide the umbrella under which a thorough discussion will take place of such matters as the selection of a chief campus officer, his responsibilities vis-a-vis a central office, his responsibilities to the local campus, and the powers which he might exercise over fiscal and administrative operations of the local campus.

"The Interface Between the University and Society" - This theme is intended to provide for discussion of a number of issues relating to the impact which an educational establishment has on both the community in which it is located and on the larger state beyond one town's borders. It is intended that participants in these sessions will address the matter of the University's impact on the town of Amherst, on the Commonwealth, and the Commonwealth's expectations from its principal university. Discussion should also cover such areas as the proper and improper role(s) of a public educational institution in dealing with societal problems and afflictions.

"The Structures and Functions of the University" - This theme will provide for the discussion of many of the practical details regarding University operations. The reorganization of much of the Amherst administration may need further explication for many participants; and it will be in these sessions that specifications of new responsibilities and authorities will be explored.

It is the purpose of S.W.A.P. not only to discuss, but to serve as a catalyst for future action and reform. So, those of you interested in participating pick up an application in the R.S.O. Office downstairs in the Campus Center. Deadline for submitting applications is Friday, October 29th. Don't just complain, get out and participate!

Debaters Go To MIT

The first intercollegiate debate of the season was at M.I.T. UMass was represented by two teams as they debated this year's resolution: resolved that greater controls should be imposed on the gathering and utilization of information about U.S. citizens by government agencies. Juniors Bruce Murphy, from Abington, and David McCaffrey, from Leominister, Mass. made up one team and won debates with Pacific, Columbia U., Harvard, and Maine at Portland-Gorham. They were defeated by Missouri, Georgetown, Brown, and Canisius. The other UMass team consisted of junior Roger Legendre also from Leominister, and Paul Lamarche, from Worcester. They beat Brandeis, Indiana State, St. John's Jamaica, and New York University, but lost to St. Peter's Georgia, Georgetown, and Western Illinois.

Bruce and David carried a case calling for more gun control, while Roger and Paul advocated yearly cancer checkups. While holding it's own at the first tournament of the year, the team looks forward to a challenging season.

Out From Behind The Veil

NEW YORK (AP) - Free-lance photographer Eve Arnold offers a first television look into an Arabian Harem and what may be the last look at women behind the veil.

Miss Arnold, who spent a month in the Sheikdom of Dubai, found that just getting the documentary filmed was something of a cultural clash between the Arabian Nights and women's liberation.

The segment will be seen on NBC's "Chronolog," formerly "First Tuesday," at 8:30 p.m. EDT Friday.

"I knew the only way to get into the harems would be with a female film crew," she said. "I knew I couldn't do it with a man."

Miss Arnold, who had previously shot still pictures of the harems for The London Times Magazine, started her search for a crew in New York. It was to be her first film for television.

"I found there were practically no women around," she said. "Women's Lib aside, it's a very tough job. Even a 16mm camera is tough to handle."

Next, she tried London, where she found a sound girl and an assistant camera operator. Then she heard of six women graduates of a film school in France. But she wasn't impressed with their work.

So, she had to settle for a male camera operator. She figured he could stay outside and relay instructions to the women inside the harem.

The harem is not the home of concubines commonly thought of by Westerners, but the sanctuaries provided for female members of the royal family. Dubai is one of the Trucial States along the southern coast of the Persian Gulf.

Miss Arnold said the veil is gradually being abandoned in most parts of the Arab world. "The old women won't discard it," she said. "One said to me that she wore it when she was young and beautiful and now 'I'm old and ugly and I won't take it off.'"

"The young will not wear it at all. They are indeed coming into the 20th century. But I wanted to record this last look at an Arabian Nights world before it disappears."

In Dubai Miss Arnold brought the English cameraman in the oack way to see her hostess. "She gave him a gold watch," he said. "Then I realized that a man who is not an Arab is not regarded as a man in their eyes. Suddenly it occurred to me that I could get him in."

That she did, and his presence in the harem was never questioned.

Miss Arnold, an American who has worked as a magazine photographer in Europe for the past 10 years, said she hopes to record other disappearing cultures.

AUTO INSURANCE
ALL CARS — ALL DRIVERS
BUDGET PAYMENTS
CYCLES — SCOOTERS
Tekoa Insurance Agency
160 Pleasant St. Northampton 586-2742
10 Broad St. Westfield 562-3604

FOR A CHANGE . . .
The leaders and people of the Soviet Union speak for themselves about what concerns them most . . . and you draw your own conclusions.
It's in our special 192-page Summer issue on the 24th Congress of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union—the reports, discussion, resolutions, foreign delegates' presentations. A sourcebook on Soviet life.
. . . NEW WORLD REVIEW
We are a quarterly magazine covering life and culture in the socialist countries, their international relations and impact on worldwide antiwar and anti-colonial movements. We think you'll be interested.
Special student sub rate: $2.50
24th CPSU Congress Issue FREE with each new student sub.
——Enclosed $1.00 for New World Review, Summer 1971
——Enclosed $2.50 for 1-yr student sub, starting with Fall issue; Summer issue sent free.
Name .....
College Address .....
City ..... State ..... Zip .....
NEW WORLD REVIEW, Suite 308
156 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y. 10010

Even Big Ed Says:
MDC Classifieds Pay

THURS. NITE & FRI. NITE
COLORADO ODYSSEY
AT THE CHEQUERS
9:30 — Close
No Cover Thursday Nite

"Disarmament and World Peace" a public talk by
Norman Cousins
Editor of the Saturday Review
and
President of the World Association of World Federalists
8 p.m. Monday
October 25
main lecture hall -- academic building
Hampshire College
free admission public invited

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
A FREE AND RESPONSIBLE PRESS

BOARD OF EDITORS

EDITOR IN CHIEF — Richard C. Hanson
MANAGING EDITOR — David D. Williams
BUSINESS MANAGER — James Gold
EXECUTIVE EDITOR — Barry J. Rubenstein
NEWS EDITOR — Anne C. Stadnicki
SPORTS EDITOR — Earle T. Barroll

ASS'T MANAGING EDITOR — Nathan Gorenstein
PHOTO EDITOR — Gib Fullerton
FINE ARTS EDITOR — Robert Nesti

TODAY'S STAFF

ISSUE EDITOR — David Williams
NEWS STAFF — Ethel Harris
SPORTS — Earle Barroll, Dan Kamal
EDITORIAL — Ann Gurnett
DARKROOM — Barbara Brecher
AD LAYOUT — John Mullen

Undergraduate newspaper of the University of Massachusetts. The Staff is responsible for its content and no faculty members or administration read it for accuracy or approval prior to publication.

Unsigned editorials represent the views of this paper. They do not necessarily reflect the views of the faculty, administration, or student body as a whole. Signed editorials, columns, reviews, and letters represent the personal views of the writers.

More Questions

Now that the dust has begun to clear and the new administrators have settled into their offices, it appears that the time has come for us to sit back and analyze, in some small way at least, what has transpired in the last few weeks. This duty is inherited not only by the press, as responsible reporters and reactors to the news, but also by the campus community as those most seriously affected.

The tendency has been by all concerned to lightly pass over the Tippo affair as a difference of opinion. This attitude has pervaded not only most recent media reporting but also the statements and comments of people inside Whitmore. Whether these actions are tempered by the inherent stability of any bureaucracy or whether they are reactions of avoidance by those concerned we can not begin to decide.

However, we feel that there are aspects of the Tippo affair which should not be neglected. One of these is the apparent disregard of faculty opinion which has manifested itself. Many of the actions concerning the position of Chancellor were performed with at best minimum consultation with faculty. Are the issues of the campus to be reserved for a handful of administrators or are the educators themselves going to have any say at all in the workings of this "educational" institution?

Also, what really was the issue of the transfer of funds? It is easy to lose one's way in the labyrinth of numbers involved but it is not sufficient to let figures conceal facts. If there was more at stake than $850,000, or whatever amount, as we believe there was, then what is going to be the relationship of the Bromery administration to the questions which led Dr. Tippo to his hasty resignation?

These are only a few of the problems which we feel have been left unresolved. It is not difficult to think of more. What is important is that these questions not be left unanswered, thus increasing the probability that similar occurences will take place.

"There Doesn't Seem To Be Anything Frozen Here"

Jim Moran

A Look Around

To all my faithful readers, and particularly to Mr. Rubenstein who has been keeping this hole open for the past three weeks, I apologize. I was bitten by that bug so common around here...apathy. I hope my recovery is complete.

Let's see - the war went on as usual. Spiro went to Greece and received the Swastika or something. Then he made a speech about time tables and free elections. Somebody rigged an election and called it "democracy in action." UMass lost the best friend it ever had. The senate grew another wart on its ass. No, I guess I didn't miss much.

Oh yah, some guy named McManus came to campus to speak, and was told to shut up. It's the same place. Shut your ears and your eyes, and scream, scream, scream.

The laughing liberal Mr. Yesman is coming this month. He should vote for Muskie instead of splitting the ticket and giving us another four years of Dick.

UMass had its annual homecoming this past weekend. The Redmen played like they were penned up on a whaling ship for the past year. I can't figure out any other reason for that action on the field with the Rams. Gets pretty cold at the North Pole.

The parade was last Friday night. As usual the only frat with imagination, Beta Chi, didn't win the best float award. But in your hearts you know they were right, to borrow a phrase from '64. Each year this group of undaunted Vets put together the most...unusual float. They do a good job. This year they marched in front of the Omaga Chi girls who were redder than Metawampe. BX, you're real people.

Speaking about Vets, the Vets for Peace are launching their fall offensive to end the war. If you've got a minute help them out and save a life.

****

* A Thursday in September 1971 ****

The count was something like the seventh week under twenty.

Harry Fink was a friend of mine. We went to Pensacola at the same time. We use to kill the rats and cockroaches together to pass the time, harass the Marines, and made the best out of our Navy time.

I remember the day he got married. It was about a week or two before we were to leave. Japan, a nice country. Japan over Hanoi to Saigon.

They had a son. She saved up the allotment and went to Japan. E-4's under four have to pay their own families' way.

"This is the last flight," I remember they said. "After this there won't be any more."

It was a Super-Constellation. The last one on the last tour. Two holes in the wing you could have stuck your head through. One under the belly...damn gooks can shoot good. She was a pretty impressive plane...until the wing began to burn. She made it past the second bounce, then you couldn't see the wing any more.

The tooth fairies, dental techs if you weren't in, got the records screwed up. No way to identify the men. What a stink, aviation fuel and brains. Sometimes when I light up a pipe it comes back...the smell. The pilots crown lying in the sticky grass..plastic bags.

I'll have to call Carol tonight and have her and the boy come and visit us.

It's under twenty this week, folks. Next week it may be under ten. Brains and pain and planes and little boys they call men never to come home again.

Art Buchwald

TV Crime Is Up

WASHINGTON--The first crime figures for the fall television season are now in, and it has been confirmed that there were increases in all categories of crime in prime time from rape to involuntary homicide.

For example, there were twice as many murders committed on the networks in September of this year than in all of 1971.

Aggravated assaults were up 176%, and robbery rose 320%, if you include the reruns of old James Cagney movies.

The report indicated that while guns were still the chief weapons in television crime, writers were introducing more sophisticated methods of doing away with victims. These including holding their heads under sewer water, throwing gasoline on them and setting them afire, pushing them into bubbling vats of molasses and running them down in 1938 Buicks in dark alleys.

A spokesman for the criminal division of television broadcasting said, "It's true that there has been an upsurge of crime on TV as compared to last year, but I would like to point out that despite the increase, every crime committed on one of our shows has been solved in 90 minutes or less."

The spokesman was asked why most of the crimes this year were solved by private investigators and not by the police.

He said, "The reason for this is that the private eye, as we like to call him, has more flexibility than a city detective. A private eye doesn't have to worry about such things as applying for a search warrant, using brutality on a suspect, lying to the police or making out with the wife of the victim.

"The recent Supreme Court rulings have made it impossible for us to use the city police in our shows other than in supporting roles or for comic relief."

"Why do the police in all TV crime shows arrive on the scene of the crime five minutes after the private detectives?"

"We have found from experience that if the police arrive late, it gives the private eye an opportunity to find the needed evidence that will lead him to the killer. If the police arrived at the same time as the private eye, they would find the evidence first, and then you would have no show."

A reporter asked the spokesman if he were concerned that there is more violence on television than ever before.

"We're always concerned with violence, and we try not to overdo it. But at the same time there are just so many ways you can kill somebody, and the more imaginative the crime, the more the public will respond. The one thing that has all the criminals on TV worried is that they will become predictable."

"Can we expect a new TV crime wave in 1972?" a reporter asked.

"It's too early to say. Perhaps when the ratings are in, we'll know how much crime the public will stand. I personally predict there will probably be fewer family murders, and we may have more crazed killers in '72."

"Why more crazed killers?"

"The TV writers are running out of plots. When you have a crazed killer, you don't need any motivation for his crime. He does it because he's crazy. You can't imagine how that simplifies a story line."

"What happens if the crime shows don't get high ratings?"

The spokesman looked steely eyed at the questioner and rasped, "Then we'll kill them."

Give One Day In Respect

October 25th is a very special day. It is the one day of the year when citizens across the nation can set aside their daily tasks in order to honor those men and women who have served in the armed forces of their country. It is unfortunate, however, that the significance of Veterans Day will be ignored by a great number of people who will look upon the holiday as a chance to catch up on some sleep or to do some extra work around the home. The veteran of today is denied the honor and respect afforded to the veteran of twenty years ago. This is due to a number of reasons.

First of all there is the effect of the Vietnam War. The futility of this conflict has soured public opinion concerning the role of the American military in the world today. In addition, incidents such as My Lai have destroyed all previous notions the public may have held of the all-American boy fighting for democracy on some foreign shore. Although no longer performing duties in the military, veterans are closely associated with the mistakes of the Calleys' and Medinas' in Vietnam and are innocent victims of public disfavor.

This public disfavor is reinforced by some recent efforts of the mass media to improve the lot of the veteran. It seems that every time you turn on the television set you are confronted with the picture of a slightly overweight veteran, decked out in Class A uniform, dragging his heels along some city street in search of employment. This coupled with sensationalized reports of government efforts to rehabilitate GI drug addicts before they are unleashed on the civilian population carves a lasting impression in the minds of many citizens: the veteran is an unemployed drug addict who feeds off the society. This impression counteracts any tangible success which may be achieved by the respective programs.

Of course, this impression is false in most cases. If a veteran happens to be unemployed or on drugs, it is due more to the sickness of our society than to any training he received while in the military.

Actually it is quite easy to obtain a true picture of a veteran. Just look at yourself in a mirror, for the veteran is you except for one major difference. The veteran is the one who left his home so that you and I could remain at ours. If this action isn't worthy of your respect and honor for one day out of the year, then nothing is.

'OFFICER, TELL ME VERY QUIETLY . . . WHO WON THE PENNANT?'

Editorial Points

UMass' problems today are somwhat like what people were big on a couple years ago; making the system into a community.

***

Does anyone remember what all the fuss was about two weeks ago?

***

Butterfield House has its own weekly mimeographed scandel sheet called (for some good reason) The Lemon. We here in the big world welcome our new little sister of the fourth estate.

***

The Student Senate doesn't want the University Police to wear guns ("the bobbies don't") but seems to be resigned to not being listened to by the police and their union.

***

Those of you who get a kick out of the personal classified ads that we print should take a look at the ones we don't print.

***

Does President Wood have office hours just like all other faculty members? And if so, are they in Boston or Amherst?

***

Letters To The Editor

Anti-Soviet Or Pro Jewish?

To the Editor:

Jeffrey Cossin's letter in Tuesday's Collegian is one of the most amazing collections of misinformation that we've seen. He claims that there are no Jewish schools in the Soviet Union, but the Leningrad Institute for Hebraic Studies is one of the most reknowned in the world. Scholars from all over the world go there to study ancient Hebraic texts. Among his other errors are:

"..few or no Hebrew books are printed..." On the contrary, Yiddish books are published regularly. For example, a six-volume edition of Shalom Aleichem's works has recently appeared. Forty million copies of about 300 works by Jewish authors have also been translated into Russian into the past decade. At the moment, a Yiddish theater company is touring the Soviet Union with a production of "Fiddler on the Roof."

"Soviet Jews are not permitted to emigrate." This is untrue. Soviet Jews are allowed to emigrate all over the world. If it is emigration to Israel to which Mr. Cossin refers, over 3000 Soviet Jews resettled in Israel last year alone. Emigration is not easy, though, because the Soviet Union understandably does not want to contribute to Israeli colonization of Arab territory. (Israel is building housing in formerly Arab sections of Jerusalem for 20,000 Israelis, in addition to settling other areas in formerly Arab territory.) But it is a complete lie to say Jews are forbidden to leave the Soviet Union. "Judaism is...discriminated against..." The Soviet Union has one of the most progressive policies toward the fight against anti-Semitism of any other government in the world. It is the only nation to have recognized the Jewish people within its borders as a national grouping and the only nation to establish an autonomous Jewish region, for all Jews seeking an area of self-determination. It is called Birobidjan, and is represented on an equal basis with other nationalities in the Soviet of Nationalities (equivalent to our Senate). The Soviet Union was one of the first nations to recognize the state of Israel, long before the U.S. did. Further, the percentage of Soviet Jews in the professions is higher than their percentage of the population. 3.15% of the Jewish population are college students despite the fact that the ratio of students in the total population is 1.82%. There are 8,000 Jews in the local, regional, and national Soviets.

"...no Yiddish newspapers..." Among others, Birobidjan publishes Sovietisch Heimland. We might add that the Yiddish language is spoken by about one quarter of Soviet Jewry, as opposed to a smaller proportion among U.S. Jews.

"We ask that Pope Paul use his influence to help Soviet Jews as did Pope John XXXIII for Jews during the Holocaust." There never was a Pope John XXXIII, but we'll give Mr. Cossin a little credit and assume that was a misprint. However, the Pope during World War II was Pius XII; Pope John XXIII was not elevated to the papacy until 1958. Also, there is abundant historical evidence that Pius XII knew about the plight of the Jews in Germany and in Italy, and refused to act; there is even some evidence of actual complicity with the fascists on the part of some Church Leaders. (See the historical appendix of Rolf Hochhuth's play The Deputy: the section on the Vatican-Hitler Concordat is very interesting.)

Let us add a few more facts: Out of the two million European Jews saved from the Nazi holocaust of World War II, 1,600,000 were saved by the Soviet policy of priority evacuation of Jews from the Western Front (while the U.S. turned away boatloads of Jewish refugees), and by the Red Army's fight against the Nazi invaders. The Soviet Union lost more people in WW II than all other nations combined. They are not about to forget the Nazis and the meaning of anti-Semitism. After the war, Albert Einstein said that the Jewish people of the world would never forget the profound humanitarian policy of the Soviet Union.

It seems to us that Jeffrey Cossin doesn't know what he is talking about. These accusations have become very common since Nixon came to power, and it is our opinion that this campaign to "save Soviet Jewry" is more anti-Soviet than pro-Jewish. It is an attempt to use the Jewish people and concern about anti-Semitism as a cover to build more anti-Soviet hysteria in the U.S. Nahum Goldmann said in 1965, when he was head of the World Zionist Organization, that the charges of Soviet mistreatment of Jews are "an horrendous distortion," and has repeatedly noted that Soviet Jews enjoy equal civil and human rights with all other Soviet citizens.

Let us ask you some questions, Mr. Cossin. If you are really concerned about Jewish people, and are not just spreading anti-Soviet hatred, then:

Why didn't you mention anything about Spiro Agnew's trip to fascist Greece, which is going on right now? Why only Nixon's trip to Russia?

Why don't you bring up U.S. support of fascist Spain, where synagogues are completely outlawed?

Why didn't you say anything about U.S. support of West German re-armament and the resurrection of Nazism in West Germany?

Why did you not mention the anti-Semitic and rascist filth that is sent through the mails and broadcast over the air right here in the U.S.--the activities of groups like the Klan, the White Citizens Councils, the American Nazi Party? And why did you say nothing about the continuing genocide against Black Americans?

Anne Draganinis
Norman Bender

My Candle Burns...

To the Editor:

Last Saturday afternoon during the hours of the football game some person or persons took the candle sticks from the two altars in the chapel of the Newman Center. Ten years ago, when the Center was built for the students of the University, these candle sticks were custom made for the chapel and the liturgy that is offered in it. They cannot be replaced.

If the person or persons who took them read the Daily Collegian, we use this means of making the plea that they be returned so that our liturgical services may be carried out with the dignity they deserve.

Monsignor Power

$200 x 10

To the Editor:

My letter to the Collegian, printed yesterday (10/20), regarding R.S.O. funds, stated, "With 50 members, at $40 each, we have paid $2,000 this semester alone in taxes, and we never see any of it."

Through a typographical error, this was printed as $200, rather than $2000. Since this is a rather substantial difference, I would be very grateful if you could print this correction.

Thank you very much for your attention in this matter.

Evelyn Chimelis

Who's Supporting Whom?

To the Editor:

In a way I am not surprised to hear from Evelyn Chimelis' letter that the Science Fiction Club has received no funds from the Student Senate even though they collectively paid a large sum of money for the Student Activities Tax. The Senate has shown itself to be very arbitrary in its allocation of the community's money. Again, I wish to emphasize that it is YOUR (the students') money which they are allocating to the various R.S.O. groups. ("Steal This University" Oct. 19)

